the home for old men and the infant department were all together. When any one became too weak or weary to work any longer the prince used to send for them and bring them to this home. It was not like our poorhouses. You may have seen some of them surrounded by fine old trees and looking very comfortable. This home was more beautiful than a palace, and the prince reserved the best of the grains and fruits for its inmates. Notwithstanding all this no one wished to go to this home until one was unable to get a living outside.

Aunt Nancy was the one who waited upon the seven beautiful sisters, so when it was known that the prince would come in a few days to the captain's house poor old Aunt Nancy had to hobble about in a constant hurry from morn till eventide bringing gloves, complexion powders, curling irons and ribbons, that the seven sisters, and especially Olga, might be arrayed in their best.

As Olga and her six sisters looked at the royal glove and slipper, each thought within her own mind, "They are just the fit for my hand and foot, so I need no further preparation." When poor old Aunt Nancy came by and saw the glove and slipper, said, "Surely my large joints and crooked toes will not fit the slipper, and the glove is still less suited to my hand. I will find the directions, for my hands and feet are so very unsightly that they need improvement whether or no I am even to be a lady in waiting."

She read that the way to beautify the hand was to close it quickly upon every opportunity and to open it often to give help to others.

"Use utmost skill and much exercise in the opening and shutting of the hands and they will become beautiful.

"As to the feet, they must be trained to run in a path which is marked for their use. This path leads to every one who needs your help or encouragement."

They were such strange directions that they set many of the silly girls giggling, and everybody looked upon it all as a joke. Some even laughed at Aunt Nancy when they saw her reading and looking at the glove and slipper. "Our bride, Aunt Nancy," they used to call her in fun, and then they would look at her bony and deformed hands and note her limping, slow painful gait.

Now, none of these had ever seen the prince, but Aunt Nancy had both seen him and knew his handwriting; so to her it was the truth that both her hands and feet could become beautiful. Olga laughed the most and often made fun of Aunt Nancy.

Now that the prince was to call, Aunt Nancy did her best to properly array all the seven beautiful sisters. She wished them to be, at least, ladies in waiting, but surely why should not Olga be the bride and her sisters the bridesmaids?

On the morning of the day when the prince was expected Olga sat on a rustic settee on the porch, waiting to greet the prince when he should arrive. About the time he was expected a lame old woman came up the walk and asked for a drink of water. Olga was mortified and impatient, for the custom was that any one found upon the front porch with you would be considered as a social equal, Olga thought, "What if the prince should see this old beggar and think her my equal?"

THE FARMER'S GOOD BARGAIN.

Up in one of the little Virginia mountain towns, where every so many Washington people are spending the summer, there lives a man who is said to possess the largest appetite in the state of Virginia. He is a farmer, and adds to his income by the sale of farm produce at summer resident prices. He is more than shrewd in a business way. Some people call him stingy. He is a character, in fact. One of the men who has just come back from up there tells about him:

He drove up to a small hotel one day with mutton to sell. The proprietor bought a fore quarter of lamb. The price was $1.50, and the farmer was to call for the money on his way home later. He was invited to dine and he accepted. Now the proprietor, just by the way of a joke, had the quarter of lamb made in a stew, with dumplings. The farmer had a table all to himself. The stew was before him. He ate it, every bit of it. He ate a slice of pie too. Then he pushed back his chair and left the table.

"Well, Sam," said he to the proprietor, who had assembled his guests to witness the discomfiture of the farmer, "that was a good piece of lamb, best I ever raised. And if it ain't convenient for you to pay me for it just now, I'll stop in next time I come to town. I know you're good for it."

And the landlord was.—Washington Post.

A SALUTARY EFFECT.

Men who have grown grayheaded trying to devise ways and means of inducing hens to lay and then compelling them to set declare that there is no way on earth of breaking a dog of the habit of sucking eggs when he once acquires it. Last week I saw an experiment tried on a dog that had developed a taste for raw eggs, and if he ever sucks another he is worse than what old ranchers call an "eediot dog."

This particular dog always cleaned out a nest when he started in on it, and he always started in as soon as he found one. It made no difference whether it contained one egg or a dozen. His owner blew an egg, filled the shell with spirits of ammonia, placed it in a nest known to Mr. Dog, and awaited developments. When he crunched that egg in his jaws he gasped a time or two, fell down, writhed for a moment, then got breath enough to howl for ten minutes. That happened a week ago, and the dog has not been able to eat anything but milk since. He will run as if the pound man was after him at the sight of an egg shell.—San Francisco Post.

HELL A COMET.—Dr. Whiston, a friend to Sir Isaac Newton and an astronomer of high repute, professed to believe that hell is, or will be, located on a comet. He said: According to my calculations, this theory (this queer hell belief), which belongs to me, and me alone, locates hell, the awful prison house of the damned, in the fiery nucleus of some (perhaps yet undiscovered) comet of unthinking size. * * * In this wide circling fire they, (the damned) will be hurled in the twinkling of an eye back into space hundreds of millions of miles from the great torch-bearer of our system. Thus instantly will the wretched tenants of this flying hell be given two unbearable extremes, one of cold and the other of heat; this to continue through the endless ages of eternity, while the Almighty is dispensing the severities of justice."—St. Louis Republic.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remidies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

WAY WITH "DRUNKS" IN DENMARK.—They have an original and, as it happens, an effective method of treating drunkenness in Denmark. Anyone found intoxicated on the street is privately taken to the police station in a carriage, where he remains until perfectly sober. He is then taken to his home under a sure escort, so that he may not fall by the way. The publican who has given his victim the last glass of beer or wine is fined, and is required to pay for the carriage in which the inebriate was taken to the police station. And should a publican have to do this twice, his house is closed. This simple little plan is working wonders in Copenhagen.—New York Observer.

Lieut.-Governor of Vermont Made Well by the Great Conqueror of Disease, Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Known and Honored All Over the United States, Famous Brigadier General Thomas, Lieut.-Governor of Vermont, Tells Those Who Desire to Get Well that Dr. Greene's Nervura is the Medicine Which Will Surely Cure Them.

The honored Lieut.-Governor of a great state has been cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

Dr. Greene's Nervura is the medicine which always cures.

Who can doubt this after reading of its wonderful cure of Gen. Thomas, Lieut.-Governor of Vermont, given in the illustrious soldier-statesman's own words. General Thomas, who resides in Montpelier, Vt., is one of the foremost figures in America to-day. From state Representative he became Senator, was afterwards Judge of Probate, and then made Brigadier-General. He was commissioned by President Grant Pension Agent for Vermont, and elected by the people Lieutenant-Governor of the state.

Here is what this man of eminence says of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and of his cure by the use of this wonderful medicine:

"I am pleased at this opportunity to add my testimonial to the worth of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. The eighty-six years of life's journey left its touch upon me in the form of rheumatic pains. I have found benefit and relief from the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura and give my permission to publish this letter for others' good."

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will cure you just so surely as you take it.

It will certainly make you well and strong.

It is by far the greatest and best medicine in the world to-day and has a record of cures unparalleled in the history of medical science.

The ablest physicians everywhere recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura as the one remedy sure to cure, the one restorative absolutely certain to replace weakness and disease by health and strength.

And now the Lieut.-Governor of Vermont speaks to the people from his high official position, and for the good of all who are sick, suffering or out of health, tells what this most marvellous medicine of the age, Dr. Greene's Nervura, has done for him and advises all to use it and be restored to health.

Now is your golden opportunity to get well. Now it is for you to decide whether you will remain in your condition of weakness and ill-health, or be cured as you surely can be, by this grand restorer of strength and vigor, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

You cannot afford to be sick; you owe it to your friends, to your family, to yourself, to get well, and here, right at your hand, is the means to once more make you strong, energetic and robust, to give you again the sturdy power of sound vigor and perfect health. Try Dr. Greene's Nervura. You will never regret it.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is not a so-called patent medicine, but the discovery of the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene of 31 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who can be consulted, free of charge, personally or by letter.

GET OUTSIDE SOME GLASSES OF THAT ICE COLD SODA.

THE DAWN OF REASON.

they became bold marauders, and gradually took to keeping slaves; that for a time they maintained their strength and agility, though losing by degrees their real independence, their arts, and many of their instincts; that gradually even their bodily force dwindled away under the enervating influence to which they had subjected themselves, until they sank to their present degraded condition—weak in body and mind, few in numbers, and apparently nearly extinct, the miserable representatives of far superior ancestors, maintaining a precarious existence as contemptible parasites of their former slaves."

During the summer of 1887 I spent several weeks in New Mexico, and while there had the good fortune to discover a colony of honey-making ants. I found this colony in a little valley debouching out of Nuerfuanos Park, a government reservation, if I remember correctly, at that time. I made a very careful study of the habits of these interesting little creatures, and witnessed many evidences of true ratiocination in their mental operations. In order to make clear one or two instances in which they evinced true reason, a short description of this colony and its inhabitants will be necessary. The nest was situated on the sandy shore of a little creek, and was a perfect square of three or four feet, from which all grass, weeds, etc., had been carefully removed. Around three sides of this square, viz., north, east and west, a column of black soldier ants continually patrolled night and day. Near the southeast corner of this open space the entrance to the nest was situated. The south side of the square was not guarded, but was left open for the entrance and exit of the hundreds of dark yellow workers, which were always engaged in bringing food to the village. This food they carried to the center of the square and then deposited. No sooner was it put down than it was seized by black workers, which then carried it into the nest. At no time did I ever see a black worker bringing in food to the center of the square, nor did I ever see a yellow worker carrying food into the nest; the blacks and the yellows never interfered with one another's particular duties. To test the reasoning powers of these ants, I partially disabled a centipede and threw it into the square a short distance from the patrol line. For a moment or so the line was broken by the warriors hurrying out to do battle with the squirming intruder. But only for a moment, for orders were issued by some one in authority; the line was re-established, though somewhat thinned by absent soldiers; a messenger was dispatched to headquarters and reinforcements were sent out, and soon the line was as strong as ever, though hundreds of soldiers were battling with the centipede. This latter animal was soon killed and its body removed piecemeal by yellow workers, which carried it far outside the boundaries of the square. Again, with my hunting knife I dug a deep trench across the border of one side of the square. The ants seemed dazed at first, but rapidly adapted themselves to their new surroundings. They extended their patrol line until it embraced the entire trench; then a countless horde of yellow workers went to work, and in a day's time filled up the trench level with the surrounding surface. The patrol was then established along the old line as though nothing had occurred to interrupt the ordinary routine of the colony. Before leaving the valley I dug up the nest and examined the peculiar individuals whose enforced habits gave these interesting ants the name of "honey-makers." Each one of these curious creatures was confined in a separate cell, the entrance to which was very small. Here they lived in total seclusion, being fed by the black workers with pollen, the nectar of flowers, tender herbs, etc. They had no anal orifices, these passages having been artificially obliterated, I am convinced, by the other ants, which probably bit them, thus producing an inflammation which resulted in the growing together of the parts. These imprisoned honey-makers were merely animated bags of honey and were kept solely for the purpose of furnishing a never-failing supply of sweet and wholesome food. I tasted the honey and found it delicious; its flavor was distinctly winy and aromatic.

When we come to examine the mentality of the higher animals, such as the dog, the cat, the horse, the monkey, etc., we find that the evidences of ratiocination increase and become stronger as we approach the highest of the higher animals—man. Yet in the very lowest of the lower animals, the germs, the fundamental principles of true reason are in evidence; and the more we study the habits of these creatures and place ourselves as far as is possible on their levels, the more must we become convinced that instinct, while it does undoubtedly account for the greater portion of the psychical manifestations to be observed in the lower animals, does not, by any manner of means, account for all. Reason puts in an appearance very low, indeed, in the scale of animal life.—James Weir, Jr., in Medical Record.

AN ECONOMIST IN TOMBSTONES.—Last winter while wandering through South Georgia, I chanced upon a family graveyard in Telfair county of unique character. There were three graves side by side. The central one was marked by a head and foot board, made of thin slabs of marble. The headboard, divided into three divisions, was engraved as follows: The first, or top division, "John Allen, a Just Man." The second division was engraved, "First wife," and a hand pointing to the left. On the third division the hand pointed to the grave on John's right, and was engraved, "Second wife." The hasty reader may think John Allen had better written a "frugal man." Again, the footboard for the the father is made a headboard for the son by engraving on it, "Son." I have given things as they actually exist, except that the name John Allen is substituted for the real.—Nashville Banner.

LESSONS IN AMERICAN POLITICS.—Foreigner—"I wouldn't have taken that man to be one of your political leaders. He doesn't look like a statesman. What office does he hold?" American—"You don't understand. He is not a public official. He is a political manager." "Is he a man of much influence?" "O, yes, he wields an immense influence." "Hasn't he a title of any kind?" "Well, yes, we call him a 'boss.'" "Does he make his living out of it?" "O, yes, I suppose. He makes a good living, anyhow." "What is his salary?" "He has no salary, you know. He—er——" "Then how does he get his money?" "Why, he—that is, unless you understand our system, you know, you can't—though, of course—now, over there, on the other side of the hall, there is a historical painting that has been much admired. Let us walk over that way and look at it."—From the Chicago Tribune.

SHE HAD GOOD REASONS.

A fat old gentleman in a light gray suit got into an elevated train at Thirty-fourth street and bustled every one out of his way in order to secure the only vacant seat left on the shady side of the car. As soon as he had thrown himself into the seat he burried his face in a newspaper in order that he might not see how many women were standing in the car. The train had hardly pulled out of the station, says Harper's Round Table, when a poorly dressed and undoubtedly Irish woman who sat next to him touched him on the arm and said:

"I beg your pardon, sorr—"

The old gentleman looked up and frowned, and then turned to his newspaper again.

"Will you be so good, sorr," began the woman again.

The fat man in the gray suit glared savagely, but gave no reply. Several times the woman tried to make him speak. At last, just after the guard had announced "Ninth street!" the woman said again: "I really beg your pardon, sorr, but—"

The fat man turned upon her savagely, his face very red, and exclaimed:

"If you don't stop talking to me, woman, I'll call the conductor and have you put off the car!"

"Shure, sorr," exclaimed the woman, "I'm afther gettin' off at Ninth street, but, conductor or no conductor, I won't get out until you get off my butter that you have been settin' in since you got on at Thirty-fourth street!"

RINGING FOR PRAYERS. A very pretty story of a confiding child is told of the four-years-old son of a member of the Georgia Legislature. Having left the boy in a room of one of the big hotels of the metropolis, with the command to go to bed immediately, he went down to seek his congenial friends in the office. The bell-boys were soon thrown into consternation by the many and various calls from the room in which the little fellow had been left, and quite a number of them were soon collected there. But it was not ice-water or fire, or a "B. and S." that the child wanted. He astonished the boys with this unusual request: "Please, sirs, send some one to me to hear me say my prayers."—From the "Editor's Drawer," in Harper's Magazine.

It Stands To Reason

that 20,000,000 bottles of a medicine could not be sold unless it was good, honest, and did what was claimed for it. Here are the facts about

DR. CLARK JOHNSON'S

INDIAN BLOOD SYRUP

In 30 years 20,000,000 bottles have been sold to cure Blood Diseases, and it must be a CURE. All the sickness in this world is caused by bad blood; Weakness, Loss of appetite, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Constipation, Liver and Kidney troubles, Scrofula, Pimples, etc. Attack the foundation of disease, cleanse the blood, bring it back to the splendid work intended for it by nature. There may be other ways, but the best is by using the tried and true remedy

GRAND OPENING OF THE FALL AND WINTER SEASONS,
Monday, August 31st, 1896,—OF
OLD DR. SWEET'S SANITARIUM
and Medical Institute,
18 VERNON STREET, - - SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Invalids will now be received and treated as inmates at the institution, or as home patients at reasonable rates. Old Dr. Sweet, the World-Famous Natural Healer, Home Surgeon and Magnetic Physician, whose visits to Springfield the past twenty years and whose astonishing cures in Western Massachusetts yet remain the wonder of the age, has established the above institution in Springfield for the benefit of a multitude of patients residing in this section.

So long have the Sweet Family been identified with the cure of lameness that it is conjectured by many persons that they treat no other ailments, whereas their most startling successes for many years have been the cure of Obscure Chronic Diseases of almost every kind. In order to provide for the foregoing, the latest and most efficient discoveries may be found at Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium, in fact those only employed in the private hospitals of metropolitan cities.

These, united with those wonderful systems of medicine which from father to son have descended from generation to generation of the Sweet family of Rhode Island for more than two centuries; thus equipped is it not presumable that their success in the cure of obstinate types of disease will be more certain than attends the ordinary methods of office or drug medication.

Whether rich or poor, black or white, the stricken invalid needs the best medical service obtainable. The workingman whose capital is in his limbs, his nerves and muscles, how necessary if impaired that it should be strengthened both surely and with the least delay.

Have you not speculated with DRUG TREATMENT long enough? Why not try the private infirmary system, combining the best of all, for a while? Your life hangs upon your decision. Old Dr. Sweet has called to his aid in providing for his multitude of patients,—a proof of his unparalleled success in Springfield, DR. EDWARD RAY, a gentlemen of rare culture and medical attainments, a graduate of Harvard University, with extensive clinical and hospital experience, who has been given charge of the Surgical Department of Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium for the coming season.

This Institution is now open to receive applicants for treatment under the famous Sweet Method, providing them with rooms and board at very low rates, with PERSONAL TREATMENT DAILY, or those who desire to visit the institution occasionally, yet live at home.

Persons of VERY limited means are thus enabled to receive the most scientific medical service provided by medical science to-day. The inhabitants of Western Massachusetts may be assured that Dr. Sweet will not rest content until he has provided for the people the MOST EFFICIENT systems of medical treatment extant. Whatever money or ingenuity can procure to make his institution THE FIRST in New England will be cheerfully provided. Success is the SINE QUENON. As his professional duties multiply—as they surely must—experts in the various branches of the "healing art" will be added to his staff. The best is none too good.

Pleased with the "City of Homes" as a permanent place of residence, Dr. Sweet has removed his family hither and indulges the hope that this fact will be appreciated by those wishing to avoid the uncertainty that attends the service offered by itinerant practitioners. Male and Female operators, assistants, nurses, etc., provided. Terms reasonable. Consultation, examination and advice free to the afflicted.

ACCIDENT DEPARTMENT. Athletes, Bicycle Riders and others suffering from sudden accident please take notice. Bring them here. Prompt service.

MAPLE LAWN MILK FARM,
O. D. Wells, Proprietor.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneous relief always afforded by De Witt's Cholic and Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrhœa it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. LeGro & Lynde.

Home First---
The World Afterwards.

A good motto this for either individuals or communities, and readily finds echo in the voice of every merchant in Monson. Every dollar spent in your home stores adds to the development of the home industries—it helps the growth of the town by helping the growth of the individual, for we are all more or less depending upon each other.

The great trade centers pay tribute to the big stock. We are keeping careful track of your wants and constantly adding to the stock to meet them. We will open early in October two or three extra departments.

The Patriot Horse.

This is the story of Dobbin, a hero of Eighteen-twelve—
Not to be found in the records, however you search and delve.
If the horse had been human—but that is another affair;
Argument isn't history—and, besides, what does Dobbin care?

So many sacks of powder the mill had agreed to send
To help repel the British. But the mill was at Upper Bend.
Fourteen miles from the soldiers, and over a wooded hill,
Three men making the powder—and fifty sacks to fill.

None could be spared to carry the powder to the fort,
But there was the old nag, Dobbin—as staid as a judge in court!
Fifty times in a season he traveled the well-known trail.
Start him off with a back-load—he'd take it through without fail.

So they loaded the sacks on Dobbin, and twice every week, sedate,
The old horse trudged through the forest and up to the arsenal gate;
Then back, with the sacks all emptied—while he was as round and sleek
As if he'd stayed in his stable and feasted through-out the week!

But once as the faithful Dobbin was plodding his lonely road,
With thoughts, no doubt, on the supper he'd get in exchange for his load,
Six Tories jumped from the bushes, and loudly commanded, "Who?"
Dobbin stopped, from sheer habit—he was only a horse, you know.

But when they began advancing, behind and before, his fears
Blazed into righteous anger, and back went his pointed ears.
"Come, if you dare!" his eyes said; and out went his sturdy hoofs.
Not a man ventured nearer; some hints are as good as proofs!

Forward marched patriot Dobbin; back fell the baffled foe.
"Shoot him!" cried one;—then quickly, "No! for your life's sake, no!
Think of the blaze in the powder!" Well that he thought, and spoke!
Otherwise, Tories and Dobbin were presently naught but smoke.

Not a hand laid on his forelock—no one too close behind—
Sturdily jogged old Dobbin, with his stall at the fort in mind.
The Tories they cursed and whoa'd him; but careless of that was he;—
With five plump sacks of powder, he could well afford to be.

Up to the fort at sunset, plodded the faithful nag,
Not a grain of the powder lost from a single bag.
Little enough old Dobbin thought of his bravery—
Only the noblest heroes are half as modest as he!
—James Buckham, in the Independent.

"THE HOUSE WITH THE PAINT WORE OFF."

"Oh, no trouble at all, sir. Glad to be able to direct yer. The shortest way to South Daneville is straight up the turn pike till you git to a house with the paint all wore off—you can't miss it—and then turn to the right."

A fresh-faced young woman, who was standing near the counter in the village store, reddened slightly as she heard her new home thus designated, and when the grocer turned to her and said, smilingly "Now, ma'am, what can I do for you?" she straightened herself with a little touch of dignity.

"I am Mis' James Rice," she began.

"Sho!" exclaimed the shopkeeper, with great interest. "You don't say! Wall, I don't blame him one mite," he added, gallantly.

A smile stole across the bride's pretty face, and her severe expression relaxed a little.

"Jim he told me he did all his tradin' here, so I thought I'd just step down this mornin' and order a few things."

"That's right, we always done our best by Jim. Lucy—his first wife, you know—was mighty partic'lar, but we always suited her. She was an amazin' good housekeeper, Lucy was. She must have been an awful loss to Jim. My gingers, how he must miss her! Er—oh, didn't you say you had an order to gave, ma'am?"

"Yes," said the girl, shortly. "I want two pounds of brown sugar and a bag of flour sent up right away."

"Bridal Veil, of course," laughed Mr. Barnes, with a confidential wink, and he hurried away to the back of the store to give the order.

"Two pounds of brown sugar and a bag of flour up to Rice's right off—Jim Rice's on the turnpike road, Peter."

"The red house with the paint all wore off streaked?" drawled the boy.

"That's the one." And Mr. Barnes returned to the door to bow out his new customer.

Mrs. James Rice walked thoughtfully down the village street with her black brows knitted in a little frown. It was the second time within fifteen minutes that she had heard Jim's house referred to in that disrespectful manner. The day before, when she and Jim had returned from their two weeks' honeymoon and had driven up to the large dingy-looking house, it had occurred to the bride that her new dwelling was sadly in need of paint. But she would not allow this thought to be put into words. It seemed almost disloyal to Jim to acknowledge even to herself that she was dissatisfied with anything in her new home.

But now she felt justified in calling his attention to this oversight.

"I guess men don't think so much about outside things," she decided, doubtfully. "I'll just point out to Jim—My! if there ain't his mother standing in the doorway now."

A tall, melancholy-looking old woman, dressed in a mournful black gown, stood in the narrow hall-way.

"I thought I'd come over and see if I couldn't help you some this mornin', Prue," she said, staring solemnly at her daughter-in-law. "Jim is dreatful particular about his food, and you bein' so young and onexperienced—"

She was interrupted by a gay laugh.

"Land!" ejaculated Prue. "Why, on our farm down in Skowhegan there was four hired men, besides father and my three brothers, and mother and me did the dairy work, besides gettin' all the meals ourselves. I guess if I can cook for eight great hearty farmers I can look out for one plain man."

"It was a hull year afore Jim learned Lucy to cook accordin' to his likin'," said her mother-in-law, imperturbably.

Prue gave a contemptuous sniff. "Well, of all sarse! I'd like to see a man tryin' to learn me anything about my own kitchen. I'd as soon think of goin' out and undertakin' to learn him how to curry a horse."

Mrs. Rice senior shook her head dismally. "You don't know Jim. He's dreadful hard to get along with He's awful sot and contrary. The only way Lucy could ever git things done was by pretending she wanted jest the opposite."

Prue by this time had her work out, and was sewing busily. "I ain't Lucy, she said, giving her thread an emphatic jerk, "an' I ain't goin' to manage Jim that way."

There was a moment's silence, while Mrs. Rice regarded her new daughter with some curiosity. Prue's brown head was bent over her work and her eyes were hidden, but there was a determined curve about her red lips which decided the older woman to drop that topic of conversation for the present.

"Was you plannin' to do your preservin' next week?" she asked. "Coz if you was I've got a lot of currants that you can have just as well as not."

"No, I guess I won't begin it just yet," returned Jim's wife carelessly. "There'll be so much goin' on. I'm goin' to git Jim to have the house painted. It needs it terribly."

Then for the first time Prue heard her mother-in-law laugh. It was a short laugh, with no mirth in it, but it was very expressive.

"Land of Goshen, child! you'll never 'complish that. I'd as soon think—Why, that's one of Jim's sottest points. P'haps you ain't found it out yet, but he's terribly close-fisted. He was alluz a master hand for savin', even when he was a boy, and I'm afraid if he keeps on he'll be a reg'lar miser by the time he's old. I'd have warned you about this failin' aforehand, as I did Lucy, if I'd ever seen you."

"Well, it's so. This house is a regular town joke. We pestered the life out of him for years, me and Lucy, to make him paint it, but he wouldn't, and now it's got to be a sort of a piece of stubborn pride with him not to have it touched. That's Jim all over."

"I guess he'll paint it," said Prue, calmly.

Old Mrs. Brice bridled. "Well, if his own mother and his fust wife couldn't make him do it—"

His second wife will," Prue finished, firmly. "I guess—this house will be painted."

In the week that followed, Prue had a chance of seeing for herself the truth of Mrs. Rice's assertions in regard to her son's character.

James Rice was an unusally clever man, and his respect for any one who could "get ahead of him" was unbounded. Lucy's weak nature had bowed naturally before her husband's dominant will. He had ruled her in the same way that he had ruled his mother, merely because she had meekly submitted, without a protest, to his tyranny. But Prue was different. She seemed to have brought away with her some of the spice and strength of her own pine woods, and Jim was often surprised to find at the end of an argument that he had unconsciously yielded to her wishes.

In an untrained way, Prue was a natural musican, and the harsh, tuneless notes of the thirty-year-old melodeon grated on her sensitive ear. Jim was very fond of listening to her fresh young voice, and after supper, while he smoked his evening pipe by the open window, he always asked for his favorite old-time songs.

But Prue objected to the discordant accompaniment which the melodeon furnished.

"Jim, you'd ought to get me a new pianner," she said, persuavely, one evening. "It's a real sin to sing 'Blue-Eyed Mary' to an accompaniment with five keys off the notes in the bass and two notes in the treble that don't sound at all."

Jim knocked the bowl of his pipe against the window-sill and watched the ashes fall on the grass outside before he answered.

"The melodeon is well enough if you'll just remember about not strikin' them notes. 'Tain't the instrument I want to hear, anyway; it's your voice. Lucy understood how to make it go. She used to play the music soft and sing loud."

"I'm afraid I shan't be able to remember that," said Prue, innocently, and she began to sing "The minstrel boy."

Never before had the minstrel boy departed to the war under such provocation. Prue's sweet voice could scarcely be heard above the rasping chords, and Jim moved uneasily until the song was finished. Then she tried 'Squire Jones' Darter," but with no better success. The five bad notes in the bass made themselves unpleasantly prominent, and the two silent treble keys left an irritating blank on the listener's ear. And as it was that evening, so it was every night for the next week, until at last Jim realized the pleasure he was losing, and surprised Prue one day with the gift of a new square piano. That night, for the first in seven days, he smoked his evening pipe in dreamy pleasure With a contented smile on his face, while Prue sang the quaint old songs with the accompaniment of melodious chords.

Old Mrs. Rice came over the next day to inspect the new instrument.

"I declare to goodness!" she exclaimed, rubbing her forefinger across the polished surface. "You could have knocked me down with a feather when I heard that James Rice had actually been and paid out money for a new pianner. I can't get over it. How I wish Lucy could see it!"

"Want to hear it?" Prue suggested, with a proud little smile.

"I'd like to, first-rate, but I can't stop now. I just run in for a minute on my way to Mis' Deacon Gibbs', an' I see by the kitchen clock I'm late already. I'd no idea it was so late."

"'Tain't," said Prue, glancing up at the tall timepiece. "It is only half-past ten."

"Oh, but you ain't allowin' for that clock's losin' time, Prue. Don't you know it is alluz as much as a half an hour slow? It's been that way for years, ever since it was moved out of Grandma Shedd's house."

"It's been fixed," said Jim's wife, dryly.

"Of all things! How'd he ever come to do it?" Lucy—"

"He did it," Prue interrupted, "because he didn't like his meals half an hour behind-hand every day."

"Why, but Lucy alluz figgered for that," the elder matron gasped.

"Did! Well, I couldn't seem to quite remember," said Prue, with such an ingenuous look in her brown eyes that her mother-in-law shook her head dubiously and went away to report to Mrs. Deacon Gibbs these startling developments.

"I can't make her out one mite," she ended. "Whether she's as innercent as a kitten or as deep as Jacob's well, I can't for the life of me tell. But the way she gets around Jim is somethin' wonderful. Jim—well, you know how tight he is with his money, and now he's just a-payin' it out right an' left for things that Lucy alluz hankered arter and had to go without."

"But she ain't got her house painted yet," Mrs. Gibbs suggested, smilingly.

"No, but I ain't so sure but what that'll come next," rejoined Mrs. Rice, "for she's got him to put on screen doors front and back."

"Do tell!"

"Yes, he done it. You see, he was away from home all day, and when he came back late in the afternoon he found it cool enough with just the winders open. But Prue she said it would be a sight more comfortable for her in the hot of the day to keep the two doors open besides, and have a draught circulatin' about the house, so to speak."

"I can feel for her. That's a powerful hot house," put in Mrs. Gibbs, sympathetically.

"Well, you know how wire screen door costs? Jim he said it was enough to have mosquito-nettin' on the winders, and they could keep the doors shet."

"I know. That's what Lucy alluz done."

"Yes; there's the difference. Lucy kep' 'em shut. Prue flung 'em wide open, hitched 'em back, and when Jim come home at night the house was swarmin' with flies and mosquitoes and June bugs. Prue she didn't seem to mind 'em any, but Jim could not eat his supper 'count of havin' to beat 'em off all the time. Couldn't sleep at night, either, they pestered him so. He sent a man up with screen doors the next mornin'. But," Mrs. Rice continued, tying on her sunbonnet with precision, "she may outdo him in small matters, but I don't see no way of her gittin' him into paintin' that house."

Prue herself was beginning to feel some doubts on that point. She had broached the subject to Jim several times, but with no success. Her husband flatly refused to spend any money in having the house repainted.

"It makes the blood go rushin' all over me to hear folks deridin' it and usin' it as a sort of a landmark—'That house with the paint wore off,'" Prue urged with hot cheeks.

"I don't think I'd waste time in blushin' for a house, if I was you," Jim returned, stolidly.

"I ain't blushin' for the house," retorted Prue. "I'm blushin' for the man that owns it."

Jim prided himself on his even temper, but at this point he was surprised to find himself growing angry.

"I guess I can do my own blushin' and take care o' my own house too," he said, hotly.

Prue gave a cool little laugh. "Tain't your house any longer. You forgit you endowed me with it in the marriage service, streaks and all."

"Lucy—" her husband began.

"Say, now, Jim, 'taint fair for you to bring Lucy in to back you up. That makes two against one; for I 'ain't had your advantages, yet."

Jim suppressed a smile which he would have considered undignified.

"You 'ain't got any idea how much it costs to paint a house, Prue," he argued.

"That's so. It would be a real useful lesson to me. Let's begin it Monday."

Jim rose angrily. "Well, if I don't want to have this house painted, I'd like to see you git me to have it done."

"Oh, you'd like to." Prue smiled. "Well, as it's my object in life to please you, I'll do my best."

"Women folks seem to think it's so all-tired easy to make money," Jim growled, as he went out of the door. "You'd better try it once and see what it's like," he called back over his shoulder.

"If I only could," Prue ruminated, as she moved briskly about the kitchen. "Seem's if I'd oughter be able to think up somethin'. I've got all day to do it in. Jim's gone to South Daneville, and won't be back till late this afternoon, so I shan't have any dinner to get."

She was busy with her household duties for the next two hours, and when she at last put on her pink sun-bonnet and started down the road in the direction of Mrs. Rice's house, no plan had yet occurred to her. She walked thoughtfully, with her mind still intent on the disputed question.

"I won't give it up," she said, half aloud. "I will think of somethin' if"—She stopped suddenly, and her whole face brightened. Then she gave a delighted laugh and flew across the road.

In the shade of a tall elm sat a man, fanning himself with a battered straw hat. Beside him stood a bucket of paint with a brush sticking out of it.

Mrs. Rice, her brown eyes dancing with triumph, entered into an animated conversation with the stranger, and presently the two disappeared up the road side by side.

When James Rice drove into Daneville at sunset that day, he was hailed from a doorway by Deacon Gibbs. The deacon's little round face was shining with merriment.

"Say, Jim," he began, stroking his beard to hide the convulsing twitchings of his lip, "you on yer way home? Wall, you've no idee how pop'lar the turnpike road's been to-day. Kind of a promenade for the hull town."

"That's so; it's been a red-letter day up ter your domicile," drawled Mr. Barnes, coming out of the store to join in the conversation.

The by-standers, who had gathered about Jim's buggy, broke into loud laughter.

"It's a real comfort to see a man willin' to air his convictions like Jim does," observed one man admiringly.

Jim gathered up his reins with an angry frown.

"You're a passel of fools, and I don't know what you're drivin' at," he retorted' touching the mare with his whip.

"You mean you don't know what you're drivin' to," shouted Mr. Barnes after the retreating buggy.

Jim drove hurriedly until the village was left behind and the jeers of his tormentors died away in the distance; then he allowed the brown mare to drop into an easy trot.

"I'll be jiggered if I know what those fools meant," he ruminated. "It's some joke on me, that's sartain, but why the whole town should be in it I can't for the life of me see. If it's any—Go-ri!"

The mare had stopped at the hitching post in front of the house, but her master sat motionless in the buggy. Once he closed his eyes, as if to dispel the illusion, only to open them and find that the hideous vision had not disappeared.

In gigantic red capitals, sprawling all over the front of the house, were painted the words

"LASHMAN'S YEAST IS THE BEST."

They were crazy looking letters, sloping in every direction, and they gave the respectable old house a tipsy appearance. There was scarcely a spot on its dingy clapboards where their grotesque length did not extend. A deep color slowly appeared in Jim's face, and he sprang to the ground. Suddenly a chord was struck upon the piano within, and from the piano floated out Prue's silvery voice:

"The prettiest girl in the state of Maine
Was Squire Jones's darter."

Jim thrust both hands into his pockets and drew a long breath.

"Beaten!" he acknowledged aloud.—Lippincott's Magazine.

A GREAT POLITICAL SCOOP.—The new reporter was enthusiastic. "I have a scoop," he said, as he rushed into the city editor's office. "Of what nature?" asked the city editor. "Crime?" "No. Politics." "Same thing," said the city editor. "Of course you know we've chronicled everything that ever happened to either Bryan or McKinley. We've had pictures of all the places where they were born, all the schools that they ever attended, and all the cherry trees that they ever cut." "Mere trifles compared with the first switch that was ever used on Bryan, and the trousers with the mark where it struck still plainly visible," returned the reporter. "That's something that the public is interested in, because it furnished the incentive for his first burst of oratory."—Chicago Post.

"Come, Willie, give something," said the deacon.

"Can't do it, deak," said Bill.

"Why not? Isn't the cause a good one?"

"Yes, good 'nuff, but I ain't able to give nothin'."

"Pooh! pooh! I knew better. You must give me a better reason than that."

"Well, I owe to much money."

"Well, but William, you owe God a larger debt than anyone else."

"That's true, but he ain't a pushin' me like the rest of my creditors."—Exchange.

FRIDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 25, 1896.

THE ANNUAL CATTLE SHOW.

Poor Weather as Usual, but a Good Exhibit in Many Respects.

The Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society drew another blank this year in the matter of weather for its 4th annual fair, only this time it was the first instead of the second day which was unfavorable, and the receipts are considerable larger than they would have been had this been reversed, as the crowd is always largest the second day, and this is the one which has usually been stormy. As it was, the second day brought a cold wind which doubtless kept many from the grounds. While the premium books have not been figured up yet and it is not known just how the finances stand, it is doubtful if the receipts will equal the expenditures.

The first day, Tuesday, dawned with a rain storm, which not only kept many intending visitors at home, but prevented the appearance of a large number of cattle which had been entered. In spite of this however, the show of cattle, while perhaps not the largest in numbers, was the finest ever seen on the grounds, and had the weather been good the society would have had an exhibit in this line which would have dwarfed that of many places with much greater pretentions. As an example of what might have been expected, is cited the fact that there were entered 41 yoke of oxen alone.

The showing of thoroughbred stock was large, among the exhibitors being L E. Wells, G. W. Sherman, G. E. & W. M. Tucker, F. H. Johnson and H. A. Rindge, J. C. Bradway, C. B. & D. H. Richardson, and the W. N. Flynt Granite Co. Some fine graded stock was also shown by F. E Ball of Warren, J. C. Bradway of Monson, E. R. Carpenter of Charlton City, W. L Day of Warren, C. B. & D. H. Richardson, the Flynt Company, G. W. Sherman of Brimfield, O. W. Studley of Palmer and G. E. & W. M. Tucker of Monson. The Dutch Belted cattle shown by the Flynt Company attracted no little attention by the white band about the middle of their otherwise black bodies. The showing of oxen was unusually good, and the contests on the drag created no little interest. Among the attractions was a yoke of trained steers shown unyoked by Joseph Stimson of Palmer.

The poultry display is rapidly getting to be one of the finest in the state, and the one this year surpassed all previous ones. The building in which the birds were shown was filled, the cages being piled three deep, and some were then obliged to be quartered out of doors. The principal exhibitors were Ralph LeGro of Palmer, C. D. Richardson of West Brookfield, Frank Dillon and E. H. Hopkins of Palmer, A. D. Norcross of Monson, N. E. Ball of Warren and E. L. Richardson of West Brookfield. One of the curiosities in the poultry line was a buff cochin chicken, half grown, whose wings were put on upside down. The bird was shown by J. Riley of Thorndike, who sold it for $15 to a museum collector.

The display of fruit and vegetables was disappointing, owing no doubt to the rain keeping many exhibitors at home. Outside of the Grange exhibits the showing was not large, though the quality was excellent. The Monson, Hampden and Warren Granges had large and handsome exhibits which included almost everything needed in the housekeeping line as well as products of the field.

In the upper hall the display of fancy work, etc., was not large, although of good quality, as usual. Among the most admired articles was a knitted lace bedspread made by Mrs. E. A. Holden of Palmer, who is 79 years of age, and a crocheted spread made by Mrs. Owen Copp. Numerous bedquilts were shown, and some handsome embroidery. In the art department Miss Effie Shaw's painted china easily stood first. The grapes were also shown in the upper hall, and the display was fine, especially that shown by E. Bliss of Wilbraham. Other fruit was displayed in the lower hall, where the apples attracted particular attention by their number and size.

The weather did not clear for the afternoon programme, and the attendance was not materially increased. The races scheduled were set over until Wednesday, and the 2.50 local class and the 2.34 class substituted. It took five heats to settle the 2.50 local class, G. C. Flynt's "Prefix" taking the last three straight. The score:

2.50 Class—Local Horses—$50 Purse—Half-mile Heats.

Prefix (G. C. Flynt),	3	3	1	1
Lightfoot (F. Bombard,	1	1	4	2
Doctress (John Malboeuf),	2	2	2	3
H. T. (C. P. Bolles),	4	4	3	4

Time, 1.16, 1.16¼, 1.19, 1.18½, 1.16.

There were six starters in the 2.34 class, but "Orphan Girl" had things about all her own way, and took first money in three straight heats.

2.34 Class—$200 Purse.

Orphan Girl (L. P. Wyman),	1	1	1
Daisy R. (J. P. Ranger),	2	3	2
Ted Douglas (J. H. Carmichael),	2	5	6
Lochiel (F. W. Hill),	5	4	2
Paratha (J. Piper),	4	3	4
Parkville Prince (Ralph Clifford),	6	6	3

Time, 2.33½, 2.29½, 2.30½.

WEDNESDAY—SECOND DAY.

Wednesday dawned clear, but there was a wind which chilled those exposed to it and made those on the grounds wish for shelter. The atmosphere was slightly warmer at noon, and the crowd began to gather in increased numbers, though the managers would have wished for double the number which passed the gate.

This was horse day, and the showing of animals was unusually good. A two-years-old stallion owned by J. J. Flynn of Hampden attracted no little attention, as did also a two-years-old filly and a stallion of the same age owned by C. P. Bolles of Wilbraham. G. W. Burdick of Monson had a handsome yearling, W. B. Ramsdell a chestnut yearling filly and L G. Cushman a two-years-old filly which attracted no little admiration. A four-months-old colt, well broken and shown in harness by F. H. Beckwith of Monson, was an unusual sight.

The Monson band, which was to have furnished music on Tuesday but was notified not to come on account of the rain, played during the forenoon and the Thorndike band during the afternoon. Between the heats of the trotting classes the single and pairs of driving horses were shown. There were three races, the 2.29, the 2.45 and the free-for-all classes. In the latter class "Prairie Lily" had an easy time of it; she trotted smoothly and was not pushed once, and in the last heat lowered the track record of of 2.22½ to 2.21¾. The score:

Free for All—$200 Purse.

Prairie Lily (F. R. Boyce),	1	1	1
Alvin Swift (W. F. Almeda),	2	2	2
Long Shot (D. S. Kennedy),	3	3	3
B. H. D. (Ralph Clifford),	4	4	dr

Time, 2.26, 2.22½, 2.21¾.

Local horsemen were interested in the performance of Dr. S. H. Ellery's "Eros, Jr.," in the 2.29 class, but he acted badly and only succeeded in taking third money. Score:

2.29 Class—$200 Purse.

M. E. Wilcox (M. E. Wilcox),	5	1	1	1
J. L. T. (E. Aken),	1	2	2	2
Eros, Jr (Dr. S. H. Ellery),	4	3	3	3
Ben Eye See (E. H. Hubbard),	3	4	4	4
Orphan Girl (L. P. Wyman),	2	dis
Amy F (W. J. Piper),		dis

Time, 2.28¾, 2.28¼, 2.28, 2.28.

Only three heats were trotted in the 2.45 class on account of the darkness. It was seen that "Paratha" was a pretty sure winner, and it was settled on that basis. Score:

2.45 Class—$200 Purse.

Paratha (J. Piper),	1	1	4
Meg (L. P. Wyman),	3	5	1
Parkville Prince (Ralph Clifford),	6	2	2
Ferrell S. (F. W. Hill),	2	3	3
Doctress (John Malboeuf),	4	4	5
Park (Charles Simonds),	5	6	6

Time, 2.34, 2.37, 2.32½.

There were numerous fakirs on the grounds, and many others who did not engage ground room on account of the weather and attendance. The crowds about their stands showed that they are one of the drawing cards. It was a peculiar fact that the game which was the biggest "skin" drew the largest crowd.

During one of the heats of the 2.34 race William Fisk, a young man from Ludlow, while crossing the track in front of the grand stand was knocked down by a horse and his right collar bone broken.

One of the curiosities shown was a bunch of peanut vines with the nuts on them, grown by W. H. Gifford of Monson.

Four Shetland ponies shown by Rufus Flynt attracted the admiration of the little people.

First Campaign Demonstration—McKinley and Hobart Flag Raised.

That the clerk of the weather department is a Democrat was clearly manifested Saturday by his ungentlemanly treatment of the Republicans in their attempt to have a flag raising. First, he sent rain in the morning which delayed all preparations; then he drove the clouds away, made the sun shine and gave just time enough in which to get things ready, and finally, after the platform had been tastefully decorated with flags, red, white and blue bunting, and the whole lighted with electric lights, he mustered his dark wind and storm clouds, and an hour before the commencement of the exercises he let loose all the stock of rain which he had on hand, and made the evening so stormy that no open air exercises could be held.

The ceremony of raising the flag was dispensed with, and the speaking took place in the opera house. The Columbian Band of Thorndike was present, and furnished good music. Charles G. Gardner, president of the Palmer Republican Club, presided, and in a well-worded speech introduced as the speaker of the evening, Hon. Michael J. Murray of Boston. Mr. Murray was received with much applause and made a very interesting speech, during which he was frequently interrupted by applause. He said in part:

'Four years ago, under Harrison's administration, the country was in a prosperous condition, but now it is bankrupt. The Democratic speakers at that time said that by putting wool upon the free list, prosperity would come; but instead the wool business has been prostrated. Owing to mismanagement of governmental affairs by the Democrats, to-night the country is in debt $2,000,000. This has all been done by the vote of the people Business men of the country have no faith in the ability of the present administration to manage affairs The Democratic party claims that the condition of the country is due to the financial policy of the Repub ican party, and point to what they call the "crime of '73." But silver was not demonetized in one night; it was the result of three years of careful legislation. The free silver proposition is a dishonest one. Those who would not coin silver at what it is worth,—32 to 1, but in the ratio of 16 to 1,—propose to cut into our credit, our debts, our currency. Is this honest? Thirty years ago, to preserve the nation, party lines were swept aside. Now they are also being swept aside to preserve the honor and credit of the nation."

Toward the close of his speech Mr. Murray paid his respects to George Fred Williams in vigorous language, and spoke eloquently of the late lamented William E. Russell. The flag was raised Monday afternoon, and now floats in graceful folds upon the breeze.

Tuesday evening the young people of the Baptist church will give a social in the vestry of the church at 7.30, when the members of the union will bring in their mission boxes with their quarter's offerings. A brief literary and musical entertainment will be furnished, to be followed by light refreshments. All are cordially invited to come and spend a pleasant evening.

PALMER NEWS.

First Hampden Republican Senatorial Convention.

The air was full of politics and the streets of Springfield politicians Wednesday morning, the latter having come out on an early train to see what could be done among the delegates from the eastern end of the county in the way of securing votes against Col. Goetting for member of the state committee in return for votes for Mr. Leach for senator. The scheme did not seem to be favorably received in this territory however, and in the end all the Springfield delegates swung into line for Bradford for senator.

The convention was called to order by Col. Goetting. Dr. R. V. Sawin of Brimfield was chosen chairman and George H. Kemater of Springfield secretary. The committee on credentials, E. T. Davis and J. D. Gill of Springfield and F. S. Cushman of Monson,—after three delegates who had forgotten their credentials had been given permission to vote,—announced that all the 55 delegates were represented. Mr. Gill then presented the name of Edward S. Bradford of Springfield for renomination, as since his nomination two years ago he doubted if there was any dissatisfaction with Mr. Bradford's service for the district. "It had been said by some that a pledge had been given that Mr. Bradford would not be a candidate for renomination at this time. If that had been so, I would not be here to nominate Mr. Bradford, and Mr. Bradford himself would not consent to have his name used. We believe that when it is right and proper the nomination should go to the eastern end of the district. Two years out of 10 this end is entitled to it In 1888 I myself helped nominate Mr. Hubbard of Brimfield, and in 1891 we nominated Mr. Cushman of Monson. It was only on his unwillingness to serve the next year that the name of Mr. Bradford was presented. Mr. Bradford will be unwilling to serve again after this year, and I believe that in another year the delegates of Springfield will be entirely willing to concede the nomination to this end of the district."

Dr. G. H. Wilkins of Palmer presented the name of W. W. Leach of Palmer. He said he fully agreed with Mr. Gill in his praise of the way that Mr. Bradford had served the district, but he thought the nomination should be passed around and he wished to present the name of Mr. Leach as a man who was well able to fill the place and would be elected if nominated. In a close year Springfield might naturally get the nomination, as a man from there would get more votes than one from a smaller place, but this year there could be no doubt of election. H. A. McFarland of Wales seconded the nomination, saying that the delegates from the eastern end of the district had understood distinctly that Mr. Bradford would not be a candidate this year, but would let the nomination go to the eastern end of the district. Elisha Morgan of Springfield said that he did not understand that Eastern Hampden was really entitled to the nomination this year, and secondly, it must be remembered that we were likely to have biennial elections next year, and if this was so and Mr. Leach was nominated this year, Springfield might have some hesitancy in sending him back again and so giving him three years. About Mr. Bradford's efficiency there could be no doubt. He had followed his course closely and he knew from members of the Legislature that no man in the Senate had greater influence than he, or, perhaps, so great.

Mr. Gill moved an informal ballot, and the tellers, E. L. Safford of Springfield, C. E Fuller of Palmer and H. A. McFarland of Wales, announced 53 votes cast, 39 for Bradford and 14 for Leach. Dr. Wilkins moved that Bradford's nomination be made formal and unanimous, which was done.

Col. Goetting was chosen a member of the state central committee by acclamation without a dissenting voice, and was empowered to call the next convention.

Their Golden Wedding Anniversary.

To many last Sunday was nothing but an ordinary day, but to Mr. and Mrs. William Merriam it was a day of much importance; and well might it be, for it marked the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Merriam were married in Swanzey, N. H., September 20, 1846. The day on which they were married was Sunday, and in many respects was like last Sunday. The wedding was the largest which ever took place in the town of Swanzey. Both were well-known and popular with the people in the surrounding vicinity, Mrs. Merriam being a daughter of Joshua Whitcomb, since made famous by Denman Thompson in his celebrated play, "The Old Homestead." At the hour appointed for the wedding, people from the surrounding villages began to assemble at the church, and so many came that there were as many outside as within. To accommodate all, they were compelled to hold the ceremony in an old church which had not been used for some time. The body of the church was filled with people and there were so many in the galleries that it was necessary to prop them up with fence rails. Soon after their marriage they went to housekeeping in Rindge, N. H., and later moved to Fitzwilliam, where they resided for ten years. They first came to Palmer in 1858, and after residing here 10 years moved to Springfield, from which city they returned to Palmer in 1884, and have lived since that time at their present home on Pleasant street. Mr. and Mrs. Merriam have had two children, Mrs. J. F. Holbrook of Palmer and Mrs. Esther Frost of Springfield, who recently died.

Mr. and Mrs. Merriam are both in good health, and although Mr. Merriam has seen 70 summers and winters and Mrs. Merriam but three less, they are yet in active life. Mr. Merriam has been chairman of the overseers of the poor for several years, and is one of the best the town ever had. Under his charge the town farm has been brought up to a very high standard. Mr. Merriam is probation officer, and very acceptably fills the position. He also has charge of the estate of Mrs

MONSON.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Special train to "Faust," Palmer Opera House, next Monday night.

Burglars Make a Haul.

The Granite One-Price clothing store of Annas A. Babbitt was burglarized during Monday night, and about $200 worth of goods were taken. People living in the neighborhood heard unusual sounds about 2 o'clock, but did not investigate. An old hat and a coat were left in exchange for 34 or 35 pairs of pants, parts of suits, two or three suits, a half dozen light weight overcoats, as many soft felt hats, a quantity of neckties, a watch, a watch chain and other jewelry. The hat left is one given to a tramp on Monday by a young man in town, and the coat is recognized as one worn by a tramp who was fed by a woman living near Mr. Babbitt's store. It is pretty certain that tramps were the guilty men. Two pairs of pants were found at South Monson Tuesday morning. The thieves gained entrance by forcing up the back window of the store with a blacksmith's file and chisel. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Babbitt, as this is the third time that his store has been broken into. Sheriff Studley of Palmer is at work upon the case.

There will be a school committee meeting next Wednesday evening.

The first frost of the season to do any damage came Wednesday night.

The Misses Gavin have their millinery opening next Friday and Saturday.

Sunday will be observed as Rally Day by the Methodist and Congregational Sunday schools.

George W. Brown of Yale Univeresity has been stopping with Dr. N. W. Rand for two weeks.

Rev. Harry Blackford will take for his subject next Sunday morning, "The greatness of man."

A. A. Gage camp, Sons of Veterans, had a spread Tuesday evening, with guests from the Palmer camp.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Buflington took a wheel trip to Belchertown Saturday, remaining over Sunday.

The many friends of William J. Ricketts are rejoiced to learn that he is recovering from his dangerous illness.

Misses Esther R. Holmes and Mabelle L. Anderson arrived home Saturday from a two-months' sojourn in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Palmer, who have been guests at Harry C. Webb's, have returned to their Mansfield home.

A goodly number of the stockholders availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the Hub fare free this week.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held an interesting meeting at the home of the Misses Ross Monday evening.

The entertainment planned by the young people of the Universalist church for next Tuesday evening has been postponed.

George W. Seymour attended the reunion of his regiment, the 22d Connecticut Volunteers, at Wethersfield, Ct., this week.

The Monson Orchestra is to play at the Misses Williams' millinery opening to-night, if pleasant; if not, it will play to-morrow night.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Elmer of Hartford have returned home after a week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. George W. Seymour and Mrs. Alfred Wallace.

Monson has the reputation of being the banner town for tea peddlers to work off damaged tea in. A new one started in a short time since.

The King's Daughters will have a corn supper and social in the Methodist church this evening. Supper will be served from 6 to 8, followed by a social.

The lightning Saturday morning played about the telegraph instrument belonging to Harry E. Chapin in his mother's house on Green street, burning a small table on which the instrument stands.

Selectman George H. Foskett is confined to the house with a poisoned foot, but whether the poison is from the bite of an insect or not has not been determined. The member is very painful.

The Hazardville powder mills explosion last Saturday morning was plainly felt by many Monson people, who attributed the rattling of the dishes and the shaking of the houses to an earthquake.

The funeral of Edwin O. Knowlton, who died last week, was held at the house Sunday afternoon. Rev. William H. Marble, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated. The burial was in the Center cemetery.

Miss K. M. Coyle will close her store in Keeney's building to-morrow night, and will open at her new stand in Noble's south block Thursday morning. Her millinery opening will continue through Friday and Saturday.

The Woman's Relief Corps held a meeting Wednesday evening, at which Mrs. Julius N. Graves, Mrs. Frank A. Bliss and Mrs. Harlow Chapin were elected a committee to prepare an entertainment to be held later in the season.

Monson exhibitors at the Palmer fair have reason to feel proud. The display was never better. President Arthur D. Norcross is to be congratulated upon everything concerning the fair except the weather, which of course interfered with the attendance.

The class of '98, Monson Academy, have chosen these officers: President, Miss Maude Aldrich, vice president, Miss Helen Pease; secretary, Ernest S. Fuller; treasurer, Edward F. Cushman, Jr.; executive committee, Charles P. Dow, Walter Davis, Miss Leonora Stiles.

Arthur Severy, who lives in the west part of the town, had an accident Monday afternoon which might have been a serious one. While out hunting his gun burst, and his face and eyes were filled with powder, but his sight will not be impared. He was attended by Dr. Fuller.

Thomas Whalen of South Monson was struck by a ball club last Saturday and a gash cut over his eye in which Dr. Ellis took six stitches. Young Whalen was umpiring a game of ball, and stood too near the bat. He had attempted to wear a mask, but it did not fit him well, so he had discarded it.

Fred Thompson of Los Angeles, Cal., brother of Station Agent Charles G. Thompson, has struck a gold mine in Arizona, and has taken up a claim of five shares, each share 500 feet by 1500 feet. An assay of the ore shows $26 in gold to the ton with 61 per cent silver. The free gold assays $93 to the ton.

Monson people will be interested in reading a story recently published entitled "The Orcutt Sisters; or A Term at the Academy," as it has reference to Monson Academy and was written by Mrs. Charlotte (White) Vaile, a student in the early 70's, and afterward a teacher of the private school held in the north wing of the Academy building.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Circle of the Universalist church was held Monday evening, and these officers elected: President, Mrs. Marvin Bradway; vice president, Mrs. William J. Ricketts; secretary, Mrs. Harlow Chapin; treasurer; Mrs. Annas A. Babbitt; directors, Mrs. Leander W. Rood, Mrs. R. Clifford Millar, Mrs. Adelbert C. Paige. The circle will hold its first regular meeting of the season next Thursday afternoon in the church parlors.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Hutchinson visited friends in Sturbridge from Friday until Monday. The house in which they stayed was struck by lightning Saturday morning, and more or less damage was done in every room. The room Mr. and Mrs Hutchinson occupied suffered least of all, the lightning circling two pictures, destroying the frames. A young lady in the house was made unconscious for two hours or more by the lightning striking her iron bedstead.

HAMPDEN.

Mrs. Mary O'Leary, daughter of David Toohig, died here Wednesday morning. The funeral was held Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, and the burial took place in the Chicopee Catholic cemetery.

The Foresters will hold a ball at Joy's hall this evening.

LUDLOW.

The Ludlow Manufacturing Company has decided to build eight new stock houses, 40 by 150 each.

A McKinley and Hobart campaign flag will be raised by the Republican Club to-night. Several local and out-of-town speakers will speak. The 2d regiment band will furnish music.

Simon Ward of Brookfield spent last Sabbath with friends in town.

Miss Annie Hill of Philadelphia has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Robbins.

Mrs. Warriner from Springfield has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Hattie Robbins, this week.

This evening there will be a Congregational parish meeting, to see if the society will vote to extend a call to Rev. W. B. Forbush.

The first prize at the bicycle race Friday, a gold watch, was taken by a Springfield rider; second by Mr. Cunningham, a silver tea service.

At the caucus last week Wilson Fairbanks name was presented to be brought before the representive convention, he having served the people very acceptably last year.

Nathan Ball had 31 hens on exhibition at Sturbridge and drew prizes of $30. Mr. Ball is one of our most enterprising farmers, and considered one of the best of judges on poultry. He exhibits at Palmer and Spencer this week.

A large number of people have been absent from town this week, attending the musical at Worcester, cattle shows at Palmer and Spencer, and taking advantage of stock day to go to Boston.

WILBRAHAM.

The Grange observed Poet's Night last Wednesday evening.

Mrs. L. A. Warner is spending the week with her daughter, Mrs. Harry Burt, of Longmeadow.

F. C. Learned and family of Agawam spent Sunday with Mrs. Learned's mother, Mrs. L. A. Warner, on South Main street.

Rev. and Mrs. Fayette Nichols gave a reception at the Methodist parsonage to their parishoners and friends Thursday evening.

The ladies of the Congregational church held another quilting bee in the church parlors Thursday afternoon, with a social in the evening.

C. C. Beebe has corn 14 feet 10 inches in height, specimens of which may be seen attached to a telegraph pole in front of his house.

Lyman Fisk is raising some big apples this year, among which is one Baldwin weighing 15 1-2 ounces. On Sept. 18th he pulled turnips 6 inches in diameter, the seed of which he sowed eight weeks ago that day.

Young People's Fair.

The Young People's Agricultural Club will hold its annual cattle show and fair on the "Green" next Friday. The morning will be given up to exhibits of cattle, horses, sheep, fowls, and other domestic animals, farm products and domestic manufactures. Dinner will be served at noon in the tent by the club, and the races will take place on Bolles' trotting track at 3 p. m. Bicycle races will be as follows: One mile, open to all; half-mile open; two mile open handicap; mile race, open to town riders only. Entries for these races must be made before Sept. 29, except for the handicap, which must be made seven days before the fair. All are cordially invited to exhibit articles and compete for premiums, but no person over twenty-one years old can be admitted as a member of the club. This fair, at first started merely as an exhibit of the results of the industry of the members of the club, has increased in interest and broadened in its scope till it has become quite a social feature of the town, and a place for annual reunions of former citizens and of acquaintances from neighboring towns. The present officers are: President, Lee Rice; secretary, Mattie Bliss; treasurer, Fred Phelps; executive committee, Stella Bliss, Sarah Phelps.

BRIMFIELD.

A meeting of the business men of Brimfield and Palmer was held here last evening to see about inducing the Sturbridge and Fiskdale street railway company to extend its lines to Brimfield and Palmer. Over forty representative business men were present from Palmer. The matter was carefully discussed and the following committee appointed to confer with the directors of the road: N. S. Hubbard, C. S. Tarbell, R. V. Sawin, D. L Bodfish, E. G. Hastings and C. F. Grosvenor. The next meeting will be held at Palmer subject to the call of the committee. Warren would like to have the road terminate there and not be extended to Palmer, but the people of Brimfield prefer to have it go to Palmer, as all their business is done in that town.

Death of Gilman B. Noyes.

Gilman B. Noyes, 55, died Thursday, the 17th, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Oscar F. Brown. His death, which was caused by maliguant tumor, occurred after an illness of several months.

Mr. Noyes was born in Brimfield February 15, 1841, and had always lived in his native town. He was the son of Rev. Gilman Noyes, a Universalist minister, who upon retiring from the ministry removed to Brimfield, where he was one of the original promoters and trustees of the Hitchcock Free High School. Mr. Noyes was never married, and had spent most of his life on the farm which formerly belonged to his grandfather, Colonel Issachar Brown, and which had been the home of three generations of his ancestors.

Mr. Noyes was a kind neighbor, and though possessing a quiet and unassuming nature, he won the warm regard of those who knew him. He was a man of sterling integrity, with a strong sense of justice. Nothing disturbed him more than the knowledge of any act of injustice, whoever the sufferer might be. Mr. Noyes has always been a hard-working man. and had never known any sickness until stricken by the fatal disease. He leaves two brothers, John H. Noyes of New York, James Noyes of Brimfield, and three sisters, Mrs. Erastus Coye of Amherst, Miss Emily Noyes and Mrs. O. F. Brown of Brimfield.

The funeral was held on Saturday at the home of Mrs. Brown. Rev. W. K. Peirce officiated, paying a feeling tribute to the character of Mr. Noyes. He spoke of the kindness and gentleness of his disposition, of his freedom from harshness of thought or speech. His quiet life had its positive influence; and it is not always the assertive people whose influence is the strongest. His uncomplaining, courageous, and hopeful spirit during his painful illness, especially hard for one who had always known such physical endurance and rugged health were an impressive lesson to those who went to see him. Up to the very last he was thoughtful and considerate of those who ministered to him. It is hard to see why these severe trials, these hard and bitter experiences, must be; and yet they may be compared to the dark, unloved soil out of which spring the beautiful flower of patience and sweetness of spirit, of tender thought and loving devotion.

Sent it to His Mother in Germany.

Mr. Jacob Esbensen, who is in the employ of the Chicago Lumber Co., at Des Moines, Iowa, says: "I have just sent some medicine back to my mother in the old country, that I knew from personal use to be the best medicine in the world for rheumatism, having used it in my family for several years. It is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It always does the work." 50 cent bottles for sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

From all accounts Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a Godsend to the afflicted. There is no advertisement about this; we feel just like saying it.—The Democratic, Carrollton, Ky. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Your Boy Wont Live a Month.

So Mr. Gilman Brown, of 34 Mill street, South Gardner, Mass., was told by the doctors. His son had Lung trouble, following Typhoid Malaria, and he spent three hundred and seventy-five dollars with doctors, who finally gave him up, saying: "Your boy won't live a month." He tried Dr. King's New Discovery and a few bottles restored him to health and enabled him to go to work a perfectly well man. He says he owes his present good health to the use of Dr. King's New Discovery, and knows it to be the best in the world for Lung trouble. Trial bottles Free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure for you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cure of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side; and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN ss. PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs at law, next of kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of Ellen Slattery, late of Palmer, in said County, deceased:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for probate, by Maurice Moriarty of said Palmer, who prays that letters of administration with the will annexed may be issued to him, or some other suitable person, the executor named in said will having declined the trust.

You are hereby cited to appear at a probate court to be held at Springfield, in said county of Hampden, on the seventh day of October, A. D., 1896, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Palmer JOURNAL, a newspaper published in said Palmer, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, CHARLES L. LONG, Esquire, Judge of said court, this tenth day of September in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-six. SAMUEL B. SPOONER, Register.

3-25

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the subscriber has been duly appointed administrator of the estate of Norman S. Powers, late of Brimfield, in the County of Hampden, deceased, intestate, and has taken upon himself that trust by giving bond as the law directs. All persons having demands upon the estate of said deceased are required to exhibit the same; and all persons indebted to said estate are called upon to make payment to FRANK E. GLEASON, Admr.

GRAND OPENING OF THE FALL AND WINTER SEASONS,

Monday, August 31st, 1896, OF

OLD DR. SWEET'S SANITARIUM and Medical Institute,

18 VERNON STREET, - - SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Invalids will now be received and treated as inmates at the institution, or as home patients at reasonable rates. Old Dr. Sweet, the World-Famous Natural Healer, Bone Surgeon and Magnetic Physician, whose visits to Springfield the past twenty years and whose astonishing cures in Western Massachusetts yet remain the wonder of the age, has established the above institution in Springfield for the benefit of a multitude of patients residing in this section.

So long have the Sweet Family been identified with the cure of lameness that it is conjectured by many persons that they treat no other ailments, whereas their most startling successes for many years have been the cure of Obscure Chronic Diseases of almost every kind. In order to provide for the foregoing, the latest and most efficient discoveries may be found at Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium, in fact those only employed in the private hospitals of metropolitan cities.

These, united with those wonderful systems of medicine which from father to son have descended from generation to generation of the Sweet family of Rhode Island for more than two centuries; thus equipped is it not presumable that their success in the cure of obstinate types of disease will be more certain than attends the ordinary methods of office or drug medication.

Whether rich or poor, black or white, the stricken invalid needs the best medical service obtainable. The workingman whose capital is in his limbs, his nerves and muscles, how necessary if impaired that it should be strengthened both surely and with the least delay.

Have you not speculated with DRUG TREATMENT long enough? Why not try the private infirmary system, combining the best of all, for a while? Your life hangs upon your decision. Old Dr. Sweet has called to his aid in providing for his multitude of patients,—a proof of his unparalleled success in Springfield, DR. EDWARD RAY, a gentlemen of rare culture and medical attainments, a graduate of Harvard University, with extensive clinical and hospital experience, who has been given charge of the Surgical Department of Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium for the coming season.

This institution is now open to receive applicants for treatment under the famous Sweet Method, providing them with rooms and board at very low rates, with PERSONAL TREATMENT DAILY, or those who desire to visit the institution occasionally, yet live at home.

Persons of VERY limited means are thus enabled to receive the most scientific medical service provided by medical science to-day. The inhabitants of Western Massachusetts may be assured that Dr. Sweet will not rest content until he has provided for the people the MOST EFFICIENT systems of medical treatment extant. Whatever money or ingenuity can procure to make his institution THE FIRST in New England will be cheerfully provided. Success is the SINE QUENON. As his professional duties multiply—as they surely must—experts in the various branches of the "healing art" will be added to his staff. The best is none too good.

Pleased with the "City of Homes" as a permanent place of residence, Dr. Sweet has removed his family hither and indulges the hope that this fact will be appreciated by those wishing to avoid the uncertainty that attends the service offered by itinerant practitioners. Male and Female operators, assistants, nurses, etc., provided. Terms reasonable. Consultation, examination and advice free to the afflicted.

ACCIDENT DEPARTMENT. Athletes, Bicycle Riders and others suffering from sudden accident please take notice. Bring them here. Prompt service.

AMONG THE FAIRIES.

THE PRINCE'S BRIDE.

IN THREE CHAPTERS.

[Copyright, 1896, by Walter B. Guild, Boston.]

CHAPTER II.

On account of this peculiar custom Olga became furious when the old woman put her foot on the steps as though to come upon the porch. "Go away, you miserable old beggar," said Olga, "and do not disgrace me with your presence." As the old woman passed by Aunt Nancy was just returning from the market and noticed how sad she looked. "Now," thought Aunt Nancy, "I can beautify my feet and hands at the same time." So she called and hobbled after the poor beggar. Upon learning what was wanted Aunt Nancy invited her into the kitchen, for no disgrace was counted to any one who took strangers into the kitchen. No matter what might be in the kitchen, whether bugs or beggars, so long as the front porch was clean and no persons of low estate sat beneath the trailing rose vines in the front yard a house was not disgraced.

The old beggar said she had a letter for whomever would receive it in that house, but it must not be opened until the wedding of the prince.

Olga soon tired with her waiting and went into the house for a cooling cup of mead. She came out again without delay and met a royal messenger, who gave her a letter from the prince. It simply said: "I called, but you were not ready to receive me. Next week I will call again. Let another sit upon the porch." Olga thought, "Surely the prince must have passed while I was in the house for the glass of mead."

This was a great and sore disappointment to Olga, and she could now only hope to be one of the bridesmaids and her next younger sister must be the favored one. As Olga thought about this she went to her sister Juno and told her sad experience.

Just then she looked, and instead of her Uncle John she saw the fairy prince.

Juno remembered Olga's warning as she sat in the chair waiting, waiting, waiting. After a long time, a small boy, thin and pale, with clothes tattered and worn and with bare feet came up the road. Stopping in front of Juno he asked: "Please miss, can you give me any work? I can train a rose-bush so nicely that it will make your heart glad to gaze upon it. Now see this twig." So saying he put out one hand and at the same time very innocently placed one foot on the step as if about to come up on the porch. Juno was indignant. Did the beggar boy want to claim to be her equal by coming up on the porch with her? Often there were people who came for food, and it was very little that they got, but they usually knew better than to come to the front door, especially when one was sitting in the welcome chair. The boy's arrival was especially unpleasant, as the prince might arrive at any moment. This thought made Juno very angry and she arose from the chair and slapped the poor boy's face as she said: "Get thee hence. Wouldst disgrace me as I am waiting to welcome the prince? Get hence, I say, with all the speed you may, and ne'er again be so rude." The poor boy wept and said: "May I go to the kitchen, there to be unseen by guests upon the porch?" "Yes, get thee out of sight," said Juno.

When Aunt Nancy saw the poor little fellow coming, she opened her old arms and gave him a good hug and a kiss as she said, "How can I comfort thee, my son?" The boy looked at her and said, "Surely you have comforted me already." He then vanished, and Aunt Nancy knew that it was none other than the fairy prince himself.

Juno became very sleepy, and just as she nodded a voice said: "Sleep all you wish, for the prince has now passed by. He will come again to see who is most worthy."

The day of the week was to be the same as before, and now Mira, the third sister, sat and waited. She was vain and trifling in her ways' and in dressing had caused poor old Aunt Nancy more trouble than both her elder sisters. She scolded the dressmakers, annoyed the glovesellers and finally upset a bottle of perfumery and spotted her best gown. Then there was more scolding and complaining of her ill luck.

"Have you looked at the directions?" asked Aunt Nancy. "Oh, bother the directions, you meddlesome old nuisance," said Mira.

"You will not need the directions," said a very kind but sad voice. "You have broken the law of kindness too often. The prince requires more love and patience." The parrot was perched upon the window sill, and as he saw the look of fear and surprise on Mira's face he laughed and said, "Pretty Poll." "Oh, that miserable bird!" said Mira. "He never spoke in that voice before, and he scared me." Aunt Nancy knew just what Mira feared, but would not confess. She knew that it was the voice of the prince.

Mira waited vainly all day and just at sunset she heard the sound of wheels, and a messenger came to ask if any more of the sisters would wait for the prince.

"You heard his voice this morning," said the messenger to Mira," and knew that it was not the voice of the parrot. Your waiting was vain until you asked forgiveness of those to whom you have been unkind. This you were not willing to do."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remidies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

CONGRESSMAN MORSE

Tells the Wonderful Curative Powers of Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Hon. Elijah A. Morse, Member of Congress from Mass., Used Dr. Greene's Nervura in His Family with Astonishing Benefit.

HON. ELIJAH A. MORSE, MEMBER OF CONGRESS FROM MASSACHUSETTS

Hon. Elijah A. Morse, of Canton, Mass., Member of Congress from Massachusetts, forwards his endorsement of the remarkable curative powers of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, together with a letter from his sister, Mrs. Albert F. Morse, who writes to the people concerning her wonderful cure by this grand restorer of health and strength.

Congressman Morse is a statesman of power and influence in Congress and his own state holds him in highest honor having elected him Representative in the Legislature, Member of the State Senate, and one of the Governor's Council. A business man of high order, he is known throughout the world as the manufacture of the Rising Sun Stove Polish, which is sold in every nation of the earth.

Congressman Morse says:

"My brother's wife received great benefit from the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura. She has been a long time ill and other medicines failed. She is greatly improved by the use of Nervura. She had insomnia and nervousness and can now sleep well. There is no question that Dr. Greene's Nervura is a valuable remedy and it is a down right benefit to nervous affections."

Mr. Morse's sister, Mrs. Albert F. Morse, of Canton, Mass., says:

"I had been in feeble health for 23 years and had employed all the usual means for cure without much benefit. I have had many hemorrhages of the lungs with severe neuralgia and insomnia.

"My friends had used and knew of the good results from Dr. Greene's Nervura and recommended its use to me. I have now used three bottles and received help from the very first. I have now become so much benefited that I can say that I am in the best health that I have enjoyed for three years. I sleep well and soundly and my food does not distress me at all.

"I can heartily recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura to any person on account of its good effects on myself and friends."

Surely no one who reads this positive proof of the marvelous powers of Dr. Greene's Nervura to make the sick well, the powerful endorsement of this grandest of medicines by one of Massachusetts' foremost statesmen, will hesitate another instant in seeking the sure road to health by using Dr. Greene's Nervura.

It is what the world of sufferers needs. It is the great cure for weakness, nervousness, tired-out bodies, shaky, unsteady and weakened nerves. It gives power and strength to nerves and body, with restored vigor and renewed vitality; makes rich, red blood, cures dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, kidney and liver complaints. It banishes headache, sleeplessness, neuralgia and rheumatism. In fact it makes the sick well. Use it and prove for yourself its wonderful power to cure.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is not like the preparations put up by irresponsible and unprofessional people, but is the prescription and discovery of a widely known physician, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. It is plainly evident therefore why it always cures—because it is perfectly adapted for just these complaints. Another thing which can be said of no other medicine, and which practically assures a cure by Dr. Greene's Nervura, Dr. Greene, its discoverer, can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

All the other four sisters wished to await the coming of the prince.

"You need not be troubled about your dress," said the messenger, "as the fairy prince will provide the robes for his bride and for all those whom he chooses to honor."

"Oh, that is such a relief," said the sisters.

Nora was the next, and as she had little trouble to prepare her toilet she was happy. "I will be as kind and gentle to Aunt Nancy and every one else as you please," said she, and all went nicely for a time.

As she sat waiting she saw a neighbor's baby playing in the road, and as she played she gave no heed to a team which was coming along with the driver asleep on his seat. Nora saw that the great horses would walk over the poor baby if nothing was done to prevent, but what if she should leave the porch just as the prince might be coming? "Aunt Nancy can get there in time if I call," thought Nora. So she called to Aunt Nancy, for she would not leave her seat nor sleep for a moment on any account. Aunt Nancy heard and ran as fast as her old feet could carry her, but it was too late for her to save the baby. The nearest horse's hoof came down on poor baby's foot, and the driver was awakened by the scream which the baby gave as her little foot was broken and she was made a cripple.

Just then a mouse ran across the porch, and Nora was so frightened that she forgot everything and ran screaming into the house. Aunt Nancy drove away the mouse, and Nora sat watching again. A messenger appeared and brought a note which said, "You have missed your great opportunity." Nora went to her room and wept. She thought the prince had passed when the mouse frightened her, and until after the wedding she did not understand what the message really meant.

Finetta was the fifth of the sisters. She waited with much fear and many misgivings, and when she saw an old uncle who was poor and lame coming up the street she turned her eyes the other way so as to appear not to see him and thus avoid speaking or even bowing to him. "How awkward it would be," thought Finetta, "to have old Uncle John stop and talk just as the prince might be coming!"

Old Uncle John did not pass, however, but went straight to the kitchen to see Aunt Nancy. "Why so sad this day, Uncle John?" asked Aunt Nancy. "I am poor and discouraged," said Uncle John, "and as I came in Finetta turned her head away so as not to be obliged to speak to me. She used to be my especial favorite, and it hurts the heart sorely to have all your strong young friends desert you as the grave is casting its shadows across your path."

"Oh, cheer up, cheer up, Uncle John. I know all about your being turned out of the old house, and I have arranged to have a niece of mine take you until the prince sends for you to come to the old folks' home. We shall both be there soon, and then there will be no more slights and snubs for either of us. Keep up your courage."

Just then Uncle John disappeared, and a voice like the echo of Aunt Nancy's own said: "Keep up your courage. I am coming for you soon." Then she knew that the fairy prince had called again. "Well, I shall be glad to get to the home for old ladies," said Aunt Nancy, "for my work is heavy and my hands are weak."

"Finetta," said a voice which was strangely like Uncle John's, "won't you ask me to come in?"

"No; I don't want you to come in now. Go away, please."

Just then she looked, and instead of her Uncle John she saw the fairy prince, whose beauty was wonderful, but who looked sad as he said, "Be it as you say."

MAN'S END ON NANTUCKET.

The mourners entered the church, but no Cap'n Stant entered with them. Him, either by reason of the narrowness of the aisle or of some requirement of island etiquet, they left all alone in the rickety hearse that the bony, dispirited horse had drawn up onto the knoll before the door. Even the driver, who by virtue of his office, if nothing else, might have been expected to share the old man's solitude, threw the reins over the dashboard and followed the mourners into the church. The old horse hung his heavy head, settling down in every joint, as tired old horses will. The sun shone hot on the bare, varnished top of the hearse. There seemed to be an infinite sadness in the poor old captain's isolation, out there in the garish noonday, deprived as he was of the one privilege that we all look upon as our inalienable right, whatever else may be denied us, that of being present at our own funerals.

The sea wind even, that had never hesitated to buffet the old sailor in his lifetime, felt the pity of it and came and blew about him in gentle puffs as he lay there, as one who would say, "Never mind, good old Cap'n Stant, they have all gone in and left you; but I will stay out here and bear you company."

The sea, moreover, that had fought many a good bout with him and given him no quarter, while he was living, smiled up encouragingly at him now from down by the life-saving station, as one who would also speak a word of comfort. "Never mind, good old Cap'n Stant, they will all go home and leave you to-night, but I will watch with you and talk to you; not only to-night, but every night till God's world ends. You and God and the storm wind and I, we understand each other, old mate."

At last we are at home after the long day's experience, at home in a cultured, complicated world, so different from that of simple "Cap'n Stant," whose whole living and dying might be compressed into the epitaph of another island captain:—

He stopped catchin' cod
An' went to his God—

that it almost seems to us we must have fallen asleep on the cliffs after breakfast, and have dreamed of his death and burial.

It is only at midnight when we throw the shutters open for a good-night look at the sleeping world that the spell of this island sorrow again lays hold upon us. Poor old "Cap'n Stant," sleeping for the first time in his lonely grave on the moorland by the sea! Poor "Elviry and the widder" waking in the darkened cottage under the hill! If it were not for the "vernal shores and the golden landings"—who that goes or who that stays could brave life's ending?

NOW IT IS DIFFERENT.—A very pretty young girl was sitting in a Colerain Avenue car the other day. At a corner there jumped on a young man evidently a bill collector on his rounds. "Why, Nellie," said he, "where have you been so long?"

"Home," said Nellie demurely.

"Thought you were hammering same old typewriter for Plunk & Plunk."

"Well, I ain't."

"What are you doing?"

"I'm married."

"Married!" exclaimed the youth. "Gee whiz! Who'd you marry?"

"Horace Plunk."

The face of the youth grew blank. "I can't see what you married him for."

Nellie blushed and then dimpled into an amused smile. "I got tired of having him him dictate to me."—Cincinnati Tribune.

Here are two or three anecdotes of German children: It was at a large party. A gentleman had the misfortune to break a glass. Little Lena, who was standing near her mamma, raised herself on tiptoe and whispered, loud enough for all of the company to hear: "And one of the borrowed ones, too!" Later in the evening the hostess gave one of her little daughters a nice apple. "Now give your mamma a kiss, there's a dear," said the child's uncle. "I'm not allowed to when she's painted her face." Little Paul was sent with a bunch of flowers to the manager's wife on her birthday, and waited in silence after he had been dismissed. Lady—"Well, my young man, what are you waiting for now?" Paul—"Mamma said I was not to ask for a piece of birthday cake, but wait till I got it."

The Philadelphia Record tells of a good old Methodist lady who became very happy last Sunday under the preaching of the Word, and ejaculated, "Glory!" She was admonished to keep quiet by two of the brethren, and nodded assent, but soon becoming forgetful, responded, "Hallelujah!" The brethren again called her attention to the annoyance, and told her that if she did not keep quiet they would be compelled to remove her. The sermon proceeded, and the old lady, becoming very happy and forgetful of her surroundings, shouted out, "Glory to God!" This was too much for the brethren, and they tried to lead her out, but she refused to walk, so they carried her. On her way she said: "I am honored above my Master, for while he was carried by an ass, I am carried by two."

IT LOOKED THAT WAY.—"Pillman's bill came back to-day," said the bookkeeper. "What did he have to say?" asked the merchant. "He didn't have anything to say. It was his widow who did the saying. She writes: 'Don't you think that in sending a bill to a man who has been buried three months you are rather running it into the ground?'"—Indianapolis Journal.

Won't tell you about your health. Ask your neighbor what he and his family took last Spring when they felt so miserable, so tired-out. He will tell you the standard family remedy for 30 years for Malaria, Chills and Fever, Lassitude, Scrofula, Rheumatism, and all Blood Diseases. A magic boon to tired mothers and puny children. It has cured thousands, will cure you. Nothing new about it; no trial remedy; no temporary stimulant. It does the work thoroughly, honestly, and it's "easy to buy," "easy to take."

DR. CLARK JOHNSON'S

50c. per bottle; all druggists.

THE DOWNTRODDEN REPORTER. Before the female society reporter had usurped the social domain as completely as at present, he was assigned one night to report a great social function at one of the swell houses in New York. He stationed himself at the head of a stairway to take the names of the women as they passed him to go to the dressing-room to take off their wraps and prepare for their appearance on the lower floor. He had been standing there for some time, taking notes, when a gay young damsel, heavily wrapped in furs, lightly tripped up the stairway and suddenly addressed him: "Ah, beg pardon, sir, are you the footman?" "No, madam," quickly retorted the reporter; "are you the chambermaid?"—Washington Post.

"MEIGS'" CORNER.
Tips About Clothing.

To know how to buy is a great thing, to know what to buy is a greater thing, but to know when and how to sell is a still greater thing. Only a thorough knowledge of the business, knowing and constantly learning the wants of patrons by personal contact and being in closest touch with the popular tastes and styles can make a business successful.

Our stock this season is right. We say it is right. The infallible public judgment says it is right. The gratifying increase in our trade says it is right. With unlimited capital we buy what is right—in fabrics in style, in fit, in price; therefore, while we say better, come and choose from our fashions and get at lower prices than ever before.

Immortality.

He who liveth not for a Hereafter,
Nor in a future state of bliss or woe believes,
Will often mock with loose and ribald laughter
The thoughtful man who anxious groans and grieves,
Or joyeth over what he feels will follow
When dies the body, and the soul distressed
Must fly somewhere, as surely as the swallow
In Autumn leaves her empty, clay-built nest.

Vain, heartless, hollow laughter. The unbeliever,
The scoffer given unto seathing scorn,
With the peace-destroyer and the deceiver
Are but as tares amid the golden corn.
These wil the Reapers into bundles gather,
Bound they will burn, Christ says, for evermore,
What time the fiery wrath of God the Father
Against them shuts for aye the shining door.

If this Western World, beyond the pathless ocean
To the European remained fair and unknown
For centuries, may not death, preceded by devotion,
Discover fairer worlds where is not any moan?
If the darkness countless starry worlds revealeth,
Unseen by day in azure skies above,
May not death reveal what life so well concealeth—
Millions of souls aglow with perfect love.

If we believe that Christ the Lord has risen,
We must believe that we shall also rise,
Or pass, like Peter, angel-guarded out of prison,
Through the gate that leadeth into Paradise.
The words of Paul still like a toesin ringing,
Summon us to war against the flesh and sin,
So that the soul may go where heavenly hosts are singing,
And none but the pure in heart can enter in.

MOSES TEGGART.

THE JININ' FARMS.

You see Bill an' I waz jest like brothers; waz raised on 'jinin' farms; he waz his folks' only child, an' I waz my folks' only one. So, nat'rill like, we growed up together, lovin' an' sympathizin' with each other. What I knowed, I told Bill, an' what Bill knowed, he told me, an' what neither on us knowed—why, that wan't wuth knowin'!

If I hadn't got over my braggin' days, I'd allow that, in our time, Bill an' I was just about the sparkinest beaus in the township, 'leastwise, that's what the gals thought; but, to be honest about it, there wuz only two uv them girls we courted, Bill an' I, he courtin' one an' I t'other. You see, we sung in the choir, an' as our good luck would have it, we got sot on the sopranner an' the alto, and bimeby—oh, well, after beauin' 'em round a spell—a year or so, for that matter—we up an' married 'em, an' the old folks gin us the farms, 'jinin' farms, where we boys had lived all our lives. Lizzie, my wife, had always been powerful friendly with Marthy, Bill's wife; them two girls never met up but what they waz huggin' an' kissin' an' carryin' on, like girls does; for women ain't like men—they can't control themselves an' their feelin's, like the stronger sext does.

I tell you it was happy times for Lizzie an' me, and Marthy an' Bill—happy times on the 'jinin' farms, with the pastures full uv fat cattle, an' the barns full uv hay an' grain, an' the twin cottages full uv love an' contentment! Then when Cyrus come—our little boy—our first an' only one! why, when he come, I waz just so happy an' so grateful that if I hadn't been a man I guess I'd have hollered—maybe cried—with joy. Wanted to call the little tyke Bill, but Bill wouldn't hear to nothin' but Cyrus. You see, he'd bought a cyclopeedy the winter we was married an' had been readin' in it uv a great foreign warrior named Cyrus that lived a long spell ago.

"Land uv Goshen, Bill!" sez I, "you don't reckon the baby'll ever get to be a warrior?"

"Well, I don't know about that," sez Bill. "There's no tellen'." At any rate, Cyrus Ketcham has an uncommon sound for a name; so Cyrus it must be, an' wen he's 7 years old I'll gin him the finest Morgan colt in the deestrict."

So we called him Cyrus, an' he grew up lovin' and bein' loved by everybody.

Well, along about two years—or, say eighteen months or so—after Cyrus come to us a little girl baby come to Bill and Marthy, an' of all the cunnin' sweet little things you ever seen that little girl baby was the cunnin'est an' sweetest! Looked just like one of them foreign crockery figgers you buy in city stores—all pink an' white, with big brown eyes here, an' a teeny, weeny mouth there, and a nose an' ears, you'd have bet they wuz wax—they wuz so small an' fragile. Never darst hold her for fear I'd break her, an' it liked to skeered me to death to see the way Marthy an' Lizzie would kind uv toss her round an' trot her—so—on their knees or pat her—so—on the back when she wuz collicky like the wimmin folks sez all healthy babies is afore they'er 3 months old.

"You're goin' to have the namin' uv her," sez Bill to me.

"Yes," sez Marthy, "we made it up atween us long ago that you should have the namin' uv our baby like we had the namin' uv yourn."

Then, kind uv hectorin' like—for I was always a powerful tease—I sez: "How would Cleopatry do for a name? or Venis? I have been readin' the cyclopeedy, myself, I'd have you know!"

An' then I laffed one on them provokin' laffs uv mine—oh, I tell ye, I was the worst feller for hectorin' folks you ever seen! But I meant it all in fun, for when I suspicioned they didn't like my funnin' I sez:

"Bill," sez I, "an' Marthy, there's only one name I'd love above all the rest to call your little lambkin, an' that's the dearest name on earth to me—the name uv Lizzie, my wife!"

That just suited 'em to a T, an' always after that she wuz called leetle Lizzie, an' it sot on her, that name did, like it was made for her an' she for it. We made it up then—perhaps more in fun then anything else—that when the children growed up Cyrus and little Lizzie, they should get marr'ed together, an' be a blessin' to us all in our old age. We made it up for fun, perhaps, but down in our hearts it was our prayer just the same, and God heard the prayer an' granted it to be so.

They played together, they lived together; together they tended the deestrick school an' went huckleberrin'; there wus huskin's an' spellin' bees an' choir meetin's an' skatin' an' slidin' down-hill—oh, the happy times uv youth! an' all those times our boy Cyrus an' leetle Lizzie went lovin'ly together!

What made me start so—what made me ask of Bill one time: "Are we a-gettin' old, Bill?" That wus the Thanksgivin' night when, as we set round the fire in Bill's front room, Cyrus come to us, holdin' leetle Lizzie by the hand, an' they asked us could they get marr'ed next Thanksgivin' time? Why, it seemed only yesterday that they was chicks together! God! how swift the years go by when they are happy years!

"Reuben," sez Bill to me, "le's go down cellar an' draw a pitcher uv cider!"

You see, that bein' men, it wuzn't for us to make a show uv ourselves. Marthy an' Lizzie just hugged each other an' laughed an' cried—they wuz so glad! Then they hugged Cyrus an' leetle Lizzie an' talk an' laff? Well, it did beat all how them women folks did talk an' laff, all at one time! Cyrus laffed, too, an' then he said he reckoned he'd go out an' throw some fodder in to the steers, an' Bill an' I—well, we went down to draw that pitcher uv cider.

It ain't for me to tell now uv the meller sweetness uv their courtin' time; I couldn't do it if I tried. Oh, how we loved 'em both! Yet! once in the early summer-time, our boy Cyrus he come to me and said: "Father, I want you to let me go away for a spell."

"Cyrus, my boy! Go away?"

"Yes, father; President Linkern has called for soldiers; father, you have always taught me to obey the voice of duty. The voice of duty. That voice summons me now."

"God in heaven," I thought, "you have given us this child only to take him from us!"

But then come the second thought: "Steady, Reuben! You are a man; be a man! Steady, Reuben; be a man!"

"Yer mother," sez I; yer mother—it will break her heart!"

"She leaves it all to you, father."

"But—the—other—the other, Cyrus—leetle Lizzie—ye know!"

"She is content," sez he.

A storm swep' through me like a cyclone. It wuz all Bill's fault; that warrior-name had done it all—the cyclopeedy with its lies had pizened Bill's mind to put this trouble on me an' mine!

No, no, a thousand times no! These wuz coward feelin's an' they misbecome me; the ache here in this heart uv mine had no business there. The better part uv me called to me an' said: Pull yourself together, Reuben Ketcham, an' be a man.

"Well, after he went away, leetle Lizzie wuz more to us 'n ever before; wuz at our house all the time; called Lizzie "mother"; wuz contented, in her woman's way, willin' to do her part, waitin' an' watchin' an' prayin' for him to come back. They sent him boxes of good things every fortnight, mother and leetle Lizzie did; there wuzn't a minute uv the day that they wasn't talkin' or thinkin' uv him.

Well, ye see—I must tell it my own way—he got killed. In the very first battle Cyrus got killed. The rest uv the soldiers turnt to retreat, because there wuz too many for 'em on the other side. But Cyrus stood right up; he wuz the warrior Bill allowed he wuz goin' to be; our boy wuzn't the kind to run. They tell me there wuz bullet holes here, an' here, an' here—all over his breast. We always knew our boy was a hero!

Ye can thank God ye wuzn't at the 'jinin' farms when the news came that he'd got killed. The neighbors they were there, of course, to kind uv hold us up an' comfort us. Bill an' I sot all day in the woodshed, holdin' hands an' lookin' away from each other, so; never said a word; jes' sot there, sympathizin' an' holdin' hands. If we'd been women, Bill and I would uv cried an' beat our forrids an' hung round each other's neck, like the women folks done. Bein' we wuz men, we jes' set in there in the woodshed, away from all the rest, holdin' hands an' sympathizin'.

From that time on leetle Lizzie wuz our daughter—our very daughter, all that wuz left to us uv our boy. She never shed a tear; crep' like a shadder 'round the house an' up the front walk an' through the garden. Her heart wuz broke. You could see it in the little lambkin's eyes an' hear it in her voice. Wanted to tell her sometimes when she kissed me and called me "father"—wanted to tell her: "Leetle Lizzie, let me help yer bear yer load. Speak out the sorrer that's in yer broken heart; speak it out, leetle one, and let me help yer bear yer load."

But it isn't for a man to have them feelin's—leastwise, it isn't for him to tell uv 'em. So I held my peace and made no sign.

She jest drooped, an' pined, and died.

One mornin' in the spring she wuz standin' the garden, an' all at oncet she threw her arms up, so, an' fell upon her face, an' when they got to her all that wuz left to us of leetle Lizzie wuz her lifeless leetle body. I can't tell of what happened next—uv the funeral an' all that. I said this wuz in the spring, an' so it wuz all around us; but it was cold an' winter here.

One day mother sez to me: "Reuben," sez she, softly, "Marthy an' I is goin' to the buryin' ground for a spell. Don't you reckon it would be a good time for you to step over an' see Bill while we're gone?"

"Mebbe so, mother," sez I.

It wuz a pretty day. Cuttin' across lots, I thought to myself what I'd say to Bill to kind uv comfort him. I made it up that I'd speak about the time when we wuz boys together; uv how we used to slide down the meetin' house hill, an' go huckleberrin'; uv how I jumped into the pond one day an' saved him from bein' drowned; uv the spellin' school, the huskin' bees, the choir meetin's, the sparkin' times; of the swimmin' hole, the crow's nest in the pine tree, the woodchuck's hole in the old pasture lot; uv the sunny summer days and the snug winter nights when we wuz boys, an' happy! And then—

"No, no! I couldn't go on like that! I'd break down. A man can't be a man more'n jist so fur!

Why did mother send me over to see Bill? I'd better stayed at home! I felt myself chokin' up; if I hadn't took a chew uv terbacker, I'd 'ave been cryin' in a minute!

The nearer I got to Bill's, the worse I hated to go in. Standin' on the stoop, I could hear the tall clock tickin' solemnly inside—tick-tock, tick-tock," just as plain as if I was sittin' aside uv it. The door was shet, yet I know jes' what Bill wuz doin'; he wuz sittin' in the old red easy chair, lookin' down at the floor—like this. Strange ain't it, how sometimes when you love folks you know jest what they are doin' without knowin' anythin' about it!

There warn't no use knockin,' but I knocked three times; so. Didn't say a word; only just knocked three times—that-a-way. Didn't hear no answer—nuthin' but the tickin' uv the tall clock, and yet I knew that Bill heard me an' that down in his heart he was sayin' to me to come in. He never said a word, yet I knowed all the time that Bill wuz sayin' for me to come in.

I opened the door, keerful-like, an' slipped in. Didn't say nothin'; just opened the door softly like an' slipped in. There he set jest as I knowed he wuz settin'; lonesome-like; sad-like; his head hangin' down; he never looked up at me; never said a word—knowed I was there all the time, but never said a word and never made a sign.

How changed Bill wuz—oh, Bill, how changed ye wuz! There wuz furrers in yer face, an' yer hair wuz white—as white as—as white as mine! Looked small about the body, thin and hump-shouldered.

Jest two ol' men, that's what we wuz; an' we had been boys together!

Well, I stood there a spell, kind uv hesitatin' like, neither uv us sayin' anythin' until bimeby Bill he sort uv made a sign for me to set down. Didn't speak, didn't lift his eyes from the floor; only made a sign, like this, in a weak, tremblin' way—that wuz all. An' I set down, and there we both set, neither uv us sayin' a word, but both settin' there, lovin' each other and sympathizin' as hard as we could, for that is the way with men.

Bimeby, like we'd kind uv made it up aforehand, we hitched over closer, for when folks is in sorrer an' trouble they like to be close together. But a word all the time, an,' hitchin' closer an' closer together, why, bimeby, we set side by side. So we set a spell longer, lovin' and sympathizin', as men folks do; thinkin' uv the happiness uv the past, an' uv all the hopes them two children had brought us! The tall clock ticked, an' that wuz all the sound there wuz excep' when Bill gin a sigh an' I gin a sigh, too—to lighten the load, ye know.

Not a word come from either uv us; 'twas all we could do to set there, lovin' each other an' sympathizin'!

All at oncet—for we couldn't stand it no longer—all at oncet, we turned an' groped with our hands, this a-way, faces t'other way, an' reached out, so, an' groped with our hands, this a-way, till we found and held each other fast in a clasp of tender meanin'.

Then—God forgive me if I done a wrong—then I wisht I wuz a woman! For, bein' a woman, I could have riz up, an' standin' so, I could have cried, "Come, Bill, come, let me hold you in these arms; come, let us weep together, an' let this broken heart uv mine speak through these tremblin' lips to that broken heart of yourn, Bill, tellin' ye how much I love ye an' sympathize with ye!"

But—no! I wuz not a woman! I wuz a man! An', bein' a man, I must let my heart break; I must hold my peace, and I must make no sign.—St. Louis Weekly Globe—Democrat.

AMONG THE FAIRIES.

THE PRINCE'S BRIDE.

IN THREE CHAPTERS.

[Copyright, 1896, by Walter B. Guild, Boston.]

CHAPTER III.

"Oh, no, no. It is all a mistake. I thought it was Uncle John," said Finetta.

"You have made a great mistake, as you say," said the prince, still in the same voice, "but I make no mistake in going away."

Rosebud was the name of the sixth sister, but they always called her Bud. She felt sure that the failure of her five sisters was because the prince had chosen her; so, as she went out upon the porch to wait for the prince, she took a cat, that no mouse might scare her, and resolved to look at any one who spoke to her, so as not to make the fatal mistake of telling the prince to go away as Finetta had done. "No mice and no mistake for me," she thought. "Well, no wonder that the prince passed the others, for I am really prettier than any of them. They can be my bridesmaids, probably, unless the prince is angry with Finetta."

She had waited scarcely ten minutes when a gorgeously colored feather blew from her hat into the road. Now Bud was so vain and thought so much of fine clothes that she chased the feather without a thought of anything else, but as she caught it and turned toward the house the prince met her and said:

"You have saved the plume for your hat, but it has cost you a kingdom."

Poor Bud wept and the prince passed.

The seventh sister's name was Prudence. She was very much in earnest as to winning the prince. She determined that no feathers, nor mice, nor old uncles' voices should cause her to miss her opportunity. She would not leave the porch no matter what happened. As she sat there, a large snake crawled toward her. She was terribly frightened, but not a step did she move, and the snake passed down the path and out of sight.

A fox was chased by dogs and ran under her settee, but not a step did Prudence move.

Three mice ran into her lap and looked at her, but not a scream nor a step from Prudence. "I will not be frightened," said she.

Soon a little girl came along who was so faint from want of food that she fell down in the road. She held up her little thin hands and cried, "Come to me."

"No going anywhere for me," said Prudence. "Aunt Nancy can go if she hears her." Weak as the little voice was, Aunt Nancy heard and came with her hand all covered with dough and her apron torn where in her haste it had caught in the door latch. When Aunt Nancy got half way toward the poor girl, there stood the fairy prince. His face shone with happiness as he said: "At last I have found the beautiful, the true and loving one who is worthy to be my queen." Prudence thought that he surely referred to her, but when Aunt Nancy was taken into the chariot with the poor hungry girl and the prince she understood.

All were invited to the wedding, and when it was known that Aunt Nancy was in truth the bride, there was great wonder and fear among the girls who had made sport of "Our bride, Aunt Nancy."

They all went to the wedding, but not one of them was even a lady in waiting.

When Aunt Nancy came in with the prince, all of her old deformities had vanished. Such beauty had never before been seen. The seven sisters looked in amazement. Then each took out a mirror and saw her true self for the first time.

The prince shook hands with every guest, and it took three days for the handshaking. To every one he appeared as he had done at some previous time. To Olga he was the old woman whom she had so rudely grieved.

As a lesson had to be taught, the prince said to each one just what that one had said to him when in disguise he had tested her loyalty.

To Nora he came as a baby with a lame foot. She then saw that the opportunity she had missed was to save the baby and thus win the crown. Ever after the wedding Nora was lame, for the baby's hurt was passed to Nora. She thus knew from what pain she might have saved another.

The bride now opened the letter which was left by the old woman whom Olga had treated so rudely, and it said:

"As you have treated my subjects, so have you treated me and so must you be dealt with."

A royal message offering pardon to the lawbreakers was issued. A measure of yarn was given them to reel, and the more the law had been broken, the longer the yarn, so that all could see the true measure of the king's displeasure. The people were much surprised, for some of the highest society people had a longer measure of yarn to reel than the commou hen thieves. It taught them a lesson, however, and the measures of yarn were the means of bringing much joy to those who reeled them in quickly and properly.

THE END

THE FAIRY'S SANDAL.

Copyright 1896, by Walter B. Guild, Boston.

In the great city of Obedo there dwelt many rich and many poor men. There were many of the people who were dishonest, and so it came about that those who could do a kindness were often imposed upon.

Little Shere Ado dwelt in a miserable lane and in a still more miserable house. He was very poor and earned his scanty living by carrying water to the camels and men of the caravans which passed through the city.

One so small and weak was not able to earn much, but he was always kind and polite.

While he sat with his water bottle one day, there came to him a man of majestic appearance and asked him if he would do him a favor.

"How many leagues must I go?" asked Shere Ado.

'Go only to the house of yon witch and bring to me her right sandal," said the stranger. "Disturb not her slumber, for she sleepeth at the noon hour and might not give you the slipper if you ask for it never so civilly.

"A hundred shekels of silver shall be yours when you bring the slipper." Now "yon witch," as the stranger had called her, was no witch at all, but a good fairy and one who had done Shere Ado full many a kindness.

"Come here again to-morrow and I will see what I can do for you," said Shere Ado.

When the stranger went his way, Shere Ado went to the house of his good friend the fairy and told her all that the stranger had said.

"When I sleep to-morrow you may take the sandal from my foot," said the fairy.

So it came about that Shere Ado took the sandal or slipper from the foot of his friend and got the hundred shekels of silver.

"Great now is my wealth," said he, "and I will give to the fairy the half of the money, for it was not her slipper."

When the fairy received the fifty shekels of silver, she went outside the city wall and sowed them in a field which she owned and then gave the field to Shere Ado to be his very own, with all that it contained.

So it came about that Shere Ado took the slipper.

Shere Ado did much good with his money, and many a poor person was helped in more ways than you would expect.

The winter soon came, and Shere Ado was now as poor as before, for he had spent and given away all of his fifty shekels of silver.

Water carrying was again his only means of earning a living. Not a word did the good fairy say until he was striken with the desert fever.

Then all of his needs were supplied, and some of the poor people whom he had helped came to care for him the best that they could.

In the spring, when Shere Ado was fully well, there came a knock at his door.

There stood the stranger who had sought the slipper.

"Because you would not rob my sister, but took her slipper by her consent, you have a new house and much wealth. Come with me," said the stranger.

They went outside the city wall to Shere Ado's field, and there had grown a beautiful palace. There were menservants and maidservants, and every shekel of silver which the fairy had sown upon the field had grown to a pot of gold.

Shere Ado now asked the fairy to be his good counselor. He thus used his wealth so wisely that the caliph (that is what they called their king) bestowed upon him a title, and he was raised to high honors.

The caliph had no son, and so in his old age he appointed Shere Ado to be king or caliph in his stead, "for," said he, "one who would not steal even an old sandal for a hundred shekels of silver will surely in all things be faithful."

FARMER AND FORTUNE TELLERS.

Some years ago there walked into the editorial rooms of a Philadelphia newspaper, says a writer in the Times of that city, a ruddy-faced, intelligent-looking farmer, who gave his name as Lyman Aker and his home as Wrightsville, N. Y. Mr. Aker conveyed the intelligence that he had lost a cow—a 20-quart cow. She hadn't strayed away, understand; she had simply lain down and died; not because she wanted to, but because she had taken an excessive dose of Paris green. This was not the first cow that Aker had lost, nor the second, nor the third. In seven years he had 12 cows, four horses, 20 sheep and more than 100 chickens destroyed by the same agency. Detectives had been employed to no purpose. Aker had watched night after night, hidden in his hay mow, with a big blunderbuss as a companion. His vigil was continued for 35 days consecutively, and during that time three cows and one horse were poisoned. Aker came to the conclusion that there was no human agency at the bottom of this remarkable persecution, and, because he could find no explanation, contented himself with the belief that some supernatural agency was at work. He pondered over the thing for a week, and the more he reasoned with himself the more firmly he became convinced that he was under the bane of some evil influence. A man of positive ideas was Aker, and when this conviction became firmly rooted in his brain there was no dislodging it.

Now, mark the sequel. Aker was a man of fair education, a believer in God and a state of future reward and punishment. His worldly possessions amounted to $6000. His little farm was clear of incumbrance and he had a fairly comfortable balance in the bank. Aker came to Philadelphia and visited Circle hall, then at Fourth and Vine streets, where James A. Bliss and his cunning wife had for some months defrauded the credulous by the spirit-materialization farce. He was introduced to Medium Allen Jordan, and Medium Jordan went into a "trance"—$2 in advance—and described a wondrous scene to the farmer. The poisoning of the cattle, the medium said, was due to wicked spirits. Human brain had never conceived it, nor human hand had never accomplished it. The spirit of a depraved missionary, who had shuffled off in the Sandwich islands, was the cause of all the trouble, and it was necessary that he should be "laid." To properly exercise a mischievous "spirit" cost all the way from $5 to $50. Medium Jordan struck a happy medium at "a $20 bill."

How the dupe was plucked is a long tale. Inside of two months he paid to the medium nearly $800. Meanwhile the poisoning continued. Aker consulted almost every fortune-teller in Philadelphia, paying them fabulous prices for their advice. He was actually persuaded into desecrating a graveyard. "Madame Barlow," who was located in a small alley running off South Washington square, above Sixth, told him if he would dig into the grave of a man who had never wedded and cut off a finger the persecution would cease. Aker did so and obtained the ghastly bit of humanity and carried it with him for months. Another charlatan advised him to get a splinter from a scaffold on which a murderer had been executed. The farmer did so at an expense of $20, for the custodians of the gallows saw a chance to make some money out of a fool. Not to spin the tale of credulity out too long, suffice it is to say that within 17 months Aker had spent $4000 in cash and had mortgaged his little farm.

In less than an hour a newspaper reporter who was assigned to the story discovered on one of the rafters of the barn, directly over the feeding stalls, a big package of Paris green that had evidently lain there for years. The coming in and the going out of the cows and horses—all stabled together, head to head—had gradually sifted this down into the feed boxes. Poor Aker had failed to use his common sense, and was not only out of pocket, but had the satisfaction of knowing that he was very much of an ass.

RAILROAD TRAIN OBSTRUCTED

By a Polander, but Probably Without Malice and Through Ignorance.

Cornelius Sugrue, section boss on the Athol branch of the Boston and Albany railroad at Three Rivers, was the means of saving many dollars worth of railroad property and probably many persons from serious injury and possible death, Monday afternoon. While working with his men below the depot at Three Rivers, he noticed two men farther down the track acting in a suspicious manner, and he walked towards them. As he approached, one of the men left the track and walked into the woods near by. The other stood upon the track and attempted to kick a stone from a frog into which it had been tightly wedged. About ten feet from the frog, Sugrue also found a railroad spike placed upon the track. He cleared the track and took the man, who proved to be a Pole, to Three Rivers, where he was arrested by Officer Manning and taken to Palmer. Before Sugrue had gone far with his man in the direction of Three Rivers, the passenger train which leaves Three Rivers at 4.58 for Springfield went by. If the spike had been on the track then it would have lifted the wheels, and as there is a sharp curve at this point, the train would have been derailed. And if this had failed to wreck the train, the flange on the car wheels could not have passed through the frog, and what might have been the outcome, no one can tell.

The Polander was brought in court Tuesday evening and gave his name as Michael Wewiwiski. He said he had been in this country but two months, and had gone to Three Rivers to see a relative. He met while there another Pole whom he knew in the old country, and together they walked down the track. They had no talk, he said, about placing the obstructions upon the track, but he threw a stone upon the track and it lodged in the frog. He also placed the spike upon the rail to see if the locomotive would flatten it. He did this, he said, without any malicious intent, thinking no harm would come therefrom. He did not attempt to shield himself by placing the blame upon his companion, who cannot be found, and evidently did not realize the seriousness of the matter. Judge Robinson was inclined to believe his version of the affair, but said that the offence was so grave and the possible results so terrible that he could not look with leniency upon the case, and bound Wewiwiski over to the December term of the superior court under $500 bonds, which he was unable to furnish, and so was committed.

Possible Change in the Location of the Post Office.

Rumors of a proposed chahge in the location of the post office have been heard for a few days, and many people will be glad to know that its removal from its present inconvenient quarters to a location where it will have ample room both for boxes and lobby, and fittings which a post office in a town of this size ought to have, rests entirely with them; they have only to say so, and the office will be moved.

Postmaster Royce was surprised one morning last June when, on opening an official letter from Washington he found inside an order to look up the matter of a new location for the office, and to report the result of his investigations. He had nothing to do but obey the order. Several locations were considered, and the matter finally resolved itself down to a choice between three: The Feeney property on the corner of Main and Central streets, the present location with needed changes, and the east store, now occupied by LaSalle's barber shop, in the Caryl block on the corner of Main and Commercial streets. The rent of the first was more than the post office department would pay; certain changes were asked for in the present location, including a new arrangement of the boxes so as to give more room in the lobby, and more room in the rear in which to do the work, but while the owner of the property, H. C. Strong, was willing to give more room, he refused to do anything with the boxes. A proposition was made by L. W. Caryl to fit up the store in his block in such shape and condition as Mr. Royce required, to put in new and convenient boxes, arranged so as to give the freest possible access to them, with ample corridor room; in fact to give the town an office second to none in this vicinity outside of the cities. The plans have been shown to the authorities at Washington and are perfectly satisfactory, and if Mr. Royce only says the word he will be given orders to move at once. This he is unwilling to do unless the citizens express a wish to have the office moved. Should a petition to that effect be presented however, it would probably result in the removal of the office to Caryl's block.

This location would be particularly desirable on many accounts. In the first place it would free the entrance to the office of the crowd which nightly hangs out at the foot of Walnut street, a condition of affairs which would be greatly appreciated by women. In its new location there would be ample lobby room, which in the present location has for some years been inadequate to the demands. A new arrangement of the boxes, giving free access without crowding, would be another feature, to say nothing of lighter, more airy surroundings in every way. This proposed location is less than a minute's walk from the present, and is on the corner of the street leading to the passenger station, conveniently located for business men in going to and coming from trains.

A College Girl's Experience at the Mt. Holyoke College Fire.

The many Palmer friends of Mt. Holyoke College are saddened at the unfortunate disaster which befell that institution by Sunday evening's fire. The reflection of the fire in the sky could be plainly seen from this village, and the morning papers were eagerly awaited for particulars. A number of Palmer women have been connected with Mt. Holyoke College and Seminary in the past, and they all mourn the disaster which has plunged their alma mater in distress. At the present time Miss Ola Northrop is attending the institution, and her friends will no doubt like to know her experience at the fire. Her father, H. A. Northrop, started for South Hadley Sunday evening, and arrived at the scene of the conflagration about 11 o'clock. The fire had by that time completed its work of destruction, but the firemen were still playing upon the smoking ruins. Owing to the great crowd of people present and the confusion which prevailed, he was unable to find Miss Northrop, but was assured that she was safe, and he returned to Holyoke. The next morning he went to South Hadley and found her at the hotel. Miss Northrop's room was in the main building, on the third floor fronting the street. She was in her room at the time the alarm was given. She realized that something must be done, and more thoughtful than many of the other girls, went immediately to the hotel and engaged a room. Then with her roommate, Miss Ivah Kenney of Milford, N. H., she went systematically to work and collected all their valuables and necessary belongings and carried them to the hotel. They did their bed-clothing in a large bundle and threw it upon the piazza roof, thinking that as the roof was slanting it would roll off to the ground; but the bundle flattened out and they were obliged to climb out of the window and lower themselves to the roof and throw the bundle to the ground below, which they did amid the cheers of the crowd. This bundle could not be found later, but turned up several days after. She lost one or two dresses, but was more fortunate than a majority of the girls, many of whom lost much of their property. Miss Northrop said that the girls displayed great coolness and helped one another save their most valuable possessions, and also helped to save the college library books. She said it was a picturesque sight to watch the flames leap about, seemingly joyful in their work of destruction. She also said that Mt. Holyoke gave her, indeed, a very warm reception.

A Ripe Old Age.

The following, taken from the Waterloo, Iowa, State Reporter of September 24th, will be of interest to many of the older residents of this vicinity, Mr. Cross having been pastor of the Congregational church at Palmer Center 1842-49. As to Mr. Cross's mental condition the readers of the JOURNAL have had ample opportunity to judge, numerous articles from his pen having appeared in its columns.

To-day is the 84th birthday of our good friend Rev. M. K. Cross, and he was made the innocent victim of a pleasant surprise by his niece, who invited some friends to partake of a dinner in honor of the day. Those present were Rev. and Mrs. J. O. Stevenson, Mrs. E. Adams, Mrs. N. S. Hungerford, Miss Anna Fields, Rev. P. Hallowell, Rev. Kimball and Mrs. Franklin. Rev. E. Adams was also expected, but absence from the city prevented his presence. We are sure the occasion was a pleasant one to all, and we are equally sure hundreds of our readers will join in congratulations to Mr. Cross that he has reached such a goodly age with so much of strength and vigor, both physically and mentally. We hope the hand of time will touch him gently for a long time yet.

The following note from Mr. Cross appeared in connection with the account of the event:

SURPRISING!

This is a day of surprises. But one is not often surprised, on taking a little ride about the city with a friend, to find on his return that somebody has been in the house overturning and transposing things generally, substituting chairs, dishes, dainties and flowers in rich abundance, while he was trying vainly to hurry up his friend, as dinner would be waiting at 12 o'clock m. My next neighbor, whose birthday and mine occur on the same day of the month—not of the year,—had been invited to dinner; but behold! there was a roomful of guests quietly waiting to be invited to a bountiful and "toothsome" lunch.

An elegant book and a pleasant letter, arriving in my absence, all the way from Massachusetts, who lives very near me "Under the Pines," and who has shown her skill in managing things "at sundry times and in divers manners."

Rev. Mr. Cross has many friends here who echo the hope that time will be merciful to him in its touch.

The "Palmer Citizen" Held from the Mail.

The September issue of the Palmer Citizen, published by the No-License League, which was sent to the post office for mailing on Wednesday, the 30th of September, is still held at the office, Postmaster Royce declining to take the risk of sending it out until he gets a ruling from the department at Washington. The Citizen is entered as second-class matter, which is defined as "publications which are regularly issued at stated intervals, as frequently as four times a year;" they "must bear a date of issue, and be numbered consecutively." Some time ago the publishers lost their right to mail the Citizen as second-class matter because an issue was skipped, but another application was made on the 13th of July, and a right granted. Under this Postmaster Royce thinks that the paper should have been presented for mailing on or near the 13th of September, the paper being issued bi-monthly. Each issue of the Citizen is dated with the month in which it is issued, but not with the day of the month, as that varies according to circumstances, and as the day of the month is not specified in the application for entry as second-class matter, the publishers claim the right to mail the paper any time within the month in which it is issued as long as the numbers appear every other month. A ruling from the department is expected some time next week.

Moran—Morgan.

A pretty church wedding occurred in St. Thomas's Catholic church Wednesday morning, when Herbert J. Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Morgan of North Wilbraham, and Mina L., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Moran of Palmer, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. S. Donoghue with a nuptial high mass in the presence of relatives and many friends. Excellent music was furnished by the choir, assisted by Mrs. J. W. Baldwin of North Wilbraham. The maid of honor was Miss Sadie Moran, sister of the bride, and the bridegroom was attended by John Moran, a brother of the bride. The bride was tastefully dressed in brown silk, with hat to match; the bridesmaid wore a gown of novelty goods. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride after the ceremony, many invited guests being present. There were many handsome presents, including $25 from Mr. John Moran, brother of the bride, numerous articles of silver, household goods, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan will make their home in North Wilbraham, where Mr. Morgan is connected with the Whiting Paper Company.

Another House Burglarized.

The residence of J. A. Breckenridge was not the only one entered by burglars last week. On the same day—Wednesday—the house of Dwight Mason, on the road to Thorndike, was entered and a little over $5 stolen while Mr. and Mrs. Mason were in this village. Entrance was gained by means of a chamber window, which was reached by climbing over the roof of a lean-to at the rear of the house. Evidently the person was acquainted with the premises and the habits of Mr. and Mrs. Mason, for he went directly to a bureau drawer in which was a $5 bill, and took that, not disturbing the other drawers of the bureau or three other bureaus in the house. He then went down stairs to where Mrs. Mason kept her pocketbook and extracted what change there was, only a few cents, and left the house the same way he entered. No clue was left, and Mr. and Mrs. Mason cannot imagine who the guilty person is.

Building Lots at Auction.

The auction sale of the Smith property took place Saturday afternoon. A large crowd was present and the bidding was fairly lively. All the lots were sold at prices ranging from $80 to $120, the lot with the barn on it bringing the latter sum. This lot was bought by S. W. Smith. The 20 lots brought $2160. It is reported on good authority that the property was bought at $1500. Frank Fleury of Three Rivers held the lucky number that drew the $10 gold piece, Michael Healy drew the five silver dollars, Mrs. Lyman Snow drew the men's gold watch, Miss McMahon of Ware the lady's gold watch, and Ernest Marsh a barrel of flour. Mr. Moore has bought a large tract of land in Three Rivers of C. S. Ruggles, and will dispose of the same at auction one week from to-morrow.

Wedding Ends with a Fight.

There was a Polish wedding and dance at Bondsville Saturday evening. The occasion was a brilliant affair, and in the small hours of the morning the grand finale came with a free-for-all fight. As a result the bridegroom, Joseph Koss, was separated from his newly-made better half and with four companions, Adam Toper, Michael Skszynias, Karmer Zoboron and Frank Ciganoski, arrested by Officer Collins and brought to Palmer. They appeared in court Monday charged with assault on Joseph Wyzga. After several hours work on the part of the judge, clerk, lawyer and interpreter, Koss was fined $5, Zoboron $20, and the others discharged. Albert Groods of Thorndike paid $10 for an assault on Jacob Sutlz of the same place.

The Central Vermont railroad offers excursion tickets to the Stafford fair the 6th, 7th and 8th. A special train will be run to the fair grounds on Wednesday and Thursday, leaving here at 10.20 a. m., and returning will arrive at Palmer at 5.45 p. m. The fare for the round trip, including admission to the grounds, is 85 cents. Tickets are also good on any of the regular trains.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Miss K. I. McMahon has a full line of fall and winter goods. Millinery opening, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 9 and 10. All are cordially invited.

A black Greyhound followed Frank Shields, of Monson, home from Palmer one night this week. The owner is requested to call for the dog.

W. A. Robinson of Hardwick, Mass., sells at auction on Monday, Oct. 5th, at 1 o'clock p. m., 50 choice cows, selected and tested in Vermont; 30 of them fresh in milk, their calves to be seen at sale. The rest to calve soon.

PALMER NEWS.

Mr. Hamilton will preach in the Advent chapel at 10.15 a. m. next Sunday.

Miss K. I. McMahon will have her millinery opening next Friday and Saturday.

Charles Royce has been working in the New London Northern freight house this week.

Dr. William Holbrook has hung a McKinley and Hobart flag in front of his residence.

W. J. Knowlton rides in the 15-mile road race of the Columbia Cycle Club of Chicopee to-morrow.

The ladies of the Baptist church will give a harvest dinner and supper next Tuesday noon and evening.

Henry Stone has put up the frame for a barn on land across the river which he recently purchased of E. L. Pierce.

Rev. C. R. Minard of the Baptist church will take for his text next Sunday morning, "The young man with a religion."

The regular monthly meeting of the pastoral committee of St. Paul's church will be held next Thursday evening at 7.30.

The Ladies' Tuesday Social Club will hold its first meeting of the season next Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. G. H. Wilkins.

The Dorcas department of the Universali t church will hold a meeting for business and work next Wednesday afternoon at 2.30.

Dr. S. H. Ellery's horse, "Eros Jr.," took second money in the 2.26 class, trot or pace, at the Amherst cattle show, Wednesday.

Fred Harrison and James Foley have been drawn as jurors for the criminal session of the superior court which convenes next Tuesday.

The district court will be open for naturalizations between the hours of 4 and 6 on Saturday afternoons, and on Saturday evenings at 7 o'clock.

Herbert Nelson has moved his goods to Northampton this week. Mr. Nelson lost a thumb a few days ago by getting it pinched by the cars.

The manager of the opera house is contemplating holding a cat and baby show sometime in January, with various prizes in both departments.

The McKinley and Hobart campaign flag was taken down last Saturday to be repaired, and was again placed in position Tuesday morning.

W. E. Small attended the annual meeting of the Headmasters' Club of Western Massachusetts at the Cooley House, Springfield, last Friday evening.

The property of Michael Dockery, located on the corner of Park and Pearl streets, will be sold at auction, on the premises, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

W. J. Knowlton was the winner in the one mile, 2.45 class bicycle race at Southbridge, Saturday, and brought home as a prize a handsome parlor lamp.

Mrs. L. E. Carpenter will have her millinery opening next Wednesday and Thursday. Miss Peebles, who has been with her for several seasons, will be her trimmer.

O. P. Allen was one of the delegates appointed by the Congregational church to attend the Sunday school convention at Northampton next week, and will attend.

The selectmen have designated the polling places for the November election; they will be the same as last year with the exception of Thorndike, where Union Hall will be used.

The district court of Eastern Hampden has not furnished a single case for the grand jury for the coming criminal term of the superior court, but several appealed cases will come before it.

The young people of the Baptist church held a pleasant social in the church vestry Tuesday evening. A brief musical and literary entertainment was furnished, and light refreshments were served.

Mrs. Harrington, who has been living in Mrs. Lawrence's tenement on Central street, has moved to Springfield. Louis Bosquet is moving from Converse avenue into the tenement vacated by Mrs. Harrington.

C. D. Foster, the well known farmer who lives on the Thorndike road, was stricken with a paralytic shock Saturday night. It is thought he will recover from this shock, but he is liable to have another at any time.

The assessors give notice that they will be in session at their room in the Memorial building in the Depot village next Monday, from 1 to 5 and 7 to 10 p. m., for the purpose of assessing any who wish to vote in the coming election.

Last week was an eventful one in the life of at least one Palmer woman, who visited the Hub then for the first time in 16 years. Although she has lived within a hundred miles of Boston all her life, this was her second visit to that city.

In the JOURNAL'S list of premiums awarded at the fair last week there was an error in class 40, fancy articles. The types stated that Maud Kenerson was awarded 25c, 15c and 10c for stamp plates; the name should have been Maude Kinnevan.

Patrick Ryan of Three Rivers was adjudged insane at the district court Tuesday, and taken to the Northampton asylum by Officers Manning and Eastman. Ryan has been subject to insanity before, and has been out of the asylum but a short time.

The Palmer Republican Club will hold another rally in the opera house on the evening of October 22d. Congressman Gillett of Springfield and Attorney General Knowlton will be the orators of the evening, and several local speakers will also make remarks.

Mrs. Sarah A. Stebbins of Monson brought to the JOURNAL office on Wednesday a bunch of red raspberry bushes, picked that morning beside the road while on her way to Palmer, which bore blossoms, small green berries, and ripe fruit, an unusual sight for this time of year.

The second in the series of lectures on "Some hard sayings of the Bible explained," will be given by Rev. H. F. Moulton next Thursday evening at 7.30. The special topic will be, "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."

Rev. H. F. Moulton has been appointed by the Committee of Fellowship of the Massachusetts Universalist convention to confer the fellowship of the convention upon J. C. Dickerson, who is to be ordained and installed as the pastor of the First Universalist church in Amherst next Wednesday evening.

A goodly number of Palmer people who are interested in educational matters attended the public meeting held in the opera house Tuesday evening, when Secretary Hill and State Agents MacDonald, Fletcher, Bailey and Edson gave interesting and instructive addresses on "Some phases of modern education."

W. W. Converse shipped a large quantity of his celebrated mineral paste to Boston yesterday. Mr. Converse will have a booth in the Mechanics' building during the five weeks of the great World's Food Fair, where he will exhibit and sell the paste which he manufactures for cleaning gold, silver and plated ware.

The directors of the agricultural society met Tuesday afternoon to learn the state of affairs regarding the fair last week. The bills were not all in, however, and another meeting will be held next week. Enough was learned, however, to show that the finances are in better shape than many had dared hope for after the inclement weather.

Rev. R. E. Smith of the M. E. church, Bondsville, will speak in the Congregational church Sunday morning in exchange with the pastor. The service in the evening under the care of the Men's Sunday Evening Club is expected to include singing by Mr. and Mrs. Norcross of Mouson, and a sermon by the pastor on "Life—real and full."

The macadamized road on Thorndike street is nearly completed. The coarse stone has been put on as far as the road will extend, and in a few days the other layers of stone will be put on, and then after a thorough rolling, it will be finished. A little over 3000 feet is the length of the macadamized strip, which brings it to the maple tree at the top of the hill.

The season at the opera house thus far has been very successful. First-class shows have been secured and have been presented to good audiences. A number of good attractions have also been engaged, among which is Denman Thompson's "Old Homestead," on the evening of November 3d. During the play the election returns will be announced from the stage.

There seems to be a misunderstanding on the part of many regarding the scale of prices at the opera house for this season. The regular scale is 50, 35 and 25 cents, 75 cents being charged only when some unusually high-priced attraction is offered. Unless specially announced, the highest priced seat is 50 cents, and all seats are reserved, a new departure this season.

Last Sunday was "rally day" in all of the Sunday schools in the Protestant churches, and much to the gratification of the various officers of the schools there was a large attendance of pupils and visitors as well. The programmes included exercises showing the work done in the various departments during the past year. At the Universalist church Corey F. Wood of Springfield gave an interesting address. George F. Poole, M. D., of Springfield addressed the Baptist Sunday school.

The monthly meeting of the Men's Sunday Evening Club of the Congregational church was held Sunday evening, and the following committees were chosen: Worship, D. L. Bodfish, L. H. Gager, O. P. Allen; music, G. H. Wilkins, J. C. Wing, J. B. Shaw; finance, J. W. Smith, H. Lawrence, S. H. Brown; ushers, F. B. Pope, E. H. Rollins, H. N. Sedgwick, C. A. LeGro; membership, G. A. Rice, G. H. Hastings, G. E. Buck; invitation, R. Flynt, W. H. Hitchcock, F. D. Barton, S. J. Ramsden.

Pedestrians on Main street about 8 o'clock last Friday evening were startled to hear sounds as of a row emanating from one of the upper floors of a business block, occupied as a tenement, and a moment later a man appeared to half fall down and half run down to the sidewalk and skip around the corner, clad only in a shirt. He disappeared around the building, while the spectators anxiously awaited further developments, in which they were disappointed, for the man soon reappeared with the addition of a pair of overalls to his clothing.

The "Knights of the Road" are noted for their boldness and independence when addressing women, and also for their quickness in changing front when a man appears upon the scene. Last Sunday morning this thing was illustrated at one of our Palmer homes. One of the "weary wanderers" knocked at the door and his summons was answered by the lady of the house. With an independent air he said, "Will you please give me something"—just then the man of the house appeared, and the tramp in more gentle tones added, "to read?"

David Dillon left Monday for Ann Arbor, Michigan, where he will enter the law school of the University of Michigan. Mr. Dillon was graduated from the Palmer high school with the class of '91, and the following year he entered Tuft's College, from which institution he graduated this year. During his four years' course at Tufts he ranked high in his studies, and was one of the thirteen chosen to deliver addresses at the graduation exercises. He was also manager of the baseball team this year, and the season was the most successful ever had. His many friends wish him every measure of success, and feel confident that he will make a successful lawyer.

Lew Morrison's "Faust" was presented at the opera house Monday evening to the largest audience of the season. The performance was presented by a first-class company, and this, with the magnificent scenery, calcium lights, and the very weirdness of the play made a good impression upon the audience. Mr. Errol Dunbar as "Mephisto" was well received, and played his weird part in a fitting manner. The singing of the church choir was an enjoyable feature, and the "Brocken scene" in the fourth act, with its flashes of lightning and fire and spectacle of evil spirits, was the most marvelous and impressive scene ever put upon the stage of the Odd Fellows opera house.

One of the large plate glass windows in Bodfish's store was broken about 5.30 Tuesday afternoon by a shot from an air-gun such as many boys about town have. The shot struck the glass about eighteen inches from the bottom, and a small round hole was made through it, though not large enough for the shot to enter. On the inside the glass was splintered and knocked off a spot about as large as a silver dollar. Mr. Bodfish was in his office at the time and heard the sound of the shot as it struck the glass, and then heard boys run, but did not know until later what had been done. The shot was evidently fired by someone stadining on the sidewalk.

"Our Max" will be the attraction at the opera house this evening, presented by James E. Reilly, of whom the Boston Globe says: "Mr. Reilly is all that can be desired in the leading role. His dialect is good and his lines are bright." The story of "Our Max" is interesting. Max is a German boy in love with Lena Zweifel, daughter of a wealthy physician. Count Willmark, an imposter, desires the girl and her money, and to get rid of Max has him drafted for the Sedan war and sent away. The count tries ineffectually to get the heroine to wed during her lover's absence, and failing during his last interview throws her into a rushing river. Max appears on the scene and makes a sensational dive and rescues the woman. There is a peaceful termination in which loving hearts are joined, the count is proven an impostor and imprisoned, and the count's property is given to Max, who is a real count. Tickets on sale at Allen's; 50, 35 and 25 cents.

Daniel F. Holden, for many years a resident of Palmer, has engaged in business in Hardwick, Vt., and has moved his family to that town. Mr. Holden has been chosen director and general manager of the Woodbury Granite Co., of which his brother, John S. Holden, is president, and will devote his entire time and energies to building up the business of the company. The quarry is one of the finest in the country and covers an area of 119 acres. The granite is of excellent quality, is very pure, takes a high polish and is adapted for all kinds of rock and cemetery work. Solid blocks of granite without a flaw that measure 17 by 17 by 100 feet can be obtained. Mr. Holden will at once equip the quarry with all the necessary machinery to do an extensive business, and when in full operation 100 men will be employed. The company has a strong financial backing, and with such an experienced business man as Mr. Holden at the head of affairs, it is expected that a very large business will be done.

The new silver certificates have very little resemblance to any money previously issued by the government; in fact, at first glance the uninitiated is quite likely to think they belong to the class used sometimes as advertisements, and this resemblance nearly got one Palmer man into trouble this summer. He was spending his vacation camping out in a quiet part of the state not far from Palmer, and when the new bills made their appearance in this locality, received a number of them from a bank in exchange for a large bill. The next time he made a trip to the nearest country store for supplies he tendered one of the new bills in payment, but was told by the proprietor, "No, you don't! You can't pass none o' them advertisin' bills on me; I've had that tried before, and I know 'em." It was only on the assurance of a well-known resident whom the merchant knew that he finally concluded to take one of the handsomest pieces of money which Uncle Sam ever put in circulation.

MONSON.

LOCAL NOTICES.

W. A. Robinson of Hardwick, Mass., sells at auction on Monday, Oct. 5th, at 1 o'clock p. m., 50 choice cows, selected and tested in Vermont; 30 of them fresh in milk, their calves to be seen at sale. The rest to calve soon.

HELD UP BY HIGHWAYMEN

A Series of Wild West Methods which are Decidedly Unpleasant.

Monson people, unused to the proceedings of a Wild and Woolly West nature, such as have been in order for the past week, are thoroughly aroused and feel that the license money cannot be better expended than in all-night police service and more electric lights. Such a reign of lawlessness has not been known in the town for years. During the summer noise and fighting made the night unpleasant for peace-loving citizens, particularly in the north part of the village. Officer Osborne, who was on duty nightly, made a number of arrests for drunkenness, as this was the cause of the trouble. Lately, however, there has not, until the past week, been as much disturbance, and Officers Osborne and Thompson have only been on duty alternate nights. Beginning Wednesday night, however, both men patrolled the streets until midnight. A mysterious pile of clothing has lain for some time in a clump of bushes on the Coburn hill road. The parts of garments include a dress sleeve and a man's coat, and are covered with blood. The matter was not reported to Selectman Norcross until last Saturday, and nothing has been learned in regard to it since. On Monday afternoon a Patterson boy was carrying home $1.50 in payment for a washing done by his mother, when a tramp stepped up to him and demanded the money. A team approached, and the boy ran away. This occurred near Grout's store. On Monday night John Mallow, an employe at the W. N. Flynt Granite Company's quarry, was walking along the road when he was held up by three men, who held his arms and choked him while they went through his pockets. He had no money. Conflicting stories have been told in regard to this matter, but this is believed to be the true one. Tuesday evening Patrick Duffy, farmer for the company, had a decidedly scary experience as he was returning to the quarry from a milk-peddling trip. Mr. Duffy had expressed himself quite feelingly on the subject of highwaymen in general, and Monson ones in particular, only a half-hour before, so there is some foundation for the theory that someone wished to frighten him. However, when he reached Granite street two men sprang suddenly into the road and attempted to catch the horse's bit; the horse reared and they failed. Then one succeeded in catching hold of Mr. Duffy and attempted to drag him from the wagon, at the same time cutting slashes in his clothing, but not piercing the flesh. Mr. Duffy struck the horse with the whip, causing him to run, which took the highwayman off his feet and dragged him a short distance, when he let go his hold and Mr. Duffy reached home without further molestation. He is said to have been quite nervous for a time, but was all right the next day.

A MURDEROUS ASSAULT

Rev. James Tufts Knocked Down and Robbed Near His Home.

A brutal assault was made upon the venerable Rev. James Tufts early Saturday evening. Several gashes were made in his scalp and a small amount of money was taken from him.

Mr. Tufts had been spending the week in Boston, and on his return by the 7.25 train walked from the depot to his home, which is a little out of the village. When he reached a point but a few rods from his house, and about half way between two electric lights, he was struck a savage blow by a man who approached from behind. Mr. Tufts fell to the ground but was soon on his feet, and saying, "What do you want? If you want my money you can have it," passed out to the ruffian some small change from his trousers pocket, and an empty wallet from another pocket. He was then dealt two more blows and left. He managed to get home, having made no outcry whatever. Mrs. Tufts met him at the door, and his appearance was a terrible shock to her. He was covered from head to foot with blood from the ugly wounds on his head. Dr. Jackson was quickly summoned, and took a number of stitches to close the scalp, after which the sufferer was made as comfortable as possible. Although Dr. Jackson considered the case a serious one at first, the outlook is favorable now.

Mr. Tufts is unable to describe his assailant, but thinks that he was of medium height and thickset. He thinks that the weapon used was an iron bar. As soon as the news reached the village that the well beloved "Father Tufts" had been assaulted, the indignation of the citizens was intense. Selectman Norcross set the police on the watch, and telephoned to nearby towns in regard to the matter, hoping that the roads from Monson would be guarded by the police, who would arrest any suspicious characters. The selectmen have offered a reward of $300, for information which will lead to the arrest of the guilty person. Monson people feel sure that a tramp must be that one, as it would be hard to believe that any fellow townsman could harm Mr. Tufts, who is nearly 84 years of age, and has lived in Monson since his early manhood, having been principal of Monson Academy from 1852 to 1859. He kept a home school for boys for many years, and has always kept up the liveliest interest in young people and the schools.

Norcross has a grocery and hardware store in the north part, while the second and third stories are used as residence by Mr. Dunham, John Curley and Mrs. Inez Farrell.

A dog owned at South Monson got tangled up in a barbed wire fence Tuesday, and Dr. Fuller closed the wounds with four stitches. An interesting fact is noticed by the doctor. He says that whenever a dog is hurt and stitches are taken, the dog will attempt to bite when the operation is begun, but in a few moments the animal seems to realize that the pain is not wantonly inflicted, and will bear it patiently, often licking the operator's hand as if grateful.

Attorney Alfred W. Dana of Franklin has opened a law office in the bank building. Mr. Dana was graduated from the Franklin high school in 1890, from the law school of the Boston University in 1893, and was admitted to the bar the same year. He has also studied in the law office of ex-Senator A. H. Wellman of Boston and has practiced his profession in Franklin with success, and leaves to come here as he thinks there is a larger field of work here.

The morning service at the Methodist church last Sunday was held in the vestry, the auditorium having been torn out during the preceding week. The remodeling has been let, and there is no doubt that the room will present a most pleasing appearance when completed. Historical Society's Field Day.

The field day of the Quaboag Historical Society was held at West Brookfield Thursday, and was much enjoyed by a large representation from the different local branches. The especial feature of the day was the address in the morning by Hezekiah Q. Butterworth of Boston, on "In the days of Massasoit." Mr. Butterfield is as fluent a speaker as writer, and held the close attention of the audience. The high schools closed for part of the morning session, giving the pupils an opportunity to hear one who through his books of travel and historical sketches, also his position as editor of the Youth's Companion, has gained a large influence over the young people. In the afternoon a very interesting paper was read by Rev. B. M Frink on "The influence of education and religion to the growth of the pioneer town," especial local incidents being given. A banner showing drawings of incidents in the time of King Phillip's war was shown, and was of especial interest to our townspeople, as it was executed in 1860 by Mrs. Charlotte Kimball to be used in the procession at the 200th anniversary of Brookfield. After the meeting, historical pilgrimages were made to various points of historical interest. The society has a membership of nearly 500, the West Brookfield branch having the largest local membership, and Warren standing next. The next meeting will be held at North Brookfield, the first week in December.

The Darlington, Wis., Journal says editorially of a popular patent medicine, "We know from experience that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy is all that is claimed for it, as on two occasions it stopped excruciating pains and possibly saved us from an untimely grave. We would not rest easy over night without it in the house." This remedy undoubtedly saves more pain and suffering than any other medicine in the world. Every family should keep it in the house, for it is sure to be needed sooner or later. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Your Boy Wont Live a Month.

So Mr. Gilman Brown, of 34 Mill street, South Gardner, Mass., was told by the doctors. His son had Lung trouble, following Typhoid Malaria, and he spent three hundred and seventy-five dollars with doctors, who finally gave him up, saying: "Your boy won't live a month." He tried Dr. King's New Discovery and a few bottles restored him to health and enabled him to go to work a perfectly well man. He says he owes his present good health to the use of Dr. King's New Discovery, and knows it to be the best in the world for Lung trouble. Trial bottles Free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

If your children are subject to croup watch for the first symptoms of the disease—hoarseness. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse it will prevent the attack. Even after the croupy cough has appeared the attack can be prevented by giving this remedy. It is also invaluable for colds and whooping cough. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

CORDELIA A. CALKINS, Exc.

Monson, Sept. 29, 1896. 3-27

According to a celebrated anatomist there are upwards of 5,000,000 little glands in the human stomach. These glands pour out the digestive juices which dissolve or digest the food. Indigestion is want of juice, weakness of glands, need of help to restore the health of these organs. The best and most natural help is that given by Shaker Digestive Cordial. Natural, because it supplies the materials needed by the glands to prepare the digestive juices. Because it strengthens and invigorates the glands and the stomach, until they are able to do their work alone. Shaker Digestive Cordial cures indigestion certainly and permanently. It does so by natural means, and therein lies the secret of its wonderful and unvaried success.

HIS COURTSHIP.

"No, Algernon, I cannot accompany you to the matinee to-morrow. Deeply as it pains me, I must decline."

The girl stood before him a vision of queenly beauty as she uttered these words, and the steady, deliberate manner in which she masticated a large wad of gum told him plainer than words that her decision was irrevocable.

Algernon Dranekegg's face rapidly acquired the well-known ashen pallor so much used, and he would gladly have leaned on the mantel for support, as is customary in such cases, but a hasty glance showed a dearth of mantels and he discreetly remained in a perpendicular position. Changing his weight to the other foot in order to ease a large, healthy corn that was entering vigorous protest against being cooped up in a toothpick shoe, the young man said in a husky voice:

"What is the matter, Phyllis? Surely I have not offended you that you should change your mind so suddenly. When I left you as 1.15 this morning you were blithe and happy, and now you look worried. What can have happened to you, my little girl?"

And Algernon drew the fair young creature to his side, and gently laying her head upon his shoulder, poked her cold nose into his ear.

Phyllis Billfinger broke away from him almost fierce as she said in a heart-broken voice, "Do not ask me, Algernon, for I cannot tell you."

"Please tell me, Phyllis." A spasm of pain convulsed her features and Algernon feared for a moment that she had swallowed the gum, but an instant later the fair girl's jaws moved on with the same rythmic grace, and she replied:

"Algernon, I love you as well as I did at a quarter past 1 this morning; let that suffice for my answer."

"But I insist, Phyllis," said the young man, a medium shade of annoyance passing over his face in a northwesterly direction.

The girl shook her head.

"Phyllis," he said sternly, "there should be no secrets between us."

"Algernon," said the young girl, with the look of a person who has a sudden inspiration, "if you insist, I will tell you. Mother fell this morning and broke her knee cap, and I have got to do the Jones's washing to-morrow, or ma will lose her position. I know its all over between us," she went on, "but sometimes when in your splendid home think of poor Phyllis."

"Algernon Dranekegg drew up his superb form to its full height as the girl uttered these humiliating words, and Phyllis Billfinger was sure she could detect a look of scorn in his handsome eyes.

His word drove the last remnant of hope from her heart when he said in the tone of a man who has been caught on the wrong side of the market and covered in time to save himself:

"I am sorry for your mother's misfortune, Miss Billfinger, but I have an engagement at the club this evening, where we have a banquet, and if you will kindly excuse me I will go." He then made his hasty exit.

Unfortunately for Phyllis, the "look of dumb misery" and "shrill cry of anguish" were both locked up in her trunk, so she had to depend entirely upon a small-sized "low moan of agony." She fired that at Algernon when she fell in a heap on the floor, just as his coatails went through the door, but it was too small and only served to increase his speed. Five minutes later our heroine was comfortably seated on the woodbox in the kitchen, munching a cracker and sipping a cup of warm tea, while she soliloquized:

"That settles the 'Lady Clare' racket. I don't try that any more; it's n. g. only in books. Thought I had him sure—would if ma hadn't hurt her leg. Must be well off, always talking about his club. Well, ma has got to pay 50 cents for the use of this dress. Heigh-ho! Just my luck!"

Meanwhile Algernon Dranekegg was hurrying down street in spite of his corn. He soon slackened his pace, however, and, fishing a stub of cigar from his pocket, lighted it and proceeded in a more leisurely manner, musing to himself:

"Darn the luck! I thought they were well fixed by the way she talked. Queer coincidence too. Her mother washes for the Joneses, and my old lady washes for the Browns. Sorry! Thought I had found somebody to support me. Well, I'll have to fall back on mother. She is all right, only she is getting old and can't work like she used too. She kicked on paying for the use of this suit of clothes to-night. I'll just run around to Foley's and hit a free lunch and go home."—Exchange.

She read the sign, "Do not speak to the motorman," and she said: "I wonder why not." Then in a winsome voice she inquired of that functionary, "Why musn't one talk to the motorman?" He told her it was against the rules. "But why is it against the rules?" "Because it is." "Then you don't like to be talked to?" "Oh, yes; but thunder! I came within an ace of running down that old gent." "But I should think it would be nice to have somebody to speak to, instead of talking to nobody all day long." "Lady, you are going to stop talking, or there is going to be a smash-up on this line, and a big one—!" "The hateful thing! And I did so want to be sociable like. He's married, I'll bet; he's just like Henry when he's got the paper under his nose."—Boston Transcript.

LIKELY TO GET IT.—That he resided in the country was proclaimed by the size of his grip-sack and by the utter absence of entente cordiale between the bottoms of his trousers and his shoe tops. He had taken his stand in the middle of the cable car tracks, by the side of the treasury, and after waiting a few minutes, called: "Hi! there!" to a gamin who was crossing the street. "What's chasin yer?" asked the boy, who was a painful reminder of the decadence of juvenile courtesy. "Ain't nothin' chasin' me. What I want ter know is how ter get a Fourteenth street car." "That's easy. You jes' stand right still an' you'll git it. You may git it in the neck—but you'll git it."—Washington Post.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its, stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

MR. POPPLEDUKE'S ADVENTURE.

Mr. Poppleduke and Major Simms are two wealthy boarders inhabiting the same boarding house. Each is happy in the possession of a great many friends, and not having to get up early in the morning, they sometimes stay out late at night. It must be admitted that Major Simms sometimes has trouble in making port, especially after a dinner. Not so in the case of Mr. Poppleduke. No matter how late the dinner or joyous the occasion, his fine instinct never deserts him. Naturally he has often girded at the Major on his weakness.

"Why," he said, "you have trouble getting home after a supper, and never can do it without help after a dinner. Major, I could come home all right after a breakfast!"

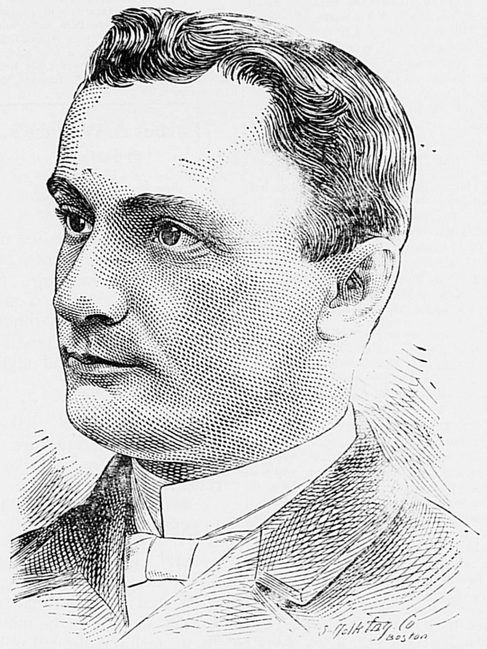
But Mr. Poppleduke's hour of humiliation arrived. It was after a glorious dinner to a friend who had just been appointed consul to an important post. Mr. Poppleduke came home in a cab. He never faltered as he went up the front steps, and his hand had the precision of a conjuror's as he sought the key-hole. Inside he deposited his hat and coat and started up the stairs, walking with preternatural stiffness, and disdaining to touch the banisters or wall. Now it happened that a servant, after doing some cleaning in the second story, had very carelessly left a stepladder at the head of and facing the stairs. Of course Mr. Poppleduke went on up the stepladder. "Shteepesh shtairs ever sheen," he was heard to observe when he was half way up. Then he went on, and reaching the top, stepped off. The back of the stepladder broke his fall, and he only shot to the floor like a very rapid toboggan, and sat there with his feet thrust straight out in front of him. He hitched his shoulders up into position, and after giving the subject the thought which so remarkable a phenomena deserved, said: "Mosht shtraordinary 'currence ever known. Came up front shtairs. Front shtairs shtraordinary shteep. Fell down back shtairs. Back shtairs shteeper'n front shtairs." (A long pause, during which he spied his own door directly in front of him.) "No, that washn't it. Girl left piesh wet shoap on shtairs. Shtepped on wet shoap. Fell off; then fell down. Won't tip girl nex' Chrishmash!" He reached up, turned the knob, and crept into his room on his hands and knees, not daring again to trust himself on his hands and feet.

The next morning it was Mr. Simm's turn to gird. But he refused to acknowledge that he had placed the stepladder where it was found.—"Editor's Drawer" in Harper's Magazine.

PRAISE FROM PULPITS.

Distinguished Clergymen Recommend People to Use Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Grand Army Chaplain Buffum, Missionary to India Miller, Presiding Elder Walker, Praise Nervura. The Best Medicine You Can Take.



REV. E. J. MILLER, MISSIONARY TO INDIA.

There is nothing in the world so good to take to make you well and strong as Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Testimonials by thousands from all classes of people have been published, showing its marvelous effects in making the sick well, the weak strong, and now our clergymen have become interested and for the people's good urge them to use this wonderful cure. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, in order to get well, for they are convinced that it is the most valuable medicine in the world to-day.

Rev. E. J. Miller, of Albion, N. Y., the eminent divine, who represents the Boston Tremont Temple Society as missionary to India, was broken down with overwork, liver trouble and malaria, and is now on vacation, in search of health, has found both health and strength in the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura. He says:

"I returned to America broken in health, with a bad catarrh, neuralgia and stomach and liver trouble. The whole top of my head felt numb, so that at times I was robbed of my thinking powers, and could not do any work with ease. Having consulted a number of doctors and taken their medicines, I received no relief whatever.

"I was induced to try Dr. Greene's Nervura, which worked like a charm and produced the longed-for results. My head and whole system is now clean from catarrh, neuralgia and fever. I can now study and do my work with satisfaction. In fact, I feel like a new man in health and strength.

"I therefore feel it my duty and great pleasure to recommend this excellent remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, which certainly has done so much for me."

Rev. F. H. Buffum, of Winchester, N. H., who is Grand Army Chaplain for New Hampshire, says:

"The remedial effect of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy on the weaknesses and nervous prostration of my wife, was so positive and speedy that we can heartily testify to its undoubted merits."

Presiding Elder Rev. J. W. Walker, of Fort Dodge, Iowa; Rev. C. D. R. Meacham, pastor Baptist Church, Townsend, Vt.; Rev. G. L. Wells, of Hardwick, Vt.; Rev. Henry Langford, of Weston, W. Va., and many other well-known ministers of the Gospel in all parts of the country, all of whom have been cured by this great remedy, enthusiastically urge the people to use Dr. Greene's Nervura by all means, if they wish to be sure of a cure, for health and strength always follow its use.

Remember that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is no common patent medicine, but the prescription of one of our best-known physicians, the discovery of Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, hence the medicine is of necessity perfectly adapted to cure. Dr. Greene also can be consulted free, personally or by letter, in regard to any case.

GRAND OPENING OF THE FALL AND WINTER SEASONS,

Monday, August 31st, 1896, OF

OLD DR. SWEET'S SANITARIUM and Medical Institute,

18 VERNON STREET, - - SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Invalids will now be received and treated as inmates at the institution, or as home patients at reasonable rates. Old Dr. Sweet, the World-Famous Natural Healer, Bone Surgeon and Magnetic Physician, whose visits to Springfield the past twenty years and whose astonishing cures in Western Massachusetts yet remain the wonder of the age, has established the above institution in Springfield for the benefit of a multitude of patients residing in this section.

So long have the Sweet Family been identified with the cure of lameness that it is conjectured by many persons that they treat no other ailments, whereas their most startling successes for many years have been the cure of Obscure Chronic Diseases of almost every kind. In order to provide for the foregoing, the latest and most efficient discoveries may be found at Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium, in fact those only employed in the private hospitals of metropolitan cities.

These, united with those wonderful systems of medicine which from father to son have descended from generation to generation of the Sweet family of Rhode Island for more than two centuries; thus equipped is it not presumable that their success in the cure of obstinate types of disease will be more certain than attends the ordinary methods of office or drug medication.

Whether rich or poor, black or white, the stricken invalid needs the best medical service obtainable. The workingman whose capital is in his limbs, his nerves and muscles, how necessary if impaired that it should be strengthened both surely and with the least delay.

Have you not speculated with DRUG TREATMENT long enough? Why not try the private infirmary system, combining the best of all, for a while? Your life hangs upon your decision. Old Dr. Sweet has called to his aid in providing for his multitude of patients,—a proof of his unparalleled success in Springfield, DR. EDWARD RAY, a gentlemen of rare culture and medical attainments, a graduate of Harvard University, with extensive clinical and hospital experience, who has been given charge of the Surgical Department of Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium for the coming season.

This institution is now open to receive applicants for treatment under the famous Sweet Method, providing them with rooms and board at very low rates, with PERSONAL TREATMENT DAILY, or those who desire to visit the institution occasionally, yet live at home.

Persons of VERY limited means are thus enabled to receive the most scientific medical service provided by medical science to-day. The inhabitants of Western Massachusetts may be assured that Dr. Sweet will not rest content until he has provided for the people the MOST EFFICIENT systems of medical treatment extant. Whatever money or ingenuity can procure to make his institution THE FIRST in New England will be cheerfully provided. Success is the SINE QUENON. As his professional duties multiply—as they surely must—experts in the various branches of the "healing art" will be added to his staff. The best is none too good.

Pleased with the "City of Homes" as a permanent place of residence, Dr. Sweet has removed his family hither and indulges the hope that this fact will be appreciated by those wishing to avoid the uncertainty that attends the service offered by itinerant practitioners. Male and Female operators, assistants, nurses, etc., provided. Terms reasonable. Consultation, examination and advice free to the afflicted.

ACCIDENT DEPARTMENT. Athletes, Bicycle Riders and others suffering from sudden accident please take notice. Bring them here. Prompt service.

IT MADE THE JUDGE'S REPUTATION.

The late Judge Thurman used to tell many an amusing story of his early practice. He went everywhere he was called, and tried every case that was presented to him. He related an anecdote of one case that was pending before a justice of the peace. This justice abode some 12 miles from Chillicothe, and had a distinctly bad reputation. Thurman when retained told his client—who, by the way, was the defendant—that he would be beaten.

"All we can do," said Thurman, "is to drive out and hear what the other side has in the way of evidence. The old Dutch rascal is bound to beat you; he'll give a judgment against you, and we'll put in an appeal, and take it to a higher court. There we will get a fair trial, and, from what you say, we will win the case."

"On the day of the hearing," said Thurman afterward when relating the story, "my client and I drove over to the scene of the trial. The court-room was crowded with farmers and people of the neighborhood, who were there to look on. The plaintiff put on three or four witnesses, but one after the other, as they testified, it was plain and clear that they knew nothing of the merits of the controversy. The plaintiff's testimony in no sense established the case, and the old Dutch justice was desperate. The plaintiff had no lawyer, and the Dutch justice conducted that side of the case pretty much himself. But ask what question he might of the plaintiff and his witnesses, he couldn't bring out the testimony necessary to found the case. After the plaintiff's testimony was practically all in, the old Dutch justice looked at me and remarked, as if experimenting to see if I would make any objection:—

"'While it is onusual for a gourt to give destimony in a gase vich pends before it, I know a good deal about this gontroversy myseluf. If dere is no objection by the defendant, I will swear mysceluf and gife my evidence.'

"I made no objection, as I was curious to see what the old Dutch rascal would do. Inferring consent from my silence, our judge gravely arose, and holding up his right hand at his own hoarse command, he administered the usual oath to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, in the case then and there being tried. After this very comfortable arrangement, he sat down, and proceeded to relate a story which entirely picked up all of the plaintiff's dropped stitches, and made, indeed, a perfect case against my client. While the justice was glibly giving his evidence a farmer who stood just behind my chair, whispered to me:—

"'Just hear that old rascal lie, and the beauty of it all is that there isn't a man in the room who'd believe him under oath.'

"That gave me an idea, and I thought I might as well have a little fun out of the situation while drifting to a judgment against my client. I asked the farmer in a whisper if he were willing to take the stand and testify that the old Dutch justice's reputation for truth and veracity was bad. He said that he would, and that a dozen more in the room would be perfectly willing to do the same.

"To make it short, I got a half-dozen witnesses who believed, as did my farmer friend, that truth had departed the old Dutchman's mouth as a dwelling place, and when that personage had concluded his testimony I started to put them on the stand.

"'I won't interpose any regular defense, your honor', I said, 'but I have several witnesses here to the character of one of the men who gave evidence for the plaintiff.'

"'Fery vell,' remarked his honor, 'produce your vitnesses.'

"One after the other six gentlemen whose names I called arose and were sworn. One after the other got up on the stand and testified that they had long known the Dutch justice, giving his name; that they knew his reputation for truth and veracity in the community where he resided; that it was bad, and that from that reputation they would not believe him under oath. At this point I rested, and informed his honor that I had nothing further to present. Throughout the testimony impeaching him of untruth he had preserved an air of mild indifference. One would never have known by looking at him that he was the party under discussion at all. When I told him that my evidence was all in, he braced up to decide the case.

"'The blaintiff, mit his first four vitnesses, vitch includes himself,' said his honor, 'makes nodings out of his side of der case. Vas dat all his testimony dis gourt must give judgment for the defendant, but dere vas one older vitness who makes of himself a volunteer, und who gifs his destimony, vitch completely covers der controversy in all its barts. Upon his destimony'—and he had named himself as this witness— 'if it were uncontradicted, und unimpeached, I could gife judgment for the blaintiff. But such is not the case. Vhile the destimony of the witness'—naming himself—'is not contradicted, yet now gomes six reputable vitnesses already, who climbs one after de other to de vitness chair, und says dot dey know this man"—naming himself—"'dot he is a lier where he lives; dot his destimony is lies, und dot his vord is not good. Dis is vat dey call in die law impeaching a vitness. Generally it is a mighty hard ding to do, but in dis gase I must say dot I regard die vitness as very successfully imbeached. Derefore, as it isn't vhat I dink of him myself, but vhat dis evidence in die case makes of him dot I must go by, I throw out dis vitnesss destimony altogether. So de gourt is left again mit nothing but de blaintiff und dose udder people who svore, vitch, as I hafe already said, know nodding of dis business. Under such circumstances de gourt can make no finding for die blaintiff. Derefore de gourt finds for die defendant mit judgment against de blaintiff for costs.'

"It was the best thing," concluded Thurman, 'that the old Dutchman ever did. It established his reputation as an honest man far and near, and from that time until his death, if anybody had made an effort to impeach his evidence given in a case he would have failed. The whole neighborhood looked on him as a second Daniel from that time forward."

NO NEED OF HAVING A COLD.—"Uncle Allen," asked the caller, "do you know of anything that's good for a cold?"

Uncle Allen Sparks opened his desk, took from one of the pigeon-holes a large bundle of newspaper clippings tied with a string, and threw it into the other's lap.

"Do I know of anything that is good for a cold?" he echoed. "My young friend, I know of 627 infallible ways of curing a cold. I've been collecting them for 49 years. You try those, one after each other, and if they don't do you any good come back and I will give you 116 more. Bless me!" added Uncle Allen, with enthusiasm, "you can always cure a cold if you go at it right."

He dug up a bundle of yellow, time-stained clippings out of another pigeon-hole and the visitor hastily coughed himself out. Chicago Tribune.

"A. P. A." AND "16 TO 1" THE SAME.

Two Irishmen were discussing the financial planks in the platforms of the two great parties a few days ago.

"I'm puzzled," said one of the men, "over this business of 16 to 1. I can't make it out at all."

"That is easy," said the other.

"How do you make it out?" asked the first speaker.

"It's simply a question of the alphabet, and when you have studied the alphabet you find it is easy."

"What's the alphabet got to do with it?" asked the man looking for information.

"You want to take the figures 16 to 1 and use the alphabet as a key, and there you are. Take the first figure—it's 1. Now what is the first letter in the alphabet—it's A. Then take the 16th letter and what do you find—the letter P. Then go back to the first letter and you have the letter A. again. That makes it A. P. A. There is the whole thing—it's the A. P. A., and it's got nothing to do with finances. I, for one, will vote against anything that favors the A. P. A."—New York Times.

THE DOWNTRODDEN REPORTER. Before the female society reporter had usurped the social domain as completely as at present, he was assigned one night to report a great social function at one of the swell houses in New York. He stationed himself at the head of a stairway to take the names of the women as they passed him to go to the dressing-room to take off their wraps and prepare for their appearance on the lower floor. He had been standing there for some time, taking notes, when a gay young damsel, heavily wrapped in furs, lightly tripped up the stairway and suddenly addressed him: "Ah, beg pardon, sir, are you the footman?" "No, madam," quickly retorted the reporter; "are you the chambermaid?"—Washington Post.

PROGRESSIVE LOVEMAKING.

The two girls were walking along Woodward avenue talking about their best young men, of course. At least, one of them was.

"Charley was up to see me last night," she said, with a twitter.

"That's twice in a week, isn't it?" inquired the other.

"Yes;" and she blushed and giggled.

"I suppose he'll come three times in the next week."

"I suppose so."

"And four times the next?"

"That's what brother says."

"And five times the next?"

"That's what sister says."

"And six times the next?"

"That's what aunty says.

"And seven times the next?"

"That's what papa says."

"And then what?"

"Then we'll get married; that's what everybody says."

"And then what?"

"Then I won't see him any more of an evening; that's what mamma says."—Detroit Free Press.

Our Kitchen

No kitchen is kept cleaner than the premises devoted to the manufacture of NONE SUCH Mince Meat. No housewife can be more fastidious in the matter of preparing food than we are in the selection and preparation of the materials of which it is made. The cleaning of the currants (for one thing) is more thoroughly done by means of perfected appliances, than it would be possible to do it by hand.

Its cleanliness, purity, wholesomeness and deliciousness are good reasons for using NONE SUCH Mince Meat. The best reason is its saving—of time, of hard work, of money. A ten cent package affords you two large pies, without trouble to you beyond the making of the crust. Makes just as good fruit cake and fruit pudding as it does mince pie. Sold everywhere. Be sure and get the genuine.

To-day You Can Buy an Imported Clay Suit for $10.

We're overcoming the prejudice against "Ready-made Suits" by showing TAILORS' PATTERNS and nobbier styles than the people have been accustomed to seeing hereabouts. We're winning the trade by selling at prices that appeal to economical and invariably lower than any in the city, notwithstanding the "seeming" inducements of others. We're happifying hundreds by giving them as perfect fitting clothing as their tailor can, in fact we've oft been told as soon as our suits get on the street, away from our store, the merchant tailor gets the credit for having made them, but we won't quarrel, give the tailors the credit, but go on buying our suits.

SCOTCH CHEVIOTS in suits are victorious this season, they dominate the fashion for fall.

The Cricket.

When the autumn nights are dreary,
And the swift clouds hide the moon,
Then cricket plies his fiddle
And pipes a merry tune.
The firelight leaps and flickers,
And dances as he plays,
And the kettle on the embers
Sings a dozen cheerful lays.

While I, in quiet shadow
Forget the lonely night,
And build my Spanish castles
In the glowing firelight.
Till cricket, getting drowsy,
Though hinting for applause,
Stops suddenly his music,
And recalls me by a pause.

Then I hear a lonely sobbing
Of the wind among the trees,
Or the rustling down the pathway
Of the dry and fallen leaves.
And the night, in all its terror
Of solitude and gloom,
Comes creeping like a presence
Within the quiet room.

And the clock above the mantle
Has a strange and solemn tick,
And the one against the window
Sounds like ghostly tapping stick.
Then I stir the dying embers
Till I rouse the flames once more,
And cricket hears and chirrups
Behind the kitchen door.

And, valiant little fiddler,
Again he draws the bow
And shrills the self-same treble
He played a year ago.
Yet I do not smile nor chide him,
Nor (critical) complain,
But all the long fall evenings
I list the same refrain.

For 'tis not what he plays me,
Nor what his skill and ease,
But the cheerful little fiddler
Who serves my heart to please.
And I, in kitchen rocker,
And he, beneath the floor,
Grow better friends and comrades
Each year that passes o'er.

AN ORDINARY BUSINESS TRANSACTION.

"Ezra Grassneck! Ezra Grassneck! ! Ezra Grassneck! ! !"

Thus trumpeted the sheriff from the court-house door, a little louder each time and with his chin-whiskers making one long and two short beats at each repetition.

Then, slowly turning, he shuffled back into the court-room, gave the clerk an expressionless glance, glided silently to his little desk, and bowed low over the cuspidor.

Whereupon the clerk proceeded to write in a pondrous record book something to the effect that the "plaintiff being thrice solemnly called came not, neither came anyone for him, etc., and the judge said, "Dismissed. Plaintiff's costs. Call the next."

The defendent's counsel passed out, leaving only the unsatisfactory explanation that Ezra had had enough and had made up his mind to quit. That was all, and the facts in the case of Grassneck vs McTagg et al. were buried in the oblivion of "professional confidence" and "privileged communication."

An unusual interest in the case had been aroused by the incredible rumor that Old Ezra Grassneck had been caught napping and had permitted himself to be defrauded out of a thousand dollars; still worse, had actually been fool enough to sign his name to papers, which latter act is considered the extreme of folly in his neighborhood.

Accordingly, on the morning set for the trial, the little railroad station was deserted, the seats in Long's emporium were cold and vacant, and Tucker's tonsorial parlor was silent and empty. Three-fourths of the male inhabitants had "'lowed they'd go to court and hear this 'ere case o' Grassneck's."

The parties thereto were all well, though perhaps not very favorably, known to their neighbors.

Ezra Grassneck loved gain—certain, not speculative, gain. At each protracted experience meeting, with a becoming spirit of humility, he would say:—

"All this worldly substance ain't mine, but the Lord's, and shall I waste and squander what is the Lord's, or, like the unthrifty steward in the scriptures, neglect to turn it to advantage for his glory?"

His frequent repetition of this sentiment suggests the true key-note of his character—that his ruling passion was not avarice, as his neighbors had thoughtlessly said, but an unfaltering fidelity to a divine trust, and that in this case it was only his commendable zeal in that behalf which had exposed him to the craft of an enemy, and made him a victim of what he termed "a robbery," but what McTagg said was only "an ordinary business transaction."

As to the chief defendant, Morgan McTagg, owing to a curious popular prejudice against him, it is very hard to obtain an unbiased account. He had been a resident of the county seat but a few years, having come from Chicago, where he had met with disaster in a small manufacturing business.

Although not generally credited, it is nevertheless true that McTagg, the manufacturer, was the very antithesis of McTagg, the broker and promoter. Before this failure he possessed a confidence in his fellowman that was simply idyllic.

Bacon, in the ripeness of his experience, has said: "The ways to enrich are many, and most of them are foul." McTagg once remarked: "The fakes seem to pay best, and I guess I've been a producer long enough."

His brief, but thorough and costly, term in the university of adversity had aroused doubts in his mind as to whether or not honesty might really be the best policy, and he gave it a careful investigation. As a result, he learned, among other things, that cupidity is more potent than confidence in leading men into devious financial ventures. He had fallen among those that grind the faces of the poor. His face had been ground, and it made him sharp

In his recent location his ostensible business had been brokerage in oil and gas lands, but his actual employment is best defined in a general phrase, as the making of ingenious and complicated trades in property which he does not own; yet which, by some clever method, not involving the payment of money, he manages to possess legally.

Ezra's attorney, young Mr. Archibald Face, had instituted this action against McTagg and Hokensmith under an imperative instruction and against his best judgment, and it was not until the week before court convened that the attorney succeeded in persuading his client to yield to advice.

Mr. Face had been retained because he was cheap, and Ezra's confidence in his ability was, therefore, not quite firm. At last, almost on the eve of the trial, he consented, regardless of expense, to take the opinion of that Nestor of the circuit, ex-Judge J. Billings Gayte, and agreed to dispose of the controversy as Judge J. Billings Gayte in his wisdom might decide. An appointment for an interview was accordingly made, and Ezra anxiously, but hopefully, awaited the day when the law on his case should be delivered from the pregnant brain of Judge Gayte.

"Well, Ezra," said the judge, by way of opening the consultation, "I hear you've had some little trouble with McTagg."

"I have," said Ezra.

"He's a tricky, unscrupulous rascal, and, I think, a pretty hard man to get the best of."

"I ain't tried to get the best of him. He's got the best o' me, an' now all I'm aimin' to do's to get my money back, say nothin' 'bout the interest; though of course, if I can get the interest, it rightly belongs to me. Think I'll win it, jedge?"

"We'll talk it over and see what we can do."

"It seems like a plain enough case and I guess you'll say so yourself, when you hear about the whole transaction."

"You musn't feel too certain of winning. I've had enough experiences to know there's no sure thing in lawsuits, and besides, Ezra, I've been talking this matter over with your attorney, Mr. Face, and I'm afraid for you that his advice has been sound, as it usually is."

Mr. Face gave a nervous cough and a delighted squirm in his chair and then put a deep, thoughtful look on his blush-inflamed features. Praise from a Judge Billings Gayte is praise indeed.

"Well," said Ezra with an attempt to appear resigned, "I s'pose we all learn ev'ry day, an' if you say I can't get my rights out o' McTagg, I'll have to grin and bear it, though it don't seem right."

"Before I can say any thing further," proceeded the judge, dropping the cordial manner with which he had begun the interview, "I must hear your entire story and you must be careful to include every detail, no matter how discreditable to you it may be; and, Ezra," added the judge impressively, "you will find it to your final advantage to stick to the exact truth, as we are bound by the law to preserve our clients' secrets."

This seemed somewhat short of the deference customarily paid to a wealthy farmer, capitalist, and ex-justice of the peace, and Ezra at first thought of an indignant reply, but the judge's steady gaze silently commanded him to proceed with his statement of the case.

"Well, judge," he began, "what I wanted to know is this: S'pose a man's give up a thousan' dollars good money jus' to help a trade through an' make a little commission for himself, can't he sue the man that got his money, when he finds out it was a swindle and a deliberate robbery?"

"It's not necessary to suppose a case, when we have an actual one to deal with. Now tell me how you got into this tangle with McTagg and young Hockensmith."

"Well, accordin' to my notion, it was all planned out when I traded them forty acres joinin' my farm to Joe Hockensmith last October. You see, he'd been a dinging me for some time to make a trade with him, an' I knowd he'd been calculatin' to put in some oil wells, an' so I held off, till fin'ly the upshort of it was, we agreed the land worth two thousan' dollars. That's what they call 'a tradin' figger an' Joe give me a piece o' city property in Chicago worth two thousan' dollars, too, he said, but that was also a tradin' figger, 'cause it was sixteen miles from the court house, an' all under water when I see it after the trade was made."

"Exactly."

"Well, I didn't say nothin' when I see I'd been beat, but while I was wonderin' if Joe actually thought there was oil on that land, 'long comes this 'ere McTagg, an' says;—

"'Mr. Grassneck, I hear you've sol' that forty acres joinin' your place.'

"'Yes,' says I, 'I've sol' it. Wan' to buy it?'

"'Say,' says he, 'is that a straight sale, or have you got a string tied onto it?'

"'Mr. McTagg,' says I, 'the land's entirely out o' my hands. Was you lookin' to buy it?'

"'Say,' says he, I 'wisht you'd tell me the truth about this 'ere sale, 'cause if you do, you'll likely make some money out of it, an' if you don't, you won't.'

"Then I says, 'Mr. McTagg, I ain't got time to talk to men that doubt my word.' Jus' like that.

"Well, we had some more o' that kind o' talk, an' he wants to know if Joe Hockensmith 'd like to sell, which I knowed he would, 'cause he'd been askin' me to buy it back at a small figger, so I told McTagg if he wanted the land to go see the owner. Then he says:—

"'It's like this: I am authorized to make a mighty good offer for that land, but I got special reasons for not wantin' to deal with Joe Hockensmith. I got good advice I can't make no trade with him nohow, but a man like you ought to make a pretty fair bargain—that is, if our scheme ain't leak'd out.'

"I ast him what scheme he referring to, an' he says, 'You'll hear of it as soon as any one.'"

"Which you have found to be true, eh!" said the judge.

"Then," continued Ezra, not noticing the interruption, "I ast him how much he'd pay for the land, an' what terms he wanted, an' how much I get for making the trade an' all that, an' he says:—

"'I come to you 'cause I can't make this trade myself, an' you bein' a Christian man, I knowed I could trust to your honor. Now I got to get that land an' I ought to have a contrac' to-night. It ain't for me, but the contrac's to be in my name for obvious reasons.' I think that's what he said.

"'Now,' he continues, 'we want that land as cheap as we can get it, but we want it bad, an' if you do your best an' get me a contrac' for it for the lowest figger Joe Hockensmith'll take, there's a hundred an' a half in it for you. As to the terms,' says he, 'you can read this, but don't say a word about it to nobody.'

"Then he shows me a telegram that says: 'Make contrac' at once. If necessary, offer eight thousan,' one thousan' down balance thirty days,' an' it was signed 'J. L. Mason, Superintendent.'"

"Slandered oil company?" asked the judge.

"Yes. Then, thinks I, I can see through this scheme, an' I aimed then an' there to make up what I lost sellin' out so cheap. So I says, 'I'll do it, if I can, Mr. McTagg,' an' he says, 'It's a go.'

"Well, I didn't have no trouble gettin' Joe Hockensmith to agree to give me half o' what he gets over an' above two thousan' dollars for findin' a buyer. Fact is, I come near buyin' it off him right then an' there an' sellin' it to McTagg myself, I was that trustin' an' easy deceived. But, thinks I, that ain't hardly honorable, so I fixes it with Joe. But it seemed Joe needed money right smart an' had to have it right off an' says the trade's got to go through in five days or he'd sell out to man from Pittsburg who'd offered him two thousan' dollars."

"What was the name of the Pittsburg man?" interjected the judge.

"He didn't say. Does it make any difference?"

"Proceed."

"Well, I done my best to talk him out o' that five-day business, but it was no use. So I goes back to McTagg an' tells him I can buy the land for eight thousand dollars, that there was a man from Pittsburg wantin' it and we'd have to be liberal with Joe to get it. 'Course this mayn't have been strict'y true; but, you know, in ordinary business transactions a man's apt to forget himself."

"Yes, quite often," acquiesced the judge.

"Then McTagg says: 'I'm glad we got the land, but I'm sorry we have to give so much.' 'Why, man alive,' says I, naturally mistakin' his intentions, 'for your business you've got a rare bargain.' 'Well, mebbe so,' says he; 'let's have the contrac'.' Then I told him about Joe wantin' two thousan' dollars in five days an' sayin' the trade's got to go through in that time, an' McTagg says: 'He's got to give up that notion or keep his land, 'cause I ain't got more'n a thousan' for him, and I can't get any more inside o' thirty days. You see,' says he, 'if I send for more now, they'll think I want it myself.'

"'Can't you borrow the money?' says I.

"'I won't,' says he.

"'Can't you think of no way to fix it? says I.

"'There ain't no way but the way I said,' says he; 'ouless,' says he, 'you take my thousan' and put a thousan' with it an' make the contrac' for thirty days. You can make it in your own name for security,' says he, 'an' when I pay you the money you can assign to me. That ought to fix Joe all right.'

"Well, thinks I, if McTagg puts up a thousan' on this, I can resk a thousan'—an' I done it."

"H'm," growled the judge. "Is this the contract you made?"

"Yes, that's it," said Ezra, inspecting the document handed to him. "O' course, though, I had a private, verbal understandin' that this wasn't to be the price o' the land to me."

"H'm."

"Then in a couple o' days I gets the abstrac' an' takes it to McTagg, an' he says: 'I guess we won't need that now. We've changed our plans an' decided not to take the land; but you've got a rare bargain, Grassneck,' says he, 'an' I wisht you'd find it handy to pay me the thousan' I advanced you when you bought the land, 'cause I'm needin' money soon.'"

"Exactly," remarked the judge.

"Then he gets in his buggy an' drives off, an' I ain't had a chance to get at him sence, except by bringin' this law suit."

"Then I understand," said the judge, that you've made a contract with Joe Hockensmith to purchase this land from him at eight thousand dollars, and that you and McTagg have each paid a thousand dollars on the purchase price."

"That's the way it looks—only——"

"Is the land worth eight thousand dollars?"

"That's it—et ain't worth eight hundred."

"So I thought. And you therefore infer that McTagg's thousand dollars were returned to him and yours divided between the two, and Joe has your contract to buy the land for eight thousand dollars less the two paid."

"Jedge, there ain't no doubt about it."

"No doubt at all. How about that telegram, Mr. Face?"

"It was probably," replied the other lawyer, "a genuine one referring to other lands that McTagg actually bought for the Slandered oil company."

"Now, Ezra," resumed the judge, "matters stand this way: You want your contract cancelled and your money refunded. McTagg claims an action against you for a thousand dollars lent to you, and Joe Hockensmith threatens to sue you on your contract for six thousand still due. You understand the situation? We'll not need you again until morning, as Mr. Face and I require the rest of the day for consultation."

"That's all"? piped Ezra dolefully.

"That's all. Call to-morrow morning at 9.30."

"Well, good-day. You'll do your best."

"Face," queried the judge as the door slammed, "they have the documents?"

"Enough to win any kind of an action at law."

"Our client's hands are not quite clean enough for equitable relief, eh?"

"They look a bit soiled."

"You've examined the contract?"

"It's perfect."

"The title to the land?"

"Flawless."

"H'm — bright fellow — McTagg! We've got to settle it."

It was settled, but McTagg dictated the terms.—A. P. Ingram, in the Illustrated American.

SOME ANIMAL ODDITIES.

Try it. Gather 10,000 of the threads by a full-grown spider, twist them together, and see if they equal in substance the size of one of your hairs.

Oysters live ten to twelve years, when they have the chance. In this country they don't get the chance.

Many horses are fond of beer, and to a tired horse a bottle of beer in his gruel is a great restorative. It acts as a "pick me up," and often makes a horse with no appetite eat freely. Brewers understand this, and that is one reason why their horses always seem to be in good condition.

The large horned beetle can carry 315 times its own weight. One has been known to walk away with a 2½-pound weight.

Live bees are sometimes shipped on ice so as to keep them dormant during the journey This is particularly the case with bumble-bees, which have been taken to New Zealand, where they are useful in fertilizing the red clover that has been introduced into the colony.

The amount of light that can be obtained from fireflies is not generally known. These insects have two bright spots on the thorax, and also brilliant wings on the abdomen, and give light sufficient to enable one to read at a little distance. Two or three placed in the center of a room will shed a soft light all over it. They are very common in Havanna, Brazil, Guiana, Venezuela and Mexico. In those countries at night the natives affix the little creatures to their shoes and thus obtain light to see the road and frighten away the snakes. Mexican women use them as jewels. They tie them in little gauze bags and put them in their hair or on their clothing. They keep them in wire cages and feed them on scraps of sugar cane.

Reynard is a knowing animal. The foxes are much tormented by fleas, but when the infliction becomes severe they know how to get rid of the insects. They gather from the bark of trees moss, which they carry to a stream that deepens by degrees. Here they enter the water, still carrying the moss in their mouths, and going backward, beginning from the end of their tails, they advance by slow degrees till the whole body with the exception of the mouth is entirely immersed. The fleas, during this proceeding, have rushed in rapid haste to the dry parts, and finally to the moss, and the fox, when he has, according to his calculation, allowed sufficient time for all the fleas to take their departure, quietly opens his mouth. The moss floats off down the stream with its burden of fleas, and when it is out of jumping reach the fox finds its way to the bank much relieved.

ANOTHER SPANISH VICTORY.—"Send it away quick!" exclaimed the Spanish general in great excitement.

"What has happened?" asked the correspondent.

PALMER HISTORY GLEANINGS.

BY O. P. ALLEN.

XVI.

Tenneyville.

Somehow in making up the cast of the history of our town, Tenneyville, like the little tribe of Benjamin in Israel of old, was overlooked, and no note taken of it; for which reason it deserves a place in this aftermath series. For half a century it has been a busy suburb, and, considering its size, has contributed its full share to the industries of the town. This hamlet is noteworthy from the fact that it is located in the center of the farm of the first settler of Palmer, John King. Although the pioneer erected a rude cabin just south of the Lawrence block in 1716, he remained there but a season or two, when he removed, and built for his family a larger log house just west of the present house of Mr. Carey in Tenneyville. The abundance of water furnished a never-failing brook, and the close proximity of Robert Old, just over the river, may have determined him in his final choice of location, and surely, under the circumstances, these were potent reasons. The claim extended from the famous Tanner spring near the lily pond on the south to the Conant house on the north, and from the river to the edge of the hill on the east, embracing about one hundred acres.

Here our sturdy pioneer, fresh from English soil, with the blood of the Norman and the Saxon coursing through his veins, came to found a family in the new world and brave the dangers of a home in the wilderness. At first he had but one white neighbor, with occasional calls from scanty travelers on the Bay Path to and from Springfield and Boston; but much acquaintance with Indians and the whole denizens of the pine forests around him. The years passed slowly, but their monotony was frequently broken by the arrival of children, and the incoming of more pioneers to give him encouragement in his work, while the tilled acres grew wider on either side of his rude home, thus according him larger comforts; but whatever his tastes might have been, he had scanty means to gratify them, for in those days it was a difficult matter to acquire money in such a locality as he had sought, for the market was far off and not easily reached.

But somehow our first settler lived on and reared a large family, and probably taught the children himself the rudiments of the language, and he had the satisfaction of seeing his sons settle about him and become honored members of the new community. He just missed giving his own name to the territory he helped to settle, because another town had received the same name at a prior date. But he met with some discouragements, for after he had cleared up his farm, he had much difficulty, with others, in obtaining a clear title from the general court, but after the vexatious delay of six years, the matter was amicably arranged, and he was allowed to spend the remainder of his life on the land he had reclaimed from the forest. He died in April, 1744, at the age of 65 years. His estate was inventoried at £1571, which comprised the homestead of 72 acres valued at £540; division of land pertaining to same, £26; a second home lot of 60 acres, £265; a third home lot of 70 acres, £400; and two other after divisions, £56; personal property, £284. There was a mortgage on the property of £955 in favor of Byfield Lyde of Boston. The widow's dower was £429. In 1748 all the real estate was sold at auction at the tavern of David Shaw, save the homestead, and that was soon disposed of to Elijah Stetson of Palmer, who sold it Dec. 11, 1850, to Moses Cooley for £200; he sold the same to Obediah Cooley Oct. 22, 1754, for £350, and Jonathan Cooley bought it for £400 April 7, 1783. It seems from the old records that Jonathan Cooley was of Palmer in 1770, and it is thought he may have lived on the place some years before he purchased it.

The farm descended from him to his son William, and from him to Eliphalet Tenney, who came to Palmer about 1832 from Stow, and lived in the house now owned by Mr. Carey. In 1845 Mr. Tenney built the house where George Stone now lives, also a shop near it, which were the first buildings of the present century put up in Tenneyville. Mr. J. B. Maynard and his stepson, George Stone, came from Thompson, Ct., the same year and occupied the new buildings and commenced the business of blacksmithing. Mr. Maynard had served as an army blacksmith through the Seminole War in Florida, and was prepared to take up the more peaceful avocation of serving the public in Palmer. The little shop, which is now the dwelling of George Mills, proving too small, the barn of

PALMER NEWS.

SHOT BY A ROBBER.

Andrew Pinney Hit Twice by a Highwayman Who Demanded His Money.

Andrew Pinney, the superintendent of the Palmer Carpet Manufacturing Company, was shot twice about 2.10 this afternoon by a masked man who demanded his money, and failing to get it fired two shots and then escaped. One ball struck Mr. Pinney in the right breast and evidently hit the edge of the lung, as he is raising small quantities of blood, and the other entered the inside of his left leg about six inches above the knee and ranged upward and inward. Both balls are still in his body, but it is thought neither will give him material trouble. The one in his breast is the only one from which serious results are liable, but it is thought his lung is not injured enough to prove troublesome.

Mr. Pinney was on his way to the carpet mill in his buggy, and had nearly reached the top of the hill above the cider mill when a man sprang from the bushes on the left and grabbed the horse's bridle with his left hand, holding a revolver in his right. He wore a black mask extending below his chin, with holes only for the eyes. Mr. Pinney asked "What do you want?" and the fellow replied "I want your money." For answer Mr. Pinney struck both horse and man a blow with the whip. The horse started on a jump for the mill, and the man, seeing that he was balked, fired two shots as quickly as he could pull the trigger, then disappeared in the woods. Mr. Pinney thinks it was the first ball which struck him in the breast, and this also carried away the ends of the forefinger and thumb on his right hand. The ball was evidently a 32-calibre.

Mr. Pinney drove to the mill yard and called for help. Joseph Page, the overseer, came to his assistance, and at once took him to his home on Maple street, where he was attended by Dr. Hendee. He was perfectly conscious, and discussed the matter with those who were allowed to see him. He could give no very accurate description of the man, except that he would weigh probably about 150 pounds, was rather shabbily dressed, and wore a sack coat and a cap.

The evident object of the highwayman was to get hold of the pay roll, which was due at the mill this afternoon, but as it was to shut down this afternoon the hands were paid this morning. Men from the mill at once began searching the woods near the scene of the shooting, and they were joined by others from the village as soon as the news reached them, many taking their guns with them on the hunt. The fire alarm was rung at 3 o'clock and the firemen called out to help in the search.

Load of Beer Seized.

Although for some time the prosecuting committee has made no raids, the members have by no means been asleep, as is evidenced by the arrest which they made last Friday afternoon. Mr. Jenkins was in Three Rivers that afternoon and noticed a team being driven about the village, stopping at a number of houses, and articles very much resembling cases of beer being delivered. This aroused his suspicions and he determined to follow the team and ascertain its business. After making its round in Three Rivers the team started for Thorndike and was followed and overtaken by Mr. Jenkins near Four Corners. The driver, who was a Polander, was stopped by Mr. Jenkins and a man who accompanied him from Three Rivers, and asked what he had in the wagon. The driver replied "beer," and in answer to questions also said that he was delivering it and taking pay for it, being in the employ of William Ritter, a Chicopee brewer. Mr. Jenkins placed him under arrest and brought him and his load of beer, which consisted of 18 cases and a keg, to Palmer. Another Polander, who was in Three Rivers the same day delivering or selling beer, came from Chicopee Falls early Saturday morning to see the arrested Polander, and told a story which led to his own arrest. They were brought into court and pleaded not guilty. William Ritter, who owned the beer and for whom the Polanders worked, said he would furnish bail, but a misunderstanding arose and he declined to furnish the necessary sureties. He was arrested later for the illegal selling of liquor in town, pleaded not guilty and furnished bail for himself and his two employes in the sum of $900. The case was continued until Monday, the 19th

Death of Mrs. W. H. Laird.

Mrs. Jennie Coleman Laird, wife of W. H. Laird and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Coleman, passed away Sunday, October 4th, after a long and painful illness. Mrs. Laird was born in Hatfield, Mass., December 22, 1870, and with her parents removed to Palmer in 1877, where she has since resided. She was united in marriage with William H. Laird in 1889, and seemed to find her vocation in caring for her husband and the two little ones who came to bless their home. Within a year insidious disease fastened itself upon her, and in spite of a brave battle for life, bore her from our midst. Stricken down in her youth, in the midst of life, and called to part from loved ones so dear to her, she cheerfully submitted to the summons from earth, if indeed her work was ended, trusting that "He who doeth all things well" would comfort and protect those left behind. The deceased was a member of the Congregational church in this village, having been admitted to its membership a few days before her death. The bereaved family have the sympathy of our whole community in their affliction. The funeral services were held from the residence of her parents, Tuesday at 2.30 p. m., Rev. F. E. Jenkins officiating.

LOW-DOWN, SHORT-TURN MILK WAGON—CAPACITY 400 QUARTS

NEW BUSINESS INDUSTRY.

Stock Company Formed for the Manufacture of Delivery Wagons.

Although the village of Palmer cannot boast of any large industry within its borders, there are several smaller industries which make up the business life of the town. One of these, which started out in a small way but by skillful management and the merit of the article manufactured has increased to large proportions, is the business of E. A. Brown & Company, manufacturers of the low-down and short-turn delivery wagons.

About four years ago E. A. Brown, in company with I. F. Brown, engaged in the manufacture of ordinary wagons in their present shop opposite the driving park on South Main street. After being in business about a year, I. F. Brown invented a means by which a wagon can be turned completely around in a very short space. This was patented, and since then they have been engaged in the manufacture of wagons with this appliance attached. The wagon is especially adapted for those who deliver goods from house to house, having low foot-boards so as to enable a person to enter or leave the wagon without the aid of a step. The patent is on the reach connecting the front axle with the dependent portion of the body, and as the shafts are attached to the front axle, this axle is enabled to draw the load. Instead of the axle being pivoted, a triangle which is attached over the front axle is pivoted under the body of the wagon, thus allowing the short turn. This wagon, with the exception of one similar in some respects manufactured by a party in New York, is the only wagon of its kind in the country. And the wagon manufactured by the Brown company has several decided advantages over the other which the users of such wagons have not been slow to see and appreciate. The draft is 13 inches lower, being direct from the axle, thus making it a great deal easier for the horse to draw the load, while the short turn is also retained with about 1-5 the friction. The first experimental wagon which was built is the one now used by J. H. Shaw on his milk route. And as this wagon was the first one built, if there were any defects, they would surely have shown themselves by this time, but Mr. Shaw has used it nearly every day for three years and has never found it defective in any way, and says that it has given entire satisfaction. The company has preferred to gradually increase the business and watch the developments and practicability of the wagon. A large number of wagons have been built and have given satisfaction, as is testified by the fact that many additional sales have been made to the first buyers. All users and consumers say that it is the most practical delivery wagon ever put upon the market.

There has been a big demand for the wagon the past year, and as the company could not meet this demand in its present quarters, steps were taken to form a stock company. A meeting was held September 22d and the following officers chosen: President, C. F. Grosvenor; vice president and treasurer, L. A. Conant; secretary, I. F. Brown. The above officers, with John Mulcahy of Brookfield, constitute the board of directors. The company has a capital of $13,000, and arrangements are now being made to buy land on which to erect a three-story brick building about 40 by 80, with an addition of one story, wood, 25 by 35 feet. Mr. Brown says that orders enough are now on hand to keep a dozen men at work, and with the right machinery and suitable quarters that number at least and possibly more, could be kept at work year in and year out. This industry on its increased basis will be a great benefit to the town.

John F. Newbegin of Boston, late of the Philadelphia Club, Old Orchard, Me., has assumed the management of the Nassowanno House. Mr. Newbegin has had a successful experience as a hotel manager.

William Weld and Ernest Marsh have been working in E. B. Taylor's grocery store this week during the absence of Mr. Taylor, who has been in New York and Boston buying Christmas goods.

The Kickapoo Indian Medicine and Concert Company will appear in the opera house for one week, commencing to-morrow evening, when the performance will consist of a variety of specialties, all for the sum of 10 cents.

The Democrats of the first Hampden representative district will hold their convention in the district court room in this village next Tuesday at 2 in the afternoon, and will undoubtedly nominate T. W. Kenefick of Palmer.

Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Fanny Blanchard of this place and Milton M. Brown of Monson, to take place Tuesday, October 13, at 3 p. m., at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wood on South Main street.

Rev. F. E. Jenkins, L. H. Gager, O. P. Allen, Mrs. J. B. Shaw, Mrs. W. H. Hitchcock and Mrs. G. H. Wilkins of the Congregational Sunday school attended the Sunday school convention at Northampton this week.

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The meeting will be of special interest to women, and all are cordially invited to be present.

Decision in the case of Trumbull vs. Hovey, the claim being for board covering a period of 27 weeks, was rendered by Judge Robinson Saturday morning. Judgment in the sum of $64.50 was found for the plaintiff. An appeal was taken.

The Western Massachusetts Universalist Ministerial Association will hold a meeting in St. Paul's church next Monday at 10.45 a. m. Rev. Harry Blackford of Monson will read a paper on "What themes should a minister discuss in his pulpit?"

Rev. H. F. Moulton gave an interesting talk last evening in his series on "Some hard sayings of the Bible explained." The special topic was "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God."

J. F. Holbrook has taken his son, Henry W., into partnership with him in his retail coal business, and it will hereafter be conducted under the firm name of J. F. Holbrook & Son. The wholesale branch of the business is retained by Mr. Holbrook.

A change of time went into effect on the New London Northern road Monday, with these changes at the Palmer station. The "Block Island" train, leaving for New London at 7.35 a. m. and returning at 8 p. m., is discontinued, and the evening train north is changed from 8 o'clock to 7.10.

The assessors give notice that they will be in their office in the library building Saturday, the 17th, from 7 to 9 p. m., and also at the court room in this village Saturday, 24th, from 7 to 10 p. m., for the purpose of giving certificates to any who wish to register so that they may vote in the coming election.

At a session of the probate court held in Springfield Wednesday administration was granted in the estates of: Melville Smith, late of Monson, Hannah A. Smith, administratrix; William H. Robbins, late of Wilbraham, Ira G. Potter administrator; Franklin Blanchard, late of Palmer, Francis S. Blanchard of Worcester administrator.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society held an adjourned meeting Tuesday afternoon. The receipts of the fair last month will hardly cover the expenses, but the directors have a project whereby they hope to make this good and also to clear up the debt incurred last year. Another meeting will be held soon.

The Palmer firemen have accepted the challenge of their Monson brethren to a game of ball, and will try to give Monson a few points on how the national game should be played, at Flynt's Park next Friday afternoon. After the game the Monson fireman will give their guests a supper at the Century Hotel, and in the evening will give a social dance in their honor.

The manager of the opera house is contemplating giving a grand concert the latter part of this month. He is also making arrangements for the cantata of "Esther, or The Beautiful Queen", to be given sometime in January. It is desired that all who wish to take part in the chorus will meet in the parlors of the opera house building on Tuesday evening, October 20th, at 7.30 p. m., for the first rehearsal.

The Republican representative convention for the new First Hampden district will be held in Memorial Hall in Monson next Monday at 10.30 a. m. At no time for many years has there been so little talk of what the convention is likely to do as this year, there being very little heard. There is a probability, however, that candidates will be presented from all the towns except Holland, and it would not be surprising if that burg had a candidate for the nomination.

The pastor of the Congregational church will preach Sunday morning on a "A new start." In the evening the service under the care of the Men's Sunday Evening Club of the church will include an elocutionary interpretation of the 23d and 24th psalms and a part of Luke VI, and the reading of Bryant's "Waiting at the Gate," and "The Station Agent's Story," by Mr. W. E. Atwater. Mr. Atwater is a reader and impersonator who is making a biblical interpretation by the use of the voice.

The Ladies' Tuesday Social Club held its first meeting of the season Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. G. H. Wilkins, and elected these officers: President, Mrs. S. H. Hellyar; vice president, Mrs. E. P. Ball; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. J. B. Shaw; librarian, Mrs. J. C. Wing. The works of George Eliot will be taken up, and the next meeting will be with Mrs. Ball next Tuesday. Mrs. H. G. Loomis was elected a member of the club, to fill the vacancy caused by the departure from town of Mrs. A. W. Thayer.

The mail at the post office is being weighed for a period of 30 days from October 8th, and mail should be deposited in the office about 10 minutes earlier than usual during this time in order to have it go out promptly. This weighing is done every four years in order to determine the compensation to be paid the railroads for carrying the mails during the next four years. Postmaster Royce also suggests that if owners of lock boxes would use their keys during this time instead of calling for their mail, it would greatly facilitate the work.

Myron Lincoln of Athol was before the court Wednesday morning for drunkenness. He was seen, in an intoxicated condition, walking upon the Boston and Albany track in the direction of Springfield by a railroad employe who notified Deputy Sheriff Studley, who followed up the track and found him sitting upon the rail. He was arrested and soon after his removal from the rail the evening express passed by. He was fined $15. A case of larceny was before the attention of the court Monday morning, and was put over till to-morrow morning.

The Palmer Republican Club held its weekly meeting Tuesday evening. In the absence of the president and vice presidents, H. P. Holden presided. A small number were present, and no business of importance was transacted. A little discussion pertaining to registration and on the final result of the election was indulged in by the members, during which it was stated that there is a report from good authority that the wire mill has orders enough on hand to run night and day, but is running just enough to keep the machinery in order and retain the help until after election.

A portion of Pleasant street, from the intersection of School streets to a point in front of the residence of William A. Barnes, is to be macadamized. The work on Thorndike street, with the exception of the grading along the macadamized strip, is completed. The strip on Pleasant street is already being excavated to the proper depth, and in a few days the crushed stone will be put on and the steam roller will be at work. The street at this point is very muddy in the spring, and as it is traveled very much in going to the Boston and Albany freight house, the improvement will be greatly appreciated.

All men should vote in the coming election. The questions at issue are of great importance to every man, woman and child, and it is high time for voters to see that their names are on the voting list. The registrars will be in session for the purpose of correcting and revising the voting list at the district court room next Monday from 2 to 4 p. m., and also on Saturday, October 24, from 12 o'clock noon until 10 p. m. They will also be at the office of the Palmer Mill in Three Rivers on Thursday, October 15, at the office of the Boston Duck Company, Bondsville, Monday, October 19, and at the office of the Thorndike Company, Thorndike, October 22, between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock.

The committee of Palmer and Brimfield business men appointed to confer with the directors of the Southbridge and Fiskdale street railway company in regard to the extension of its line to Brimfield and thence to Palmer, met the directors at Southbridge Wednesday. The committee learned that the rumor that the directors wished to extend their road to Brimfield was without any foundation whatever. The directors said that the road was built from local capital and there was not capital enough to extend the road if they should desire to do so. A report of the conference will be made by the committee before a meeting of Palmer and Brimfield citizens to be held in the rooms of the Palmer Business and Social Club next Thursday evening.

The September issue of the Palmer Citizen, which was withheld from the mails last week by Postmaster Royce after it was sent to the office, was distributed to the subscribers Wednesday morning of this week. The publishers' application for the admission of the sheet to the rights of second-class matter was made on the 13th of the month, and Postmaster Royce held that as it was a bi-monthly publication its September issue should be mailed on or before the 13th of the month. The publishers held that as the Citizen is not dated with the day of the month, but simply the month, they had a right to mail it any time during September. Mr. Royce declined to run the risk of a "call-down," however, and wrote for information, receiving permission to mail the issue, which he did at once.

Two petitions were in circulation the latter part of last week regarding the post office location, one asking its removal to the Caryl block, which received the signatures of seven-eighths of the business and professional men of the village, and one requesting the retention of the office in its present quarters. The former was sent to Washington by Postmaster Royce, and the latter was personally conducted by H. C. Strong. Mr. Royce's only aim in the matter is to please the majority of the patrons of the office, particularly the business men, who use the office most. He is simply acting under orders from the department at Washington, having no choice but to do as instructed last June, when he was notified that complaint had been made regarding the condition and surroundings of the office, and ordered to see what other locations were available and make report. Who made the complaint which started the department in the matter is not known.

Passengers on the Boston and Albany west bound accommodation train which reached Palmer at 10.19 a. m. yesterday were startled just as the train pulled out of Westboro at 8.10 by a loud pop which sounded as though a large stone had been thrown through the window of the car. One man was seen to drop back in his seat and quickly grasp his head in his hands, and it was thought he might be seriously hurt. Investigation showed, however, that a plump partridge had flown through the plate glass window and struck the man who occupied the seat in the head, knocking him partly over. The bird recovered itself and sailed through to the rear of the car, where it was caught by another passenger, who claimed it as his property, and the man who had the most to do with the capture of the bird was forced to go without, for had he not been hit by the bird it would have gone out of the window on the opposite side of the car. The passenger's escape from injury was almost miraculous, as the bird was flying very swiftly, so swiftly that the hole in the glass made by its passage was hardly larger than its body, and was smooth and round.

McKinley and Hobert Flag Raised.

A Republican rally was held in this village Saturday evening. A McKinley and Hobert campaign flag was raised and a large number of people listened to campaign oratory. C. G. Gardner, president of the Palmer Republican Club, and E. A. Thomas spoke briefly, and were followed by Hon. Michael J. Murray of Boston, who made a stirring speech. He said in part:

Free coinage would give to the silver mine owner the privilege of taking the product of his mine to any mint in the United States and having it coined into money at the expense of the government, or receive for the same standard money. The dishonesty of the proposition appears when we remember that they ask of the government a price for the silver double that which it commands to-day in the markets of the world. Legislation never did and never can create values. The price which any article brings when offered to the public for sale, represents its market value, and every sane man appreciates that this cannot be fixed by law. Mr. Bryan declares that one of the direct benefits to the farmer would be an immediate rise in the price of wheat. How does he account for the increase in the price of this product within the past few days? It is due simply and solely to a 30 per cent loss in the wheat crop of Russia. Why do our friends, the enemy, talk so much of the volume of the circulating medium of the United States? The fact is that the gold standard countries, with not more than a third of the population of the world, can boast of a circulating medium representing two-thirds of the world's currency.

If a free coinage law were to be passed the 4,875,510 depositors in our savings banks, with an average deposit of $371.36, or a total of $1,810,507,023, would be compelled to accept in return for the dollars deposited, a silver dollar with a purchasing power of 53 cents. And again, 22,735,666 people representing the number employed in the United States in 1890, and at that time earning yearly wages aggregating $7,801,047,500, would be paid in a dollar which had lost almost one-half of its present ability to provide food, raiment and shelter for American families. The benefit and the sole benefit of such an absurd change would be to the silver mine owner alone in providing a market for his product.

It would by just as reasonable, my friends, for the Otis company, or any manufacturing concern in the country, to take its product in half finished, and ask the United States government to complete the process of manufacture, without any expense to the employer, as to accede to the proposition of the silverites of to-day. It has its origin in the selfish greed of individuals and syndicates who represent more than $500,000,000. And for these poor fellows, forsooth, the United States is asked to legislate. It is the sacred duty of every country to provide for the people first a means of employment, and then to see to it that the service rendered is paid for in the best money known to civilized nations. And the government failing in these two particulars, but invites on its own head the fearful condemnation of an outraged and suffering citizenship.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Auction sale of horses, cattle, crops, farming tools, household furniture, etc., Oct., 15th, 10 a. m., on premises of the late Joseph Brown in Brimfield.

A. A. Babbitt's Store Robbed Again.

The Granite One-Price Clothing Store of A. A. Babbitt was burglarized Wednesday night, for the fourth time. Goods to the value of $100 were taken. Entrance was gained by breaking a large pane of glass in the front door, after attempting to force open the transom over the door, also to whittle away the sash and remove the glass from the south show window. No tools were left, and there is no clew upon which to work, except that four suspicious looking individuals were seen to peer into the windows during the evening before. A reward of $100 is offered by the selectmen for evidence which will convict the guilty person or persons. The third time the store was broken into was Sept. 21st. Twice entrance has been made by way of the front door, and twice by way of the back door. Mr. Babbitt has the sympathy of the townspeople in his loss. The feeling is general that the element which has invaded Monson during the past few months needs looking after very sharply.

The Ladies' Circle will serve their annual harvest supper at the Universalist church next Tuesday evening.

The Junior Epworth League have an oyster supper and entertainment at the Methodist church this evening.

Mrs. Henry Wood picked a number of ripe strawberries yesterday in her garden, varying from ½ inch in diameter to 1¼ inch.

The book entitled "The Orcutt Sisters; or A Term at the Academy," is now in the library and is being read with much pleasure.

Invitations are out for the wedding of Miss Fannie Blanchard of Palmer and Milton M. Brown, to take place at Palmer next Tuesday.

Messrs. Bertrand, Thompson and Hobbs have withdrawn from the Monson band. Jerry Lyon has become a member of the band.

Frank Beckwith was scalded Monday by the gauge blowing out on the W. N. Flynt Granite Co's. steam roller which he was running at Wilbraham.

The registrars of voters will be in session next Tuesday from 7.30 to 9 p. m., and on Saturday, the 24th, from 12 m. to 10 p. m., at which time registration will close.

A meeting of Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps will be held next Wednesday evening. Mrs. George Henry of L. L. Merrick Corps of Palmer will probably inspect the corps.

Monson was well represented at the Stafford fair, and it was vastly amusing to see with what eagerness some of the church members watched the stage performances and the horse-racing, or crept into the "Midway."

A social will be given in Memorial Hall on Thursday evening, the 22d. Dancing will be preceded by a concert, beginning at 8 o'clock. The committee of arrangements is Harry Miller, Henry F. Miller and Edward J. Hughes.

The Current Events Club met for reorganization at the home of Mrs. F. W. Ellis last afternoon. Mrs. Ellis was chosen president, and Miss Clara A. Wood secretary. The meeting was held this afternoon with Mrs. S. Fred Cushman.

Rev. S. Hobson of Palmer gave an interesting talk on the naval engagement between the Kearsage and Alabama, before the Monson Historical Society Wednesday evening at the annual meeting. The meeting was adjourned to next Wednesday evening, when officers will be elected.

Rev. G. Henry Flint, associate pastor of the First South church, Boston, will exchange pulpits with Rev. F. S. Hatch, and will address the Christian Endeavor meeting at 7 p. m. This meeting celebrates the 8th anniversary of the organization of the society. Mr. Flint was for two years a teacher in Monson Academy and was very popular.

The following pupils of Green street primary were neither absent nor tardy during the first month: Lilla Bradway, Teresa Connell, Ella Crowley, Mabel Fuller, Beatrice Gath, Emily Lewis, Lizzie Lewis, Margaret Moriarty, Florence Sault, Joseph Gould, Robert Fuller, Willie Hanson, Raymond Holloway, George Mitchell, Clifford Millar, Frank Rees, Frank O'Brien, John Ward.

The Democratic representative caucus at Memorial Hall last Friday evening chose Omer E. Bradway chairman and Nelson A. Bugbee clerk. The delegates chosen are Herbert M. Smith, Omer E. Bradway, John McGuire and William Sutcliffe. The town committee for 1897 is Omer E. Bradway, Herbert Smith, Joseph F. Coyle, Nicholas L. Hanley, Eugene S. Howlett, David D. Maney, Nelson A. Bugbee.

There have been some changes in the original plans of the Methodist church repairs. The metal ceiling will be furnished and put in place by the Penn Metal Ceiling and Roofing company, and work will begin at once; the Carter company of Springfield will wire the church for electricity and furnish fixtures; Meekins, Packard & Wheat of Springfield will furnish the carpets; Spencer, Moekler & Bell of Boston have the contract for the windows, and the Manitowae Seating company of Wisconsin, the one for the pews. Arthur E. Wood of Springfield will do the wall decorating and carpentering, putting in the stairs, pulpit, choir gallery, altar and window casings. The choir gallery is to be placed behind the pulpit, and the altar will be enlarged. Thirty double pews will be put in, making three aisles. It is expected that the work will be completed about Dec. 1st.

LUDLOW.

Mr. Conklin of Springfield occupied the pulpit at the Union church Sunday owing to the illness of Rev. A. J. Quick.

An interesting report of the Washington Christian Endeavor convention was given by Miss Annie Towne at the church Sunday evening to an appreciative audience.

WEST WARREN.

Miss Agnes Mahoney opened [illegible] rooms Tuesday and Wednesday.

Rev. N. L. Porter attended the Sunday school convention at Northampton Wednesday.

The ladies of the M. E. church served a harvest supper in St. Jean's Hall Tuesday evening.

Someone cut the harness on J. A. Johnson's horse while he was attending choir rehearsal last Sunday evening.

Annual Inspection of the Firemen.

The annual inspection of the Warren fire department was held in this village last Saturday afternoon, the two steamers, hook and ladder and hose companies, the Puritan hose company of the Warren Cotton Company, and the Warren and West Warren bands being in line. A fine showing was made. The West Warren hook and ladder company made the best time in running 100 yards and getting a man on the roof. Considerable feeling was brought out by the hose contest. The West Warren company used a nozzle not owned by the town, but refused to allow the West Warren company to use the same, though after a while they were given the nozzle and made the run though they did not try to make connections. In the steamer test the Warren company had 15 pounds of steam first, but the West Warren company started water with less than that, causing another controversy. The West Warren company won by 25 feet in the water throwing contest.

BELCHERTOWN.

The New York Stars gave an entertainment in the town hall Monday evening.

Dwight P. Clapp will speak on "The money question" at the town hall this evening at 7 30 o'clock.

In the evening there will be a dance at the Park View House, for which the Overman Wheel Company Orchestra will furnish music. The dance will be under the auspices of the Grand Army post.

WILBRAHAM.

The selectmen have made an addition to the old cemetery by buying two acres of James Merrick on the north side.

Irving Wetherbee has left his position as clerk in Gurney's store, and has taken a position as mail agent on the Boston and Maine road.

Elias Keyes was struck by a runaway Friday afternoon while riding in a business wagon, and a bone on the top of his shoulder was broken.

The game of football Monday afternoon between the Academy team and the French-American College team of Springfield resulted in a score of 4 to 4. Neither team kicked a goal.

Otis K. Ladd, a former resident of Wilbraham, now of North Adams, has been spending a few days with friends in town. Although in his 80th year and suffering the infirmities of age, Mr. Ladd's intellect is undimmed, and his accounts of his experiences in life, especially those in the army, are well worth listening to. He has a son who is postmaster in Somerville, S. C., with whom he has spent several winters.

At the Academy the young women's literary societies have elected these officers: Athean—President, Miss Roberta Corscaden; vice president, Miss Eva Long; secretary, Miss Edith Adams; treasurer, Miss Bertha Campbell; critic, Miss Maude Hubbard; Pieria—President, Miss Eva Crosby; vice president, Miss L. Cowles; secretary, Miss Annie Adams; treasurer, Miss Emma Redlin; critic, Miss Ellswoth. The new officers of the Christian Endeavor society are: President, Fred P. Webber; vice president, Miss Roberta Corscaden; secretary, Miss Marion Bartlett; treasurer, William Stephenson.

WARREN.

Auction sale of horses, cattle, crops, farming tools, household furniture, etc., Oct. 15th, 10 a. m., on premises of the late Joseph Brown in Brimfield.

Mr. Tower has been seriously ill.

Mrs. Harvey Ellis gave a very pleasant "ladies' whist" Friday afternoon of last week.

Mrs. A. S. Whitney was in town this week, the guest of Mrs. M. S. Hitchcock.

The whist club held its first meeting with Mr. and Mrs. Toney on Main street Monday evening.

Mrs. Emma Guilbert and Miss Louise are stopping with Mrs. Lewis Holbrook during the fall months.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Pearce have returned from their wedding tour, and reside at Lewis Woodworth's on Main street.

R. C. Strickland has been on a business trip to Philadelphia. Mrs. Strickland has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer at Baldwinsville.

The foundation for the Catholic church is progressing, and it is planned to lay the corner stone Sunday, Nov. 1. Bishop Beaver of Springfield is expected to be present.

The ladies of the Universalist church gave a reception to their pastor, Rev. T. A. Fischer, Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. Charles Comins on Cresent street. A large number were present, and a very delightful evening was the result.

A pleasant social event was the anniversary reception given to Dea. Charles Walker and wife at their home on Cresent street Saturday afternoon and evening. The reception was arranged by the Congregational Sunday school to celebrate the 30th wedding anniversary of Dea. and Mrs. Walker. A very social time was enjoyed by the many friends who gathered to extend their good wishes. The attendance of many of the children from the primary department was a pleasing feature of the occasion. A handsome picture and other gifts were left as souvenirs of the day. The hostess was attired in her wedding gown.

WALES.

Auction sale of horses, cattle, crops, farming tools, household furniture, etc., Oct. 15th, 10 a. m., on premises of the late Joseph Brown in Brimfield.

E. C. Sherman returned this week from Montville.

Mrs. J. H. Loudon's sister from Montville is making her a visit.

The Berkeley Mill shut down Thursday to repair the water wheel and give the help a chance to attend the Stafford Springs fair.

School Superintendent Robinson was in town Monday, inspecting the schools and making changes in attendance. Several were taken from the South Center school and [illegible] the Center Grammar department.

[illegible] gentlemen intend to enter their [illegible] in the gentleman's driving class at [illegible] Springs, among them H. H. Hall, [illegible]der, W. Royce, Myron Royce, Dorno Parker, Manser Lanphear, Fayette Needham and Bert Sizer.

Peter Gadoury and wife returned Monday from Stafford Springs, where they have been for a week caring for Mrs. Gadoury's sister, Lydia Bosquet, who has been sick for several weeks. She was buried Sunday. Two months ago she was a handsome girl of 18, strong and healthy; dropsy was the cause of her death. She leaves in Wales two sisters, Mrs. George Steele and Mrs. Gadoury, who have the sympathy of the entire community in their great bereavement.

Republican Flag Raising.

The Berkeley Mills Republican Club held a flag-raising and rally Saturday evening. At 7 o'clock a McKinley and Hobart flag was raised in front of the Berkeley mills, and after this followed a torchlight parade. At 8 o'clock the rally was held in the Baptist church, a large and enthusiastic audience being present. Cols. Young and Warriner of Springfield were the principal speakers, and both made stirring addresses which were interrupted many times by applause. Col. Warriner first outlined in brief the work and characteristics of the Republican state and national conventions, and then drew a word picture of the personality of the candidates and their platform. He also contrasted the Chicago convention with the St. Louis gathering. He referred to George Fred Williams's style of making speeches as nothing but a phrase of demagogism to deceive the unthinking public. He then referred to the tariff question, citing facts and figures showing that the true free trade element in Old Democracy favors cheap labor. On the currency question he quoted figures and prices paid for labor on both sides of the Rio Grande, and said, "They contend that silver should be coined the same as gold. We coin gold on its bullion value and they demand that silver should be coined without limit, but on a fictious value, a fifty-three cent value."

WARE.

The Methodist ladies made some over $25 on their harvest supper.

The Men's Sunday Evening League is to be congratulated on the fine musical talent it is securing for the evening services at the East Congregational church. Miss Louise E. Shumway, contralto, of Worcester, is decidedly a favorite in Ware, having been engaged as soloist for the third time. She has a wonderfully sweet and powerful voice, [illegible]ch she always has under perfect control. [illegible]ciation and phrasing are excellent. [illegible]oped the league will maintain this [illegible]dard during the weeks and months [illegible].

The annual inspection of the fire department took place last Saturday afternoon, the programme being much the same as in former years. The parade of the various companies in town, including the Ware Cornet Band and Fitzgerald's drum corps, numbered about 150 men. The mounted marshals were F. P. Clark, P. O. L'Heureux and J. H. Schoonmaker. The contests on Main street attracted a crowd. The No. 2 hose company won the honors in the hose contest. A good supper was served to the firemen and invited guests at the new Storrs house. The social dance in the evening at Firemen's Hall was well attended, and will net a fair sum to Hose No. 1, under whose auspices it was held.

CARD.—We wish to express our grateful acknowledgements to the many friends of our loved one for their continued kindness through the long and weary months of suffering, and for their sympathy evinced in many ways in our great affliction.

W. H. LAIRD,
C. N. COLEMAN AND FAMILY.

The Darlington, Wis., Journal says editorially of a popular patent medicine, "We know from experience that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy is all that is claimed for it, as on two occasions it stopped excruciating pains and possibly saved us from an untimely grave. We would not rest easy over night without it in the house." This remedy undoubtedly saves more pain and suffering than any other medicine in the world. Every family should keep it in the house, for it is sure to be needed sooner or later. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

If your children are subject to croup watch for the first symptoms of the disease—hoarseness. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse it will prevent the attack. Even after the croupy cough has appeared the attack can be prevented by giving this remedy. It is also invaluable for colds and whooping cough. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

If You Have a Sick Child This is Surely a Message of Hope.

This is the best of news for parents of weakly or sick children. It is a fact that our people have heretofore not had the same opportunity for having their children who suffer from chronic or lingering complaints treated and cured by eminent specialists in children's diseases as do the residents of the great cities where such skilled physicians reside. In other words, our people have been debarred from seeking a cure for their children by the great physicians, owing to the cost of travel to the large city and the high fees charged by such physicians.

Here, therefore, is a chance for the cure of the children of our community which should not be lost. Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who is beyond doubt the most successful specialist in curing the diseases of children, offers to give free consultation by mail in all cases of children's complaints. Parents have the privilege of consulting Dr. Greene by letter, describing their children's diseases, and he will, after carefully considering the symptoms, write a letter fully explaining the trouble, telling everything about their complaint so plainly that you will understand exactly what ails your children. He will also give his advice, founded upon his vast experience and wonderful success in treating such cases, as to just what to do to effect a cure. All this will cost you nothing, and you can thus have consultation with the best known physician and acknowledged most successful specialist in the world without leaving home and at no expense whatever. The Doctor is the discover of that greatest of medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedo, and has discovered many other most valuable remedies. Write to him now about your child, for this is a chance of cure which you may never have again.

It's a Go.

Since October 1st, when the open season began, the influx of sportsmen to the "Wilds of Maine" has been gradually increasing.

These annual shooting expeditions are to the hunter a source of great pleasure, and for a long time previous to his departure for the "Happy Hunting Ground" his time is occupied in elaborate preparation for the trip, which to him has no equal.

A day's time will carry one into the wildest of forests when moose, deer and other game reign supreme, and with the assistance of a guide and a good gun it will be no ones fault but your own if you don't have a good time.

In the remotest sections of the hunting region are well equipped camps belonging either to the hunting clubs or private individuals which can be hired for short periods, and where the "Brown October Days" can be passed in bliss and happiness.

The through service of the Boston and Maine Railroad and its connecting lines to all hunting points is fully equipped, and every facility which will benefit the huntsman or the traveler will be inaugrated.

Information regarding trains, etc, may be obtained at the station ticket offices, or at the Boston City Ticket Office, 322 Washington St.

Your Boy Wont Live a Month.

So Mr. Gilman Brown, of 34 Mill street, South Gardner, Mass., was told by the doctors. His son had Lung trouble, following Typhoid Malaria, and he spent three hundred and seventy-five dollars with doctors, who finally gave him up, saying: "Your boy won't live a month." He tried Dr. King's New Discovery and a few bottles restored him to health and enabled him to go to work a perfectly well man. He says he owes his present good health to the use of Dr. King's New Discovery, and knows it to be the best in the world for Lung trouble. Trial bottles Free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Jackets and Wraps.

Would you like to see more than a hundred jackets, every one different, ranging from $4.95 to $75 apiece? You can have the pleasure, any time you come. About every possibility of jacket comfort and style is here.

Capes from $5.75 to $250 apiece, and nowhere that you can go in this vicinity are they likely to show anything like the variety we have.

Main floor of Pynchon street building.

Shoes.

As good wearing shoes at $2.50, for women, as we know of—box calf with turned invisible cork soles—regular $3.50 shoes. We shall sell 'em at $2.50 as long as we can buy 'em of the makers low enough to let 'em go at that. We know of nobody else that sells such shoes at $3.50 a pair.

Box calf shoes for misses at $1.50 a pair—regular $2.00 shoes. Nobody else sells 'em for less than $2.00.

Main floor of Pynchon street building.

Boys' Clothing.

We should have the good will of every boy in town if we had the say of how they should be dressed, and yet, we should not be hard on the pocket book that the pay would come out of. Good enough school suits at $1.98 apiece; better ones at $2.50 and $3.50; but good enough a great many people will think at $1.98.

At $5—stylish, dressy go-to-meeting suits for boys; the $3.50 sort are good enough and dressy enough for go-to-meeting wear; the suits at $5 are high toned suits.

Nobody else tries so hard to get the pretty sorts of novelty clothing for little fellows that a great many people want. We have sorts that can be found nowhere else around here. We are simply going to keep the trade at home that used to go to New York and Boston for such, where it belongs.

A. A. Babbitt's Store Robbed Again.

The Granite One-Price Clothing Store of A. A. Babbitt was burglarized Wednesday night, for the fourth time. Goods to the value of $100 were taken. Entrance was gained by breaking a large pane of glass in the front door, after attempting to force open the transom over the door, also to whittle away the sash and remove the glass from the south show window. No tools were left, and there is no clew upon which to work, except that four suspicious looking individuals were seen to peer into the windows during the evening before. A reward of $100 is offered by the selectmen for evidence which will convict the guilty person or persons. The third time the store was broken into was Sept. 21st. Twice entrance has been made by way of the front door, and twice by way of the back door. Mr. Babbitt has the sympathy of the townspeople in his loss. The feeling is general that the element which has invaded Monson during the past few months needs looking after very sharply.

Miss Effie Aldrich has returned from Boston.

George E. Knowlton of Worcester has been in town this week.

Will Sheriff, who has been clerking for T. H. Todd, has resigned.

Dr. Calvin Patten of Stafford is visiting Mrs. Davis on Main street.

Misses Esther K. Holmes and Mabelle L. Anderson have Columbia wheels.

Mrs. Henry E. Bugbee has recently painted a fruit piece which is much admired.

Mrs. Stearns of Springfield has been the guest of Mrs. Elbridge B. Potter this week.

Mrs. Stella Arnold of Providence has been the guest of Miss Myrtis Perrin for several days.

Rev. Harry Blackford will exchange Sunday with Rev. Theodore A. Fischer of Warren.

Work on the telephone system has been completed, all the lines having been overhauled.

It is said that the sale of revolvers in Monson for the past week has been remarkably good.

Wales Needham and son of Groton, Ct., have been spending several days with Monson friends.

Mrs. Wilbur J. McE wain of Kokomo, Ind., is a guest of the Misses Orcutt on Green street.

The Ladies' Circle will serve their annual harvest supper at the Universalist church next Tuesday evening.

The Junior Epworth League have an oyster supper and entertainment at the Methodist church this evening.

Mrs. Henry Wood picked a number of ripe strawberries yesterday in her garden, varying from ½ inch in diameter to 1¼ inch.

The book entitled "The Orcutt Sisters; or A Term at the Academy," is now in the library and is being read with much pleasure.

Invitations are out for the wedding of Miss Fannie Blanchard of Palmer and Milton M. Brown, to take place at Palmer next Tuesday.

Messrs. Bertrand, Thompson and Hobbs have withdrawn from the Monson band. Jerry Lyon has become a member of the band.

Frank Beckwith was scalded Monday by the gauge blowing out on the W. N. Flynt Granite Co's. steam roller which he was running at Wilbraham.

The registrars of voters will be in session next Tuesday from 7.30 to 9 p. m., and on Saturday, the 24th, from 12 m. to 10 p. m., at which time registration will close.

A meeting of Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps will be held next Wednesday evening. Mrs. George Henry of L. L. Merrick Corps of Palmer will probably inspect the corps.

Monson was well represented at the Stafford fair, and it was vastly amusing to see with what eagerness some of the church members watched the stage performances and the horse-racing, or crept into the "Midway."

A social will be given in Memorial Hall on Thursday evening, the 22d. Dancing will be preceded by a concert, beginning at 8 o'clock The committee of arrangements is Harry Miller, Henry F. Miller and Edward J. Hughes.

The Current Events Club met for reorganization at the home of Mrs. F. W. Ellis last Friday afternoon. Mrs. Ellis was chosen president, and Miss Clara A. Wood secretary. A meeting was held this afternoon with Mrs. S. Fred Cushman.

H. S. Hobson of Palmer gave an interesting talk on the naval engagement between the Kearsage and Alabama, before the Monson Historical Society Wednesday evening at its annual meeting. The meeting was adjourned to next Wednesday evening, when officers will be elected.

Rev. G. Henry Flint, associate pastor of the Old South church, Boston, will exchange pulpits with Rev. F. S. Hatch, and will address the Christian Endeavor meeting at 7 p. m. This meeting celebrates the 8th anniversary of the organization of the society. Mr. Flint was for two years a teacher in Monson Academy and was very popular.

The following pupils of Green street primary were neither absent nor tardy during the first month: Lilla Bradway, Teresa Connell, Ella Crowley, Mabel Fuller, Beatrice Gath, Emily Lewis, Lizzie Lewis, Margaret Moriarty, Florence Sault, Joseph Gould, Robert Fuller, Willie Hanson, Raymond Holloway, George Mitchell, Clifford Millar, Frank Rees, Frank O'Brien, John Ward.

The Democratic representative caucus at Memorial Hall last Friday evening chose Omer E. Bradway chairman and Nelson A. Bugbee clerk. The delegates chosen are Herbert M. Smith, Omer E. Bradway, John McGuire and William Sutcliffe. The town committee for 1897 is Omer E. Bradway, Herbert Smith, Joseph F. Coyle, Nicholas L. Hanley, Eugene S. Howlett, David D. Maney, Nelson A. Bugbee.

There have been some changes in the original plans of the Methodist church repairs. The metal ceiling will be furnished and put in place by the Penn Metal Ceiling and Roofing company, and work will begin at once; the Carter company of Springfield will wire the church for electricity and furnish fixtures; Meekins, Packard & Wheat of Springfield will furnish the carpets; Spencer, Moekler & Bell of Boston have the contract for the windows, and the Manitowae Seating company of Wisconsin, the one for the pews. Arthur E. Wood of Springfield will do the wall decorating and carpentering, putting in the stairs, pulpit, choir gallery, altar and window casings. The choir gallery is to be placed behind the pulpit, and the altar will be enlarged. Thirty double pews will be put in, making three aisles. It is expected that the work will be completed about Dec. 1st.

LUDLOW.

Mr. Conklin of Springfield occupied the pulpit at the Union church Sunday owing to the illness of Rev. A. J. Quick.

An interesting report of the Washington Christian Endeavor convention was given by Miss Annie Towne at the church Sunday evening to an appreciative audience.

Rev. N. L. Porter attended the Sunday school convention at Northampton Wednesday.

The ladies of the M. E. church served a harvest supper in St. Jean's Hall Tuesday evening.

Someone cut the harness on J. A. Johnson's horse while he was attending choir rehearsal last Sunday evening.

Annual Inspection of the Firemen.

The annual inspection of the Warren fire department was held in this village last Saturday afternoon, the two steamers, hook and ladder and hose companies, the Puritan hose company of the Warren Cotton Company, and the Warren and West Warren bands being in line. A fine showing was made. The West Warren hook and ladder company made the best time in running 100 yards and getting a man on the roof Considerable feeling was brought out by the hose contest. The West Warren company used a nozzle not owned by the town, but refused to allow the West Warren company to use the same, though after a while they were given the nozzle and made the run though they did not try to make connections. In the steamer test the Warren company had 15 pounds of steam first, but the West Warren company started water with less than that, causing another controversy. The West Warren company won by 25 feet in the water throwing contest.

BELCHERTOWN.

The New York Stars gave an entertainment in the town hall Monday evening.

Dwight P. Clapp will speak on "The money question" at the town hall this evening at 7 30 o'clock.

3.30—Time race.
3.45—Athletic sports.

In the evening there will be a dance at the Park View House, for which the Overman Wheel Company Orchestra will furnish music. The dance will be under the auspices of the Grand Army post.

WILBRAHAM.

The selectmen have made an addition to the old cemetery by buying two acres of James Merrick on the north side.

Irving Wetherbee has left his position as clerk in Gurney's store, and has taken a position as mail agent on the Boston and Maine road.

Elias Keyes was struck by a runaway Friday afternoon while riding in a business wagon, and a bone on the top of his shoulder was broken.

The game of football Monday afternoon between the Academy team and the French-American College team of Springfield resulted in a score of 4 to 4. Neither team kicked a goal.

Otis K. Ladd, a former resident of Wilbraham, now of North Adams, has been spending a few days with friends in town. Although in his 80th year and suffering the infirmities of age, Mr. Ladd's intellect is undimmed, and his accounts of his experiences in life, especially those in the army, are well worth listening to. He has a son who is postmaster in Somerville, S. C., with whom he has spent several winters.

At the Academy the young women's literary societies have elected these officers: Athean—President, Miss Roberta Corscaden; vice president, Miss Eva Long; secretary, Miss Edith Adams; treasurer, Miss Bertha Campbell; critic, Miss Maude Hubbard; Pieria—President, Miss Eva Crosby; vice president, Miss L. Cowles; secretary, Miss Annie Adams; treasurer, Miss Emma Redlin; critic, Miss Ellswoth. The new officers of the Christian Endeavor society are: President, Fred P. Webber; vice president, Miss Roberta Corscaden; secretary, Miss Marion Bartlett; treasurer, William Stephenson.

WARREN.

Auction sale of horses, cattle, crops, farming tools, household furniture, etc., Oct. 15th, 10 a. m., on premises of the late Joseph Brown in Brimfield.

Mr. Tower has been seriously ill.

Mrs. Harvey Ellis gave a very pleasant "ladies' whist" Friday afternoon of last week.

Mrs. A. S. Whitney was in town this week, the guest of Mrs. M. S. Hitchcock.

Mrs. Lincoln of Boston has been the guest of Danforth Keyes on Bacon street this week.

Rev. B. M. Frink of West Brookfield supplies the Congregational pulpit for this month.

The whist club held its first meeting with Mr. and Mrs. Toney on Main street Monday evening.

Mrs. Emma Guilbert and Miss Louise are stopping with Mrs. Lewis Holbrook during the fall months.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Pearce have returned from their wedding tour, and reside at Lewis Woodworth's on Main street.

R. C. Strickland has been on a business trip to Philadelphia. Mrs. Strickland has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer at Baldwinsville.

The foundation for the Catholic church is progressing, and it is planned to lay the corner stone Sunday, Nov. 1. Bishop Beaver of Springfield is expected to be present.

The ladies of the Universalist church gave a reception to their pastor, Rev. T. A. Fischer, Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. Charles Comins on Cresent street. A large number were present, and a very delightful evening was the result.

A pleasant social event was the anniversary reception given to Dea. Charles Walker and wife at their home on Cresent street Saturday afternoon and evening. The reception was arranged by the Congregational Sunday school to celebrate the 30th wedding anniversary of Dea. and Mrs. Walker A very social time was enjoyed by the many friends who gathered to extend their good wishes. The attendance of many of the children from the primary department was a pleasing feature of the occasion. A handsome picture and other gifts were left as souvenirs of the day. The hostess was attired in her wedding gown.

WALES.

Auction sale of horses, cattle, crops, farming tools, household furniture, etc., Oct. 15th, 10 a. m., on premises of the late Joseph Brown in Brimfield.

E. C. Sherman returned this week from Montville.

Mrs. J. H. Loudon's sister from Montville is making her a visit.

The Berkeley Mill shut down Thursday to repair the water wheel and give the help a chance to attend the Stafford Springs fair.

School Superintendent Robinson was in town Monday, inspecting the schools and making changes in attendance. Several were taken from the South Center school and put into the Center Grammar department.

Several gentlemen intend to enter their horses in the gentleman's driving class at Stafford Springs, among them H. H. Hall, C. Allder, W. Royce, Myron Royce, Dorno E Parker, Manser Lanphear, Fayette Needham and Bert Sizer.

Peter Gadoury and wife returned Monday from Stafford Springs, where they have been for a week caring for Mrs. Gadoury's sister, Lydia Bosquet, who has been sick for several weeks. She was buried Sunday. Two months ago she was a handsome girl of 18, strong and healthy; dropsy was the cause of her death. She leaves in Wales two sisters, Mrs. George Steele and Mrs. Gadoury, who have the sympathy of the entire community in their great bereavement

Republican Flag Raising.

The Berkeley Mills Republican Club held a flag-raising and rally Saturday evening. At 7 o'clock a McKinley and Hobart flag was raised in front of the Berkeley mills, and after this followed a torchlight parade. At 8 o'clock the rally was held in the Baptist church, a large and enthusiastic audience being present. Cols. Young and Warriner of Springfield were the principal speakers, and both made stirring addresses which were interrupted many times by applause. Col. Warriner first outlined in brief the work and characteristics of the Republican state and national conventions, and then drew a word picture of the personality of the candidates and their platform. He also contrasted the Chicago convention with the St. Louis gathering. He referred to George Fred Williams's style of making speeches as nothing but a phrase of demagogism to deceive the unthinking public. He then referred to the tariff question, citing facts and figures showing that the true free trade element in Old Democracy favors cheap labor. On the currency question he quoted figures and prices paid for labor on both sides of the Rio Grande, and said, "They contend that silver should be coined the same as gold. We coin gold on its bullion value and they demand that silver should be coined without limit, but on a fictious value, a fifty-three cent value."

WARE.

The Methodist ladies made some over $25 on their harvest supper.

The Men's Sunday Evening League is to be congratulated on the fine musical talent it is securing for the evening services at the East Congregational church. Miss Louise E. Shumway, contralto, of Worcester, is decidedly a favorite in Ware, having been engaged as soloist for the third time. She has a wonderfully sweet and powerful voice, which she always has under perfect control. Her enunciation and phrasing are excellent. It is to be hoped the league will maintain this high standard during the weeks and months to come.

The annual inspection of the fire department took place last Saturday afternoon, the programme being much the same as in former years. The parade of the various companies in town, including the Ware Cornet Band and Fitzgerald's drum corps, numbered about 150 men. The mounted marshals were F. P. Clark, P. O. L'Heureux and J. H. Schoonmaker. The contests on Main street attracted a crowd. The No. 2 hose company won the honors in the hose contest. A good supper was served to the firemen and invited guests at the new Storrs house. The social dance in the evening at Firemen's Hall was well attended, and will net a fair sum to Hose No. 1, under whose auspices it was held.

CARD.—We wish to express our grateful acknowledgements to the many friends of our loved one for their continued kindness through the long and weary months of suffering, and for their sympathy evinced in many ways in our great affliction.

W. H. LAIRD,
C. N. COLEMAN AND FAMILY.

The Darlington, Wis., Journal says editorially of a popular patent medicine, "We know from experience that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy is all that is claimed for it, as on two occasions it stopped excruciating pains and possibly saved us from an untimely grave. We would not rest easy over night without it in the house." This remedy undoubtedly saves more pain and suffering than any other medicine in the world. Every family should keep it in the house, for it is sure to be needed sooner or later. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

If your children are subject to croup watch for the first symptoms of the disease—hoarseness. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse it will prevent the attack. Even after the croupy cough has appeared the attack can be prevented by giving this remedy. It is also invaluable for colds and whooping cough. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

If You Have a Sick Child This is Surely a Message of Hope.

This is the best of news for parents of weakly or sick children. It is a fact that our people have heretofore not had the same opportunity for having their children who suffer from chronic or lingering complaints treated and cured by eminent specialists in children's diseases as do the residents of the great cities where such skilled physicians reside. In other words, our people have been debarred from seeking a cure for their children by the great physicians, owing to the cost of travel to the large city and the high fees charged by such physicians.

Here, therefore, is a chance for the cure of the children of our community which should not be lost. Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who is beyond doubt the most successful specialist in curing the diseases of children, offers to give free consultation by mail in all cases of children's complaints. Parents have the privilege of consulting Dr. Greene by letter, describing their children's diseases, and he will, after carefully considering the symptoms, write a letter fully explaining the trouble, telling everything about their complaint so plainly that you will understand exactly what ails your children. He will also give his advice, founded upon his vast experience and wonderful success in treating such cases, as to just what to do to effect a cure. All this will cost you nothing, and you can thus have consultation with the best known physician and acknowledged most successful specialist in the world without leaving home and at no expense whatever. The Doctor is the discover of that greatest of medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedo, and has discovered many other most valuable remedies. Write to him now about your child, for this is a chance of cure which you may never have again.

It's a Go.

Since October 1st, when the open season began, the influx of sportsmen to the "Wilds of Maine" has been gradually increasing.

These annual shooting expeditions are to the hunter a source of great pleasure, and for a long time previous to his departure for the "Happy Hunting Ground" his time is occupied in elaborate preparation for the trip, which to him has no equal.

A day's time will carry one into the wildest of forests when moose, deer and other game reign supreme, and with the assistance of a guide and a good gun it will be no ones fault but your own if you don't have a good time.

In the remotest sections of the hunting region are well equipped camps belonging either to the hunting clubs or private individuals which can be hired for short periods, and where the "Brown October Days" can be passed in bliss and happiness.

The through service of the Boston and Maine Railroad and its connecting lines to all hunting points is fully equipped, and every facility which will benefit the huntsman or the traveler will be inaugrated.

Information regarding trains, etc, may be obtained at the station ticket offices, or at the Boston City Ticket Office, 322 Washington St.

Your Boy Wont Live a Month.

So Mr. Gilman Brown, of 34 Mill street, South Gardner, Mass., was told by the doctors. His son had Lung trouble, following Typhoid Malaria, and he spent three hundred and seventy-five dollars with doctors, who finally gave him up, saying: "Your boy won't live a month." He tried Dr. King's New Discovery and a few bottles restored him to health and enabled him to go to work a perfectly well man. He says he owes his present good health to the use of Dr. King's New Discovery, and knows it to be the best in the world for Lung trouble. Trial bottles Free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Jackets and Wraps.

Would you like to see more than a hundred jackets, every one different, ranging from $4.95 to $75 apiece? You can have the pleasure, any time you come. About every possibility of jacket comfort and style is here.

Capes from $5.75 to $250 apiece, and nowhere that you can go in this vicinity are they likely to show anything like the variety we have.

Main floor of Pynchon street building.

Shoes.

As good wearing shoes at $2.50, for women, as we know of—box calf with turned invisible cork soles—regular $3.50 shoes. We shall sell 'em at $2.50 as long as we can buy 'em of the makers low enough to let 'em go at that. We know of nobody else that sells such shoes at $3.50 a pair.

Box calf shoes for misses at $1.50 a pair—regular $2.00 shoes. Nobody else sells 'em for less than $2.00.

Main floor of Pynchon street building.

Boys' Clothing.

We should have the good will of every boy in town if we had the say of how they should be dressed, and yet, we should not be hard on the pocket book that the pay would come out of. Good enough school suits at $1.98 apiece; better ones at $2.50 and $3.50; but good enough a great many people will think at $1.98.

At $5—stylish, dressy go-to-meeting suits for boys; the $3.50 sort are good enough and dressy enough for go-to-meeting wear; the suits at $5 are high toned suits.

Nobody else tries so hard to get the pretty sorts of novelty clothing for little fellows that a great many people want. We have sorts that can be found nowhere else around here. We are simply going to keep the trade at home that used to go to New York and Boston for such, where it belongs.

The Old Way With the New Woman.

She is beautiful, stately and tall,
With reposeful and elegant airs;
You may not believe it, but yet, all same,
She's the girl that I kissed on the stairs.

She's college-bred, witty and wise,
And a red-sealed diploma she bears;
But that didn't count when we sat, at the dance,
In the twilight that shrouded the stairs.

She is studying Latin and law;
She is tracking old crimes to their lairs,—
Which is all very well while she doesn't forget
Who kissed her, last night, on the stairs.

She's a woman that's newer than new;
She everything ventures and dares;
She'd preside at a club in a bicycle suit,
And she'd sit out a dance on the stairs!

Do you think I'm afraid? Not a whit!
I shan't kick at the costume she wears—
I have coaxed her to try orange blossoms and white—
And she promised—last night on the stairs!

LOCATED.

Where is the summer girl to-day,
Who in the hammock swayed?
Where is the spinster who, they say,
In charms begins to fade?
Where is the matron who reposed
In the great easy chair?
Where is the college girl who dozed
O'er books of learning rare?

The empty hammock idly swings;
The spinster's young once more;
The easy chair with unpressed springs
Stands lonely on the floor;
The college girl, far from sedate,
Joins in the season's zeal,
And each from early morn till late
Is out upon a wheel.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its, stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

PROGRESSIVE LOVEMAKING.

The two girls were walking along Woodward avenue talking about their best young men, of course. At least, one of them was. "Charley was up to see me last night," she said, with a twitter.

"That's twice in a week, isn't it?" inquired the other.

"Yes;" and she blushed and giggled.

"I suppose he'll come three times in the next week."

LIKELY TO GET IT.—That he resided in the country was proclaimed by the size of his grip-sack and by the utter absence of entente cordiale between the bottoms of his trousers and his shoe tops. He had taken his stand in the middle of the cable car tracks, by the side of the treasury, and after waiting a few minutes, called: "Hi! there!" to a gamin who was crossing the street. "What's chasin' yer?" asked the boy, who was a painful reminder of the decadence of juvenile courtesy. "Ain't nothin' chasin' me. What I want ter know is how ter get a Fourteenth street car." "That's easy. You jes' stand right still an' you'll git it. You may git it in the neck—but you'll git it."—Washington Post.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND.—"Now you know the details of the affair," said the doctor to the lawyer a few days later, "what would you advise me to do about it?" "Now that I have told you the symptoms, said the lawyer to the doctor a few days later, what would you advise me to do?" "Go back to your practice," replied the physician promptly. "You have nothing seriously wrong with you. Ten dollars, please." Thus it happens that two men are calling each other robbers.—Chicago Post.

SHE DREW A HEART.—He was no palmist, yet at her request he took her hand and looked it over. "Well," he said. "You would best stay in. Draw one card." "Do you think I dare?" she asked. He again examined the cards. There were four hearts and a small spade. Then he looked at her attentively. "Yes," he said. "Throw out the spade and draw for a flush. If you can't draw a heart there's no heart there." The announcement of their engagement will be found in the society columns. There is no need of repeating it here.—Chicago Tribune.

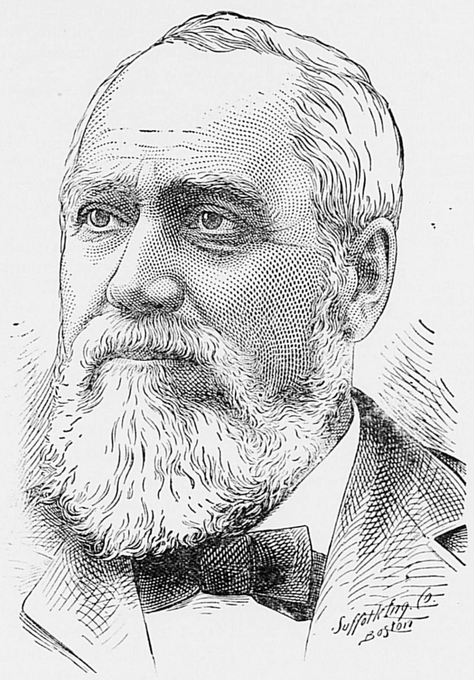
GRANDEST OF TESTIMONIALS

Prove Dr. Greene's Nervura the Best Medicine in the World.

Vermont's Eminent Judge White Advises People to Use Dr. Greene's Nervura It Will Cure Them.



JUDGE EDWIN C. WHITE.

The greatest and best known of our people use, praise and recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Women in every walk of life enthusiastically proclaim the wonderful powers of this truly grand medicine to cure, to make the sick well, to give back health and strength to weak, tired, nervous and debilitated people.

Hon. Henry Robinson, Mayor of Concord, N. H., says, "I have found health, strength, buoyancy and courage by the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura."

Senator Frank Plumley of Northfield, Vt., says, "I used Dr. Greene's Nervura for exhaustion with entire success."

State Attorney of Vermont, W. H. Taylor, of Hardwick, Vt., says, "My wife profited by the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura for neuralgia, and extreme nervous condition and sleeplessness. I have no hesitation in recommending its use."

Senator Geo. W. Randall of Waterbury, Vt., says, "Dr. Greene's Nervura cured me. It is a good thing, yes, a grand thing, for I have found it so in my case."

Hon. Geo. W. Wing, Mayor of Montpelier, Vt., says, "I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura in my family with marked and decided benefit."

Senator Victor I. Spear, of Braintree, Vt., says, "My wife was troubled with nervous debility bordering on nervous prostration and had eczema. Dr. Greene's Nervura produced very satisfactory results."

Senator George A. Morse, of Morrisville, Vt., says, "I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura in my family. It has been of benefit to us in sleeplessness arising from nervousness. I recommend it to anybody."

And now comes the strong testimonial of Judge Edwin C. White, of Hyde Park, Vt., who is one of Vermont's most eminent and widely-known statesmen and Judge of the Probate Court. Judge White says, "I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy in my family and am pleased to say, with good results. My wife had been troubled with indigestion, which produced nervousness which might have been serious and at times troubled her greatly. We had tried many things for her relief, but without success.

"I saw the wonderful cures claimed for Dr. Greene's Nervura and resolved to give it a trial, and it gives me pleasure to say, I am glad I did. My wife now sleeps well and is greatly benefited from indigestion, having had only one slight return (where they had been daily) since taking the Nervura. I give permission to print this unqualified testimonial."

Can anyone hesitate to use this great cure, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, when so many eminent statesmen, public officials and prominent men known all over our country advise you to use it because it cured them or their families? You know that the words of these great men are given only in the cause of truth and because they know Dr. Greene's Nervura cures and they desire to see the sick made well.

Dr. Greene's Nervura is a physician's prescription, the discovery of the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., hence it is of necessity perfectly adapted to cure, and health and strength always follow its use. Dr. Greene can be consulted without charge in regard to any case, personally or by letter.

GRAND OPENING OF THE FALL AND WINTER SEASONS,

Monday, August 31st, 1896,—OF

OLD DR. SWEET'S SANITARIUM and Medical Institute,

18 VERNON STREET, - - SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Invalids will now be received and treated as inmates at the institution, or as home patients at reasonable rates. Old Dr. Sweet, the World-Famous Natural Healer, Bone Surgeon and Magnetic Physician, whose visits to Springfield the past twenty years and whose astonishing cures in Western Massachusetts yet remain the wonder of the age, has established the above institution in Springfield for the benefit of a multitude of patients residing in this section.

So long have the Sweet Family been identified with the cure of lameness that it is conjectured by many persons that they treat no other ailments, whereas their most startling successes for many years have been the cure of Obscure Chronic Diseases of almost every kind. In order to provide for the foregoing, the latest and most efficient discoveries may be found at Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium, in fact those only employed in the private hospitals of metropolitan cities.

These, united with those wonderful systems of medicine which from father to son have descended from generation to generation of the Sweet family of Rhode Island for more than two centuries; thus equipped is it not presumable that their success in the cure of obstinate types of disease will be more certain than attends the ordinary methods of office or drug medication.

Whether rich or poor, black or white, the stricken invalid needs the best medical service obtainable. The workingman whose capital is in his limbs, his nerves and muscles, how necessary if impaired that it should be strengthened both surely and with the least delay.

Have you not speculated with DRUG TREATMENT long enough? Why not try the private infirmary system, combining the best of all, for a while? Your life hangs upon your decision. Old Dr. Sweet has called to his aid in providing for his multitude of patients,—a proof of his unparalleled success in Springfield, DR. EDWARD RAY, a gentlemen of rare culture and medical attainments, a graduate of Harvard University, with extensive clinical and hospital experience, who has been given charge of the Surgical Department of Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium for the coming season.

This institution is now open to receive applicants for treatment under the famous Sweet Method, providing them with rooms and board at very low rates, with PERSONAL TREATMENT DAILY, or those who desire to visit the Institution occasionally, yet live at home.

Persons of VERY limited means are thus enabled to receive the most scientific medical service provided by medical science to-day. The inhabitants of Western Massachusetts may be assured that Dr. Sweet will not rest content until he has provided for the people the MOST EFFICIENT systems of medical treatment extant. Whatever money or ingenuity can procure to make his institution THE FIRST in New England will be cheerfully provided. Success is the SINE QUENON. As his professional duties multiply—as they surely must—experts in the various branches of the "healing art" will be added to his staff. The best is none too good.

Pleased with the "City of Homes" as a permanent place of residence, Dr. Sweet has removed his family hither and indulges the hope that this fact will be appreciated by those wishing to avoid the uncertainty that attends the service offered by itinerant practitioners. Male and Female operators, assistants, nurses, etc., provided. Terms reasonable. Consultation, examination and advice free to the afflicted.

ACCIDENT DEPARTMENT. Athletes, Bicycle Riders and others suffering from sudden accident please take notice. Bring them here. Prompt service.

Back Again.

Back again from the ocean's shore,
Back from the mountains, lakes and rivers,
Back again to the city's roar,
With stronger lungs and healthier livers.

Back again, with face tanned and brown,
Parents, children, maids and nurses,
Back to the social life in town,
With brighter eyes and lighter purses.

Back to the counting room and school,
Back to the bosses who employ us,
Back, for September nights are cool,
And the pesky flies no more annoy us,

Back again with the same old lies
'Bout the fish we caught—their weight and measure;
Back to deplore with many sighs
The money spent on our summer's pleasure.

THE MOQUI INDIANS' DANCE.

At a signal from the leader, Kopeli, they entered the plaza in single file, on a rapid walk, and after circling the plaza, ranged themselves in a slightly curved line before the tent of cottonwood boughs in which the snakes were placed, and on each side of which the 15 Antelope priests stood in line singing a wild and gutteral chant.

A wilder hum arose, a portentous, guttural, snarling sound, which passed soon to a strong, manly, marching chant, full of sudden, deep-falling, stern cadences. Then Kopeli, the snake-chief, and the one second to him joined arms and danced slowly down before the kisi. They stopped, and when they rose Kopeli held in his mouth a snake. His companion placed his left arm over the snake-chief's shoulders, and together they turned, circling to the left. The snake hung quietly from the snake-priest's mouth. It was held at about nine inches from the head. Behind him walked the third man, the snake-gatherer. They passed with a quick, strong step, one might almost say with a lope, in time to the singing.

Immediately behind came another group, the snake-carrier holding an entire snake in his mouth, the head protruding about an inch. These two were followed by a third man, the snake-gatherer; and soon the entire line of 33 snake-priests had broken into 11 groups and were circling the plaza, one man in each group carrying from one to three snakes in his mouth. The singing continued, stern and swift like a strong stream, and although at times the dancers lost step to the music, in general they may be said to have retained throughout all the rush of movement a tolerable accuracy of rythm. A group of women stood near and threw sacred meal upon the men as they passed. They kept far from contact, I observed. The excitement of the spectators increased. I pushed close to the circle of dancing priests to study their faces.

One man passed with an enormous bull snake in his mouth. Its tail hung down to his knee. Each snake-carrier danced with his eyes closed and his chin thrust forward. The reasons for this were obvious. The little snakes were the most vicious, and struck repeatedly at the eyes and cheeks of the priests. One man went by with two large rattlesnakes and two larger bull snakes between his lips; and a third priest, to silence all question of his superiority, crowded into his mouth four snakes! The gatherer who followed him held in the fingers of his left hand six or eight snakes, strung like pieces of rope. In fact, they all handled the snakes precisely as if they were skeins of yarn, with the single exception of the moment they were snatched from the ground.

Once or twice there was a brief struggle between the snake-gatherer and the fallen snake. In every case which I observed the snake-gatherer brushed the snake with the feathers of his snake-whip until he uncoiled and straightened out to run. After the gatherer picked him up he was as helpless as if dead.

As the dance went on, the excitement grew. The clink of metal fringes and the patter of rattles filled the ear. The snakes dashed into the crowd, shouts and screams and laughter rose, but the wary snake-gatherer in every case caught the snake before it passed out of reach. In one or two instances when a rattlesnake ran toward the woman with their basket plaques of meal, they broke into wild screams and ran. Evidently they feared the rattlesnakes quite as much as any of the white women. At last, so deep was my interest to see, I lost all sense of hearing. They all moved like figures in a dream.

During all this time, whatever the outcries among the spectators, whatever the screams or laughter among the woman with the meal, the snake-priests, intent and grave, showed no trace whatever of excitement. It is absurd to speak of hypnotism or frenzy of any kind. They were not in the slightest degree moved either to fear or laughter, or even to the point of being hastened or retarded by the presence of the white man. They had a religious duty to perform, and they were carring it forward, intent, masterful, solemn and perfectly silent. Incredible, thrilling, savage, and dangerous as it appeared to us, to them it was a world-old religious ceremonial.—Harper's Weekly.

SITTING DOWN TO WALK.

The Western Indians, although not fond of work, do not approve of indolent white men. The "heap good white man," in their estimation, is the white man who works hard, and to sit by and watch him as he toils seems to afford them never-failing pleasure.

Some young "warriors" of the Blackfoot tribe sat in the shade one day, watching a group of laborers who were constructing a grade for a branch railroad in Montana. They were commenting upon the workmen and their work, when a bicyclist, the first that they had ever seen, came riding along the newly completed grade. He had got off the train at the last station and was going to the fort a little further on.

The Indians watched the wheelman without a word until he passed behind a knoll which hid him from view; then they expressed their sentiments concerning him.

"No good white man," one remarked.

"No," answered another, with great scorn, "heap lazy white man—sits down to walk!" —Youth's Companion.

She read the sign, "Do not speak to the motorman," and she said: "I wonder why not." Then in a winsome voice she inquired of that functionary, "Why musn't one talk to the motorman?" He told her it was against the rules. "But why is it against the rules?" "Because it is." "Then you don't like to be talked to?" "Oh, yes; but thunder! I came within an ace of running down that old gent." "But I should think it would be nice to have somebody to speak to, instead of talking to nobody all day long." "Lady, you are going to stop talking, or there is going to be a smash-up on this line, and a big one—!" "The hateful thing! And I did so want to be sociable like. He's married, I'll bet; he's just like Henry when he's got the paper under his nose."—Boston Transcript.

THERE IS NO SWEARING ON BOARD.—There is a vessel sailing under the Turkish flag which is manned entirely by monks. It is called the Holy Prophet Ilja (Elijah,) and is of about 300 tons burden. The captain is a Jeremonach, a monk ranking higher than friar, and all sailors are expert seaman, as well as monks, or brothers. The pilot, Father Iraklij (Heraclius,) has sailed over all the oceans, having circumnavigated the globe. The entire crew speak both Russian and Greek, and service on the ship alternates with services in the little church in the forecastle. One of the most curious sights connected with the ship is that of the monks in their religious costume climbing up the ratlines and out on the yardarm, reefing sails, and doing other work aloft.—New York Tribune.

A MARTYR TO SMALL TALK.—If we may be permitted to describe our attitude toward the tiresome figures and press dispatches which fill the newspapers and which will soon spill over into the monthly magazines, we shall do so by a story which that gifted after-dinner speaker and raconteur, Judge Henry Howland, tells with such a deep sense of humor. It is the story of the embarrassed but generous-hearted young man who felt called upon to relieve the sudden cessation of drawing-room conversation, which oftentimes overtakes even the most briliant social circles. With the blushes surmounting his cheeks he timidly turned to the daughter of the hostess, who was not present in the room, and inquired: "Ho'how is yo-your mo-mo-mother! 'N-not th-that I gi-give a damn, bu-but it ma-makes ta-talk."—New Haven Register.

NO WONDER.—"Well," said the elderly boarder, as he unfolded his newspaper, "I wonder what is the sensation of the day?" "As I have no data at hand," Asbury Peppers hastened to say, "I am unable to state, but I can confidently assert that the sensation of the weak is that tired feeling." The rest of the boarders experienced it.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

HE REGISTERED A KICK.—It was the missionary's last day on earth; and as he stood tied to the tree, with the cannibals dancing about him and making elaborate preparations for the coming feast, he prayed silently that he might prove so indigestible as to give the whole tribe dyspepsia. At length, when the stuffing was ready and the sauce prepared, the chief approached the missionary and asked him if he had anything to say. "Nothing." "Then hold your cuss," called the chief to his hungry subjects. "I'll punch him in the side with this knife, and you can catch the blood as it flows out." "Say!" called out the missionary. "That's rubbing it in. I don't mind being roasted alive, but I do object to being stuck for the drinks."—Budget.

SHE FELT MUCH CONTEMPT.—Senor Zebalos, formerly minister to the United States from Argentina, did not speak English very fluently. "I make often many meestake when I speak Americano," said he. "I make a bad blunder the last time I am received at the White House. A beautiful ladee tell me something which happen in your cival war. She says she see it. Now, I think to myself I will be polite and make the senora a great compliment. 'It is impossible that you see it, madam,' I say. 'You must have been born many, many years before the war.' All the time," continued Zebalos, "I mean after the war. But I make a mistake. I say 'before.' No, the ladee was not pleased. She felt much contempt."—Washington Pathfinder.

The Angel of Discontent.

When the world was formed and the morning stars
Upon their paths were set,
The loftiest-browed of the angels was made
The Angel of Discontent.

And he dwelt with the man in the caves of the hills,
Where the crested serpent stings
And the tiger tears and the she-wolf howls—
And he told of better things.

And he led man forth to the towered town,
And forth to the fields of corn;
And told of the ampler work ahead
For which his race was born.

And he whispers to men of those hills he sees
In the blush of the misty west;
And they look to the heights of his lifted eye—
And they hate the name of rest.

In the light of that eye does the slave behold
A hope that is high and brave;
And the madness of war comes into his blood—
For he knows himself a slave.

The serfs of wrong by the light of that eye
March with victorious songs;
For the strength of the right comes into their hearts
When they behold their wrongs.

'Tis by the light of that lifted eye
That Error's mists are rent;
A guide to the table-lands of Truth
Is the Angel of Discontent.

And still he looks with lifted eye,
And his glance is far away
On a light that shines on the glimmering hills
Of a diviner day.

—Sam Walter Foss, in the New England Magazine.

THE USHER AND THE BASS SINGER.

I am one of the ushers at Dr. Coverdale's church. There are three of us, but I have been there the longest and so I have the middle aisle, and the other two have to take the sides. I suppose I should be considered as rather a good usher; at least, I knew who sits in every pew in the church, and do not have to consult a list when a lady asks me if I will take her to Mr. Parker's pew. All I do is to smile and say, "Mr. F. G. Parker or Mr. F. P. Parker?" and then she says "Mr. F. G. Parker," for Mr. F. P. Parker is a retired old coal merchant and very cross, and no one ever wants to sit with him. I ought not to brag of my ushering, for I make mistakes all the time. It was only last Sunday that I filled old Mr. Fabyan's pew to the brim, and five minutes afterward the whole Fabyan family came in, and three visiting cousins with them.

Well, an usher has rather a strange time of it, and, if he accepts all his chances, he ought to be a good student of human nature. One good trick the visitors play on me is to say they would like a seat, down the aisle. Down I stalk with my head well up in the air to one of the front seats, and face about with polite dignity only to find that my visitors have stayed behind, and that I am bowing to the empty air. Then the little boys laugh, and even savage old Mr. F. P. Parker allows himself to grin. When I come back to my visitors they say they would "a little rather sit near the back." It is hard to tell by a visitor's looks where he wants to sit.

"Man judgeth by outward appearance; but the Lord knoweth the heart." I wish I did. Of course an old man or woman is generally deaf, and wants to sit up near. A young man does not want to be looked at and invariably wants a seat near the door. A young woman is the hardest to satisfy. She is divided between a desire to to see other people and to have them see her. And of all kinds of visitors she is the least afraid of an usher. She knows that he will do just what she wants, so she does not hesitate to ask for a better seat if he gives her one which she considers a poor one.

I make it a rule to give the best seats to the modest strangers who wait for their turn without putting themselves forward. But it is pretty hard to do this; for there are only a few seats available and the forth-putting young women do their best to get them. And though I am an old hand at the business, they very often get ahead of me. What I hate most of anything is to have the standing committee interfere with me. "You'd better put some one into Mr. Philbrick's pew," Mr. Atkinson will say. Then I have to do it, and Mrs. Philbrick, who always comes late, is irritated at finding her pew full. However, I do not mean to intimate that ushering is a disagreeable profession. It has its advantages. If it had not been for ushering at Dr. Coverdale's church I should never have met the soprano singer.

Our choir has something of a reputation. I think most of the strangers who come to our church come to hear the singing, though I should not like to have it got around to Dr. Coverdale that I said so. All the singers have pretty good voices, and I understand from one who knows, that they sing remarkably true. Then their voices are said to blend very well, though I always hear the soprano above the rest. I know very little about music, but I have heard it said the organist plays very finely and makes excellent selections. Even I can see that the singers are often carried away by what they are singing. It is really a very satisfactory choir. We don't have the singing behind us in the old-fashioned way. Our choir is in a kind of balcony up above the minister. It is very nice having them there, for you can see the singers without your looking round.

It was two years ago when the soprano singer first came to our church. She had never sung in a church before; but our organist is always on the lookout for unappreciated talent, and he brought her to the notice of the musical committee. As soon as they heard her sing, they engaged her. She is rather small, but she has a very big voice for her size. I am a pretty impartial person, and I think she sings something the way Patti used to sing when she was in her prime. I should not be so sure of it were it not for the fact that our bass singer thinks very highly of her singing, too; and he really knows a great deal about it and gives lessons in vocal culture.

Our soprano is a modest little person. She was pretty well frightened the first time she sang to us. I did not know her then. Her voice startled me; it seemed as if I had heard it before, perhaps in my dreams. When she had finished it was all I could do to keep from clapping; though I have never felt that way after Dr. Coverdale's sermons, even in his very best ones.

Our bass singer is really a good fellow, although he looks very stern. I never liked bass voices; and his sounds to me very much like the others I have heard, though every one says it is an especially fine one. He frowns when he sings; I don't know why. Men singers generally do frown, and women singers generally smile I wish they could bring themselves to be a little more natural.

Our bass singer has a tender heart, but when he sings he looks like a roaring lion. Where he comes out strong is in those passages in the oratorios where terrible things are dwelt upon. I like to hear him sing "He breaketh the bow and the spear in sunder, and burneth the chariot in the fire." To hear him and the soprano singing together is like hearing an angel and great devil, though, as I just said, the bass singer is really a good-hearted fellow.

Before the soprano came to sing at our church I often used to go home as soon as my ushering was over. Ushering is very tiring work and when I have finished I am not in condition for wrestling with a sermon. But the soprano singer's first song had such an effect on me that I waited that Sunday, and since then I have got out of the habit of going home early. When the choir is sitting down they are almost invisible; but the soprano, although a little woman, sits rather high; and from my seat in the back of the church that first Sunday she sang I could see the little blue feather sticking out of her hat.

A little blue feather is a good enough thing to look at, and I used to look at it a good deal, and wonder if I should ever know the little woman underneath it. As the weeks went by I looked at it more and more. When the soprano sang a solo it thrilled me more than all the rest, except perhaps one; and when the quartet sang I managed to detach the soprano's voice from the others, and to hear it all alone.

I think she must have known that I was watching her; in fact, I afterward heard that she did. But, of course, she never seemed to. Once she came into the church by the front way instead of by the choir door, and asked me to give her little sister a seat. Her speaking voice was very low, and very different from any one's else—a voice to be remembered; and her manner was shy, but dignified. I stammered out that I would take care of the little girl; and I did. I put her in the very best pew in the church, for I read in the Sunday Gossip that Mr. Fulton and his family were spending a month in the country.

When the little girl passed me as she went out of church I asked her how she liked the sermon. "Pretty well," she replied; "but I liked Amy's singing the best." "So did I," I said, and then blushed to see that the soprano was standing close by us. The soprano blushed, too. "Thank you for taking such good care of Polly," she said, and the two went out of church together. As I remember it, the sun went behind a cloud at just about that time; but perhaps that is my imagination.

Not long afterward Dr. Coverdale wrote me a note asking me to come to the next church sociable. Now I am not a party-going man, and the few invitations I receive I generally decline; but the doctor seemed to want me to come, and I was always glad to do what he asked me. So when I had brushed up my dress suit, which was pretty dingy—for I am only a teller in the Sixth National Bank—I put it on and went to the sociable. When I came into the church parlor I looked round and round for some one I wanted to talk to and who wanted me to talk to her, and I could not see anyone like that. So I just stood still a while and looked on It is always good fun looking on at sociables—the girls have such funny clothes and the men feel so out of place.

Kind old Dr. Coverdale caught sight of me at last. "Here you are, my boy," he said, taking me by the hand; "there's a young lady here that doesn't know us very well, and you must make her feel at home." To my amazement he led me up to the soprano singer, who was sitting alone on a settee. "Now you young people must amuse each other," he said; and with this he left us. For to Dr. Coverdale young people are young people, and their names are immaterial. The soprano singer did not seem much embarrassed. "Dear old Dr. Coverdale," she said, "I don't believe he knows who I am. My name is Amy Dalton; and yours is Mr. Oliver Fairfax, isn't it?"

"Yes," I said; and then I could not think of anything else to say, because I was just thinking how nice she was, and I could not say that.

"You know we're old friends, Mr. Fairfax," she said, "ever since the day you took care of Polly. She said you gave her a splendid seat."

"It was a good seat," I replied. "I feel as as if we were very good friends too, somehow or other. Do you know, the first time you sang it seemed as if I had heard your voice before?"

"I've heard other people say that about my voice," she said. "It's funny, isn't it? How many people there are in this room!" she went on. "I don't know anyone here except the bass singer, and I'm rather afraid of him. I don't think that I shall be afraid of you," she added confidentially.

After we had talked a little while, the thought struck me that it would be nice to walk home with her It was quite an effort to bring myself to the point of asking her. I never could quite make out whether I was timid or brave, anyway. I am almost always afraid to do things, but I do them sometimes.

"Can I walk home with you?" I said at last; and to my surprise and joy her face lighted up and she consented. A few minutes afterward the bass singer came up and asked her the same question. When she said that Mr. Fairfax had promised to walk home with her, he glanced at me with a grieved look, bowed to her, and then withdrew.

"I'm glad I'm going with you," she said; "but oh, Mr. Fairfax, I'm sorry for him. He thinks every one hates him, and he's always coming up and asking me to do things after I've promised to do them with someone else. He thinks he has bad luck, but I think it's because he's a little slow. I like him very much though," she added kindly.

On the way home she took my arm, and I was glad she did, for we seemed to get along very comfortably that way. I felt very big and strong that evening, and almost wished some rough fellow would come up and say something insulting so that I might knock him down; but on the whole I am glad we had no such adventure, for I am not really any stronger than other people. We did not talk much on the way home, but I enjoyed every instant. When I left her at the door of her apartment house, I nerved myself for another effort, and asked her another question.

"Can I come and see you sometime, Miss Dalton?"

"Do come, Mr. Fairfax! Any evening except Tuesday or Thursday. Those are my rehearsal evenings."

"All right. Good-by, Miss Dalton."

"Good-by, old friend."

She unlocked the door and went in, and I stood for fully five minutes looking at that apartment house. It was a tall apartment house and very thin, and not at all elegant; but there was something inside it which made it in my eyes a very respectable looking apartment house.

After that I used to go to see the soprano singer very often. I became an expert in ringing bells and calling up tubes. She lived three flights up with her older sister and little Polly. When I came Polly was always in bed, and the soprano's older sister was reading in her bedroom. First we would talk, and then the soprano would sing, and then we would talk some more, and then it would be 10 o'clock and she would tell me that I ought to go now, but that she hoped I would come again soon; and I would look up at the clock and say: "For Heaven's sake!" and bid her a hurried good-by. She always sang something after I went away, for she knew I liked to hear her as I walked down the stairs and along the street.

Sometimes I met the bass singer there. When we were both calling together the soprano's older sister, Ellen, left her reading and came out to help Amy to amuse us, and somehow or other the bass singer always had to talk to Ellen. It was not my fault, nor the soprano's; it must have been his own fault He was always gloomy, except for an occasional joke. When he made these we all laughed out of a sense of politeness; but he looked so stern that it would not have made you want to laugh even if he had said something funny.

We always asked him to sing, and he was very obliging about singing to us. But his voice was a church voice, and he could not adapt it to the little room as the soprano did bers. He sang so loud that it was painful to hear him, and his songs were too demoniacal in character. He liked songs about devils and drinking songs; and he frowned so dreadfully when he sang them that the soprano would turn pale and set her teeth. We none of us liked to hear him sing, but it would have been impolite not to ask him.

I remember the 12th of January, because that was the date of Mrs. Felton's tea, and also because something else happened on that day. Mrs. Felton asked the whole parish to her tea. I went because I hoped the soprano would be there, and I always liked to be where she was. She did not turn up, and so I did not have a very good time. I drank some chocolate because the girl who was pouring out chocolate wanted me to, and then I drank some tea because the girl who was pouring out tea wanted me to, and then I drank some coffee for a similar reason. Then I stood up against the wall and thought it was about time to go home. But just then Mrs. Felton came up, and after that things began to get exciting.

"Have you heard about Miss Dalton?" she asked

"No. What is it?" I asked, trying to look indifferent.

"Why, she's going to New York this afternoon, at just about this time, too; and she'll probably be gone a month. Some one's sick, I think. She didn't know of it till morning."

Going away for a whole month! That did not sound attractive. What should I do? I must see her! I must—but wait a moment—Mrs. Felton was still speaking:

"Why, there's our bass singer! I never can remember his name. I must tell him about Miss Dalton. I think——"

I never heard what she thought. The idea had come into my head that I must see Amy before she went. Was there time? I rushed out of the room without a word of apology, ran to the dressing room, seized the first hat I could find and hurried out into the street. I found a cab and told the man I would give him five dollars if he would gallop all the way to Congreve street. We were nearly arrested, but we made two miles in six minutes. When I reached the apartment house the door was open, and Ellen Dalton was coming out.

"Amy's upstairs," she said.

These words sounded very sweetly to me. I ran up the three flights. The door was open. Amy was stooping over her trunk, crying quietly, just a little.

"Amy!" I cried, holding my arms out toward her.

She looked up quickly, and a queer little smile came over her mouth, though her eyes kept on crying. And then she came right into my arms—not in an aggressive way, but confidently and quietly, just as if she belonged there. We stood perfectly still for a minute; and then I kissed her. As I did so, I caught sight of some one standing in the doorway. It was the bass singer. He did not look stern now, but very sad, and white as a ghost.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I did not know—I congratulate you."

He tried to advance and shake hands, but he could not do it. He made two steps forward, then turned and hurried out of the room. We could hear his reckless tread as he rushed down the three flights of stairs.

"Poor fellow!" said Amy, standing with her hands on my shoulders, and listening to the bass singer's steps on the sidewalk. He's been so kind to me!"

Amy did not stay a month, after all. She came back the next Sunday to sing. But that day there were only three in the little balcony above the minister.

"SURGERY BY STEAM."

"Probably as queer a piece of backwoods surgery as has been described," says a frequenter of the region, "was that performed by a Moosehead lake guide known as "Old Sabattus," 20 years ago. The man was not an Indian as the nickname implies, but a Yankee, one of those rough fellows formerly characteristic of that locality. This guide was left on a lake steamboat at one of the far up landings while the engineer went ashore with the company. A man named Merservey came aboard, and in fooling around the boat managed to tumble down into the fire pit and put his shoulder out of joint

"Here was a dilemma. The other members of the party would not be back for half an hour, and the injured man was in great pain. The guide was a man of expedients. He got a rope and tied his patient securely to a post. Then he tied another rope around the man's waist and hitched the loose end of it to a pulley of the engine. He managed somehow to turn on steam and the pulley began to wind up the rope. It drew the arm out right in beautiful shape and presently the joint snapped back into its socket. Then 'Sabattus' jumped around to shut off steam while the pulley kept on winding. 'Holy Moses,' gasped the guide excitedly, 'how does it go? I don't where 'tis. I can't stop the blanked thing,' and the pulley meanwhile was slowly but surely pulling Meservey to pieces. His eyes were sticking out of their sockets and he screamed and gasped for breath

"Sabattus danced around like a wild man, not knowing what to do, when he happened to spy a hatchet lying near, and jumpin[illegible] for that, he cut the rope and saved a dreadful catastrophe. This was done just as a party of city folks who had gone ash[illegible] came rushing back onto the boat alarmed by Meservey's screams. It was some years afterwards," says the narrator, "that I was present when a lot of summer company arrived at Greenville. Sabattus was there, too, and presently a distinguished looking man, one of the new-comers, went up to him and said with a meaning smile, 'Are you not the man that practices surgery by steam?' and Sabattus had to admit that he was 'that same feller.'"—Lewiston, (Me) Journal.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND.—"Now you know the details of the affair," said the doctor to the lawyer a few days later, "what would you advise me to do about it?" "Go back to your practice," replied the lawyer, promptly. "You have no case. Ten dollars, please." "Now that I have told you the symptoms, said the lawyer to the doctor a few days later, what would you advise me to do?" "Go back to your practice," replied the physician promptly. "You have nothing seriously wrong with you. Ten dollars, please." Thus it happens that two men are calling each other robbers.—Chicago Post.

Take Hint from Mary.

Mary had a little lamb;
You do not look surprised;
Of course you don't, for Mary has
Been widely advertised.

And something you may learn from this
If you are not a clam;
You can be just as widely known
As Mary and her lamb.

Your name can be a household word,
And you be known as well,
That folks will confidently buy
The things you have to sell.

And when you have once got yourself
Into the cheering rays
Of the sunlight of publicity,
You'll bet your life it pays.

OLD TIME DUTCH FUNERALS.

Among the Dutch a funeral was a most costly function. The expenditure upon funeral gloves, scarfs and rings, which were universal in New England, was augmented in New York by the gift of a bottle of wine and a linen scarf to each friend. When Philip Livingstone died in 1749 his funeral was held both in New York and the manor. He had lived in Broad street, and the lower rooms of his house and those of his neighbors were thrown open to receive the assemblage. A pipe of wine was spiced for the guests, and the eight bearers were each given a pair of gloves, a mourning ring, a scarf, handkerchief and a monkey-spoon. At the manor a similar ceremony took place, and a pair of gloves and handkerchief were given to each tenant. The whole expense was five hundred pounds. When Madam Livingston died, we find her son writing to New York from the manor for a piece of black strouds to cover the four hearse horses, for a "barrel of of cutt tobacco and long pipes of which I am out," for six silver tankards and cinnamon for the burned wine; he had bottles, decanters and glasses enough. The expense of these funerals may have been the inspiration for William Livingston's paper on extravagance of funerals. A money-spoon was a handsome piece of silver, bearing the figure or head of an ape on the handle. Mannetiens spoons, also used in New Netherlands, were similar in design. At the funeral of Henry DeForest, an early resident of New Harlem, in 1637, his bearers were given spoons.

A familiar and extreme example of excess at funerals was at the obsequies of Lucus Wyngard, an old bachelor who died in Albany in 1756. The attendance was very large, and after the burial a large number of the friends of the dead man returned to the house, and literally made a night of it. For these sober Albany citizens drank up a pipe of wine and smoked many pounds of tobacco. They broke hundreds of pipes and all the decanters and glasses in the house, and wound up by burning all their funeral scarfs in a heap in the fireplace.

In Albany the expense as well as the rioting of funerals seem to have reached a climax. It is said that the obsequies of the first wife of Stephen Van Rensselaer cost over $20,000. Two thousand linen scarfs were given, and all the tenants were entertained for several days.

In Long Island every young man of good family began in his youth to lay aside money in gold coin to pay for his funeral, and a superior stock of wine was also saved for the same occasion. In Albany the cask of choice Maderia, which was bought for a wedding and used in part, was saved in remainder for the funeral of the bridegroom. The honor of a lavish funeral was not given to the wealthy and great and distinguished only. The close of every life, no matter how humble, how unsuccessful, was through the dignity conferred by death afforded a triumphal exit by the medium of "a fine burying."

In 1687 Ryseck Swart became one of the "church poor" of Albany. She was not wholly penniless; she had a little silver and a few pretty jewels, and a little strip of pasture land, worth in all about 300 guilders. These she transferred to the church, for the consistory to take charge of and dole out to her. A good soul, Marritje Lievertse, was from that time paid by the church 36 guilders a month for caring for Ryseck. I do not doubt she had tender care, for she was the last of the real church poor (soon they had paupers and an almshouse), and she lived four years and cost the parish 2229 guilders. She died on February 15, 1700, and though a pauper, she departed this life neither unwept, unhonored nor unsung. Had she been the cherished wife of one of the burgomasters of schepens, it would seem as though she could scarce have had a better or more fully rounded funeral. The bill—which was paid by the church—was as follows:—

3 dry boards for a coffin,	7	10

FRIDAY EVENING, OCTBER 16, 1896.

ANOTHER MAN SHOT AT.

D. W. Fosket Narrowly Escapes Being Killed.

AN ARREST MADE FOR THE PINNEY SHOOTING.

Highwayman Scare at Warren Turns Out Amusingly—Monson Young Man Held Up Saturday Night.

Crowds of men, armed with shotguns and revolvers, searched the woods in the vicinity of the carpet mill last Friday afternoon for the man who shot Andrew Pinney, but beyond a cast-off coat and vest, which were found about six rods from where the shooting took place, no trace of him was found. The crowd was in no amiable temper, the men from the carpet mill feeling particularly bitter, and had they got hold of the right man that afternoon he might have fared hard. The selectmen offered a reward of $300 for his arrest. Sunday a party was made up under orders from the selectmen and the woods east of the village searched, hoping to find the man who fired at D. W. Fosket the night before. Every tramp or suspicious character was stopped and made to give an account of himself, and one man who was halted near the Brainerd farm announced that he had been held up and questioned three times since leaving Palmer that afternoon; that he had had a good dinner in Palmer, but that it had all left him after his experiences. He expressed a determination to give Palmer a wide berth in the future.

D. W. Fosket Shot at.

Saturday night another hold-up was attempted, and the circumstances were so similar to those accompanying the shooting of Andrew Pinney that many at once said they were committed by the same person. The victim this time was D. W. Fosket, but he fared better than Mr. Pinney, for although fired at from short range he was not hit. Mr. Fosket was driving toward his home at Fosket's Mills, and had just crossed the Keith brook east of the Hancock place; his horse was walking when he happened to see the form of a man on the right side, about at the horse's shoulder. The next instant a bullet whistled past his head and went through the top of the carriage, which was tilted back. Mr. Fosket drove home at once and tried to telephone to this village, but was unable to make the wire work, so sent a man with another horse, and notified the officers; search was made, but no traces of anyone could be found.

An examination of the carriage showed that the bullet must have passed within two or three inches of Mr. Fosket's left cheek, about in line with his mouth. The next morning, on going to use the harness which was on the horse the night before, it was found that the right rein had been cut nearly off about 15 inches from the bit, the cut extending from the upper side to within a quarter of an inch of the lower side, the knife having then slipped off and the point having scored the rest of the leather without cutting it through. The fellow evidently had a knife in his left hand, with which he reached under the rein and attempted to cut if off with a downward drawn stroke, no doubt expecting that with this accomplished the carriage would go into the ditch and the occupant prove an easy victim. Mr. Fosket had a revolver in the seat beside him, but when the shot was fired his horse at once sprang forward and he had no time to use it.

Two Highwaymen Reported at Warren.

Word was received from West Brookfield Monday night that F. E. Webster, while driving from Warren to that town, had passed two masked men upon the road near Warren, one having a short gun or club over his shoulder. The Warren police were notified and the village people were greatly excited. The electric lights were burned all night and extra police patrolled the streets. Sheriff Putnam with several men were soon on the ground, and a thorough search was made, but no highwaymen were found. Later developments show Warren's highwaymen to have been somewhat mythical, and an amusing joke, which shows how terrified the neighboring towns are by fears of hold-ups, is going the rounds in Warren at the expense of Mr. Webster. The first man who he described as a masked highwayman was a respected, law-abiding colored citizen of Warren, Peter Van Slyke, returning from work. His complexion was mistaken for a mask, and the rifle which he was reported to have been carrying was an ax with which he had been chopping during the day. The lower portion of the highwayman's chin, which Mr. Webster said was uncovered, was nothing but the white beard of Mr. Van Slyke. The other man seen was a street railway employe, sanding the tracks which had been made wet by the storm.

Monson Heard From Next.

Another reported attempt at a hold-up came from Monson Monday morning, the victim being Christopher Smith, the place Coburn Hill in that town, and the time about 10.45 Sunday evening. Smith had been calling on a young lady and was on his way home, when suddenly a man appeared at one side of the road and a revolver was thrust into his face. Smith was naturally surprised, but recovered himself instantly and grabbed the fellow's wrist. A scuffle ensued, and during it the revolver was discharged. At this the assailant leaped the stone wall and disappeared in the orchard. Then Mr. Smith remembered that he had a revolver in his pocket, and fired two shots after the fellow, though he could see nothing of him. Smith then went down to Main street in Monson and hunted up Officer Osborne, to whom he told his story. The officer had heard the shots, but could not tell from what direction they came, as the wind was blowing almost a gale. No trace of the assailant could be found, though in the morning a place was found where he evidently stood waiting for Smith to come along.

It is generally conceded that the affair was arranged simply to frighten Smith, and he takes that view of the matter himself. Another man has been trying for some time to win the smiles of the young lady on whom Smith had been calling, but unsuccessfully, and has written threatening letters to Smith several times. This, coupled with the suspicious actions of a man who was seen by Officer Osborne not far from the scene of the fracas shortly before it took place, tends to strengthen this belief.

Arrested for the Pinney Shooting.

Patrick William Lynch, 20, was arrested at the opera house Tuesday evening by Deputy Sheriff Studley on a charge of shooting Andrew Pinney last Friday afternoon. He was arraigned in court that evening, and the hearing postponed until next Tuesday, bail being fixed at $1500. Lynch was met by Mr. Pinney near the scene of the shooting when the latter went to dinner about 1 o'clock, going toward the mill; later he was seen firing a revolver in the woods near by. These circumstances, with some others which have been unearthed by a detective who has been working on the case, make the officers think they are on the right track. Lynch's record is not of the best He was discharged from the Concord reformatory only this summer, where he has been for the past five years, being sent up for the theft of a pair of skates from the grammar school building on School street. At the time of his arrest he was suspected of numerous petty crimes in the vicinity of the carpet mill, and complaint had been made against him by Mr. Pinney. It is suggested that he may know something about the breaking into the house of J. A. Breckenridge on cattle show day, also the recent fires on the Carey place. Lynch's home is on the hill above the carpet mill.

Mrs. Edward Lynch, the young man's mother, says that he was at home all the afternoon of Friday, arriving about 1.30, and after eating his dinner hitched up a horse for a boarder to go to Palmer. He brought the horse to the door and then went to the orchard to help his father pick apples, where he remained the rest of the afternoon. Miss Lizzie Kinnevan, who lives near the Lynch place and is employed in the carpet mill, walked home with Lynch Friday afternoon. The mill shut down at 1, and after spending about ten minutes in cleaning up she started for home. Arriving at the main road she was met by Lynch coming from the direction of the village, and together they walked to her home, reaching there about 1.30, Lynch going on down the road toward his home. A. J. Northrop and Albert Ferry reached the Lynch place about 2.45 that afternoon in their search for the man who did the shooting, and found young Lynch in the orchard with his father. As it is fully a mile, even in a direct line, from his home to the scene of the shooting, which took place about 2.10 or 2.15, it would seem hardly possible for Lynch to have done the deed.

Henry P. Holden, Republican.

Thomas W. Kenefick, Democrat.

TWO PALMER MEN WHO ARE CANDIDATES FOR REPRESENTATIVE IN THE FIRST HAMPDEN DISTRICT.

MONSON-BRIMFIELD COMBINE

In the First Hampden Representative District Republican Convention—Henry P. Holden of Palmer Nominated.

The First Hampden Representative District Republican convention was held in Monson Monday forenoon. There were 23 delegates present, the number from each town being as follows: Palmer 10, Monson 7, Brimfield 3, Wales 2, and Holland 1. Newton S. Hubbard of Brimfield was chosen chairman and W. E. McDonald of Palmer clerk. Mr. Hubbard made a brief speech on the necessity of harmony in the party, which was received with applause. The first business of the convention was the election of a committee on credentials, which was composed of Dr. William Holbrook of Palmer, H. A. McFarland of Wales and George Grady of Monson. The committee to collect and count ballots was H. E. W. Clark of Palmer, C. C. Keep and G. C. Flynt of Monson. One of the delegates had forgotten his credential, but by vote of the convention he was admitted.

It was voted to give each town in the district a chance to nominate a candidate, and in accordance with this vote the chair invited Palmer, which is the largest town, to make the first nomination. Charles G. Gardner, president of the Palmer Republican Club, spoke for the Palmer delegation. He made a neat speech, calling the attention of the delegates to the fact that the Democrats were almost sure to nominate T. W. Kenefick, and that it would be necessary to make a strong campaign. He expressed the feeling of the Palmer delegates, that Palmer, as the largest town, was entitled to the nomination, but pledged the full support of the party in his town to the candidate chosen by the convention. He nominated Henry P. Holden of Palmer. Monson was called upon, but no one replied. Mr. Hubbard then spoke for Brimfield, setting forth the view of the voters of his town. He said that there seemed a likelihood that the biennial amendment would be carried this year, in which case in future candidates would necessarily be elected for a term of two years. Should Brimfield send a man at a later time, she would therefore be represented more than her fair share, which is, according to population, a little over one year. The town had not sent a representative for some time, and everything considered, the Brimfield delegates felt that it would be better for the district to choose a Brimfield man. He presented the name of Dr. Robert V. Sawin of Brimfield. Wales was next called for and one of the delegates, Mr. Lyon, said that his town did not expect the nomination, and he had no name to present. Mr. McFarland represented Holland by proxy. He had been instructed to vote with the majority of the Monson delegates, but presented the name of Francis Wight of Holland. Dr. Holbrook asked how Mr. McFarland proposed to learn which way a majority of the Monson delegates would vote, and Mr. McFarland replied that he had not been instructed how to secure this information.

Dr. Holbrook moved for an informal ballot, which was taken. The result was 12 for Mr. Holden, 10 for Dr. Sawin and one blank. It seemed evident that the Monson delegation had voted with the Brimfield delegates for the candidate from that town, while the Holland delegate, still being in doubt as to the proper method of determining how the Monson delegation would vote, had reserved his decision. A formal ballot was taken, resulting in 14 for Mr. Holden and 9 for Dr. Sawin. Mr. Holden's nomination was then made unanimous.

Monson's position in the matter was something of a surprise. It had been the general opinion that a name would be presented from that town, but the delegates had evidently decided that Brimfield's claim was a just one. A district committee was chosen as follows: C. F. Grosvenor of Palmer, C. W. King of Monson, R. V. Sawin of Brimfield, J. H. Loudon of Wales and Francis Wight of Holland.

Thomas W. Kenefick Renominated by the Democrats for Representative.

The Democrats of the First Hampden representative district held their convention in the district court room Tuesday afternoon, and it resulted as was expected, in the nomination of Thomas W. Kenefick of Palmer for representative. The convention was called to order by Omar E. Bradway of Monson, who read the call. Mr. Bradway was then chosen permanent chairman and Charles R. Tarbell of Brimfield secretary. Owing to the stormy weather only a small number of the delegates were present, and a motion was made making all present delegates. E. J. Kelley of Thorndike moved that Thomas W. Kenefick be nominated as candidate for representative by acclamation, and the motion was carried. Remarks were made by several of the delegates, who spoke of the excellent record made by Mr. Kenefick in the Legislature last year, and of the high esteem in which he was held by the members of that body, and said that in their estimation Mr. Kenefick was the strongest candidate that could be named. It was voted that the district committee be composed of the chairmen of the several town committees, with Omer E. Bradway of Monson chairman, and the convention then adjourned.

Arrangements are being made to have a game of football played on the park a week from to-morrow between the St. Josephs of Thompsonville, amateur champions of Connecticut, and the Brookfield team, neither of which has been scored against this year. A game between these two teams would be interesting and exciting.

The firemen went to Monson this afternoon to play ball with the fire laddies of that town. A supper will be served at the hotel after the game, and a social dance will take place this evening. Palmer people are not a little proud of their firemen, and will look to see them make as good a showing at ball playing as they can at fire fighting.

Dr. Ellery's horse, "Eros, Jr.," lost a boot while scoring in the 2.31 class at Westfield Saturday, and while going to the barn to have another put on, unexpectedly reared and turned completely over, smashing the sulky and badly bruising Dr. Ellery, who was driving, his left elbow being broken. The horse was so badly strained that he was drawn.

Herbert Powers, colored, of Monson, was before the court Monday charged with committing the murderous assault upon Rev. James Tufts in Monson on the night of September 26th. He pleaded not guilty and his case was continued until next Monday morning at 10. Bail was fixed at $1000, and being unable to furnish that he was taken to Springfield by Officer Osborne of Monson to await trial.

William Doyle of Monson was before the district court Wednesday charged with drunkenness, and yielded up $5 therefor. He admitted having imbibed too freely of cider and whisky, both of which were given him by persons whom he met. If Monson people are not careful the town will soon become a Mecca for thirsty but impecunious individuals, Doyle being the second man within a short time to get loaded up on cider freely dispensed by a total stranger whom he met accidentally.

The Kickapoo Indian Medicine and Concert Company, which has been playing at the opera house this week, closes its engagement to-morrow night. The performances given have been well received by the audiences. The impersonations of William C. Wilde and the slack wire and trapeze performing of Felix Rivard, formerly with Walter Main's circus, are worthy of special mention. An admission of ten cents will be charged this evening. To-morrow afternoon a performance will be given especially for the school children at 2 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Porter Plimpton took a carriage ride to Southbridge last week, visiting a brother, Manning Plimpton, and family, and other relatives, including Mrs. L. Morton, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Northrup and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Plimpton. Mr. Plimpton was a resident of Southbridge years ago, and this was his first visit there since his removal to Palmer. He found that the town had grown considerably since he was a police officer at Globe Village, and what was more pleasant, he found many whom he recognized, all of whom gave him a very cordial greeting.

At a civil session of the superior court held Tuesday the famous Hampden cases of Deputy Sheriffs Studley and Northrop against A. F. Ballard of Hampden to recover fees for services in making liquor raids in that town last fall, came up for settlement. Mr. Ballard secured the sheriffs to make the raids and then refused to pay them for their services. The cases were tried in the district court here and the verdict was for the plaintiffs. Ballard appealed and his counsel, Col. John L. Rice of Springfield, said no court in the United States would make a like decision, but the superior court sustained the verdict of the lower court and in Northrup's case $15.52 was allowed and in Studley's case $15.61. Mr. Ballard says he will carry the cases to the supreme court.

Several appealed cases from the District Court of Eastern Hampden came before the superior court at Springfield Wednesday. George W. Ely, for cruelty to animals was fined $15. In the case of Patrick J. Keye of Belchertown, charged with having made an illegal sale of liquor in Bondsville, on suggestion of District Attorney Gardner, Judge Wardwell ordered the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. Julia Downey of Bondsville, while testifying against her husband in the police court in this village some time ago, said that she had bought liquor of Keye in this town. On the strength of this testimony Keye was brought into court later and found guilty and fined. He appealed. At the trial before the superior court Mrs. Downey told an altogether different story, saying that she paid for the liquor in Belchertown, and it resulted in the discharge of Keye.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Woods on South Main street Tuesday afternoon, when Miss Fanny E. Blanchard, a niece of Mrs. Woods, and Milton M. Brown of Monson were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. F. Moulton; assisted by Rev. Harry Blackford of Monson. The couple entered the parlor to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. Charles Bruce of Monson. The maid of honor was Miss Bertha Thompson, and the groom was accompanied by his cousin, Allen Brown of Stafford, Ct. The wedding presents were numerous, including silverware, household furniture and money. Guests were present from Monson, Warren, Springfield, Stafford and Chicopee Falls. After the ceremony refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will make their home in Monson, where Mr. Brown is engaged in business.

Steam Heat for the Converse House.

It is expected that steam heat will be put in the Converse House this winter, and that work on the plant will commence in a few days, the entire hotel being piped. This will bring the house into the front rank of country hotels in towns of the size of Palmer, and make this hostelry even more popular than it has been under Landlord Pierce's successful management.

Main Street Sewer Contract.

The selectmen met Saturday night and opened the bids for the construction of the Main street sewer. The following are the bidders and their prices:

M. J. Dillon, 53 3-4 cents a foot for the sewer, $23.87 for each catch basin, $39.75 for each manhole.

John Brainerd, 65 cents a foot for the sewer, $25 for each catch basin, $30 for each manhole.

George Lyman, 75 cents a foot for the sewer, $23 for each catch basin, $32 for each manhole.

M. J. Dillon was the lowest bidder and was awarded the contract. The sewer is to be built from the intersection of Thorndike street to Walnut street. Work will be commenced as soon as the pipe arrives.

Eye Put Out While Hunting.

Albert King, while out hunting with several companions last Friday afternoon, met with an accident which cost him the loss of an eye Mr. King was standing some distance from one of his companions when the latter fired upward at a partridge. One of the shot struck a branch and glanced, striking Mr. King in the left eye, breaking the eye-ball and destroying the sight. Dr. G. H. Wilkins and Dr. George Rhoades of Springfield removed the eye Sunday afternoon. Mr. King deeply feels his loss, but as the affair was wholly accidental, attaches no blame to his companion.

The Wire Mill to Shut Down.

Owing to a lack of business the Wright & Colton Wire Cloth Company has decided to close its Palmer mill until after election, or until business improves somewhat. Instead of running two plants each two-thirds of the time, all orders will be filled from the Worcester works by transferring temporarily a few men from Palmer to Worcester, which will make a great saving in many ways to the company. The Palmer mill will be put in readiness to start at a few days' notice any time when the condition of trade will warrant. The company has booked several large orders for copper electrical wire the present week, and it is hoped that the shut-down of the Palmer mill will be of short duration.

Electric Road Between Brimfield and Palmer Projected.

About 25 of Brimfield's leading citizens met about an equal number of the business men of Palmer in the rooms of the Palmer Business and Social Club last evening to hear the report of the committee appointed at the meeting held in Brimfield to confer with the directors of the Southbridge and Fiskdale street railway company regarding an extension through to Palmer. From the report of the committee it was gathered that the directors did not favor an extension of the road to Brimfield. Then the project of forming a company to build a street railway between Brimfield and Palmer was discussed, and met with much favor. Much interest in the matter was shown by the citizens of both towns. A committee consisting of D. L Bodfish and Dr. Sawin of Brimfield was chosen to draw up articles of association, and the meeting then adjourned to the Converse House, where a banquet was served. After the banquet the committee reported, and the articles of association, which will be published later, were signed by a large number of those present. The name of the company is to be the Brimfield and Palmer Street Railway Company, with a capital of $80,000. A survey will soon be made, and a franchise asked for. Special permission will also be asked from the Legislature to carry freight, mail and express. The following board of directors, consisting of four from Brimfield and three from Palmer, was then chosen: Dr. R. V. Sawin, Charles R. Tarbell, Oscar F. Brown, N. S. Hubbard, D. L. Bodfish, E. G. Hastings, E. R. Pierce. The directors held a meeting and organized with N. S. Hubbard as chairman, Dr. R. V. Sawin treasurer, and D. L. Bodfish clerk.

District Court.

The court has done a rushing business this week, and Monson has furnished its full quota of cases. Saturday morning John M. Heck of Wales appeared charged with assault. He was found guilty and sentenced to the house of correction for three months and placed under $500 bonds to keep the peace. An appeal was taken. Jerry Cronin, charged with larceny of masons' tools from the Boston and Albany depot, the property of several out-of-town masons, was discharged on account of lack of evidence. William Andrews, colored, of Monson, who has been wanted by the Monson police for some time, also appeared, having been arrested in Indian Orchard. He was found guilty on the charge of lewdness and given four months in the house of correction.

On Wednesday William Doyle of Monson paid $5 for drunkenness. On Thursday, Cornelius Cahill of Monson stood in the dock and pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness. He said he acquired his "jag" at a wedding in Monson. He was before the court a few months ago on the same charge, and the judge thought that a little time spent in the house of correction would take away his appetite for the ardent, but Cahill asked to be given one more trial and promised to take the pledge, so was let off with a fine of $5. Joseph O'Gorzeleck, a Polander arrested by the Chicopee police on a charge of bastardy preferred by a Polish woman of Bondsville, was arraigned on that charge and pleaded not guilty. He was held in the sum of $300 for the November term of the superior court.

THORNDIKE.

Concert and dance, opera house, next Tuesday.

E. C. Miller of Kennebunkport, Me., is the guest of B. F. Emery.

The crowd at the rink on Saturday was large, many being present from the other villages of the town. There will be skating to-morrow evening from 7 to 10.30, with music as usual.

The registrars of voters will be at the office of the Thorndike Co. next Thursday afternoon from 2 to 4 to add the names of those who have not as yet registered for the November election.

The many Thorndike friends of Dr. M. W. Kelliher of Pawtucket, R. I., will be pleased to learn the high position which he occupies in the esteem of the citizens of that city, he being offered the nomination for mayor by the Democratic party. He declined the nomination, however, preferring the practice of his profession, which is the largest in the city, if not in the state, to the passing honor of politics. Dr. Kelliher was a former resident of Thorndike, and is well known in this village.

Boy Narrowly Escapes Drowning.

Willie Otis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Barnard Otis, had a narrow escape from drowning at the No. 2 mill dam on Sunday. The young lad was trying to bring an empty keg or barrel, which was in the water, to the shore, and reached out his hand to pull it in when he lost his balance and fell into the water. He was rescued by his father and another man, who threw out a plank to him by which means he was brought ashore, but not until he was pretty well exhausted.

THREE RIVERS.

Concert and dance, opera house, next Tuesday.

Miss Luna A. Thayer will be at the residence of A. A. Brown on Saturday afternoon to meet those who desire instruction in pianoforte or pipe organ.

H. N. Fish spent Saturday and Sunday with his brother in Boston, returning Monday.

There will be preaching in the Baptist church next Sunday by E. A. Thomas at 10.45 a. m. and 7 p. m.

Mrs. Mary Shiney of Waltham, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Lavene for two weeks, returned home on Tuesday.

William Kuss is very sick. The A. O. U. W. has engaged an experienced nurse from Springfield to care for him through his illness.

A very pleasant party of small girls and boys gathered at the home of Miss Lena Lavene Wednesday evening, it being her eleventh birthday.

The auction sale of the building lots of C. S. Ruggles took place last Saturday afternoon. A large number of people were present from the surrounding towns, and the bidding was quite lively. About 75 lots were sold. The lucky number which drew the corner building lot was held by Mrs. Porter Jenks of Three Rivers; the twenty-dollar gold piece was drawn by J. C. Blackmer of Three Rivers, the ten silver dollars by Mrs. Stella Mills of South Belchertown, the load of coal went to Mrs. Bonville of Thorndike, and the barrel of flour became the possession of William Riddle of Three Rivers. The remainder of the lots, about 50 in number, will be sold Saturday, the 24th, at 1 o'clock p. m. A new list of prizes, which will be announced later, will be given away to those holding the lucky tickets.

Mrs. Warren Fisherdick, Miss Alice Merrifield and Miss Lou Moulton have been chosen delegates to the King's Daughters convention, to be held in Springfield next week.

About 60 people went to Belchertown Tuesday expecting to attend the fair, and had to wait about in the rain for a return train. Wednesday a much larger crowd attended, and a number stayed to the ball in the evening.

The revival meetings conducted by R. A. Nichols of Waterbury, Ct., began Tuesday evening. The subject for this evening will be "Give the whole heart." Saturday afternoon a special service for children will be held at 3 o'clock.

James White, while out in the quarry woods Sunday afternoon captured an eagle that measured seven feet from tip to tip. The bird when caught was either sick or had been shot, for when thrown into the air he made no attempt to fly. Mr. White still has the eagle, and it seems to be much better than when caught.

Maguire—Wills.

The wedding of Miss Emma Maguire and George Wills, bookkeeper for the W. N. Flynt Granite Company, took place Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the house of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Maguire, on Margaret street. The house was prettily decorated with ferns and autumn flowers, the couple standing under an arch while the ceremony was performed by Rev. F. S. Hatch. A reception followed, after which the large company went to Stonecutters' Hall, near by, where supper was served; the hall was also prettily decorated. The bride and bridesmaid, Miss Hattie Maguire, were gowned in pale blue silk. The best man was Harry Mayhew of Worcester. The couple are taking a week's trip, and will go to housekeeping on their return.

Afraid of Being Held Up.

That Monson people, or some of them at least, are decidedly nervous over the subject of highwaymen is evidenced by the man whom Officer Sault discovered about midnight of Monday. He was returning from the Maguire-Wills wedding, and was carrying a cocked revolver in his hand as a safeguard against possible bellicose hankerers after what little wealth he might happen to possess. All tramps who are lodged at the lockup have been searched, but no weapons have been found on them.

Arrested for Assaulting Mr. Tufts.

Herbert Powers was arrested last Saturday charged with having assaulted Rev. James Tufts on the evening of Sept 26. Powers pleaded not guilty at the Palmer court Monday, and the case was continued a week. As Powers could not furnish a bond of $1000, he was sent to Springfield. Powers has appeared before the court several times for drunkenness and fighting, but has not been regarded by the townspeople as particularly vicious.

A new coal stove has been placed in the Quarry schoolhouse.

About 200 new books have been added to the public library, and are ready for circulation.

Mrs. George O. Henry of Palmer will inspect Marcus Keep Relief Corps Wednesday evening, the 28th. A collation will be served at the close of the session.

The Ladies' Circle served its annual harvest supper Tuesday evening at the Universalist church, and owing to the small attendance, due to the storm, served a hash supper last evening.

Mrs. Augusta Nelson Moulton, 68, wife of Roswell Moulton of Stafford, died at her home Tuesday morning. The funeral was held this morning, Rev. Harry Blackford officiating. The burial was at Moulton Hill.

Two mornings the past week James Duncan was disturbed of his sleep by being awakened by his hens cackling, and on getting up found a fox in the yard. Mr. Duncan shot at Mr. Fox, and thinks he will not be troubled again for a while.

J. Martin Webber of Pearl street met with a serious accident Saturday, falling from an apple tree to the ground, a distance of about 20 feet, striking just below his shoulders. No bones were broken, but he was injured internally. He was attended by Dr. Jackson.

The young people of Universalist church will present the three-act domestic drama, "Gertie's Vindication," next Friday evening at 8 o'clock, in the church parlors. Cast of characters:

Samuel Atherton	Adelbert C. Page
Abner Harwood	George H. Seymour
Jack Breeze	Allen J. Buffington
Gertie Adams	Miss Mary Hobbs
Leonore Morris	Myrtis A. Perrin
Katie Aylward	Annie P. Seymour

The class of '99 at the Academy has organized with the following officers: President, Ralph D. Morris; vice president, Belle M. Redway; secretary, Carol W. Hatch; treasurer, Walter H. Moulton; sergeant-at-arms, John S. Nelligan. The class motto is "Ad astra per aspera;" the colors, crimson and white. A secret grip and passport have also been adopted, the latter having for its symbols the Greek letters, Phi, Alpha, Nu.

The fire department held a meeting last evening and made arrangements for the 9th annual Thanksgiving ball, to be given in Memorial Hall. Leitsinger's 1st regiment orchestra of Brattleboro will furnish music; Prof Wales of Concord, N. H., prompter. The following committee was appointed: John Lyons, Charles Howard, N. A. Bugbee, Harry Miller, E. P. Donavon, Edward Murphy, and D. B. Needham of the board of engineers.

Sarah M. Root, 68, wife of Almus Anderson, died Sunday afternoon at her home on the North Monson road, after many years of invalidism. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at the house, Rev. W. H. Marble officiating. Mrs. Anderson was a native of Brimfield. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Horatio L. Converse of Brimfield, and Mrs. Fred O. Peabody of Waterbury, Ct.; also two sisters and a brother in Stafford. She was a member of the Methodist church.

Maryann B. Pratt, 62, widow of Myron D. Pratt, died suddenly Sunday evening Mrs. Pratt had been ill a long time, but her death was due to a stroke of apoplexy which occured during the afternoon. The funeral was held at her late residence yesterday afternoon, and the burial was in the Center cemetery; Rev. F. S. Hatch conducted the services. Mrs. Pratt was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erasmus Gates, and with her sister occupied the Gates homestead. Mrs. Pratt's husband was a captain in the late war, and was killed in one of the early battles. She leaves a son, Arthur D. Pratt of Watertown.

The Monson Historical Society held its adjourned annual meeting Wednesday evening with ten members present. It was voted that copies of pictures of Monson taken from time to time should be procured if possible. A suitable box has been made and placed in the post office vault for holding pamphlets, papers, etc., and donations will be gladly received. It was voted that a memorial of the late Judge George H Newton should be prepared and placed upon the records of the society. These officers were elected: President, A. D. Norcross; vice president, Dr. G. E Fuller; clerk, W. L Ricketts; treasurer, G. C. Flynt; auditor, C. M. Gage; historian, E. F. Morris; these officers and Dr. F. W. Ellis, Rev. F. S. Hatch and Rev. Harry Blackford form the board of councillors.

WALES.

Fred West and Miss Addie Warrington, both well known young people of this town, were married at the Baptist church Sunday afternoon.

In consequence of the many hold ups in neighboring towns, numerous citizens are arming themselves with repeaters, and somebody will be likely to get hurt. Even ladies are practicing with revolvers, to be able to protect themselves, many of them keeping arms on their mantle shelves ready for use.

Four suspicious fellows were found on the hay mow in Alvin Converse's barn the morning after the Babbitt clothing store in Monson was robbed last week. They were well dressed and are thought to be the same four that were seen looking into the windows Wednesday evening. This barn is on a cross road leading to Connecticut, where no tramps would go unless for hiding.

Killed by a Fall in Webster.

Albro E. Freeman left home Tuesday of last week to spend Tuesday night with relatives in Southbridge, going Wednesday to Worcester to attend the reunion of his regiment, the old 25th. He left Worcester Wednesday evening to go to relatives in Webster, where he intended to stop over night with them, and return home Thursday to Wales. He arrived in Webster about half past eight in the evening and started to cross the railroad bridge to go to his relatives' home, but in the dark fell off the abutment of the bridge to rocks 20 feet below. A little later a man crossing the bridge heard groaning below; securing assistance and investigating they found Mr. Freeman terribly smashed up; his scalp was torn off on one side of his head, necessitating 40 stitches to draw it together; his back was also terribly injured, causing paralysis of his limbs, and he was completely bruised from head to foot. He was soon identified and taken to his relatives, where he lay in great agony until Tuesday morning, when he passed away, just one week from the time he left home. When his identity was established a messenger was at once dispatched for his wife in Wales, who arrived at her home about three in the morning. She started at once, and reached her husband early the next forenoon.

Mr. Freeman was formerly boss dyer of the Shaw mills, but for the last five years has been employed by H. A. McFarland on his farms. He was a member of the Odd Fellows lodge of Woonsocket, R. I., and a member of the Grand Army post of Monson. His funeral was held at Webster, which is his native place, this afternoon. He leaves a wife and one daughter, who have the sympathy of the entire neighborhood in their severe affliction. Rev. G. W. Davis, pastor of the Baptist church, of which Mr. Freeman was a member, attended the funeral.

WARE.

Joseph Boyle was committed to the insane asylum by the Northampton court on Monday.

John F. Robinson, the hardware dealer, is receiving the congratulations of his friends on the birth of a son last Saturday.

Out of town people are getting to understand that few city shops turn out as handsome signs as Eldredge of Ware. He is now making a large one with heavy raised gold letters for Blodgett and Converse of Brookfield.

Otis Co's. Mills Running Again.

Great satisfaction was felt when it was reported that the cloth department of the Otis Co. was to start again on Thursday. The striking Polanders have come to their senses, no doubt. On Monday most of them went in ready to work, but were sent out. A few weavers have left town, but in a short time the department will be running with all the help needed.

The Darlington, Wis., Journal says editorially of a popular patent medicine, "We know from experience that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy is all that is claimed for it, as on two occasions it stopped excruciating pains and possibly saved us from an untimely grave. We would not rest easy over night without it in the house." This remedy undoubtedly saves more pain and suffering than any other medicine in the world. Every family should keep it in the house, for it is sure to be needed sooner or later. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

If your children are subject to croup watch for the first symptoms of the disease—hoarseness. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse it will prevent the attack. Even after the croupy cough has appeared the attack can be prevented by giving this remedy. It is also invaluable for colds and whooping cough. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

The Result of a Moose Call.

The battle which is necessary in capturing a bull moose is an experience of the liveliest and most exciting kind, and a trap to the wilds of Maine and Canada is an expedition looked forward to with great joy by the sportsman.

The following from "Outing" of recent date relates the experience of two sportsmen who were seeking adventure with His Majesty, King Moose:

We were fortunate in securing for this trip a well-known guide, and who as a caller of Moose had no equal.

All the Indian callers have insisted on calling only after sundown, but our guide calls only in the hours of daylight, when the game may be clearly seen.

After several attempts, one beautiful, still, frosty morning, we paddled across the Lake to the western shore and climbed to a point on the mountain which offered a favorable site for calling up a moose.

The guide gave the moose call with all his usual artistic variations, and then—well, a great many things happened. There was a low, deep, muffled sound, which might have risen from the ground at our feet, but which, on the whole seemed to emerge from the thick belt of barren firs that lined the opposite shore of the lake; then a quick succession of basso-profundo grunts, followed by a terrific crashing of horns against the trunks and limbs of trees. We dashed down the bank in order to connect with the bull moose express. We got there in time to board the train. The cowcatcher and headlights loomed up pushing their way through the alders across the lake about one hundred yards away. It was the king of the valley and no mistake. His ears were thrown forward, his horns shone like a crown of glory in the pallid October sun, and every hair on his big black mane stood up as straight as the sentinel firs from which he had emerged.

"Give it to him!" The bullet struck the moose near the right shoulder, for as he turned and charged through the hardhacks we could see that his right fore-leg was powerless. Still, he was making regular schedule time, and though we kept heaving chunks of sudden death across the pond at a lively rate, it really seemed, when the moose disappeared in the woods, as though this was not our moose after all. We went tearing through the scrub and came suddenly upon a huge, black animal, with his hair turned the wrong way, sick unto death, but kingly still in his majestic mien, facing us not twenty feet away. A crash from the rifle, and than came the war-dance and the shouting.

The noble animal measured nearly seven feet in height at the shoulder; the horns were just four feet tip to tip.

This is an experience of common occurrence, as is chronicled at regular intervals.

The Boston & Maine system and its connecting lines so cover the hunting regions of Maine that with very little effort one may visit this wonderful region and participate in this sport of sports. Information and time-tables may be had at ticket offices and at Boston City Ticket Office, 322 Washington Street.

A Lucky Chance for the Sick.

Every ailing and suffering person who is wise will instantly accept this generous offer. Coming from the very highest authority, as it does, gives it the greatest weight, and people know when they see a good thing like this. Everybody knows of Dr. Greene, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. His successful ystem of treating patients through letter correspondence is attracting great attention. All you have got to do is this. Write him a letter about your complaint, tell him how you feel, and he will answer it, giving a thorough explanation of your case and telling the surest way to get well.

He gives most careful and explicit attention to every letter, and explains so comprehensively that you understand immediately exactly what ails you, and just what to do for yourself. And for all this he makes no charge. He is the discoverer of that remarkable medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. This splendid offer is being taken by thousands, and they are getting well by his wonderfully successful treatment. The very best thing you can do, reader, is to write the Doctor immediately; it will cost you nothing, and it will surely be the means of making you well and strong. Don't delay until it is too late, but write now.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida street, San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson: F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c and $1.

ALL THE ELECTION NEWS.

The Boston Journal's Admirable Service Is Especially Appreciated Now.

In these days, just before Presidential election, the interest of all readers centres in the news of the participants in the great contest. The throngs visiting Gov. McKinley at Canton, the speeches of Mr. Bryan, the universal rallies—all these command special attention from everyone, and the paper which gives the best political news is the one generally sought. The Boston Journal's admirable news service is unequalled, and all the latest and most complete information from the political field is to be found in its columns. The alliance of the Journal with The Associated Press gives a connection with all the morning papers of Chicago, which is proving the centre of interest at the present time. Consequently the Journal has its alliance with the Chicago Tribune, Philadelphia Press, St. Louis Globe-Democrat and Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune, and its special correspondence in New York and the other great cities, so that every field is covered. On the morning after election look out for the Boston Journal's complete report. It will be the best in New England.

Then and Now.

THEN.

"Here lies a poor woman who always was tired,
She lived in a house where help was not hired.
Her last words on earth were 'Dear friends, I am going
To where there's no cooking, nor washing, nor sewing;
But everything there exact to my wishes,
For where they don't eat there's no washing up dishes.
I'll be where loud anthems will always be ringing,
But, having no voice, I'll get out of the singing.
Don't mourn for me now—don't mourn for me never,
I'm going to do nothing forever and ever."

NOW.

"Here lies a poor woman who always was busy;
She lived under pressure that rendered her dizzy.
She belonged to ten clubs, and read Browning by sight,
Showed at luncheon and teas, and would vote if she might;
She served on a school board with courage and zeal,
She golfed and she kodaked and rode on a wheel.
She read Tolstoi and Ibsen, knew microbes by name,
Approved of Delsarte, was a 'Daughter' and 'Dame.'
Her children went in for the top education,
Her husband went seaward for nervous prostration.
One day on her tablets she found an hour free—
The shock was too great and she died instantly."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its, stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

NATIONAL BANK VICE-PRES.

A Most Important and Distinguished Testimonial For Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Hon. J. H. Hastings, Judge of County Court, Senator, and Vice-Pres. National Bank, Tells the People to Use Dr. Greene's Nervura to be Cured.

JUDGE J. H. HASTINGS, VICE-PRESIDENT NATIONAL BANK OF WATTSBURY, VT.

You are sick and out of order and want to get well.

To get well you desire to take the remedy which will surely cure you—the one which is strongly recommended by some one in whom you have perfect belief and confidence.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the medicine which will surely cure you.

And here is the strongest possible recommendation to use it by one of the most eminent and distinguished Judges in this country, Hon. J. H. Hastings, of Waitsfield, Vt., an Associate Judge, Senator in the Vermont Legislature, Vice-President and Director of the Waterbury National Bank, and Treasurer and Trustee of his town.

Such is the exalted standing of the famous Judge and able Financier who is enthusiastic in praise of the wonderful curative powers of Dr. Greene's Nervura, who has used it with most remarkable benefit in his own family and who tells you that he has known so many cases cured by this grand medicine, that he advises you to use it by all means, if you wish to get well.

Judge Hastings says:

"I have heard Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy most highly recommended by my friends and neighbors who have used it, and know of several decided cures where people have been in a very feeble state of health and had failed to get relief from the usual sources.

"A lady who lived in my family has often spoken of the wonderful good which Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy has done her mother who was cured of nervous prostration by its use. One of my near neighbors who used the Nervura and derived benefit from its use, advised me to use it in my own family. They are all enthusiastic in its praise and I join in the same. You are at liberty to publish this letter for others' good."

You can depend upon Judge Hastings' word. You can depend upon Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to cure you.

Take it, you who feel weak, nervous, tired, without your old-time snap, energy and vim; it will give you strong nerves, pure blood, sound, natural and refreshing sleep, from which you will rise strong and vigorous instead of languid, tired and exhausted. If your stomach troubles you, if you have gas, indigestion, dizziness, distress after meals, bloating, faint feeling at pit of stomach, constipation, kidney or liver complaints, Dr. Greene's Nervura will give you perfect digestion and regular and natural action of all the organs. It will cure headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, and is the best remedy in the world for female weakness and nervous debility.

The carefully compounded prescription of our most successful physician in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., this greatest of medical discoveries is perfectly adapted to cure just these complaints. The Doctor can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

GRAND OPENING OF THE FALL AND WINTER SEASONS,

Monday, August 31st, 1896, OF

OLD DR. SWEET'S SANITARIUM and Medical Institute,

18 VERNON STREET, - - SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Invalids will now be received and treated as inmates at the institution, or as home patients at reasonable rates. Old Dr. Sweet, the World-Famous Natural Healer, Bone Surgeon and Magnetic Physician, whose visits to Springfield the past twenty years and whose astonishing cures in Western Massachusetts yet remain the wonder of the age, has established the above institution in Springfield for the benefit of a multitude of patients residing in this section.

So long have the Sweet Family been identified with the cure of lameness that it is conjectured by many persons that they treat no other ailments, whereas their most startling successes for many years have been the cure of Obscure Chronic Diseases of almost every kind. In order to provide for the foregoing, the latest and most efficient discoveries may be found at Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium, in fact those only employed in the private hospitals of metropolitan cities.

These, united with those wonderful systems of medicine which from father to son have descended from generation to generation of the Sweet family of Rhode Island for more than two centuries; thus equipped is it not presumable that their success in the cure of obstinate types of disease will be more certain than attends the ordinary methods of office or drug medication.

Whether rich or poor, black or white, the stricken invalid needs the best medical service obtainable. The workingman whose capital is in his limbs, his nerves and muscles, how necessary if impaired that it should be strengthened both surely and with the least delay.

Have you not speculated with DRUG TREATMENT long enough? Why not try the private infirmary system, combining the best of all, for a while? Your life hangs upon your decision. Old Dr. Sweet has called to his aid in providing for his multitude of patients,—a proof of his unparalleled success in Springfield, DR. EDWARD RAY, a gentlemen of rare culture and medical attainments, a graduate of Harvard University, with extensive clinical and hospital experience, who has been given charge of the Surgical Department of Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium for the coming season.

This institution is now open to receive applicants for treatment under the famous Sweet Method, providing them with rooms and board at very low rates, with PERSONAL TREATMENT DAILY, or those who desire to visit the institution occasionally, yet live at home.

Persons of VERY limited means are thus enabled to receive the most scientific medical service provided by medical science to-day. The inhabitants of Western Massachusetts may be assured that Dr. Sweet will not rest content until he has provided for the people the MOST EFFICIENT systems of medical treatment extant. Whatever money or ingenuity can procure to make his institution THE FIRST in New England will be cheerfully provided. Success is the SINE QUENON. As his professional duties multiply—as they surely must—experts in the various branches of the "healing art" will be added to his staff. The best is none too good.

Pleased with the "City of Homes" as a permanent place of residence, Dr. Sweet has removed his family hither and indulges the hope that this fact will be appreciated by those wishing to avoid the uncertainty that attends the service offered by itinerant practitioners. Male and Female operators, assistants, nurses, etc., provided. Terms reasonable. Consultation, examination and advice free to the afflicted.

ACCIDENT DEPARTMENT. Athletes, Bicycle Riders and others suffering from sudden accident please take notice. Bring them here. Prompt service.

A Masculine Soliloquy.

The women's so encroachin' with their leg o' mutton sleeves,
I've sot beside 'em in the church; an' so, I'd jest as liefs,
Er liefer, stay to hum next time. 'Twuz hard to prayerful be
When two big sleeves—pink and yaller—bulged 'way out plum over me.
Ef I took breath them 'ere balloons 'ud rustle an' they'd creak!
An' when them women fanned themselves, my! how their puffs 'ud squeak!
They're lined with husks, er shavin's, er sum kind o' bristlin' stuff,
But as fer me, a settin' there, I felt just flat enough!
Bime by, I picked my courage up, an' peered about; an' then
I noticed how the modern sleeve overwhelmed the men.
Wedged in, as I wuz, hyar an' thar, a meek an' modest one
Attempted to look dignified till sarvices wuz done.
'N' frum the parson's p'int o' view, I cert'n'y do believe
We men all seemed a drownd in' in the billows of the sleeve!

WOMEN WHO MAKE GOOD SOLDIERS.

During the recent campaign in Madagascar we heard a good deal about the Dahomey Amazons and their prowess in war; and a few months ago a daily paper asserted that a female volunteer corps was in the process of being formed, to be officered, of course, by some extreme disciples of the "new woman" cult. In the latter instance the idea of woman usurping man's place on the battlefield was looked upon as being something quite original; whereas it would simply be a case of history repeating itself, for that there have been many such heroines the following particulars will prove: Mrs. Christine Davis, commonly called "Mother Ross," is a well-known example, she having served as a foot soldier and dragoon in several campaigns under William III and duke of Marlborough, acting as a squadron leader of the Scots Greys at Blenheim and Ramillies. She died July 9, 1739. Hannah Snell was another female worthy, who, having been deserted by her husband, adopted male attire and traveled to Coventry in search of the runaway. She there enlisted in Col. Guise's regiment of foot and marched with them to Carlisle at the time of the Scotch rebellion of 1745. She afterward enlisted in Fraser's regiment of marines and proceeded to Portsmouth, whence she sailed in Admiral Boscawen's squadron for the East Indies. There she assisted at the siege of Pondicherry, when she received 12 wounds. Through all her adventures, including a couple of floggings, she managed to preserve the secret of her sex, and concerning the application of the "cat" it was said:—

Hannah in breeks behav'd so well,
That none her softer sex could tell.

At the close of her military life, however, she revealed her secret, and was awarded a pension of £18 5s per annum. Later on she started a public house under the sign of "The Widow in Masquerade," and did such a roaring trade that a comfortable old age was assured to her.

There is Mary Anne Talbet, a fine, comely young woman, to judge by an extant portrait, who served four years as a soldier and sailor in the name of John Taylor, and took part in Lord Howe's glorious victory on June 1. She died February 4, 1808, aged 30 years. One print represents her holding a cutlass in one hand and a Frenchman's head in the other, another in which she is resisting a press gang. Coupled with the memory of Fontenoy, 1745, there is that of Phoebe Hessel, whose monument in a Brighton church yard states that she was born at Chelsea in 1713; that she served for many years as a private soldier in the 5th regiment of foot in different parts of Europe, and received a bayonet wound in the arm at the above engagement. Living at Brighton, her case became known to George IV, then prince regent, who sent to ask her what sum would render her comfortable. "Half a guniea a week," replied old Phoebe, "will make me as happy as a princess." This, therefore, by his majesty's command, was regularly paid her till the day of her death, which took place December 12, 1821, when she had attained the age of 108 years.

Again, there is Mary Dixon, who was nearly 16 years in the army, and fought at Waterloo. She was still living in 1865, when she was described as "a strong, powerful old woman." Above all, there is the remarkable, if not unique case of Dr. Barry, who died at Corfu in July, 1875. This lady, said to have been the legitimate grand daughter of a Scotch earl, is surmised to have adopted male attire and the medical profession from attachment to an army surgeon. Never in her lifetime had any one the slightest suspicion of her sex. While staff surgeon to the Cape garrison, she most successfully treated the governor, Lord Charles Somerset, fought a duel, and was considered to be of a most quarrelsome disposition. The doctor was frequently guilty of flagrant breaches of discipline, and on more than one occasion was sent home under arrest, but somehow or other the offenses were always condoned at headquarters. The late earl of Albemarle relates in his reminiscences that on sitting next to her at mess he noticed "a certain effeminacy in his manner, which he seemed to be always striving to overcome, while his style of conversation was greatly superior to that one usually heard at a mess-table in the days of non-competitive examinations." In Heart's Army List for 1865, the name of James Barry, M. D., stands at the head of the list of inspectors-general of hospitals. In July of the same year, her death was announced, and the next day it was officially reported to the horse guards that the doctor was a woman. It is singular that neither the landlord of her lodging, nor the black valet, who had lived with her for years, had the vaguest notion of her secret.—Horse Guards Gazette.

REASONABLE DOUBTS.

"Pardner," said Derringer Dan, "you'll excuse me, but I'll have to quit you. I ain't a-playin' no more poker this evenin'."

"But you have a lot of chips yet," remarked the young man from the East.

"I know it. And I'm goin' to cash 'em in, too. You look like er tenderfoot an' ye talk like one. But I've heard o' people that got buncoed and bought gold bricks even ef they did read the news'apers, an' orter know better."

"I really don't quite follow you."

"I had four nine-spots a little while ago."

"Did you?"

"Sartin'. An' ye didn't do a thing but say ye'd stay out. Then I had a flush an' ye said the same. I got four kings an' an ace, an ye laid down yer hand ez usual."

"That was remarkable."

"'Remarkable' don't seem ter quite cover the ground for me. Pardner, I don't say yer workin' one o' these here Roentgen ray outfits on me. All I say is that I ain't a-playin' no more poker this evenin'."—Washington Evening Star.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whisky nor other stimulant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and boweis, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding Nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it exactly what they need. Price 50c and $1 per bottle, at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. BICYCLE ENGLISH.

A student of the wheel has collected the following facts: In far away New Zealand the awful word 'cyclodonna" has been coined as a substitute for the wheelwoman. In many Western towns the fair rider is called a "bloomer," without regard to her costume. The word "scorcher," as indicating a speedy cyclist, is fairly engrafted upon the language. In Chicago, however, the "scorcher" is called a "scoot." The technicalities of the machine have led to attempts upon the part of young men to coin expressions. "Your tire is punctured" indicates that the story you are telling lacks the probable element of truth. Reckless statements are called "coasting." A very ancient yarn is not a "chestnut," but a "century." A young couple showing a mutual fondness are "riding a tandem." A man leading a fast life is "geared too high." An old fogy is referred to as a "high wheel." A chaperon is know as a "pacemaker." A cheap bicycle is called a gaspipe" machine. A professional racer is a "pro."

PRACTICAL RESEARCHES.—"Miranda," said Mr. Proudpaugh, "we must put some money by every month to pay for the education of our boy." "Yes, indeed," was the reply. "I want him to have a chance to learn things in a practical way, as well as from books." "Do you, dear?" "Of course. I mean that he shall travel, so as to get a clear idea of what he reads about; that he shall, by persistant contact, acquire knowledge that is too commonly and confidently assumed to be communicated by mere theory." "I understand, George. And I am sure he will take kindly to that method of education. Look at the little dear this minute in the coal scuttle studying mineralogy!"—Washington Star.

The fashionable tailor has discovered that his customers dwell in the land of promise. —Puck.

LIKELY TO GET IT.—That he resided in the country was proclaimed by the size of his grip-sack and by the utter absence of entente cordiale between the bottoms of his trousers and his shoe tops. He had taken his stand in the middle of the cable car tracks, by the side of the treasury, and after waiting a few minutes, called: "Hi! there!" to a gamin who was crossing the street. "What's chasin' yer?" asked the boy, who was a painful reminder of the decadence of juvenile courtesy. "Ain't nothin' chasin' me. What I want ter know is how ter get a Fourteenth street car." "That's easy. You jes' stand right still an' you'll git it. You may git it in the neck—but you'll git it."—Washington Post.

It Stands To Reason

that 20,000,000 bottles of a medicine could not be sold unless it was good, honest, and did what was claimed for it. Here are the facts about

Our Kitchen

No kitchen is kept cleaner than the premises devoted to the manufacture of NONE SUCH Mince Meat. No housewife can be more fastidious in the matter of preparing food than we are in the selection and preparation of the materials of which it is made. The cleaning of the currants (for one thing) is more thoroughly done by means of perfected appliances, than it would be possible to do it by hand.

Its cleanliness, purity, wholesomeness and deliciousness are good reasons for using NONE SUCH Mince Meat. The best reason is its saving of time, of hard work, of money. A ten cent package affords you two large pies, without trouble to you beyond the making of the crust. Makes just as good fruit cake and fruit pudding as it does mince pie. Sold everywhere. Be sure and get the genuine.

Send your name and address, and mention this paper, and we will mail you free a book—"Mrs. Popkins' Thanksgiving"—by one of the most famous humorous authors of the day.

The Dream Mother.

The dream mother comes when the night falleth down,
When night falleth o'er land and o'er sea
With a soft benediction upon the earth,
And a wonderful, glad melody
Pulsating the air that encompasseth her.
And the dream mother holdeth night's hand
As silently drift they down star-jeweled paths
To the shadowy, child-peopled land.

The dream mother cometh with outreaching arms,—
On her forehead there gleameth a star—
And she sings as she nears the sleeping town
Where the motherless little ones are;
And the children fancy their mothers are there,
And are kissing and drying their tears,
And are harkening unto their loneliness,
And are laughing at their foolish fears.

She cradleth all in an impartial way,
Oh, so wondrously tender is she!
Her voice is the sweetness of ages of love
Woven into a dream rhapsody.
Her rapturous music brings balm to bruised hearts,
And the mothers, who need dwell afar
In the city of God, bless the song she breathes
In the town where their loved children are.

The dream mother comes when the night falleth,
And her robes have a swish like the sea
As she sways and swings to the tremulous tune
Of her motherly sweet lullaby.
She foldeth all children of earth to her breast;
To her love, wealth nor want are a bar,
But she yearneth most over the sleeping town
Where the motherless little ones are.

THE STIRRING OF HARMON.

"'Dese bones shall rise argin!
Dese bones shall rise argin!
You know I know
Dese bones shall——"

Why honey, yose not gwin' to skule in dat rig for sho?"

The singer, who had been crooning to herself over her work in the back porch, and turned her head at an approaching step, dropped her hands limply, while a look of amazement bordering on horror stole over her placid features.

"Certainly I am, Peggy. Why not? I cannot ride in anything else."

Peggy shook her head, gloomily.

"I dunno, Miss Jessie," she said, "I's dunno nufin' of de styles Norf, but I'd feel mighty bad if Colonel Preston's Mis' Imogen or Mis' Payson-Smith meets yo' on de road lookin' like dat."

"Nonsense, Peggy! I am perfectly willing to meet the whole country at once; and it is not a question of style but a question of comfort; you must remember that."

She spoke indifferently, but she was conscious of a slight inward shiver at the thought of the general disapproval her innovation of riding to the schoolhouse on a bicycle might meet with, in view of the fact that it had begun at her very door.

She was a trim, sweet-looking girl, with pretty brown eyes, a fresh color and soft brown hair of a sunniness that was reflected in her eyes, and she wore a modest dark-blue frock that fitted her slight figure well, reaching just to her shoe-tops, tan leggings and shoes, that would not show the dust of the road, and a blue sailor hat to shield her face from the warm September sun.

She wheeled the new bicycle, the first, the only one in Harmon, out into the yard, and mounting it easily she was off like a bird down the country road, with the sunlight catching the shining wheel, and Peggy watching her anxiously and muttering renewed hopes that she would not meet above all the colonel's family.

Jessie Tuthill was a Northern girl who for the year past had been employed by a dozen of the old families of Harmon, Va., to conduct a small school for their children. Before the war Harmon had been a gay spot, noted for its beautiful places and hospitality, but since then it seemed to have fallen asleep waiting some royal touch to awaken it again. Jessie was distinctly connected with the Payson Smiths, one of those old families, and so with that recommendation and letters from several distinguished Northerners vouching for her capacity as a teacher, she had secured the position which the dozen families had found some difficulty in agreeing upon filling, and she had soon won the confidence and love of the children and the gratitude of their parents for her gentle influence upon them and for their progress. Her mornings were devoted to the younger scholars, and the afternoons to tutoring a class of half a dozen boys preparing for college. She had been home North for July and August, and had just returned. How she had enjoyed those two months of freedom among her old friends in the dear little home she had grown up in on the Hudson which, if it were small, had such a big view of river and misty hills, and which she was loath to leave, but she would not be a burden where there was not always enough, and the position South was a very good one.

While she had been gone she had tried one day to ride a girl cousin's bicycle, and learned so quickly and enjoyed it so thoroughly that her uncle, who would have done more for her if the girl's independence would have let him, presented her one for her own as a parting gift, and now this morning she was riding for the first time to the little schoolhouse three miles away from where she lived, finding it a great relief from hurrying along on foot, as she had been obliged to do all the year before, and yet with all the exhilaration of the exercise in the fresh morning air, still dreading a little the criticism this innovation might meet with. For as Harmon was less wealthy than in the old time, it was proportionately more formal, and woe betide the individual, and especially an outsider, who dared to do anything for which he or she could find no former shining example.

The country road was hard and smooth, and in spite of her fears she was beginning to be quite happy, when she heard the sound of a carriage coming behind her. She glanced hurriedly back, and Peggy's worst fears were realized. It was the colonel's wife, both of whose daughters, known as the "Preston twins," attended the school. Jessie slowed up to let the carriage pass; she could easily have outstripped the lumbering farm horses drawing it, but she considered the moment was not favorable for the display of her racing powers, and she smiled a cheery good morning, trying to appear as unconcerned as possible, though her wheel was wabbling horribly from her nervousness, and it detracted from her sense of dignity.

In the brief moment of passing Mrs. Preston regarded her with astonishment and favored her with a bow that was blood-curdling in its frigidity. The whirling dust from the horses' feet choked her an instant and then the carriage turned into another road, and she was once more in the sweet Virginia wooded country, feeling the soft air grateful to her burning cheeks.

A number of the children were gathered about the door of the schoolhouse, waiting for her as usual, and they greeted her approach raptuously. It comforted her a little, and the morning passed by pleasantly, though there was a suppressed excitement noticable among the children. Still that was to be expected; a twenty-two pound safety was an unheard of event in Harmon.

At recess they delightfully examined it. The boys in the afternoon were equally enthusiastic, and before nightfall there was not a man, woman or child in Harmon that had not heard of the school teacher's wheel.

Late the next afternoon, when she had returned quite tired from her work, she was sitting out on the veranda of the little house where she made her home, talking with Mrs. Hayden with whom she lived, when a carriage drove into the yard.

"It's Mrs. Preston," said Mrs. Hayden, hastily rising. "I'll just slip in and see if Peggy has that cake done; I will be back in a moment." So Jessie was left alone to meet that formidable censor of Harmon's social laws.

She assisted the lady carefully from her carriage.

"Is it not a lovely day?" she said. "Mrs. Hayden will be here in a moment. Will you come indoors, or do you prefer the veranda? The air is so lovely."

"Thank you," said the lady, "I will not go in. I just stopped by for a moment."

They seated themselves in the rockers on the porch, and in the silence that followed Jessie longed for Mrs. Hayden's arrival.

"I suppose I may as well tell you what I stopped about," said Mis' Imogen, as most of the country called her, though she had been married for thirty years.

"Yes, indeed," murmured Jessie, "Can I do anything for you? I should so like to."

"No, but I have been talking with several of our friends about your riding that—that—"

"My bicycle," supplied Miss Jessie, as Mrs Preston did not seem to be able to bring herself even to pronounce the objectionable word.

"Yes," Mrs. Preston answered, in a relieved voice, "and we think it is hardly dignified, hardly ladylike, so to speak, my dear Miss Jessie, for you to use it going to your school duties, or anywhere else, in fact, holding the position that you do."

"I would not do it for the world if I thought it undignified, Mrs. Preston," Jessie answered, straightening her little figure and ceasing to rock.

"Now, if it were a horse," said the lady, "it would be different. The women of the Prestons, and Phillips and the Payson-Smiths have always ridden, but not one has ever been on a—a bicycle."

"But, you see, I cannot afford a horse or to keep one if I had it, and my uncle gave me this wheel particularly to use in going to school, for the walk is very long for me twice a day."

"Of course, of course, but one must think of appearances. A woman must always consider them, and we decided that someone had better speak to you and advise you to give it up, if you wish to continue to hold your present position in our school."

"I do not think I shall give it up," said the girl slowly, "until I see the harm in it."

The lady rose, and just then Mrs. Hayden appeared, with Peggy hovering in the background, bearing a tray of tea and cakes; but for once the colonel's lady did not wait to partake, though she thanked Mrs. Hayden effusively, and she left not altogether satisfied with the impression she had made. The little school teacher was so gentle that "sitting on her" did not seem to affect her at all; she was as placid and sweet afterward as before. But it did affect her, although she rode to school again the next day, and when the lessons were all over and she had dismissed the class she was tutoring, she laid her sunny brown head on the desk before her and cried softly. She was afraid she would have to give it up after all. She could not afford to throw away the position she held, and she did not see any chance of convincing the social leader of Harmon that riding a bicycle was entirely compatible with her school duties, and the dignity of her position. It was one of her greatest pleasures, and it seemed hard that from simple prejudice she should be deprived of it. Of course it was foolish to cry, but she was very tired.

As she sat there alone some one came into the room, and seeing the little teacher's distress, went softly up to her.

It was Cary Phillips, one of the boys getting ready for college, a tall, sturdy fellow of seventeen summers, afraid of nothing, always in some scrape, but with a big, generous heart, and unable to see anyone in trouble without offering his help and sympathy.

"Come, Miss Jessie," he said standing a bit awkwardly beside her, "won't you tell a fellow what's the matter?"

She looked up smiling, ashamed of her tears.

"I have got to give it up, I guess," she said.

"What do you mean—your bicycle?"

She nodded, her lips quivering a little. She was scarcely more than a child herself.

"What for?" he asked. "I thought they had been badgering you about it. It is a shame."

Then she told him of the call she had received, and that it was practically a question of losing her position if she persisted in riding.

He stood angrily beside her, knitting his eyebrows and drumming impatiently on the desk.

"Everybody is riding North, men, women and children, and if somebody else would only do it here they wouldn't notice me."

The big fellow stood lost in thought, seeming not to have heard her words, but in reality they had given him an idea. Suddenly he burst out laughing.

"Miss Jessie, if you will give me that wheel for a month, in exchange for my horse, Butterfly, and his keep, I will promise to let you have it back at the end of that time, to ride undisturbed for the rest of your life, and if I fail to keep my promise you can keep Butterfly."

"Oh, Cary, how good of you! But what are you going to do?" she said.

"Never mind; is it a bargain?" He put out his hand, and they shook hands on it, and Cary carried the wheel off, promising to send Butterfly around that night and that one of his men should take care of it for her.

Cary was riding the bicycle well by the next day, and the report had gotten about without anyone seeming to have started it, that he had taken it from Miss Jessie in exchange for his horse, Butterfly, which most people thought very foolish, though high society in Harmon slept once more in conscious satisfaction that the dignity of its educational institution had been preserved.

It was early one evening, a day or two after Cary had had the wheel, that he suggested to his sister and several girl cousins, who were taking tea there, that they should try it, as no one would see them at that hour. Of course they were ready to do so, and they had so much amusement out of it and the girls were so enthusiastic about it that the next night they came over to try it again, and the next and then every night, taking turns at the condemned wheel and constantly growing more and more charmed with it.

Cary had sent to New York for a man's bicycle, and as one by one the girls became expert riders the fever grew, even the Preston twins catching it, and Mrs. Preston, having been persuaded one evening to go over and see them ride, anxiously watched, not to see if they should appear with unruffled dignity, but that they were as clever as the others. So clever were they, in fact, that before the evening was over she had promised that they should each have one of their own if Cary would attend to the getting of them.

In this manner did Cary's plan prosper, and he would report progress to Miss Jessie every afternoon.

"I shall never be satisfied till I have the colonel's lady herself on a wheel," he said, roaring with laughter, for the lady was very portly.

Three weeks had passed, when one afternoon the twins' bicycles appeared. At once they sent over for Cary to come and inspect them, and when he arrived he found the family all out in front of the house trying them and discussing their merits.

The twins had raced around the circle of hard road that surrounded the lawn, and then insisted upon Cary trying the wheels and racing with them.

"Now, Mrs. Preston," said Cary as he dismounted, "you must try one. Don't be afraid."

"No one has dared to say that a Preston was afraid of anything," she answered proudly, "but I am too stout."

"It would make you thin if you would stick to it," he answered.

"Do you really think so?" said the lady. Bicycling was developing a new interest for her.

"I have not any doubt of it at all. Just try it once around the circle. Come now, I promise you on my honor not to let you fall."

And with the twins urging, too, the colonel's lady finally yielded.

There was the clatter of a horse's hoofs up the road, and between the two long rows of trees that led to the house came a chestnut horse, with the little trim figure seated on it sharply outlined against the glow of the setting sun.

The colonel's lady, intent upon keeping her balance, though Cary's strong arm was about her, heard nothing of it until the rider drew up in front of the door and sat immovable in amazement as the lady came puffing around the side of the circle. Cary cast one triumphant look at the rider, and Jessie, who had come to call, slipped lightly from the saddle. While she herself was tying the horse under a tree Mrs. Preston had also dismounted, and very much flushed, came forward to welcome her.

"Don't you like it?" said Jessie. "Is it not lovely? Oh, I am so glad you are riding; now no one will care if I do. And aren't they beauties?" she finished to the twins.

Mrs. Preston regarded her sharply, but there was only frank pleasure in the girl's face and she made up her mind to gracefully accept the situation, and just then the colonel himself came out.

Look out, girls," if your mother takes to riding, I reckon you will have trouble to keep up with her."

They wanted Jessie to try the new wheels, but she said she could not in her long habit; so she admired the twins while they showed how expert they were already, thanks to Cary, and she too, had a chance to give him one grateful look. When she was ready to go Cary helped her to mount, and whispered that he thought he could safely return her wheel in a day or two, and then with a happy heart she rode away toward the red evening sky.

There are many bicycles to-day in Harmon, although the colonel's lady has not ridden since that time; perhaps it is because Cary has ceased to urge her to ride.

"I really never believed she would try it," he said to Jessie the day he took her bicycle home to her, "but I meant to do my best to make her, and when you came clattering into the yard that day and saw her on it, I could have thrown my hat in the air, only if I had let go she would have fallen off."—New York Ledger.

HE CARRIED THE BASKET.—Men who have been married 10 or a dozen years are too seldom famous for extreme courtesy to their better halves; but sometimes they are, nevertheless, very "thoughtful." That was the case with Silas Perkins, who took his wife with him to the Pike county fair. Mrs. Perkins had on her arm a basket containing the dinner and supper for the pair. The crowd grew dense and Mr. and Mrs. Perkins began to be jostled about a great deal. "Here, give me that basket, Sairey," said Mr. Perkins. "That's real kind of you, Silas," said Mrs Perkins, giving up the basket. "Kind of me!" exclaimed Mr. Perkins, resenting the insinuation. "Gosh! I was afraid you'd get lost!"—Youth's Companion.

LIKELY TO GET IT.—That he resided in the country was proclaimed by the size of his grip-sack and by the utter absence of entente cordiale between the bottoms of his trousers and his shoe tops. He had taken his stand in the middle of the cable car tracks, by the side of the treasury, and after waiting a few minutes, called: "Hi! there!" to a gamin who was crossing the street. "What's chasin' yer?" asked the boy, who was a painful reminder of the decadence of juvenile courtesy. "Ain't nothin' chasin' me. What I want ter know is how ter get a Fourteenth street car." "That's easy. You jes' stand right still an' you'll git it. You may git it in the neck—but you'll git it."—Washington Post.

IN THE WINDY CITY.—"I read of a Chicago minister who displayed great presence of mind last Sunday when he discovered his church on fire during the service." "What did he do—order a collection taken so as to have the congregation leave quietly and speedily?" "No, better plan yet. He announced that Mrs. Smith-Brown-Jones-Robinson-Baker-Porkrib-Pygmete had been run over by a team in front of the church. Almost every man present exclaimed, "Heavens, my former wife!" and left the building."—Truth.

A German paper tells an amusing story of Cumberland, the thought-reader. On a journey from Vienna to St. Petersburg he entertained his fellow-passengers by guessing their thoughts. One of the travellers, a Polish Jew, who took the whole thing for a hoax, offered to pay Cumberland the sum of 50 rubles if he could divine his thoughts. Visibly amused, Cumberland acceded to his request, and said: "You are going to the fair at Nizhnee-Navgorod, where you intend to purchase goods to the extent of 20,000 rubles, after which you will declare yourself a bankrunt and compound with your creditors for 3 per cent." On hearing these words the Jew gazed at the speaker with reverential awe. He then, without uttering a syllable, drew out of the leg of his boot a shabby purse and handed him the 50 rubles. Whereupon the great magician triumphantly inquired, "Then I have guessed your thoughts, eh?" "No," replied the Jew, "but you have given me a brilliant idea."

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 23, 1896.

CANADA will hereafter observe Thanksgiving Day simultaneously with her American neighbors.

THE People's Party will get its candidates on the official ballot this fall, having secured the necessary 1000 signatures to nomination papers.

ILLINOIS is claimed for Bryan by 60,000 majority, according to Gov. Altgeld on his eastern trip last week. The Republican calculators set the figures at from 100,000 to 400,000 for McKinley. Believe either way you choose, and then wait until November 4th.

IT MAY be possible in the near future to make a tour of the world in 30 days. Prince Michael Hilkoff, the Russian minister of ways and commerce, who is in this country studying our railways, says that when Russia has finished her great trans-Siberian road this will be easily accomplished. The time now is about 66 days.

FOR some time the Springfield Republican has been waging an editorial war against the reckless handling of trunks and valises by baggage men, only to have the latter contend that all such were carefully handled. One of these friends of the trunk makers slammed a valise down in the Springfield station a day or two ago, and as if in protest a revolver shot was heard from within and the bullet lodged in the roof. Of course the valise was "carefully handled."

AFTER two years of a rainfall much below average, Nature seems to be attempting to make amends for her apparent slight or chastening, and has been giving rain in abundance during the past four weeks. It has been doing a vast amount of good, too, coming gently at intervals and soaking into the ground in such quantities that springs and streams will feel the benefit for months to come. Perhaps this is only a for-runner of a change for the better all around. Here's hoping.

WHEN the treasurer of the commonwealth attempts to collect campaign funds from corporations it is time he was "called down" in an emphatic manner. And yet that is what Treasurer Shaw did the other day when he requested the Worcester street railway company to contribute one-tenth of 1 per cent of its gross earnings to the Republican campaign fund, stating that he was acting for the Republican national committee. Mr. Shaw should let such matters alone while he is a servant of the commonwealth.

THE Waterbury clergyman who last week severely rebuked the audience at a church wedding for its unappeasable curiosity regarding the newly married couple, will doubtless receive the unspoken thanks of a large number who have, to a greater or less degree, been treated as was the couple in this instance. At the conclusion of the ceremony they started to leave the church, but were prevented by the spectators, who crowded about them. The clergyman commanded the audience to be seated and proceeded to lecture them severely for their conduct.

AFTER refusing for some time to allow the wives and children of Armenians naturalized in this country to join their husbands and fathers, the sultan has finally given permission for them to leave Armenia, and a lot of them arrived in New York this week, only to find that they would not be allowed to land because they could show no signs of being able to support themselves. The immigration commissioner says "It is all right to be sorry for Armenia, but we have duties to America." A prominent Armenian telegraphed the secretary of the treasury at Washington Tuesday, offering to furnish any reasonable bond which might be required in order to enable his countrymen to land.

PERHAPS is is just as well that the highwayman scare in this section subsided when it did. A certain portion of the community was fast approaching a state of nervous prostration, and revolvers were in brisk demand, many purchasers never having handled such a weapon before. In the hands of such persons a revolver is of more danger to friends than foes, and it is quite likely that the Monson individual who was scared enough to carry his revolver cocked in his hand when he went home at midnight was only prevented from shooting some harmless person by not meeting anybody. For the general welfare of the community it is well that the scare has passed.

NOT a few contracts and business orders which are to extend over the next twelve months are being made conditional on the election of McKinley; many mills are receiving such orders, and large advertising contracts are being placed in the same way. This is an indication of what may be expected in the business line if the advocate of the 53-cent dollar and his supporters should win in November. No one, not even the most confident of the free silver exponents, dares venture to suggest just what our monetary situation will be in case of Mr. Bryan's election, and under such circumstances it is no wonder that contracts are made with a loophole for escape in case of continued financial depression.

BELCHERTOWN'S cattle show, which has for years had the reputation of drawing the biggest crowds in this vicinity and being the place where fakirs flourished in all their glory, seems to have been decidedly more bizarre this year than usual, and the staid portion of the community begins to think it about time to call a halt. According to reports about all kinds of schemes and Midway exhibitions flourished, and the language openly used was not of the choicest; this in close proximity to the churches of the town seemed rather incongruous. From a "cattle show" the exhibition at Belchertown seems to have degenerated into a gathering of elements which the town might well do without.

IT IS unfortunate that the experience of Palmer's business men with corporations has been of such a nature that they seem to have lost confidence in anything which may be brought forward here. In these times when new industries are devoutly to be wished for and the opportunity to secure one carefully nourished, it is doubly unfortunate that one which promises much better than numerous schemes in which Palmer capital is invested, is allowed to drift out of town for the want of $3500. And yet the Brown Wagon Co. will go elsewhere for the lack of this sum. The business has been gradually extended until more capital is a necessity; other capitalists stand ready to furnish the greater portion, but Palmer men stand one side and let the concern go out of town.

THE ballot law commission, after an exhaustive hearing, has decided that the convention of the Democrats held in Faneuil Hall was the legal gathering, and has rejected the Music Hall nominations. The list of Democratic nominees for state offices, as it will appear on the official ballot, is:

Governor—George Fred Williams, Dedham.
Lieutenant-governor—Christopher T. Callahan, Holyoke.
Secretary—Joseph H. Potts, Lynn.
Treasurer—Thomas A. Watson, Braintree.
Auditor—Maurice J. Fitzgerald, Boston.
Attorney-general—John O'Donnell, Northampton.
Electors—At large, Ernest C. Marshall, Boston; by district, 1, William B. Mahoney, Westfield; 2, Joseph F. Callahan, Springfield; 3, Levi Barker, Worcester; 4, Henry J. Jaquith, Wellesley; 5, Michael O'Mahoney, Lawrence; 6, James P. Dearborn, Haverhill; 7, Edward H. Newell, Lynn; 8 John P. McCormick, Cambridge; 9, James J. Lanigan, Boston; 11, William D. Leahy, Milford; 12, Francis A. Hobart, Braintree; 13, Thomas J. Meaney, New Bedford.

GRAND REPUBLICAN RALLY.

Interesting Addresses by Congressman Gillett and Attorney-General Knowlton.

The Palmer Republican Club held a rousing rally at the opera house last evening. They were favored with good weather on this occasion, and as a result the house was crowded, the seating capacity being taxed to its utmost and many being obliged to stand. People were present from all the villages of the town, Monson, Brimfield, and other surrounding towns. There was a particularly large attendance of ladies. Before the exercises commenced a fine musical programme was rendered by the Second Regiment Band of Springfield. Several prominent citizens of the town and members of the Palmer Republican Club were seated upon the platform. District Attorney Gardner presided, and with a few fitting remarks introduced the speakers of the evening, Hon. F. H. Gillett of Springfield, and Hon. Hosea M. Knowlton of New Bedford. Both speakers were well received by the large audience, and were interrupted many times in their remarks by applause. Both speakers showed an extensive knowledge of the silver question. Congressman Gillett was the first speaker. He said in part: Mr. Bryan was reported yesterday as saying that "the republican platform proposes to surrender the right of self-government and to delegate to foreign nations the right to determine what kind of a financial system we should have." He seems to have dropped momentarily the appeal to class feeling, which has been the main burden of his speeches of late, and try to excite national feeling and pride, and by that means to bring voters to his support.

Certainly that is vastly more creditable than the attempts to stir up the prejudices of classes and sow dissensions and envy and hatred among our own citizens, but his argument and appeal is just as unfair and unfounded in one case as in the other. Is the United States renouncing its independence by adopting the same standard of value as other nations? Certainly Mr. Bryan would not have us prove our independence by adopting some standard for ourselves different from all other nations. We must have gold or silver, or both, and in deciding which is best for us the experience and practice of others are important. Our trade with silver countries is insignificant compared with our trade with gold countries. We sell five times as much to Europe alone as to all other nations combined. No matter what our standard may be, that trade balance must be settled in gold, and if we are on a silver basis, into all that trade enters not only the usual uncertainty of trade, but the additional uncertainty of the value of silver in gold, thus adding an additional risk, and making all the trade more speculative. Moreover, there is not a gold country in the world to-day that does not use both gold and silver as money. This is the kind of bimetalism the Republican party favors, one that uses both metals at the same time as money. This is the kind of bimetalism we have to-day.

Although we are on a gold standard we use vast quantities of silver as money, and every gold standard country does the same, but there is not a silver standard country in the world to-day that uses any gold as money along with silver. Every silver standard country uses silver alone. That is the condition to which we should surely come under a free coinage law, and that result is proved by the experience of other nations as certainly as by the calculations of theorists. To be sure, some of our opponents occasionally pretend that silver would at once rise to par, and that both metals would circulate, but they are contradicted, not only by experience and by economists, but also by their own arguments in other branches of the subject.

And if we are obliged to use the same standard as some other countries, if it is impossible to flock all by ourselves on some new metal, I would rather be associated with the gold than with the silver countries. Not only are they our best customers, but they are also the most powerful and enlightened nations of the earth. They are the ones with whom we are accustomed to measure ourselves, they are the ones we respect, who in every other aspect of civilization are far in advance of silver countries, and I am not disposed to believe that in this one branch of economic science they lag behind. We have all quoted with approval, "Better 50 years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay;" and I do not believe that Mexico and China are better leaders or associates than England, France and Germany.

I do not think that the science of finance is one of the things that is hidden from the wise and revealed to babes and sucklings, nor do I think that the benefits of the silver standard have escaped the knowledge of the savants of Europe to be discovered by the boy orator of the Platte.

There is not a silver standard country in the world where the working men can earn a fair day's pay, and inasmuch as the United States must have the same standard as some other nations, I think we had better associate with civilization and progress rather than with stagnation.

Attorney General Knowlton was the next speaker, and after paying complimentary remarks to Palmer and the presiding officer, Charles L. Gardner, spoke in part as follows:

There is something fascinating as well as inspiring about the word "free." It has been the theme of the most heroic songs and the most heroic deeds since the world began. And yet the word is not always in good company. When it is prefixed to the most holy of words, the word love, it implies the desecration of all that is pure and noble in the household and home. When it is prefixed to the word trade, we have learned to our cost that it means, not free trade for us, but for those beyond our shores, at our expense. I think a great many people have been drawn to the cause of Bryanism by something attractive in the expression "free silver." It has a generous ring, but it is worth while to consider for whom "free silver" is free. It means, as you have heard a great many times, a law under which any man may bring 412½ grains of silver to the United States mint, have it made in the shape of a coin, the words, "One dollar, in God we trust," stamped upon it, and then handed back. Free silver, then, is free to anybody who has silver to coin. But you and I, who have no silver to coin, what does it mean to us? It means enforced silver that every man must take, whether he will or not.

Moreover it means silver monometalism. It is free not only to the mine owner, it is free to all the world. Suppose you had a thousand dollars in gold. You can take it to any market in the world and buy two thousand ounces of silver and bring it back home and have it made into two thousand dollars. That is why, under a free coinage law, there is no bimetalism, but monometalism. Gold goes away for the purchase of silver to be made into money. Now what is the result? Why, there is nothing to use but silver money. Even if it follows that the value of silver appreciates, nobody claims that it is going to appreciate to any such degree as to be worth the price of the gold dollar to-day. It has long ceased to be worth intrinsically one-sixteenth of a gold dollar, and as no one will sell for less than an equivalent price, prices go up, wages go last of all perhaps, and we are now on a basis of a new and cheaper kind of money. Is anybody to be better off? Are you worth any more, my laboring friend, if you get $4 a day instead of $2 a day, and are obliged to pay double the value for fuel, for rent, for clothes, for everything else?

The hard times are not due to the lack of money. There was money enough in 1892. But there is more money now than then, in the United States, and in Massachusetts. The whole difficulty grows out of the idea that the prosperity of our industries and business depends upon the amount of money. It does not depend upon that at all; it depends upon the circulation of money. It is not the apparent presence or absence of money at all my friends; it is the presence of confidence in business that makes times good. Prosperity is fostered by confidence. It is the sun that shines upon the world of industry, and makes it grow green and bright; and it is only when a cloud comes between that sunshine and industry that times become hard. Suppose a billion of dollars are coined. You and I don't get any of them. You and I have lived long enough to learn that there is but one way of earning money. It was the blessing rather than the curse of the Father of all mankind that "By the sweat of his brow he should earn his daily bread." And it is only those who seek to find some way of getting money without working that see anything of prosperity in this delusion of 50-cent dollars coined for the silver mine-owner. Now as I have said before, confidence in the country is the source and the inspiration of all prosperity in the land; and it is only when a black cloud comes to shut off that sunshine that times become hard. What is that cloud to-day? It is the threat of the debasement of the standard value; it is the dishonest proposition to put the stamp of the government on 50 cents worth of silver and say that it is a dollar. It has been said to every man who has had 53 cents worth of silver in his hands, that it is as good as a dollar. The reason that silver dollars are as good as gold is because Uncle Sam is behind them, and holds them up. When free silver comes, there won't be any Uncle Sam behind them at all.

Now somebody may say, the silver is all right; it is the gold that has become scarce. Silver and everything else is valued in accordance with the laws of supply and demand, and nothing else. I took notice the other day to look over the price lists of things that are used every day. They say prices have gone down, indicating that gold has gone up; but the fact is that an ounce of silver will not, unless it has got the inscription, "In God we trust," on it, buy as much milk and coal as it would 40 years ago, whereas the gold will buy almost exactly the same quantity. But I haven't touched yet on what is deeper down than anything I have said yet. The people of this country believe in preserving their honesty. The assertions of the advocates of our new gospel are without national and individual honesty. The conscience of the American people is not easily aroused, but when once it is aroused and brought face to face with dishonesty, it has never faltered; and it is for that reason that I have never had any doubts of the election of William McKinley.

Not Guilty of Assaulting Mr. Tufts.

Herbert Powers of Monson, who was arrested on the charge of having committed the brutal assault upon Rev. James Tufts on the night of September 26th, was given a hearing in the district court Monday morning. He pleaded not guilty. Rev. James Tufts was the first witness for the commonwealth. He told the circumstances of the assault; how while he was on his way to his home and when within 100 yards of the house he was struck on the head several times and felled to his knees. A demand for his money was made by his assailant, and he handed over what loose change he had, and also a wallet which happened to be empty. He did not see the features of his assailant, and did not know who he was. He was a man about the size of the defendant, Powers. Dr. Jackson was the next witness and testified to having been called to the house of Mr. Tufts and to having dressed his wounds. He found that Mr. Tufts had sustained three bad scalp wounds. In his opinion these wounds were caused by a sharp-edged club of wood. Alonzo Gould was the next witness and gave the most important and forceful testimony against Powers. He testified that while going to Monson in company with his son, he met Mr. Tufts near the place at which he says he was assaulted. About four or five rods further on he passed a man walking quite fast in the same direction as Mr. Tufts was walking. He noticed him because of his peculiar walk. Soon after passing him, it came to his mind that it was Herbert Powers, for he said Powers always walked with "a peculiar swag and his head cocked back"; from his gait he thought the man was Powers; he could not see his face; he carried his right hand by his side as though he carried a club, but he did not see any club. He was corroborated by his son, J. H. Gould, who said that after the man had passed, he thought it was Powers from his peculiar walk, but that is the only reason he had for his belief.

The defendant, Powers, was then put on the stand and testified that he did not see Mr. Tufts on the evening of the 26th. He said he went to the Monson House between 6 30 and 7 o'clock, and remained there until the saloon was closed at about 10 o'clock. He gave the names of several persons whom he saw and talked with in the saloon. James E. Salisbury for the defense testified that he saw Powers at the saloon between the hours of 8 and 10; he also went home with Powers. The case was here continued until Tuesday morning, to allow the commonwealth to summon more witnesses. Joseph Skidmore was the first witness called Tuesday. He testified to having seen Powers in the saloon at about 8 o'clock. He could not remember at what time he left the saloon. John Maguire testified that he saw Powers at about 7 o'clock standing in front of Flynt's store. He did not see him again that night. Cornelius Sullivan, bar-tender at the Monson House, testified that he did not remember seeing Powers in the saloon on the evening of the 26th, but could not say whether he was there or not, in fact he did not remember who was there on that night, although the saloon was full of men. This ended the case of the commonwealth, and Powers had no further testimony to offer.

Judge Robinson then carefully reviewed the evidence. He said the most forceful testimony was that given by Mr. Gould and his son, but that was not sufficient to convict. He said that doubts which may arise from the evidence given always favor the defendant, and in this case many doubts had arisen which favored Powers. From the evidence submitted he could not find a probable cause of guilt, and so discharged Powers. The defendant did not understand the meaning of the word discharged, for he looked in blank astonishment at His Honor, but when Officer Osborne told him that he could go, a smile brightened up his face and he walked out of the court room, happy.

Experimental Road Building.

The steam roller has finished work on the Pleasant street strip of road, and users of that street appreciate the changed condition of affairs as far as it goes. A short strip of the street east from Church street was covered with broken stone which the tramps had cracked up, a couple of years ago, and the experiment proved so successful that Street Commissioner Brainerd was tempted to extend the strip, though on a somewhat different plan, now that he had the steam roller to work with. The street was excavated to a depth of about eight inches, then about six inches of coarse gravel was put in and rolled with the roller. The gravel was obtained from the bank in the Boston and Albany freight yard, and cost nothing but the hauling. On top of the gravel was put three inches of the stone broken by the tramps, which again cost practically nothing, and this was wet and thoroughly rolled. The whole was ballasted with a thin layer of screened gravel, and all rolled again. This strip is an experiment, but there seems no good reason why it should not be successful, as the gravel put in was of the very best quality for this kind of work. The heavy teaming which is done over the strip will give it a severe test, and if it proves durable other places will be attended to in the future.

District Court.

There was an unusually large grist of offenders in the court Monday. Two drunks from Bondsville were the first to have justice ground out to them; one paid $6 and the other $15 as a result. The rest of the morning was taken up with a hearing of Herbert Powers. In the afternoon D. M. Regon, H. B. Richardson and Frank Ganyea were charged with obtaining money under false pretenses. They are agents canvassing this vicinity for reels, ironing-boards and clothes-driers. They were accused of filling orders taken by Mrs. Clark, also an agent for the same articles, and taking money for the same, representing Mrs. Clark to be their agent. Lawyer Kenefick appeared for the men. Regon and Ganyea were discharged, but Richardson was bound over to the December term of the superior court in the sum of $200, which he furnished.

P. W. Lynch, charged with shooting Andrew Pinney, was brought into court Tuesday morning. By agreement of the counsel his case was continued until the 4th of November. He was held in the sum of $1500, which was furnished by William Saunders, Mrs. Ellen Grady and his mother, Mrs. Edward Lynch.

Mrs. Rosa Grise, wife of Alphonse Grise, died last Saturday after a prolonged illness. The funeral services were held Tuesday at St. Ann's Catholic church, Three Rivers, with a solemn requiem high mass at 9 30 a. m. The pall bearers were the bereaved husband and his seven brothers, Charles Grise of Indian Orchard, Joseph of Ware, Dr. H. P. and Benjamin Grise of West Gardner, Arthur of Springfield and E. A. of Colerain. The deceased was 37 years old, and during the many years she had resided in this village she held a high place in the estimation of all who knew her. Besides the many friends who regret her departure from this life, she leaves a husband and eight young children who deeply mourn the loss of an affectionate wife and loving mother. The bereaved family has the sympathy of the entire community in their affliction.

Leg Caught in an Elevator.

Phileos Beauregard met with a serious accident Friday while riding on the elevator in the mill. A number of boxes were on the elevator, and one of them hit the floor above and fell in such a way as to crowd the other boxes against Mr. Beauregard, pushing one leg off the elevator so that it was crushed between it and the floor. Drs. Holbrook and Smith were summoned and set the bone. For a few days it was doubtful whether or not it would be necessary to amputate the fractured limb, but now it is hoped it can be saved.

R. M. & Theo. Reynolds have a small quantity of plain and fancy cloakings for sale very low to close out. Inquire of John Lines, Supt., at the South Mill.

Death of George M. Severy.

George M. Severy, 56, a prominent farmer in the west part of the town, died yesterday forenoon at 11 o'clock of odema of the lungs, after an illness of three days. Mr. Severy was borne in East Deerfield, Maine, June 22, 1840. He had little chance to attend school there, so moved to East Longmeadow, Mass., in 1855, where he lived two years, then went to Chicopee Falls and remained at the latter place until the breaking out of the rebellion. There he attended for two or three years a high school which was taught by E. P. Nettleton, afterwards captain of Mr. Severy's company and colonel of his regiment.

He enlisted in Co. E, 31st Mass. Vols., as corporal, Nov. 15, 1861, going into camp at Pittsfield at what was known as "Camp Seward." Here the company remained until about the 1st of January, when it went to Lowell, where the regiment was organized with Col. O. G. Gooding in command. They left Lowell a week or two later for Boston, and boarded the U. S. transport Mississippi for Ship Island. This regiment was on the memorable expedition with Gen. B. F. Butler to New Orleans, encountering a severe storm off Cape Hatteras and running upon Frying Pan Shoal en route. At New Orleans they joined the department of the Gulf for the purpose of bombarding and capturing New Orleans. The 31st was the first regiment to land at New Orleans. Remaining there until after the 1st of August, Mr. Severy was detailed to help drill the first white regiment ever raised in the confederate states, the 1st Louisiana, which organized at the old U. S. barrrck just below New Orleans Aug. 8, 1862. When the regiment was organized he was promoted to orderly sergeant of Co. K., 1st La., and in the next few months participated in numerous engagements, being in the La Fourche campaign. He took part in the battles of Grand Lake, Irish Bend, Port Hudson, Cox's Plantation and Monett's Ferry, besides several other lesser engagements. Mr. Severy was promoted to 2d lieutenant Feb. 6, 1863, and the last four months of his service was in command of Co. Q, 1st La., which acted as headquarter guard for Gen. Cameron. Until he was mustered out of service July, 12, 1865, he was never in the hospital nor off duty, and never had a furlough during the three years and eight months of his service.

Mr. Severy came to Monson about 28 years ago, and has been a worthy citizen, always interested in the welfare of the town, and will be greatly missed by the townspeople. He was a prominent member of Marcus Keep post of this place, having been its commander for two years, 1893 and 1894. He has for a long time been the treasurer of the Monson Grange.

On Monday he was taken sick with a painful swelling under his right ear, which gradually worked around his throat to his left ear and caused his death. He leaves a wife and a sister, Mrs. W. W. Gleason of Cheyenne, Wy., and 4 children, one daughter, Edith L. of Chicopee Falls, William G. of New Haven, Frank E., who is employed at W. N. Flynt & Sons' store, and Arthur M., who is at home. The funeral will be held at his late home to-morrow at 2 30 p. m.

The class of last year, numbering 25, will take the second course, and a class in the first course will be formed, to be open to either sex. A class of women only will be formed if it is desired.

Will Carleton will lecture in Memorial Hall Monday evening, November 9, under the auspices of the Woman's Benevolent Society of the Methodist church. The society has pledged $100 toward the church repairs, and will try to raise it by this means. Tickets will be on sale at G. L. Keeney's drug store, and by members of the society.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church held its annual meeting at the parsonage Monday evening, electing the following officers: President, Miss E. Augusta Fay; vice presidents, Mrs. William H. Marble, Mrs. Sophia Ross; recording secretary, Mrs. Henry E. Bugbee; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Lucinda H. White; corresponding secretary, Miss Sophia Ross; treasurer, Miss Samantha Ross.

What might have proved a serious accident occurred near the W. N. Flynt Granite Company's office Tuesday morning. J. W. McLeon, drummer for a Boston steel company, was getting into one of Marcy's teams to be driven to Palmer, when the horse suddenly became frightened. Mr. McLeon grabbed the bits and the horse ran, dragging him some distance, the carriage running over him. He fortunately escaped with a few bruises and torn clothes. The horse was stopped near the Rindge place by one of the quarrymen.

The Ludlow Manufacturing Company has decided to start one-half of the upper mill, the part which was shut down early this fall, to work over the jute left from the fire. It is hoped that the mill will continue to run all winter.

Fatal Runaway Accident.

Luther Butler, son of R. B. Butler, was the victim of a fatal runaway accident last Friday afternoon. He drove a pair of young horses, which were hardly broken, up to the watering trough near the public square and instead of getting down to uncheck them, walked out upon the pole. This frightened the horses, who ran away with young Butler standing on the pole between them. They dashed into the Republican campaign flag pole, the shock breaking it off about half way up. The pole of the wagon struck the flag staff and was broken and Butler was badly injured, his left leg from the knee to the hip being shattered and the bone protruding through the flesh. He was taken to the Springfield hospital, where he died at 9.30 p. m. The accident was witnessed by a large number of people.

Alonzo Jones returned from Raleigh, N. C., this week, where he has been visiting his brother and friends for two weeks. He reports the weather so cold he could not finish his stay as he intended; he prefers the north in cold weather.

To-morrow will be the last chance to get registered, and the registration board will be in session from 12 o'clock noon until 10 p. m. Several persons got their naturalization papers at the Eastern Hampden district court last Saturday, and will register this week. There are several others who should register.

Mrs. Freeman returned Tuesday from Webster, where she was so hastily summoned last week to care for her husband, who was fatally injured by falling from a railroad bridge. No little indignation is expressed against the railroad company which allows such a death-trap in its depot yard. Ten persons are known to have fallen into it and been killed or severely injured; $10 would securely protect the place, and it is strange that a railroad company allows it to remain to catch any stranger who may take the wrong way in the dark. There is a general feeling that the place should be abolished.

WARREN.

The Pomona Grange met in the town hall Wednesday.

Mrs. Torrey of East Main street entertained the whist club Monday evening.

Dinner was served by the hostess, and the day passed in a social manner.

Want an Electric Road from Southbridge.

A committee from the board of trade, consisting of W. H. Fairbank, W. L. Curtis, G. E. Tarbell and W. M. Drake, visited Southbridge Tuesday to try and convince the directors of the Southbridge electric road that an extension to Warren would benefit their line. They claimed that such a road could be built for $25,000 less than one to Palmer, and that a branch to Warren would not be opposed by the Boston and Albany road, as one to Palmer, to connect with the New London Northern, might be.

WARE.

J. C. Moody, formerly writing master in the public schools, has moved his household furniture to Springfield.

For Weak Men With Nervous Debility This is Certainly the Chance of a Lifetime.

Weak men suffering from nervous debility, weakened powers and exhausted vigor, can now take new hope. Here is something which will powerfully interest them. It is a fact that until now sufferers have been debarred from seeking a cure by the great specialists in these complaints owing to the cost of the travel to the large city and the high fees charged by these eminent physicians.

Here, therefore, is a chance for weak men in our community which should not be lost. Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who has the largest practice in the world, and who is without doubt the most successful specialist in curing this class of diseases, offers to give free consultation by mail to all weakened, vigorless, nerve-exhausted men. You have the privilege of consulting Dr. Greene by letter describing your complaint and he will, after carefully considering your condition, send you a letter fully explaining all your symptoms, telling you everything about your complaint so plainly that you will understand exactly what ails you. He will also give you his advice, based upon his vast experience and wonderful success in treating and curing such cases, as to just what to do to get cured. All this will cost you nothing and you can thus have consulted with the best-known physician and acknowledged most successful specialist in the world, without leaving home and at no expense whatever. The Doctor is the discoverer of that greatest of medicines, Dr. Green's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and he has discovered many other most able remedies. Write to him now, for this is the chance of a lifetime to get cured which you may never have again.

FREE! FREE!

To Kidney Sufferers.—An Opportunity Worthy of Your Notice.

If you suffer with kidney disease or any ailment arising from an improper action of the kidneys or urinary organs this offer we make to the people of Palmer should interest you. In the advancement of medical science the kidneys, being almost the organs of the greatest importance to human health, have not been neglected, and in placing before you such a cure as Doan's Kidney Pills, the proprietors recognize how far so many statements of the makers of similar preparations have fallen short of their claims, being convinced that no remedy for kidney complaints in existence equals Doan's Kidney Pills for such ailments; strengthened in these convictions by letters that are daily received of the work they are doing for mankind's benefit, old backs and young backs are being constantly freed from never ceasing aches, and many a lame and shattered one, stooped and contracted, is strengthed, invigorated and infused with new life. With such a medicine, an offer of this kind can be made without hesitancy, for while we lose the box we give to you, we make a friend that assists us in the sale of many others.

ONE FULL BOX

of Doan's Kidney Pills will be given away free to every person suffering with kidney ailments at the undersigned address. First come, first served, and only this one chance offered. Remember this is not a sample box, but a regular size box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which retails at 50c. For those in the country who cannot call in time, a full box will be mailed, in response to all letters received up to and including Nov. 10th.

Remember, free distribution one day only, Friday, Nov. 6th, from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m., at LeGro & Lynde's, Palmer, Mass.

WOMEN VOTE

For President.

For the first time in the history of this country an opportunity for women to publicly express their choice for president is offered. The method is unique and will result in showing on Nov. 4th just what effect the woman's vote will have on national affairs.

A manufacturer who has business relations with most of the prominent newspapers in the United States, proposes the plan as follows:

All [illegible]en over 18 are entitled to one vote. The vote by states will be shown in [illegible]s every week until Nov. 4th. [illegible]are requested to read more than [illegible] of the question and act upon their [illegible]gment. Write the name of candi[illegible] a postal card and write your own [illegible]d address clearly, also city and state. [illegible]lower left hand corner give the name [illegible]aker or grocer who knows you.

[illegible] precaution is to prevent flooding the mail with fictitious votes. Names unknown to grocer or banker will be thrown out. Be very careful to write clearly and an acknowledgment of the receipt of each vote will be sent to the fair voter. Send the postal to Postum Cereal Food Coffee Co., Battle Creek, Mich. It is urged that every earnest woman will not hesitate to expend a penny to register her preference at this most interesting period of National history.

This company have a national reputation and pledge their integrity and honor to report the vote exactly as received, without fear or favor. A sworn statement of the final vote polled up to 7 p. m. Nov. 4th will be published in the week ending Nov. 7th, and the vote as it progresses will be shown every week between now and then.

Report from the Postum Co. states that the ladies are voting freely from all sections of the country. The flood of postal card votes is being accurately registered, but the company request that the public bear with them patiently until the next issue, when the first report by states will appear.

Don't think that your liver needs treating if you are bilious. It don't. It's your stomach. That is, your stomach is really what causes the biliousness. It has put your liver out of order.

See what's the matter with your stomach. Sick stomach poisons liver and then there's trouble. Shaker Digestive Cordial cures stomach and then all's well. That's the case in a nutshell.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is no secret. Formula on every bottle. But it's the simple, honest way it's made, the honest Shaker herbs and other ingredients of which it's composed, that makes it so efficacious.

Any real case of indigestion and biliousness can be cured with a few bottles of Shaker Digestive Cordial. Try it.

Sold by druggists, price 10 cents to $1.00 per bottle.

PALMER HISTORY GLEANINGS.

BY O. P. ALLEN.

XVII.

Rev. Moses Baldwin.

It is not my intention to rewrite the history of Mr. Baldwin, but simply to add some things which have come to light since the history of the town was published, and to correct an error of statement which crept into the history relating to the location of the farm which he bought of the town. It is there stated that "this farm lay three-fourths of a mile south of the old meetinghouse, on what was known as the Stafford and Greenwich Turnpike." The fact is, that when Mr. Baldwin came to Palmer he bought of the town, Aug. 19, 1761, the farm originally owned by Rev. Mr. Harvey, and later by Rev. Robert Burns. He agreed to pay the town £150 for this farm within five years. He sold the farm the same day to Joshua Shaw for £300. This farm is located near Cedar Swamp, and is now owned by Mr. Forsman. Sept. 1, 1761, Mr. Baldwin bought of Joshua Shaw for £300 the farm now owned by Charles E. Fuller. Here he soon after built the house now owned by Mr. Lawrence, and continued to reside there till his death, Nov. 2, 1813, at the age of 81.

Mr. Baldwin's salary was so meager that he was obliged to add farming to his duties of a pastor, in order to sustain himself and family. He was a man of thrift, reared a large family, educated three of his sons at Dartmouth, and left some property to his family on a salary which would starve a missionary in these days. Mr. Baldwin made his will March 23, 1809, in which he devised one-half of his farm to his son Moses, the other half having been deeded to his son William, deceased, his wife to have the benefit of one-third of the whole farm during her life. He also willed his wife the use of all his money. The inventory of his property, taken Nov. 6, 1813, was as follows:

50 acres of land in Palmer with buildings,	$825.50
½ acre of land and orchard in Monson,	15.00
Personal property,	198.69
Household furniture,	155.65
Library,	29.83
Wearing apparel,	5.00
	$1229.17

Approved by John Shaw, John Watson, David King.

PARSON BALDWIN'S LIBRARY.—Janney's Latin Dictionary; Cicero's Orations; Greek Lexicon; Horace; Bailey's Dictionary; Geographical Grammar; Brown's Elements; Gration's Collections; Haven's Dialogues, 3 vols.; Young's Night Thoughts, 4 vols.; Greek Testament; Greek Grammar; Cruden's Concordance; Hopkins's System; Edwards on Religious Affairs; Trumbull's History of Connecticut; Collections of Sermons; Edward's Reply to Taylor; Johnson against Universal Salvation; Harvey's Works, 6 vols.; Gratt's Logic; Edwards against Chauncy; William's Sermons; Gilbert Tenants Sermons; Safety of Appearing in the Righteousness of Christ; Trumbal on Redemption; Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul; View of Covenant Grace; American Letters; Backus Sermons; Flavel's Works; Psalm Book; Two Bibles.

These books were devised equally to his wife and children, John, Moses, Nabby, (wife of Asa Hamilton,) Polly, (wife of Alpheus Converse, Jr.) and to the son of William Baldwin, deceased.

Judging from the above list we readily discern the sources from which the stalwart pastor of the last century drew his inspiration; we can well believe he was securely grounded in the doctrines of Calvin, and strengthened by the serene life of Edwards. There was no nonsense in the composition of his library; besides a sprinkling of the classics it was made up from solid substances. The pabulum with which he reenforced his mind was of the sternest material, but he had the happy faculty to transmit it into words of power which found an enduring lodgement in the hearts of his people. His dry and astute studies did not dwarf his soul, nor quench the vivacity of his spirit, for he possessed most genial manners and carried sunshine wherever he went; indeed he must have been a remarkable man to have kept such a hold upon the affections of his people during half a century. He certainly had great resources of fortitude and patience to enable him to go through the period of trial when his parish was borne down by the burden imposed upon it, by the demands of the struggle for freedom, deprived as it was of many sources of production common to many other communities; but he lived through it all, "sustained by an unfaultering trust," till the end came in the peace and sweet serenity of a green old age. His remains, and those of his family, repose in the ancient cemetery at the Old Center, but the memory of this truly good man "lingers still like the fragrance of the roses in the shattered vase."

Written for the PALMER JOURNAL.

UNDER THE PINES—ANNIVERSARY DAYS.

Almost everyone has some special day or days in which memory goes back to certain events and places when extraordinary joy or sorrow flooded their whole being.

At the Congregational church in Waterloo, Iowa, Oct. 4, Dr. John O. Stevenson repeated the first sermon he preached in Waterloo, ten years ago. One who was present on both occasions and takes note of things in his memorandum, wrote in the first instance: "Brother Stevenson's first sermon in Waterloo—excellent, and well received. About one hundred and fifty present." (What he wrote about the second may be deferred till 1906).

On the fourth day of October, 1834, as the writer well remembers, his father took him in the one-horse wagon to the nearest stage for Boston, on his way to enter college at Amherst, Massachusetts. In room No. 77 of the Bromfield House, where he spent the night, scarcely sleeping at all in his ecstatic anticipations, he was reminded of the chamber where Bunyan's pilgrim "slept till break of day, and then awoke and sung. The name of the chamber was Peace, whose window opened towards the sunrising." The next day from Boston to Worcester, by stage, and the next to Amherst, a little more than one hundred miles in three days! At Amherst four years of earnest student life near the graceful range of Holyoke mountains, amid the most enchanting scenery in the United States, and associated with some of the noblest men and teachers of that early day.

Mrs. Barrett Browning had not yet dawned upon the world in the full splendor of her genius, but what she so finely wrote afterwards had dawned upon the college boy, in some measure, though he had to wait for her to say it:

"There are days, indeed,
In which the fibrous years have taken root
So deeply, that they quiver to their tops
Whene'er you stir the dust of such a day.

"And none of all those days has been more lost
Than sweet verbena, which, when brushed against,
Will hold you three hours after by the smell,
In spite of long walks on the windy hills."

I have ventured slightly to alter one of her lines to suit my purpose, but she will never mind it.

The point I wish to make is, that we carefully note the marked experiences of our life as they occur, so that they may be readily recalled and enjoyed in after years, when the present begins to grow less refulgent and the future is still veiled and only known "in part." M. K. C.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Why

Do people buy Hood's Sarsaparilla in preference to any other,—in fact almost to the exclusion of all others?

Because

They know from actual use that Hood's is the best, i. e., it cures when others fail. Hood's Sarsaparilla is still made under the personal supervision of the educated pharmacists who originated it.

The question of best is just as positively decided in favor of Hood's as the question of comparative sales.

Another thing: Every advertisement of Hood's Sarsaparilla is true, is honest.

MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER

Praises in High Terms the Grandest of Medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Those Who Are Weak, Tired, Nervous, Out of Health and Suffering, Will Take Renewed Hope and Be Cured by Using This Wonderful Medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Men of highest prominence in this country like Lieut.-Governor Thomas of Vermont (Montpelier, Vt.,) Congressman Andrew Williams of Plattsburg, N. Y., Senator Geo. W. Randall of Waterbury, Vt., Ex. Speaker of House of Representatives, Chas. J. Noyes of Boston, Mass., Hon. Henry Robinson, Mayor of Concord, N. H., Judge Edwin C. White of Hyde Park, Vt., Secretary of the Senate, Hon. Frederick W. Baldwin of Barton, Vt., and many other eminent public men throughout the United States are using, endorsing and publicly recommending the people to use this wonderful medical discovery of the age, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

Representative women of our land also are enthusiastic in praise of its marvelous power to cure, among them being Vice Pres. of the Massachusetts Total Abstinence Society, Mrs. S. Louise Barton of Boston, Mass, who was cured by this grand medicine.

Now comes a letter from one of the most widely known women in America, Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, who is loved and honored by everybody, and who thus speaks to the people out of her deep regard for humanity and her earnest desire to see the weak, tired, feeble, nervous and suffering restored again to health and strength.

She has personally witnessed the really wonderful effects of Dr. Greene's Nervura in curing several of her friends, and for the good of others, for those who are out of health, she writes to the people what she knows and has herself witnessed of the remarkable beneficial and health-giving effects of Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Mrs. Beecher says:—"I have given some of Dr. Greene's Nervura to several friends who I thought would be benefitted by it. They speak highly of it, and feel they have been much benefitted by its use."

"These people are very responsible witnesses as to the beneficial character of the medicine, and I am ready to vouch for the honesty of their approval of Dr. Greene's Nervura.

"If needed in my own case, I certainly should use it."

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the best medicine and surest restorer of health the world has ever known.

All who are nervous, weak, tired, exhausted in nerve power and physical strength; who are sleepless, wake tired and unrefreshed, without strength and energy for the day's work; who have poor blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, backache, dyspepsia, indigestion, gas, bloating, faint feelings, loss of appetite, constipation, kidney or liver complaint, should immediately use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will make you well. It gives a splendid complexion, making the cheeks glow and the eyes sparkle with health. No remedy was ever so successful in causing people to gain flesh. By strengthening the digestive functions, promoting assimilation and enriching the blood, it causes the person to gradually increase in weight until the thin and slender parts assume a rounded and beautiful contour.

Dr. Greene's Nervura is the prescription of the most successful physician in curing nervous and chronic diseases, hence it must of necessity be perfectly adapted to cure just these complaints. Its discoverer, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

GRAND OPENING OF THE FALL AND WINTER SEASONS,

Monday, August 31st, 1896,

OF

OLD DR. SWEET'S SANITARIUM

and Medical Institute,

18 VERNON STREET, - - SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Invalids will now be received and treated as inmates at the institution, or as home patients at reasonable rates. Old Dr. Sweet, the World-Famous Natural Healer, Bone Surgeon and Magnetic Physician, whose visits to Springfield the past twenty years and whose astonishing cures in Western Massachusetts yet remain the wonder of the age, has established the above institution in Springfield for the benefit of a multitude of patients residing in this section.

So long have the Sweet Family been identified with the cure of lameness that it is conjectured by many persons that they treat no other ailments, whereas their most startling successes for many years have been the cure of Obscure Chronic Diseases of almost every kind. In order to provide for the foregoing, the latest and most efficient discoveries may be found at Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium, in fact those only are employed in the private hospitals of metropolitan cities.

These, united with those wonderful systems of medicine which from father to son have descended from generation to generation of the Sweet family of Rhode Island for more than two centuries; thus equipped is it not presumable that their success in the cure of obstinate types of disease will be more certain than attends the ordinary methods of office or drug medication.

Whether rich or poor, black or white, the stricken invalid needs the best medical service obtainable. The workingman whose capital is in his limbs, his nerves and muscles, how necessary if impaired that it should be strengthened both surely and with the least delay.

Have you not speculated with DRUG TREATMENT long enough? Why not try the private infirmary system, combining the best of all, for a while? Your life hangs upon your decision. Old Dr. Sweet has called to his aid in providing for his multitude of patients,—a proof of his unparalleled success in Springfield, DR. EDWARD RAY, a gentlemen of rare culture and medical attainments, a graduate of Harvard University, with extensive clinical and hospital experience, who has been given charge of the Surgical Department of Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium for the coming season.

This institution is now open to receive applicants for treatment under the famous Sweet Method, providing them with rooms and board at very low rates, with PERSONAL TREATMENT DAILY, or those who desire to visit the institution occasionally, yet live at home.

Persons of VERY limited means are thus enabled to receive the most scientific medical service provided by medical science to-day. The inhabitants of Western Massachusetts may be assured that Dr. Sweet will not rest content until he has provided for the people the MOST EFFICIENT systems of medical treatment extant. Whatever money or ingenuity can procure to make his institution THE FIRST in New England will be cheerfully provided. Success is the SINE QUENON. As his professional duties multiply—as they surely must—experts in the various branches of the "healing art" will be added to his staff. The best is none too good.

Pleased with the "City of Homes" as a permanent place of residence, Dr. Sweet has removed his family hither and indulges the hope that this fact will be appreciated by those wishing to avoid the uncertainty that attends the service offered by itinerant practitioners. Male and Female operators, assistants, nurses, etc., provided. Terms reasonable. Consultation, examination and advice free to the afflicted.

ACCIDENT DEPARTMENT. Athletes, Bicycle Riders and others suffering from sudden accident please take notice. Bring them here. Prompt service.

No Telephone in Heaven.

"Now I can wait on baby," the smiling merchant said,
As he stooped and softly toyed with the golden curly head.
"I want oo' to tall up mamma," came the answer full and free,
'Wif yo' telephone an' ast her when she's tummin' back to me?"

"Tell her I'se lonesome, 'at I don't know what to do,
An' papa cries so much I guess he must be lonesome too.
Tell her to tum to baby, 'tause at night I dit so 'fraid,
Wif nobody here to tiss me, when the light begins to fade.

"All froo de day I wants her, for my dolly's dot so tored
Fum the awful punchin' Buddy gave it wif his 'ittle sword;
An' ain't nobody to fix it since mamma went away,
An' poor 'ittle lonesome dolly's dittin' thinner ever' day."

"My child," the merchant murmured, as he stroked the anxious brow,
"There's no telephone connection where your mother lives at now."
"Ain't no telephone in heaven?" and tears sprang to her eyes,
"I fought dat God had ever'ting wif him up in the skies."

THE SPOILS OF WAR.

Everywhere has a story of the administration of Franklin Pierce, who had been inaugurated President and was well established in the White House. Uncle Sam Milburn, who was known as the Great Unsaddled War-horse of the Mohawk Valley, was on his way to Franklin Pierce, with three of his best friends, all of whom bore upon their persons an intense desire for an office.

"You'll git your little places, boys," said Uncle Sam, as he leaned back, and added materially to the vaporous product of the smoking-car.

"Jest you wait till we git there. Frank 'll do anything in the world fur me. I've wrote him we're comin' an' he'll either be at the depot himself to meet us, or send the best man he's got a-layin' 'roun' loose.

"Frank says to me when he was a-runnin', 'You stick to me, Mr. Milburn, and I'll stick by you. If I'm elected, you come to the White House and tell me what you want.' Ain't that enough, boys? I'm a-goin'!

"When we git to the house, I'll say, 'Frank, I don't want no office; don't make no mistake on that. The offices that I earn is all held by my friends. An' here's three of 'em.'

"Frank'll say, 'Milburn, whatever you decide that you want, your friends shall not want in vain. Here's the offices, an' these is your rooms while you stay in the city. Your friends is my friends. Gentlemen, here's the best I could find in the cellar when I come here.'"

When the train rolled into the dingy old Washington depot of those days the President was not there, and the honest-hearted old Sam asked the coachmen of five of the best carriages present, if that was Frank's rig. But in each case he was disappointed.

"I can't quite understan' it boys," he said, with some sorrow but no bitterness in his tone. "He didn't git the letter, that's sure. We'll all go to the tavern temp'rary, till I kin send him word we're in town, an' then, within thirty minutes, you'll see the national steeds a-bearin' down on us."

They all walked to the nearest hotel, and after a messenger had been despatched to the President to tell him where to find them, they sat down to one of the worst suppers that had probably been cooked in the whole country that afternoon. "Never mind, boys," Sam would say between mouthfuls, "we'll piece this out when we git to the house."

But the national steeds did not come bearing down upon them; and Uncle Sam concluded that Frank was out of town for the day. "We'll go over to-morrer mornin' an' hev it all explained, an' git the offices. Your salary will begin to-morrer, boys, instid o' to-day. That's all the difference it'll make, and I wouldn't wonder a bit if Frank'd date 'em back."

After a breakfast, which was very much like the supper, except that it was a trifle worse, the four walked over to the White House. At polite attendant was at the door, and informed them that the president was home, but could not be seen until the next day at two o'clock.

"But you tell Frank it's me!" insisted the war-horse. "Sam Milburn, from the Mohawk Valley. Tell him I'm here, with three of my best friends, an' hev been in town all night."

The attendant smiled, and said he would tell him, but it would be of no use; there was a rule about these things, and it had to be observed.

"They've carried their rules so far boys, that he's never got my letters," said Sam, rather bitterly, as they walked back to another gastronomic wreck. "I shan't say anything about it to Frank, fur he ain't goin' to have his feelin's hurt—not by me; but I shall hint to him for to make 'em give him his letters every day, just as they come."

When at last they gained access to the White House, they had to wait in an antechamber a matter of some two hours. At the end of that time they were ushered into the room where "Frank" was. Sam was withheld by an usher from rushing up to him immediately. Indeed, he did enunciate the words "Say, Frank!" in rather a loud tone, but was hushed. The President was too busy to look that way; he was engaged in conversation with a long, thin, well-dressed man, and it seemed as if he never would get through.

At last Sam and his friends were brought up to the table behind which the President was sitting. Sam had waited so long, and was so homesick on account of his friends, that he felt almost like weeping. Indeed, the tears did stand in his eyes.

"Frank, ol' feller, I'm glad to see ye at last!" he shouted, holding out both hands. "These 're—"

But something in Frank's manner stopped him. The President had been looking over the cards, and said, stiffly:

"Ah, yes, very happy to see you, I'm sure, Mr. Miller."

"Milburn! Milburn! Milburn!" shouted the political pilgrim. "Old Sam Milburn, the unsaddled an' unbridled warhorse of the Mohawk Valley!"

"Certainly; certainly;" replied the President, each word an icicle. "And you, Mr. Hall, and you Mr. Sutton, and you Mr. Van Dam. And now, what can I do for you?—especially for you, Mr.—ah—Millington—whom I believe I have met before—"

Sam stood among the ruins of his demolished castle, with the chill waves of disappointment rising higher and higher about him. But he bravely stood his ground.

Rear of main store.

Hundreds of new fall cloaks are here to-day.

It's a fresh stock we invite you to weekly.

If you wonder why such a cloak business centers here at a time of such general depression, come and investigate. The business and the reasons for it will be found in the same room.

Women's jackets, $5 to $50
Women's capes, $3.95 to $40.
Children's reefers, $2.95 to $15
Misses' boucle jackets, $5, actual value $7.

Women's Waists.

Long live the separate skirt and fancy waist! The combination may be disastrous to a degree to storekeepers, for there's economy in the combination; but women have the advantage of a widely usable wardrobe. A few skirts and a few waists give opportunity for infinite variety in dress.

In the Character of a Farmer.

A hay-seed, people call me. I may be tarnation slow,
While the breezes through my whiskers may forever sigh and blow.
But I've read the papers reg'lar, and I've 'bout made up my mind
That I won't take no man's say so, and in votin' go it blind.

I ain't up in economics and I hevn't studied law,
For this old place has mostly kept me hustlin' since the war.
But I can't just see the benefit 'twill be to you and me,
This tinkerin' with the currency and makin' silver free.

I've read what Mr. Bryan's said to farmers everywhere,
That if they'd vote for him he'd give them money free as air;
That the stringency of money, fall in prices, all must be Attributed to what he calls the crime of seventy-three.

This kind of talk it may go down with farmers South and West,
But I for one can't see jest how we're all to be so blest,
By hevin' twice the dollars that we've ever hed or more,
When every silver plunket's wuth 'bout half it was before.

Just 'spose we heve some money in the bank across the way,
That we've saved for many a year against the comin' rainy day—
Now, for every dollar saved, why I tell you 'tisn't sense
To say we'd be the gainers by receivin' fifty cents.

If the sun of Bryan's beneficence is ever goin' to shine,
I think 'twill be upon the chap who owns a silver mine—
So when I come to cast my vote at comin' next election,
'Twill be for him who stands for honest money and protection.

A GAME POSTPONED.

It had been snowing for two days, and now the snow-ploughs were out, and the first really good sleighing of the winter would begin.

The great fields lay in unbroken whiteness. The woods along the banks of the Iowa river were billows of snow. The large farm-houses, and the number and size of the barns and other outlying buildings, gave evidence of the richness of the soil that lay buried and resting for another harvest.

Judge Hilton's house had the distinction of being built of brick. There was a dignity in its solidity over the usual white frame houses on the surrounding farms that well became the dignity of the judge.

The judge was New England born and bred. There is a veneration for Puritan ancestry in the entirely Western soul that the Puritan mind still has for good old Puritan blood.

Isabel Hilton was her father's housekeeper and only child. The mother had died while she was a baby, and she had ruled the house and been ruled by her father since that time.

She had all her father's reserve and pride of family, and at the same time his happy nature and gracious manner, that won her friends when she desired to make friends. Those who found it impossible to win their way into her favor, called this reserve in Isabel, her "down East airs." There was a discouraging belief among the young men in the country around, some of whose fathers owned farms and herds of cattle large enough to divide and establish them in enviable beginnings, that if the judge thought them worthy to win his daughter's love there would never be an opportunity to gain the consent of the young lady.

The judge had theories against Isabel's entertaining young men alone, nor would he permit her to go with any escort but himself.

The privilege of spending the evening with Isabel, in the presence of her father, was considered a mark of distinction, and held the one so honored on the wave of hope.

"If a fellow had the back-bone to out-sit the judge some night, he might propose to the daughter," was the comment Mr. Holderman made to his son one day. Clint Holderman had been one of Isabel's most persistent admirers.

"The trouble with all of you is, you go there shaking in your boots, and talk to the judge and come away with the big head because you dared to do that; but I tell you, if I was a young fellow I'd out-sit him till the break of day. It's some such pluck as that the judge is looking for. He raised her, and he knows her value; and she ain't going cheap to none of you. If you can go in ahead of the other fellows and tow her in, I'll give you $1000 and deed you a section of land. Come, now, let's see what you'er made of?"

In some way his lordly promise got adrift the current of the country gossip, and roused the admirers of Isabel, one and all, to new interest in the contest. Large stories were told of the late hours the judge kept that winter with Isabel's suitors.

Clint Holdman drove to the brick house early on the evening that he had set his mind with flint-like determination to give his father's advice the trial.

It was a cold night, and as he sped along in his new cutter, drawn by a handsome span of black horses, and well tucked in with buffalo robes, his heart was warm with hope.

He had spent many evenings of the winter playing chess with the judge, so he was sure of his welcome; but to-night he looked beyond all this. He thought of the hour when, at last, with his heart and understanding touched, the judge would bid them good night, and he should be left alone with Isabel.

There was no handsomer young man in the country than Clint Holderman; none who danced better, or drove better horses; but more than all this, the judge had repeatedly told him that he had never known a young man who played a better hand of chess.

This was an encouragement indeed, for if the judge had a weakness, it was for chess, and it would be decidedly pleasant to have a son-in-law who could be to him such a ready source of entertainment. As he drove into the yard, the judge came out on the piazza.

"Good evening," he called out. Just drive on to the barn; the man will put out your horses.

One of the farm hands came out of the stable as he spoke, and Clint threw him the reins and followed the judge into the house.

"Snapping cold, but splendid sleighing," the judge said, while Clint was pulling off his overcoat in the hall.

"Yes. I believe my ears are touched," Clint answered, rubbing them.

"Isabel is popping some corn. She'll be glad you happened over to help eat it."

He led the way into the long sitting room at the end of the hall.

Isabel was on her knees before an open wood fire, shaking a corn-popper.

The white kernels snapped and expanded with a pleasant sound.

The lamp had not been lit, but the firelight made the room bright and cosy.

"Isabel, here is Mr. Holderman, my dear." She sprang up.

"I didn't hear you come in. Good evening. Come over here by the fire. Why, it's Clint!" she said, as he came into the glow. "I thought father meant your father. I never think of you as Mr. Holderman. Have some corn."

She held the popper open before him. "I'm sure I never think of you as Miss Hilton," he said plunging his hand into the corn and laughing. "That would be a little too much like strangers, as long as we've known each other."

The judge cleared his throat.

"I have always decidedly disliked the informality of country people incalling everyone by their Christian names," he said. "It leaves no degree in intimacy. But I suppose it is impossible to know where to draw the line."

Isabel went back and knelt before the fire again.

"Oh, I don't know," she said, shaking the popper vigorously. "As long as it is a custom I don't think any one feels it a mark of special intimacy, and so the custom is protected by being a custom."

The young man sat awkwardly in his chair and was silent.

They seemed to be closing the doors against any thought he might have of closer intimacy with the family.

The judge left the room for a moment, and came back with a lighted lamp, and placed it on the claw-legged table in the center of the room. He had put on a long dressing-gown faced with crimson quilted silk, and now he drew his great chair up before the fire, and then stretched himself out in it.

"Come, Clint, I will let you shake the popper for me, and I'll go down cellar and get some apples." Isabel looked at him with a merry twinkle in her eyes, as she held the handle towards him, and then ran out of the room.

Clint grasped the handle of the popper with the delight of success flooding his veins. Isabel had never before given him a reason to believe that she cared for him that could compare with that look.

Daylight would find him sitting right there, but he would beat the judge's watch and gain the opportunity of speaking to her.

It was a delightful evening. The judge partook of the popcorn, and the conversation was more than usually affable and entertaining.

Isabel sat on the opposite side of the fireplace and crocheted on a blue wool scarf. There were pink spots burning her cheeks and her eyes were very sweet.

The time passed on until the noisy clock on the mantel clearly and forcibly announced the hour of 10.

It had been comparatively easy thus far, but now was the time when Clint usually went home.

The real contest was about to begin.

The judge shoved his chair back to the table, picked up a paper, and began to read.

From time to time he glanced over the top of his paper at the two talking before the fire, and drew the young man into an animated political discussion.

Isabel stirred about the room, putting things in order for the night.

It was nearing midnight. For the last 15 minutes the conversation had begun to lag.

There were cold moments of complete silence.

"Had you noticed that I had traded horses?" Clint asked, in one painful pause.

"No? have you?" Isabel asked, coming forward with interest.

"Yes. I've traded the grays for George Merwin's blacks. Of course there was considerable to boot. They go like the wind in my new cutter."

"I should think they would." Isabel drew a long breath. "I do like black horses, I never cared for gray ones. I always think of having to look for a red-headed girl," she laughed. "I should think you'd always be on the lookout for one when you ride behind them."

"Perhaps Mr. Holderman is looking for a red-headed girl," the judge said, with a queer look in the direction of the young man. "There's a superstition that a red-headed girl has a violent temper. Now, that isn't always true," he said, after a moment's silence, in which his thought seemed to have been far away. "Isabel's mother had as sweet a disposition as any woman that ever lived, and her hair was the color of that deep flame there."

Isabel was leaning on the back of her father's chair. "Why, father, you've always said my hair was almost the color of mother's. I'm sure no one would think of calling mine red."

"I don't know about that," the judge laughed; "and I don't know about the temper, either," he added, reaching up and pinching her cheek.

"I never liked red hair, but I'm sure I don't believe in that sign," Clint said clumsily. He gazed fixedly into the fire, and felt as though he were turning to stone.

The clock struck 12 with a resonant, defiant stroke, as though it understood the contest in which it held the stakes, and refused to commit itself as to whose side would win.

At a quarter past 12 the judge stood up.

Clint felt his heart beating wildly. The moment of triumph was at hand.

The judge crossed to the bay window at the other end of the room. Isabel's eyes followed him nervously.

From one side, among the geraniums and ivy, he drew the chess table, and pushed it before him toward the fire.

"I think it would be pleasant for us to have a game of chess," he said affably.

Clint sprang to his feet.

"Oh, thank you, sir. I think I must be going home."

"Oh, must you go? Well, come over again and we'll get at it earlier in the evening."

It seemed hours before Clint finally found himself out on the smooth, snow-beaten road, spinning along toward home.

He would have been completely wretched in his defeat if it had not been for that look in Isabel's eyes when she handed him the corn popper. He could endure his father's ridicule and wait his time, remembering that look.

And so he made a good story of it at breakfast the next morning, and added, elevating his voice above the roaring laugh of his father and the shrieks of his mother and sister:

"Never you mind. The judge isn't through with me yet. I've only fired my first gun. I'll own when I came out of the house I was out of shot, but I haven't given up the fight yet."

"Oh, you'll let some other bantam rooster carry her off. I guess I'm safe enough on the cash and land I promised you," his father answered with a provoking laugh.

"Don't you count on it," Clint said, springing up from the table with fire in his eyes. "I'm not downed yet, I tell you."

"All right, sonny; we'll give a big dance to celebrate your engagement, and an oyster supper. I suppose there's no rush about ordering the oysters?"

"I'll hold you to that," Clint said, bringing his fist up against the door. "If the thing's settled by Saturday week, we'll have the dance. If it isn't—well, it won't be. I'm going over to town after the mail."

He turned and went out of the room. As the door closed, he heard his sister say, tittering:

"Clint has about as hard a time courting Isabel as you had courting mother."

This was a warm thought of comfort to him. At least Isabella had never denied him her love, and he knew that his mother had been hardly won.

It was a bright winter morning. Before him was a clear stretch of road to the Iowa river, three miles away.

The white fields on either side sparkled in the sunlight. The great drifts, rolled up along the fences, looked blue in the shadows of their fantastic terracings. The sleighing never was better.

All at once Clint heard the noise of sleigh-bells, and a voice called to him: "Give me the road."

He turned and saw Isabel Hilton coming toward him, driving her own bay ponies at a fearful rate.

Clint drove quickly out at one side of the road, and she sped by him.

He saw that her horses were running away.

There had been no alarm in Isabel's face, though she was holding the reins with all her strength, and had looked neither to the right nor to the left as she passed him. If there was one thing more than another that the Holdermans prized themselves in, it was their knowledge of a good horse and splendid horsemanship.

Isabel Hilton's love of horses and her daring in driving them had been one of the first things that had won Clint's admiration. Her control and courage now appealed to him tremendously. His own horses seemed to have caught the spirit of the runaway pair ahead, as they flew along over the snow after them.

Clint knew that at any moment Isabel's slight arms might lose the power to hold those tense reins so securely, and the horses dash to one side and the crash come, and there was nothing he could do. On went the cutter ahead of him, swaying to the left and the right, and still keeping the road. The bridge across the Iowa river was just ahead. Clint thought of the bridge with terror. If the cutter swayed to one side, as it was doing now, the crash would come on entering.

He saw Isabel's strength tightening on the reins, and knew that she felt the danger.

Her horses flew up the slight incline to the bridge and Clint braced his nerves to withstand the shock. But to his amazement he saw that the horses were slowing up, and entering the bridge with all the respect of well-trained horses; and by the time they were over the frozen current below, they were walking as quietly as though they had decided on that point as the end of their excitement.

Clint entered the bridge as Isabel was leaving it. She drove to one side of the road and waited for him to come up to her. "I'll let you go ahead of me now, if you want to," she called out as he stopped.

"Look here," Clint called, did you think of those horses stopping at the bridge that way, I'd like to know?"

"Yes; didn't you? I knew they might not, but I thought they would if I could keep them in the road. Didn't you think of their doing it?"

"Well, no. I had something else to think about," he answered, looking at her admiringly.

Isabel's face flushed, but she looked at him smiling.

"I wasn't afraid as long as the road was clear, but I should have lost all courage if I had seen a team coming."

"Talk of pluck!" Clint said, driving a little nearer to her cutter. "Isabel, what did you think of last night? What did you think of me, anyway?"

She drove out into the road ahead of him, and then looking back over her shoulder, laughing. "I thought if you had only waited half an hour longer I would have been 18. It is my birthday to-day. I'm of age. And with that she touched her ponies with the whip, and kept well ahead of him all the way to the village.

When they met again, it was before the fire in the sitting room at the brick house where they had held the hours the night before. But the contest with the judge had lost its seriousness.

Between them he sat imperturable, as he had sat the night before; but to-night he was only an amusing barrier, and not a serious obstruction. Love had leaped the bounds, and was free. It triumphed in their eyes as they looked across him, and over him, smiling knowingly at each other.

"We're going to have a dance over at our house Saturday week, and an oyster supper. It is going to be a celebration of a great event in our family." Clint announced with a meaning gesture to Isabel.

"What's the event you're celebrating?" the judge asked, looking over his spectacles.

"Well, that's something of a secret until to-morrow. I hope I can tell you then. You must be sure and come. We're going to have a great time."

The judge looked at Isabel. "Do you think we can go, my dear?"

"Her cheeks were rosy. "Why, yes, I think we could, father."

"Thank you, then. We'll come," the judge said, leaning back in his chair, and looking at the ceiling. "And now would you like to play that game of chess we didn't have last night?"

It was evident he had no intention of giving up the field. Clint did not answer. He was not as fearless of the judge as he had supposed. His heart throbbed excitedly.

Isabel pressed her hands together hard and looking into the fire. The clock ticked loudly, emphasizing the silence.

Finally the judge lifted his eyes from the ceiling, and looked at the young man.

"Didn't you hear what I said to you?" he asked, running his fingers through his forelock and grasping the arms of his chair.

"Yes, sir, I did," said Clint faintly.

"Well, then?"

"If you'll allow me to say it, sir, I think I've won the game already."

"What's that?"

"I believe, sir, I've won the game."'

The judge glared at him for a moment, and then his eyes fell on Isabel.

He looked from one to the other.

The ticks of the clock seemed to choke each other.

"Well, my boy," he said, drawing a deep breath—the tears had started to his eyes—"I don't know but what you have." He held out his hand. "I don't know but you have, my boy."

"Thank you, sir; thank you."

Her father reached the other hand to Isabel, and stood up and drew her into his arms, then pushed her from him, and crossed the room to the door leading into the hall.

Isabel's eyes followed him lovingly.

He turned and looked back at them and smiled.

"Well, children, I'm feeling a little tired to-night," he said, "and I think, if you'll be kind enough to excuse me, I'll go to bed."

He went out and shut the door.—Gertrude Smith, in McClure's Magazine for May.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, OCTBER 30, 1896.

POOR George Fred! But then, he'll bob up again all right. He has had no little notoriety and a lot of fun, and may possibly come to a realizing sense of the error of his ways in time, for he's young yet.

How fleeting is fame. Dr. Tanner, who achieved so much notoriety 15 years ago by fasting for 40 days, was burned to death a few days ago in Akron, O., and the newspapers devoted a dozen lines to the event.

IT IS only a question of how big a majority Massachusetts will roll up next Tuesday. Messrs. Wolcott and Crane will quite likely be favored with the largest in the history of the state, running far ahead of the national ticket.

LET every voter express his preference at the polls next Tuesday. It is a duty which every citizen owes to his country, this year more than ever before. Let us have a decisive expression as to whether the country will maintain its present high standing among the nations of the earth in financial matters, or whether we shall decide to pay our debts with dollars which are 70 per cent hypocritical.

ONE thing which Palmer election officers ought to do next Tuesday is to take advantage of the law which allows them to begin counting before the polls are closed. It is understood that in some of the precincts the officers have announced that counting shall not begin until the voting is over. The public is entitled to some consideration in the matter, and the time of counting will be long at the best. Let everything be done to get the returns as quickly as possible.

THERE should be no question as to the fate of the proposed amendments to the constitution regarding biennial elections of state officers and members of the Legislature; both ought to be adopted by a large vote. The people can well afford to take a rest from political campaigns once in two years, and with annual sessions of the Legislature, as proposed if biennials are adopted, the interests of all concerned will be as well looked after as under the present arrangement.

MR. BRYAN'S pleasure trip about the country will come to a close in a day or two now, Mr. McKinley's front yard will cease to be the concentrating point for delegations from all points of the United States, and the country will settle down to the work of arranging for the business of the next four years. It is well; a strain like that of the present campaign is something like the measles, a good thing to be over with, and all will rejoice when a decision is reached, no matter which way it goes.

A LIFELONG Democrat and prominent member of the party in Palmer was heard to remark the other day, "I hope to goodness Bryan 'll be elected." There are others. From almost every town in this vicinity have come assurances to the JOURNAL from heretofore steadfast supporters of Democracy that the nominee of the Chicago convention would not receive their support. Palmer, which has been close enough to be classed among the doubtful towns of late, will undoubtedly give a rattling Republican majority next Tuesday.

SPAIN is staggering under a financial load which if not lightened soon may bankrupt that country. Her outstanding obligations are only $1,420,000,000, besides the Cuban war debt of $240,000,000, over half of which has been incurred in the present difficulty there. Nearly half of the present national revenues are required to pay the interest on the debt, and an attempt is being made to borrow $200,000,000 more for war purposes. Spain had better let Cuba go; the island is likely to cost more than it is worth, even if it is saved, which is doubtful.

MASSACHUSETTS will blaze from one end to the other with Republican fire to-morrow night. The Republican national committee has suggested the celebrating of to-morrow as flag day, when all members of that party throughout the land are requested to fling their flags to the breeze. The state committee has planned to continue the celebration in the evening with bonfires, and will endeavor to have one lighted in every town in the commonwealth at exactly 8.30. Let the fires be an indication of the size of the majority to be rolled up on next Tuesday for sound money and the honor of the country.

THE results attained by the prosecuting committee within the past week should, in a measure at least, satisfy that class which since the first of May has demanded that the committee "do something." Because it has not gone out with a brass band advertising its movements there has apparently been, in some sections, an impression that it was idle. Two convictions within the week have proved however that the members have not been unmindful of the purpose of their appointment, and it is quite likely that when the cases of Wednesday night's arrests are tried the committee will have some decided surprises in store in the way of evidence.

THERE are indications that the representative vote in the first Hampden district is likely to be close. Both candidates are aware of this fact, and an energetic canvass in the behalf of each is being made. Last year Mr. Kenefick was elected by the defection of the Republican vote of this town, and there is some prospect that he will retain a large proportion of those votes this year. It remains to be seen whether the Republicans think it wise to bolt their party nomination again or not, and thereby intensify the feeling in the towns of Brimfield and Monson that the Palmer voters are not to be depended upon. Brimfield has had just cause for this feeling, and the claim was made in the behalf of Monson in the convention. Should the district vote as it is normally made up, there will be no doubt of Mr. Holden's election.

THERE is apparently good reason to believe that before long the Palmer post office will be given quarters commensurate with the amount of business done, and which will adequately accommodate its patrons, things which have been lacking for a long time. The owner of the present location has offered additional room, but will do nothing in the way of fitting it up. Other property owners have expressed a willingness to not only furnish quarters better adapted than the present, but to fit them up in a satisfactory manner with new boxes and modern arrangement. It will be noted in the news column that the owner of the present location was not asked to submit a bid for the office, with the others. Evidently the office will move. In this connection it is only fair to state that Postmaster Royce has maintained an absolute neutrality in the matter, preferring to let the people and the department settle the matter between themselves. He has had the power to settle the matter with a word, but has declined.

County Commissioner William H. Brainerd of Palmer has lost none of his popularity with the voters in both the Republican and Democratic parties in Hampden county. It is expected he will run far ahead of his ticket in the coming election all over the county. No evidence whatever of opposition that existed previous to the county convention is now manifested, and it is not expected that any will be shown on the day of election.—Springfield Union, Oct. 27th.

Representative Kenefick of Palmer, too, has earned reelection. The best Republicans in the last House vouch for the quality of his work.—Springfield Republican.

SUCCESSFUL LIQUOR RAIDS.

Four Lots of Liquor Seized—A Number of Arrests and Two Convictions

The prosecuting committee was out calling upon suspected "kitchen dives" last Friday evening, and as a result several violators of the law were in court Saturday. Mr. Jenkins with several assistants raided the house of George Lee on Foundry street, and found about four quarts of whisky and a small amount of brandy and cider. The liquor was seized, but Mr. Lee was sick in bed and was not then taken to the lock-up. Saturday, after a physician had examined him and pronounced him physically able to be taken out, he was arraigned on a charge of keeping a common nusiance. He pleaded not guilty and the case was continued to Nov. 2. He was placed under $200 bonds, and being unable to furnish the same was committed. While Mr. Jenkins was raiding Lee's house, Deputy Sheriff Studley with one or two helpers was paying a like visit at the house of Oliver and Joseph Fortune, near the wire mill. A quanity of liquor was found and both Fortunes arrested. They appeared in court Saturday morning, Joseph was first arrainged. The clerk read the charge and asked him "Guilty or not guilty?" He replied in a trembling voice. "I suppose I'm guilty, but I didn't sell any hard stuff." Oliver then pleaded guilty to a like charge. Joseph was fined $50, which was paid; Oliver was fined $100, but being unable to raise that amount, was committed.

Wednesday evening another call was made at the residence of Daniel Matteson on Foundry street. Matteson was in bed, but under a platform in the woodshed was found two 10-gallon jugs each partly full of whisky, and a 5-gallon jug full, about 12 gallons in all, besides an empty jug. Matteson was arrested for keeping a liquor nuisance, also on a charge of transporting liquor. John P. Manning and John B. Dawson, proprietors of the pool room in the basement of the Converse House block, and Michael Rooney were also arrested for keeping a liquor nuisance. All secured bail. At the Edmund House John F. Newbegin, the proprietor, and William Manning, clerk, were arrested for keeping a liquor nuisance, and also secured bail. The cases were brought up in court yesterday morning and continued until November 7th.

Yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock the committee made a raid on the Edmund—recently the Nassowanno—House, and captured two five-gallon jugs of whisky, one full and the other containing about three gallons; on the top of the latter jug was a tin funnel; two quart bottles of whisky were also seized, the stuff being found in an unoccupied room in Strong's block, adjoining and connected with the hotel. The owner of the property, H. C. Strong, was asked to open the doors of the locked rooms, but said he could not open the door to the room in which the liquor was found, claiming that it was rented by G. W. Doane & Co., real estate agents. A look through the transom however, showed that the room contained nothing but the whisky jugs and a roll of matting, which could hardly be considered the paraphernalia of a real estate agency office, so the stuff was taken. The desk occupied by Doane & Co's. agents while here, and containing the firm's stationery, was found in another room. The company has not been represented by a resident agent for a year or more.

More About the Post Office Location.

The question of the post office location has taken on a new phase during the past week. After the visit of the inspector two weeks ago Postmaster Royce was ordered to get proposals in writing from L. W. Caryl and the owners of the Feeney property on Main street, for quarters for the office, each to state what would be done in fitting up their place. H. C. Strong was in Washington last week with a mass of letters from business men regarding the matter, and this week Mr. Royce was ordered to get a bid from H. P. Holden for the store in his block recently vacated by G. A. Moore. Mr. Royce has also had the distance from the center of the railroad station platform to the Holden and Feeney locations measured. By the rules governing the transportation of mail by the railroads, if the post office is within 80 rods of the station, measured by the highway, the railroad must transport the mail between the road and the office at its own expense; if the office is more than 80 rods distant, the government does the transporting. The present office is outside the limit, and the government pays some $600 a year for carrying the mail. The Feeney property is a few feet inside the 80-rod limit, and if the office were to be moved there the department would save what it now pays for transporting the mails. In view of this fact, it would not be surprising if the office should go east on Main street instead of west.

Bullets Located by the X-Rays.

Andrew Pinney, who was recently shot by a highwayman, went to the hospital of Dr. W. H. Pierce in Greenfield Saturday to have the bullets, which entered his body and were unable to be found by the local physicians, located by the X-rays. He was accompanied by Dr. Holbrook. The bullet which entered the right side of his breast was found flattened against the fifth rib about five inches from where it entered the body. As Dr. Pierce thinks that it will never give Mr. Pinney any trouble, nothing will be done to remove it. They were unable to find the one which entered his leg, but a photograph was taken. Dr. Holbrook received word yesterday that the plate had been developed, showing the location of the bullet. The photograph will be sent to Mr. Pinney later. Mr. Pinney says that the X-ray is a wonderful discovery. He sat with his back toward the instrument, which threw the concentrated rays of light upon his body. Dr. Pierce stood in front of him and plainly saw the bullet lying in the position as described above. Mr. Pinney, to satisfy his curiosity, had the rays concentrated upon his hand and says that all the bones could be distinctly seen. Mr. Pinney is now able to attend to his work, but his wounds are yet quite painful.

Mrs. Phetteplace will preach in the Advent chapel next Sunday morning.

The office of the Flynt Building and Construction Company is being treated to a new coat of paint.

L. H. Washburn, recently of Palmer, has been appointed manager of the telephone exchange at Ware, and his mother, Mrs. Ella Washburn, will move to that place to live with him.

The annual harvest festival given by the ladies of the Universalist church took place Tuesday evening. The supper given was of the usual high standard, and was partaken of by a large number.

J. F. Newbegin and Co., proprietors of the former Nassowanno House, have changed the name of the hotel to the Edmund House, and a new sign bearing that name has been placed over the entrance to the hotel.

A number of prominent Republicans attended the Republican rally at Brimfield Tuesday evening. After the rally the speakers and Palmer delegation were entertained at the home of Dr. R. V. Sawin.

The contract for placing steam fixtures in the Converse House has been awarded to W. H. Hitchcock, and work will be commenced at once. The entire house will be piped, and the figures are something like $1000.

There are now 1235 names on the voting list, as follows: Precinct A, 598; B, 304; C, 187; D, 148. Forty new names were added by the registrars Saturday evening, about half of these having just received naturalization papers.

Seventy-one Coxeyites have put up at Hotel Allen this past month, and the pile of stone for permanent road improvement, which they have broken in payment for the lodging and breakfast furnished by the genial landlord, has materially increased.

The third rehearsal of the cantata of "Esther" will be held in the parlors of the opera house next Wednesday evening. All who wish to take part in the chorus are requested to be present, as it is important that the management know on whom to depend.

The Lend-a-hand Club of the Congregational church held a meeting in the church parlors yesterday afternoon and elected these officers: President, Mrs. H. W. McGregory; vice president, Mrs. J. C. Wing; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. John Sedgwick.

The cases of William Ritter, the Chicopee brewer, and the two Polanders, arrested some time ago by the prosecuting committee for illegally selling intoxicating liquors in the town, which have been continued several times, will occupy the attention of the court to-morrow morning.

Denman Thompson's celebrated play, the "Old Homestead," which was booked over a year ago, will be presented at the opera house Tuesday evening. Tickets went on sale Monday morning, and by noon were nearly all gone. Every ticket has since been sold. Extra seats have been arranged for, and standing room will be sold at 35 cents.

An autumn excursion to Montreal, the metropolis of Canada, will be run by the Central Vermont railroad next Thursday. Trains leave Palmer at 8.20 and 11.00 a. m., and 7.10 p. m. Returning, regular trains leave Montreal at 9 a. m. Tickets are good on all trains November 5th, and are good returning on all trains until November 14th, inclusive. The fare for the round trip is $7.

Rev. H. F. Moulton gave last evening his third in the series of lectures on "Some hard sayings of the Bible explained,"—its special topic being "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." The audiences at these lectures are increasing in numbers. The next lecture, in two weeks, will be upon "The sin against the Holy Ghost."

The first of the series of lectures under the auspices of the Ladies' Tuesday Club will be given to-morrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. P. Ball on Park street. Mrs. Annie Russell Marble will be the speaker, and her subject "Some recent Scottish writers—Maclaren, Barrie, Crockett." There are to be four lectures in the course, tickets for which may be obtained of the members of the club at $1 for the course.

Rev. A. J. Patterson, D. D, of Roxbury, who organized St. Paul's Universalist church in 1876, and who gave the first communion, will preach and administer the communion in St. Paul's church next Sunday morning. All are invited, especially those now living who were present at the organization of the church, that a sort of memorial and reunion service may be held. He will speak at this service on "Those days."

The Palmer high school freshman football team defeated the Thorndike grammar school eleven at Thorndike Saturday afternoon, 8 to 6. The game was closely contested and abounded in brilliant plays. Riley did the best playing for the freshmen, scoring both touchdowns. The freshmen challenge any freshmen football team of the surrounding high schools and academies to a game. All communications should be addressed to Manager Riley.

John Lawrence, the bogus priest with many aliases, who was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Studley at the Nassowanno House some time ago, was found guilty of forgery in the superior criminal court at Worcester Tuesday, and sentenced to not less than three nor more than five years in the state prison. Lawrence was a slick impersonator, and had eluded the police of the country until brought to bay by Sheriff Studley. Two Palmer people were among his victims.

The first game of football ever played in Palmer will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 on the driving park. The St. Josephs of Thompsonville, Ct., and the Brookfield team will do battle on the gridiron, and it is safe to say that the game will be interesting. The St. Josephs have held the amateur championship of Connecticut for three successive years, and this year have played several good games, recently defeating the Amherst Aggie football eleven. The Brookfields are also a strong eleven. They have not been scored against this year, and a few weeks ago played a tie game with the Worcester Athletic Association team. Two teams with such records will certainly play a fast game. Admission is 25 cents.

The Palmer Republican Club, at its meeting Tuesday night, appointed a committee to have charge of an immense bonfire to-morrow night, in accordance with the suggestion of the Republican state committee that Massachusetts celebrate to-morrow night as "bonfire night" in connection with the celebration of to-morrow as "flag day," on the advice of the national committee. The committee consists of L. E. Chandler, Alfred Swan, Brigham Ball, W. E. McDonald and Henry Lovett, who have arranged for a fire on the high point of land northwest of the village now owned by G. E. Buck, formerly known as Knox's Hill. All who are willing to assist in the scheme, and any who have materials which they are willing to contribute are requested to notify Mr. Chandler, who will arrange for their transportation to the place. The fire will be lighted at 8.30, simultaneously with others throughout the state.

Considerable criticism has been heard during the week regarding the manner of disposing of the tickets for the "Old Homestead," the charge being made that orders were sent in for tickets before they were placed on sale, these being taken out in advance of the time when the general public had access to them, but this claim is not substantiated by the facts. The tickets went on sale at 6.45 Monday morning. A few orders from out-of-town people had been received, but no tickets were taken out for them until about 9 o'clock in the forenoon, when there was a lull in the demand for seats. The trouble evidently arose from a misunderstanding as to the time the seats were to go on sale; this has usually been 9 o'clock, and many supposed that it would be so in this case, only to find at that hour that the best seats were gone. In order to avoid misunderstanding in the future, all ticket sales will hereafter begin at 7 in the morning.

District Court.

The larger part of Saturday's session was taken up with the case of Fillman Prew of for an assault on his wife. Lawyer Leach appeared for the defendant and Lawyer Kenefick for the commonwealth. Prew was found guilty and fined $10. Barthomsen Tybalia, a Bondsville Pole, paid $10 for an assault on Antononia Kalofut, a Polish woman. He than had a warrant made out for her arrest for assault on his wife. This case was tried Monday morning. The evidence showed that quite a lively fight took place between several Polish women, during which several cups of coffee and flat-iron handles were hurled at Tybalia's wife. The court found Antononia guilty and fined her $1.

Thursday, William Sellick was found guilty of drunkenness and paid $5. When searched the night before, a pint bottle of whisky was found upon his person. After he was discharged he remained in the court room and finally asked for his property. He was told that the Court had no right to give it to him, and he went away feeling worse over losing his bottle than paying his fine of $5. Mark Sheridan of Brimfield pleaded not guilty to a charge of lendness, but was found guilty by the court and fined $10.

Next Sunday morning Rev. Samuel Freuder of Boston, a former Jewish Rabbi, will speak in the Congregational church upon "The Hebrews of to-day." In the Sunday school he will appear in the Rabbinical costume, give some illustrations of the synagogue service, and chant a psalm in the Hebrew tongue. Mr. Freuder comes highly endorsed.

It is said that N. W. Bond, who is building a large grist mill in the rear of the B. and A. station, has had an opportunity to dispose of land in that vicinity to shoe manufacturers who are desirous of locating here. The water privilege is considered first-class, and the location is of the best. Mr. Bond is now building the foundation for the mill, having just completed the canal.

Death of James Richards.

James Richards, 74, a well-known resident of this town, died at his home on Main street Tuesday morning about 5 a. m. of Bright's disease. Mr. Richards had been ailing for several months, but his condition was not thought serious. Mr. Richards was formerly employed in the U. S. armory at Springfield, where he worked for over 20 years. The funeral was held from his late residence on Thursday at 2 p. m. A wife and several relatives survive him.

Relief Corps Inspection.

The annual inspection of Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps was held Wednesday evening, with Mrs. Julia Henry of Palmer as inspecting officer. Mrs. Henry spoke well of the work done by the corps. At the close of the session Mrs. John C. Aldrich, treasurer, read an interesting paper, speaking of the events of the five years life of the corps, after which Misses Carrie Chapin and Ethel Rood rendered two piano duets, and Miss Maud Aldrich recited "Kentucky Belle." Refreshments were then served. Mrs. Aldrich's paper was as follows:

In the reign of Henry, whose surname is Wood, it came to pass that Susan, of the tribe of Thrall, did go about from house to house and stir up the women and maidens to organize a society, auxiliary to the G. A. R. Accordingly they did meet in the upper room, known as the G. A. R. Hall, on the 23d day of the tenth month, 1891, and some of the good women of Palmer, whose fame had been noised about, did assemble with them, and Delilah, of the tribe of Davis, did obligate 65 charter members of a corps, and they did call the name thereof Marcus Keep Relief Corps, No. 145, for are we not banded together to relieve those who are in sore distress? And many of the women think to this day that it is an excellent way to get relieved of money and much food, for verily they obtain the funds to carry on the work by declaring a feast occasionally.

And behold, there was a great cry, "Who shall rule over us?" And they all did as with one voice choose Susan, and so Susan was made president. And these were next in rank: Jennie, whose surname is Closson; and Sarah, of the tribe of Warren; and Mary, of the tribe of Gage, was chosen High Priest; and Minnie, of the tribe of Smith, was chosen to sit over against the treasury; and Lizzie, of the tribe of Lull, was made captain, with Annie, of the tribe of Seymour, to assist her. And they did take the password from the women. Addie, of the tribe of Davis, was chosen doorkeeper, with Mary, of the house of Fuller, to be her helper. Now Susan took to herself Lillian, whose surname is Chapin, to be her scribe, and she did fill the office so acceptably that behold, she is the scribe even to this day.

Now in due time they did assemble in Hall Memorial, and Delilah, a Palmerite of great renown, did then and there install them to their respective offices in the presence of Marcus Keep Post and much people. And Susan did that which was right, and went in and out among the women for the space of three years and four months, when the Lord did call her from among us. And the women did greatly mourn her loss, and continue to mourn even to this day. Then Sarah, whose surname is Warren, did rule in her stead, with Maria of the house of Rood, and Mary, whose surname is Harvey, next in rank. Now Sarah was not of a ruddy countenance, and waxed feeble, and Maria, a great and exceedingly good woman, succeeded her, and is still ruling over us. The women are well pleased, and when the time comes will shout, "Long live Maria to rule over us." Mary of the tribe of Harvey, and Clara whose surname is Babbitt, are her helpers. Lizzie and Annie did that which was pleasing in the sight of the women, and remained in office for the space of two years. Then Ella, of the tribe of Howlett, was chosen captain. Rosalie, whose surname is Gaonette, and Ada of the tribe of Graves, have been her assistants; both very able women. Now Ella has been captain for three years, and the women are exceeding proud of her. Mary was high priest two years, then another good Mary, of the tribe of Bradway, succeeded her; now we have Harriet, a Fentonite, whom the women all reverence. Mary, of the tribe of Fuller, has been door keeper, with Mary, whose surname is Williams, to assist. Etta, of the tribe of Smith, has also filled that office, but unto her a son has been given, and now Mary, of the tribe of Smith, is door keeper when she happens to be present.

To replenish the treasury it is our custom twice each year to hold a feast at high noon, when the Monsonites choose state and town rulers. A woman small of stature, but of great ability, did come among us from Springfield, and with the help of Lillian a carnival was given in Hall Memorial, and a goodly sum was added to the treasury. The women did plan for a festival, and in the second month, the ninth day thereof, they did get together the articles the women skilled in needlework had made, and the good people did come in and buy, both afternoon and evening; and at the sixth hour a feast was served in the upper hall, and much people did eat and not a fragment was left; and some of the good people of Palmer did make it merry for us after the feast was over, and one Laura, whose surname is Davis, did dance, and the people was much pleased and a goodly sum was realized, and it was taken to purchase banners for the Marcus Keep Post. After many epistles were sent to the cities round about by those who had the matter in charge they finally bought two banners of Charles, an Eatonite, who was much skilled in making them, and on the 31st day of the fifth month, 1894, they were presented to the Post before a multitude of people; and they are exceedingly proud of them and returned thanks to the women.

It is the custom of the Corps to pay one dollar each year, and the women are very prompt; only two have been dropped from the roll of membership. Members have been added from time to time. Once a quarter we pay a tax, for are we not under the jurisdiction of the great state of Massachusetts? Once each year spies are sent to the different Corps to see if the work is done decently and in order; they are received with fear and trembling, for do they not spy out the imperfections in the ritualistic work, and report to department headquarters? They send to us this year, Julia, of the tribe of Henry, a modest little woman, a Palmerite, in whom there is no guile. It has been our custom to invite in the women of the town towns around about Monson, but Julia said "Nay, not so; Do contrary to your custon, lest I faint by the way," and Maria heeded the mandate.

Each year officers are chosen, and installing officers sent to install them to their respective places, and the names thereof and the names of the spies and all the doings of this Corps, are they not recorded in the books of Lillian, the scribe?

Mrs. James H. Tufts has been invited to meet with the club during the remaining weeks of her stay in town.

Prof. James H. Tufts of Chicago University has kindly consented to take a class of adults in the Congregational Sunday school during the few weeks that he is to remain in town. The class was organized last Sunday and, although but brief and limited notice had been given, forty-eight appeared, only a few of whom are regular attendants upon the school. Prof Tufts purposes to give a series of talks on the development of religion. He began by considering the universality of the religious element in human nature and the ways in which it has manifested itself among different primitive peoples. Nearly all who have ever lived have believed themselves descended from some divine being, the conception of whom differs according to the degree of development in different races and tribes. All have had their forms of worship, their sacred places, sacred days, sacred objects, and systems of sacrifice. Adoration of ancestors was very common among ancient nations, and some believe it to have been the source of all worship The Hebrews believe in the existence of other gods beside Jehovah, but regard it as sinful to serve them. His conception of Deity was narrow compared with that of the Christian, for the latter has broadened by increasing knowledge and by contact with other civilizations, especially the Greek. Human sacrifice was practiced in ancient times even among the Jews, as instanced by the case of Jephthah's daughter Priest and prophet represented two great offices of the Hebrew church. The former kept the records and conserved the forms and ceremonies of the past. The latter, looking to the future, enlarged and enriched its faith. The subject for next Sunday will be, "The Hebrew religion before the time of Moses, and what he contributed thereto." It was recommended that members of the class should read carefully the first two chapters of Genesis, noting differences of phraseology. Also, as a parallel with Greek and Roman mythology, Gen. 6: 1-8. For meaning of son of God, Job 1: 6, 2:1, 38:7, Ps. 29:1 and 89:6. For use of the teraphim, Gen. 31:19 and 30, Gen. 35:2 and 1 Sam. 19:12-16, Judges 18: 5-14 Sacred trees, Judges 4:5, and 6:11. Emblems of worship, Ex. 34:13. Supposed national God, Judges 11:24. Other gods, 2 Kings 17:24 and 41. Compare 1 Kings 12: 26 and 30 with Ex. 32:2-4. High places, 1 Sam. 9:13 and 14. Names of Deity, Ex 6: 2, 3, Ex. 3:13, 14, Gen 17:1. Nature worship, Ezekiel 8:14, Jer. 44:17. A printed outline of the work to be taken up will be distributed next Sunday. All interested in this fascinating study are cordially invited.

Died Suddenly at Grandson's Funeral.

Abigail, wife of John Hitchcock, died very suddenly Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Hitchcock had been a sufferer for over a year from the effect of a paralytic stroke. On Tuesday she went to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Lincoln, at East Wilbraham, to attend the funeral of her grandson, but a short time before the services began she was taken with a fit of vomiting and was hurriedly placed in bed; she gradually failed, dying at 3:30, being unconscious till the last. Death is thought to have been from heart failure. Mrs. Hitchcock, whose maiden name was Abigail Lombard Tupper, was born in Springfield Dec. 27, 1827, her parents being William and Reiny Lombard Tupper. Besides her husband six children survive her, four sons and two daughters, Albert J., Frank A. and Edward A. of Springfield, Henry F. of West Springfield, Mrs. Lizzie A. Bates, and Lillian M., wife of Frank Lincoln of North Wilbraham. She has lived in this place for the past 39 years. Funeral services were held at her late residence on the Mountain at 10 a. m. Thursday, with burial at Springfield. Rev. M. S. Howard officiated at the funeral. Mrs. Hitchcock has been a member of Grace Union church in North Wilbraham since its organization in 1886, previous to which she was a member of the First Congregational church of Wilbraham.

Rousing Republican Rally.

The Republicans of this town held a rousing rally in the town hall Tuesday evening. A large audience, including a large number of women, was present, and was very enthusiastic. Instrumental music was furnished by F. O. Munger and H. T. Colburn of Palmer. Upon the platform were H. P. Holden of Palmer, H. A. McFarland and J. H. Louden of Wales. N. S. Hubbard presided, and after a few fitting remarks introduced as the first speaker R. C. Sturbridge of Boston He spoke at considerable length on the money question, showing the falsity of the proposed free coinage bill and ably defending the sound money doctrine. He also referred to the proposed electric railway between this town and Palmer, and said that by electing H. P. Holden to the Legislature the charter would be obtained, and that he could do more to obtain it than any other present candidate for election. William Howland was the next speaker. He urged all voters to vote for Mr. Holden, and spoke of him as an able man. He illustrated the results of the free coinage of silver, and also spoke upon the tariff question. His remarks were well received. At the close of the rally three rousing cheers were given for McKinley.

WILBRAHAM.

The following election officers have been appointed by the selectmen: Ballot clerks, W. H. Day, James S. Morgan; tellers, James Eagan, C. P. Bolles; constables, C. G. Robbins, Frank R. Ringe.

Anson Soule has been obliged to kill one of his horses which was suffering from glanders. Reports from Amherst College in regard to the cows poisoned a short time since state that the viscera forwarded were in too advanced a state of decomposition to determine the nature of the poison with certainty. It was the opinion of Prof. Sanford of the Academy and Lyman Fisk, who conducted the examination here, that it was arsenic.

The Springfield Pomona Grange, No. 12, will hold its annual business meeting with the Wilbraham Grange next Tuesday in the Congregational church at 10 a. m. After the usual business, the meeting will be put in charge of the Ludlow Grange for the day. Morning topic: "The influence of farmers; is it properly and sufficiently represented in the halls of legislature?" Afternoon topic: "The farm home and the farm citizen; how the home on the farm can be made attractive to young and old of both sexes. The duties of the farmer and his family to town, country, state and nation." The afternoon session, at 2 o'clock, will be open to the public.

An Unusually Long Pastorate.

Rev. M. S. Howard preached his 28th anniversary sermon Sunday morning in the Congregational church from the text, "And ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake." In closing Mr. Howard spoke with deep feeling and much tenderness of his close relations with this people for the past 28 of the 40 years of his ministry, especially with the younger portion of his flock, who have grown up to manhood and womanhood under his charge. Mr. Howard's pastorate, with one exception, is the longest of any in Hampden county There are but nine others in the state who have preached a longer time. Mr. Howard was first installed in South Yarmouth 40 years ago, and has been invited there to commemorate the event.

Sick-poison is a poison which makes you sick. It comes from the stomach. The stomach makes it out of undigested food.

The blood gets it and taints the whole body with it. That's the way of it.

The way to be rid of it is to look after your digestion.

If your food is all properly digested, there will be none left in the stomach to make sick-poison out of.

If your stomach is too weak to see to this properly by itself, help it along with a few doses of Shaker Digestive Cordial.

That's the cure of it.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is a delicious, healthful, tonic cordial, made of pure medicinal plants, herbs and wine.

It positively cures indigestion and prevents the formation of sick-poison.

At druggists. Trial bottles 10 cents.

Republican Rally.

A large audience gathered in Fisk Hall Monday evening to hear Col. Young and A. H. Washburn at the Republican rally held under the auspices of the Crane Republican Club of the Academy, and much enthusiasm was expressed. Previous to the rally a torchlight parade was held and a McKinley and Hobart flag was raised at the corner of Main and Springfield streets. The residence of Ira G. Potter and his son-in-law, C. E. Peck, was beautifully illuminated and decorated with Chinese lanterns. The meeting in the hall was called to order by Prof. Findlay of the Academy, president of the club, who introduced Principal W. R. Newhall as the presiding officer. Mr. Newhall presented as the first speaker, A. H. Washburn, private secretary to Senator Lodge, who among other things said that the old Democratic party as originally constituted was entitled to considerable respect, but it is now dominated by the forces of unrest and disorder. He presented the money question at considerable length, and gave some strong arguments. He said that the Music Hall convention, over which George Fred Williams presided, had been declared as not a convention but a collection of irresponsible persons. Colonel Charles L. Young of Springfield was next introduced by Principal Newhall as one who had long been a friend of William McKinley. Col. Young said that the interest of our country required one standard in the commercial world, one standard of citizenship, and one standard for money. Electricity has reduced the price of horses, why not charge that to the crime of '73." The potato crop is worth more than the silver production of a year; why not stamp every potato a dollar. We want a law that will take the banking away from the furnace fires, the shutters down from the factories, and start the wheels of industry. Principal Newhall closed the rally with brief remarks.

CARD.—We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to all those who by word and deed expressed their love and sympathy for us in our recent bereavement, especially members of Marcus Keep Post, Woman's Relief Corps, Sons of Veterans, and Monson Grange.

MRS. GEORGE M. SEVERY AND FAMILY.
Monson, Mass., Oct. 27th, 1896.

The Darlington, Wis., Journal says editorially of a popular patent medicine, "We know from experience that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy is all that is claimed for it, as on two occasions it stopped excruciating pains and possibly saved us from an untimely grave. We would not rest easy over night without it in the house." This remedy undoubtedly saves more pain and suffering than any other medicine in the world. Every family should keep it in the house, for it is sure to be needed sooner or later. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

FREE! FREE!

To Kidney Sufferers.—An Opportunity Worthy of Your Notice.

If you suffer with kidney disease or any ailment arising from an improper action of the kidneys or urinary organs this offer we make to the people of Palmer should interest you. In the advancement of medical science the kidneys, being almost the organs of the greatest importance to human health, have not been neglected, and in placing before you such a cure as Doan's Kidney Pills, the proprietors recognize how far so many statements of the makers of similar preparations have fallen short of their claims, being convinced that no remedy for kidney complaints in existence equals Doan's Kidney Pills for such ailments; strengthened in these convictions by letters that are daily received of the work they are doing for mankind's benefit, old backs and young backs are being constantly freed from never ceasing aches, and many a lame and shattered one, stooped and contracted, is strengthed, invigorated and infused with new life. With such a medicine, an offer of this kind can be made without hesitancy, for while we lose the box we give to you, we make a friend that assists us in the sale of many others.

ONE FULL BOX

of Doan's Kidney Pills will be given away free to every person suffering with kidney ailments at the undersigned address. First come, first served, and only this one chance offered. Remember this is not a sample box, but a regular size box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which retails at 50c. For those in the country who cannot call in time, a full box will be mailed, in response to all letters received up to and including Nov. 10th.

Remember, free distribution one day only, Friday, Nov. 6th, from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m., at LeGro & Lynde's, Palmer, Mass.

WOMEN VOTE

For President.

For the first time in the history of this country an opportunity for women to publicly express their choice for president is offered. The method is unique and will result in showing on Nov. 4th just what effect the woman's vote will have on national affairs.

A manufacturer who has business relations with most of the prominent newspapers in the United States, proposes the plan as follows:

All women over 18 are entitled to one vote. The vote by states will be shown in the papers every week until Nov. 4th. Women are requested to read more than one side of the question and act upon their own judgment. Write the name of candidate on a postal card and write your own name and address clearly, also city and state. On the lower left hand corner give the name of a banker or grocer who knows you.

This precaution is to prevent flooding the mail with fictitious votes. Names unknown to grocer or banker will be thrown out. Be very careful to write clearly and an acknowledgment of the receipt of each vote will be sent to the fair voter. Send the postal to Postum Cereal Food Coffee Co., Battle Creek, Mich. It is urged that every earnest woman will not hesitate to expend a penny to register her preference at this most interesting period of National history.

This company have a national reputation and pledge their integrity and honor to report the vote exactly as received, without fear or favor. A sworn statement of the final vote polled up to 7 p. m. Nov. 4th will be published in the week ending Nov. 7th, and the vote as it progresses will be shown every week between now and then.

News Which is Good News.

It pays everyone to follow the thousands who are accepting that remarkable free offer of Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He has established a system of free letter consultation to tell the sick and suffering everywhere just what their trouble is and how you feel. He will answer it, explaining your case minutely, and giving all possible information. And for all this he charges nothing. It is the best opportunity you ever had to consult the highest authority, without leaving your home, and without paying any fee.

He gives such careful attention to every letter, that you understand instantly just what ails you. He makes a specialty of treating patients through letter correspondence, and is having the most wonderful success by this method. It was the same successful physician who discovered that remarkable medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. The Doctor's long experience and enormous practice, enables him to thoroughly understand your complaint by writing him your symptoms. It is easy enough to try it, and it won't cost you anything. Write him to-day and it will certainly be the means of your getting strong and well.

If Troubled With Rheumatism Read This.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Apr. 16, 1893.—I have used Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism and found it to be all that is claimed for it. I believe it to be the best preparation for rheumatism and deep seated muscular pains on the market, and cheerfully recommend it to the public. JNO. G. BROOKS, dealer in boots, shoes, etc., No. 18 Main St.

ALSO READ THIS.

MECHANICSVILLE, St. Mary County, Md.—I sold a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm to a man who had been suffering with rheumatism for several years. It made him a well man. A. J. MCGILL. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

If your children are subject to croup watch for the first symptoms of the disease—hoarseness. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse it will prevent the attack. Even after the croupy cough has appeared the attack can be prevented by giving this remedy. It is also invaluable for colds and whooping cough. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida street, San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c and $1.

APPLIED MATHEMATICS.

"My daughter," and his voice was stern,
"You must set this matter right:
What time did the sophomore leave,
Who sent in his card last night?"

"His work was pressing, father, dear,
And his love for it was great;
He took his leave and went away
Before a quarter of eight."

Then a twinkle came to her bright blue eye,
And her dimple deeper grew—
'Tis surely no sin to tell him that,
For a quarter of eight is two."

THE SWIMMING BOY.

A TRUE STORY.

He was not exactly what would be called a handsome boy; he didn't look at all as if he were a story-hero. His yellow curls which had once been his mother's pride were cut close off now, and his nose was undeniably freckled. But he was a sturdy, well-built boy, and his frank face possessed a pair of most steadfast blue eyes. And it was this pair of very steadfast blue eyes which caused the young man who wrote stories to stop, when they ran plump into each other in the turn of the little country lane, and look down at him. Then the young man asked:—

"Where are you going?"

"Swimming," replied the boy promptly, and smiling up at the other pleasantly.

"Swimming?" repeated the young man, as he looked doubtfully over the small person before him. "Does your mother know that?"

"Yes, sir," answered the boy, smiling more than ever. Then he added, as if to relieve the other's ignorance, "You see, I'm the boy who swims."

"Oh," said the young man, "you are, are you? The boy who swims?" Then the light of a new interest come into his own eyes behind his glasses, and he went on coaxingly. "It is still early and there's plenty of time to go this afternoon. Come, tell me all about it. I want to know, you know, why you are the boy who swims. Why are you not the boy who runs, or the boy who jumps, or rides, or plays ball, you know?"

"'Cause I swim best, I guess," said the other. Then the young man led the way to a shadier spot than where they were standing, and having made themselves comfortable he procured a couple of oranges, and while they ate them the boy who swims told the inquisitive young man about himself.

"You see," said he, "when we are at home we live right on the river bank, and our back porch hangs out over it, 'cause the river has cut the bank away some there. I've got two brothers younger than I am, too—I'm ten—and we can all swim. Mamma taught us. Yes, sir, mamma, not papa. She has a little harness that fits around our waists and chests, with a long strap to it, and whenever we have a birthday that makes us five years old, if it is in summertime, she puts it on and lowers us into the river. Then we paddle around for a while and she takes us out. She does that every day, and then after awhile we know how to swim. It's a funny way to learn, isn't it?"

The young man thought it was, but a very nice way, too.

"Yes; and then you see as soon as we do learn, mamma doesn't worry about us being near the river when she's busy. Some of her friends say they wouldn't live near the river for anything if they were in her place; but she likes it and so do we. Well, one day there was a man who wanted to teach his wife to swim, and came out to the river one evening while we were at supper, and took her in right below our house; and pretty soon I heard someone screaming dreadfully for help, and I ran out. And there was the poor lady drowning, and her husband, who couldn't swim himself, trying to save her. So I ran down and pulled off my coat—I had lots of fire-crackers in my pocket and they might get wet, you see—and swam out to them. Then I got her loose from him some way, and towed her in to the bank till she could stand up; and then the man began to holler, too, and I went back for him. He was worse than his wife, but I got him at last; and then the people came running down to us and crowded around and said a lot of funny things about me being a hero. But I told them they didn't understand; there wasn't anything big in that. And then after mamma had hugged me and cried some, and they were all gone, I went back and got my coat, 'cause I wanted to see if my fire-crackers were all right. Somehow from that evening they've all called me the boy who swims, just as if it was my name!"

Then the young man who wrote stories did a funny thing; he asked the boy if he would mind shaking hands with him. The boy looked at him with wide-open eyes at this odd question; but he held out his own brown little hand as gladly and frankly as he had talked to his new-found friend. "Thank you," the young man said, with a queer look in his eyes, and a few moments later the boy who swims had disappeared around a little bend in the shady green lane, on his way to the swimming pool, whistling and happy, and thinking of the good orange he had just had.

But the young man who wrote stories turned thoughtfully and pursued his way with a warm feeling in his heart; and from that day to this I really think he is more proud of his acquaintance with the boy who swims than anyone else he knows.—Little Men and Women.

NOT AVAILABLE FOR HER.

I ran across old Job Holloway, the famous coach driver of half a century ago, yesterday, says the New York Press. He is not less then 80 now. Once I rode with him on the National turnpike through Virginia. There were seven passengers—six men and an old maid. The latter complained of sore throat one morning and inquired of the men how it could be cured. Each said that he had been a victim at some time or other but had forgotton how he had managed to get rid of it. Finally the oldest man in the party said that he had a bad case when he was young, but that the cure he used wouldn't do the old lady any good. At first she thought this was a reflection upon her age, but being of a sensible mind she determined to press him for his prescription.

"But there is no use telling you, madam," he protested. "It won't do you any good."

"I'm sure it will," she urged. "Do tell me. I will certainly try it at once."

Thus driven to it he said: "I just let my beard grow under my chin."

Some mouths look like peaches and cream, and some look like a hole chopped into a brick wall to admit a new door or window. The mouth is a hotbed of toothaches, the bunghole of oratory, and a baby's crowning glory. It is the patriotism's fountain-head and the tool-chest for pie. Without it the politician would be a wanderer on the face of the earth, and the cornetist would go down to an unhonored grave. It is the grocer's friend, the orator's pride, and dentist's hope.—Monmouth Spring Monitor.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its, stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A Coinage Query.

If a dollar be a dollar, honest coin, without deceit,
One may melt it, one may smelt it, but its value won't retreat.
Melt ten dollars, silver dollars, in a proper melting pot,
And the silver slug resulting sells for only five the lot,
Melt gold dollars, melt an eagle, in the self same melting pot,
And the golden slug resulting quickly sells for ten the lot.
Will you tell me, kindly tell me, how these dollars equal are,
If a little glowing furnace put on only one a scar?
There was never yet equation that demanded legislation to prove its right to be;
Equation is equation or else a fallacy.
And I'm thinking, quietly thinking, that a poor man has poor sense,
If he votes to have a dollar that will melt to fifty cents.

CHEAP LIVING IN JAPAN.

The question which naturally occurs to one used to other conditions and environments is, how do these people manage to live on the wages paid? The average earnings for adults in these localities are certainly not over 10 sen, or say five or six cents of our money, a day. The children bring in addition say from one to two cents a day for 12 hours dexterous work, making boxes, filling them with matches, labeling, and other light work. After my visit to the match factory, which was made accompanied by an English and American gentleman, I took an able translator, son of a high official of Japan, and made an exploration of this entire district, including the famous Nagoya-machi of Osaka, a street often mentioned in Japanese drama, which answers to the Whitechapel road, London, the Bowery, New York, or Scot road, Liverpool. Living in Osaka is cheaper than in any other city in Japan, so the result of the present personal inquiry may be taken as the lowest cost of living in the world. I have spent several weeks making similar investigations in Tokio, but the scale is lower here than there, as food and lodging are both cheaper.

First, as to food. The greater number of shops on Nagoya-machi offer some kind of food. The most numerous are those which the denizens of this locality call vegetable shops, where cut-off ends of vegetables are offered for sale. Next come fishmongers' stalls, selling refuse of dried sardines, heads or skeletons of fish, entrails of fowls, and so forth. The price for these edibles is a half a sen, or five rins, about a quarter of a cent. The rin, or 10th of a sen, a copper coin with a hole in the center, is in vogue in these localities. The houses, of course, are of wood, and contain nothing save a few crude cooking utensils and the mats upon which the occupants sleep. The rooms contain from two to four, and sometimes six, mats, each about three by six feet. The rent, I found, ranges from 2½ sen (1¼ cents) a day for the best, 12-10 sen, or less than a cent, American money, for the lowest. The average number of people sleeping in these tiny rooms or houses is about four. The death rate in these quarters is sometimes frightful, especially in the summer, when statistics show that it reaches in this district 492, against 231 births. The loss as in our own cities, is constantly filled by fresh emigration from the country.

In purchasing power here the Japanese sen is fully equal to our cent, and that it takes 10 rin (also a current coin) to make one sen indicates that purchases can be made for even that small coin, about 2000 of which can be purchased for an American dollar. Throwing out jinrikisha men and cart drawers, it will be found that the average earnings are less than five sen, or 2½ cents a day. Here is the daily outlay of a man earning, say, three American cents a day:—

	Sen.
1 ao of poorest quality rice,	2.8
Drinking water, one pail,	.2
Subsidiary food,	.3
Fuel,	.3
Daily rent,	1.5
Fund to the Jizo festival,	.2
Total,	5.3

Thus we have the rock-bottom facts. All over this amount, and, of course, the average well-to-do laborer here will earn from 20 to 25 sen (10 to 13½ cents) a day, enables him to improve the character and quantity of his food, and to supply such luxuries as a mosquito net and bedquilt.

Where living is so cheap, what does it cost to die? Statisticians, they say, follow us from the cradle to the grave, and hence I have learned something as to the cost of a funeral on the Nagoya-machi. When a family in these quarters of Osaka is stricken with such misfortune it is a double blow, because the burial of the dead in accordance with the legal process, and in obedience of immemorial custom, involves the enormous expenditure of more than a yen and a half (about 78 cents, our money). Here it is:

	Sen.	U. S. money.
Cost of coffin,	40.	$0.20
Cost of cremation,	75.	.375
Refreshments to sympathizers,	21.	.105
Offering of flowers,	.5	.0025
Doctor's certificate.	10.	.05
Fee to priest,	.3	.015
Fee to coffin bearers,	.14	.07
Another religious service,	3.	.015
	166.5	$0.8325

Less than a dollar to bury a man in good form. This cost can be somewhat reduced by a certificate to the authorities asserting the poverty of the family, but this is rarely done. Those better off generally assist, and even the poor neighbors of the locality in the event of death send in mourning presents of a few sens each, and in this way the disgrace of a pauper funeral is averted. What would the esteemed British laborer who looks forward with equanimity to ending his days in the "ouse" and a pauper's grave think of these independent Japanese, who may eat mighty close at times, but are too independent to accept calmly the life of a pauper, even though it means a comfortable bed and plum pudding and roast beef at Christmas?

One thing that strikes outsiders with curiosity about the dwellers in these quarters of Tokio is their religious predisposition. A small, half-decayed tabernacle, where a stone image of the Buddha is enshrined, is found in each nook and corner of this street. The dwellers are under obligation to contribute one-tenth to two-tenths of a sen a day to the religious ceremony fund, and on the two days of the 23d and 24th of July in every year a religious festival is held, when the street presents the most gallant spectacle which the fund admits, and when the hardship of the year is unbent. In the joys and rollicking of those days may the toilers of Nagoya-machi forget their sorrows for a few hours, and in the happy-go-lucky disposition of these truly wonderful people relax themselves by such pleasures as these fetes afford. —Japanese Letter by Robert P. Porter, in New York Sun.

A recent issue of the London Times contains the following unique advertisement: "Young lady required as governess for one little girl, aged 10. THAT UNLUCKY OPAL.

A man made a wager and lost it. "No wonder," said a bystander. "You're wearing an opal. You never will have any luck." This set the man to thinking. Four days later he slipped in getting off a street car and sprained his ankle. This decided him. He gave the pin to a friend who was on the board of trade, and who had no superstitious beliefs. Nevertheless, when this skeptic lost over ten thousand dollars on wheat he began to worry. He didn't care much for the pin, any way, and so one day, when a young man in his office admired the fire in the stone, he said, "Take it along if you like it." The young man overwhelmed him with thanks. Then he waited with guilty knowledge to see what would happen to the young man. He did not have to wait long. The very next week the employee was taken ill, and he missed four days at the office. The board of trade man was troubled in conscience, so he told his young friend about the opal pin and the superstition attached to it, and the employe, after deliberation, decided that he would give the pin to his girl. The opal did very rapid and effective work after it became the property of the young woman. On the second day after she began to wear it she ignited a curtain in attempting to light the gas. The curtain was destroyed, and the young woman burned both of her hands in attempting to extinguish the blaze. "An opal is always unlucky," she thought. "I'll not wear the dreadful thing a day longer." And she did not. She gave it to her brother, who scoffed at the suggestion that a sparkling, glassy little stone could wield any influence, good or bad. Nevertheless, when he started to Cincinnati and the train ran off the track, and he was tossed half the length of the car, he became converted. "I'll not give it to anybody else to be a Jonah," said he. "I'll sell it to a jeweler." So he went to the jeweler and said, "What will you give me for this opal?" The jeweler said, "That isn't an opal; it's a cat's-eye."

DANGEROUS

but not more so than the quickly advancing diseases caused by bad blood! More people die from failure to take simple healthful precautions than from lawless people. "The Kind BOSS makes his Biscuits with"
What Dean Herbert E Smith of Yale medical school, State Chemist of Connecticut and one of the most noted analytical chemists in America says of

BOSS BAKING POWDER.-

YALE MEDICAL SCHOOL, New Haven, Conn.
December 29, 1895.
C. D. BOSS & SON, New London Conn.
GENTLEMEN:—I have examined the package of Boss Baking Powder which you sent to me for that purpose.
I find that it is composed of the ingredients which in my opinion are most suitable for such a preparation. The ingredients are combined in the proper proportion for the best result, and the mixture shows no adulteration or injurious constituents.
Yours truly,
Herbert E. Smith
Connecticut State Chemist.

This powder is what has made our biscuits famous—over 3,000,000 pounds sold last year alone proclaims their popularity. Economical on account of its strength. Desirable on account of its purity. All Grocers.
C. D. BOSS & SON, NEW LONDON, CONN.

DIAMOND EARRINGS IN IOWA.—A nearby exchange tells of a man who mortgaged his farm to buy his a pair of diamond earrings. The wife took in washing to pay the interest on the mortgage, but on the first job lost one of the "sparks" in the suds, whereupon she tried to hang herself in the barn, but the rope broke and she fell on a Jersey cow worth $150 and broke its back. Her husband then undertook to shoot the cow to put it out of misery, but the gun burst and destroyed both his eyes, and the wife then ran away with a lightning-rod peddler. The mortgage is still on deck and fair to live to a ripe old age.—Fort Dodge (Ia.) Post.

SECRETARY OF THE SENATE'S RINGING WORDS.

One of the Greatest and Grandest Testimonials Ever Written Given to Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Hon. Frederick W. Baldwin, Sec'ty of the Senate, State Attorney, and Chairman of the Republican State Committee, Gives Unqualified Endorsement and Recommendation to Dr. Greene's Nervura.

The great men of America use, praise and recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Prominent people of highest standing, Governors, Mayors, Senators, Representatives, in fact, Statesmen in all parts of our country, together with Judges, Clergymen, Doctors, Newspaper Men, people whose names are known and honored everywhere, publish testimonials in strongest terms concerning the great good which this wonderful remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, has done them, their families and friends, and recommending in most emphatic language all who are ailing in any way and have need of medicine, to by all means use this grandest of all medical discoveries.

It is because Dr. Greene's Nervura cures that it is so highly and so strongly recommended by everybody.

Hon. Frederick W. Baldwin, of Barton, Vt., adds another to the long list of eminent statesmen who powerfully endorse the marvelous curative powers of Dr. Greene's Nervura, and give earnest advice to the sick, the weak, nervous, dyspeptic, run-down, debilitated and discouraged to try this great remedy, feeling sure from their own experience of its remarkable merits that health and strength will in all cases follow its use.

Hon. Mr. Baldwin, Secretary of the Senate, State Attorney of Vermont and Chairman of the Republican State Committee, is one of the foremost men of this country. To show the honor in which he is held by his state, it is only necessary to say that at the last Presidential election he was elected Presidential Elector for Vermont and messenger to carry the vote of Vermont to Washington. Such is the eminent standing of the man who tells you to use Dr. Greene's Nervura if you wish to get well. He says:

"I have long been acquainted with the virtues and fame of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and know of people among my friends who have been helped by its use, and from the general verdict from all sources that have come to my attention, I cannot do otherwise than commend it. Make use of this letter for the good of others."

But while the great and honored of our country use and recommend all to use Dr. Greene's Nervura, it is among the common people, those in the ordinary walks of life that on account of their vast numbers, the marvelous and extraordinary benefit, the numberless cures, the remarkable restorations to health by this most wonderful of remedies, can be daily and constantly observed. Dr. Greene's Nervura is distinctively the medicine of the people. Its discovery was for the people, it cures the people and it stands to-day unrivalled as the people's remedy.

It makes those who use it strong and well.

It is the prescription and discovery of our most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., and was used for years in his enormous practice before given broadcast to the people as the greatest restorer of health in the world's history. Dr. Greene can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

OLD DR SWEET.

IN SPRINGFIELD

THE EMINENT NATURAL BONESURGEON, HERBAL PHYSICIAN AND NEW ENGLAND'S MOST NOTED MEDICAL EXPERT HAS ARRIVED.

18 VERNON STREET, SPRINGFIELD.

DR J. EDWARD RAY, ASSISTANT.

1636—Family Medical History—1896

Each of nine unbroken generations of the famous Sweet Family have given to the world a great Natural Healer. Old Dr Sweet is now here. He stands among the great leaders in medicine in America. Founder, Editor and Proprietor of late Health and Home, Boston, also Old Dr Sweet's Family Medical Journal, Springfield. Have you received a copy? If not, send for one at once. Worth its weight in gold. Another Edition of 50,000 COPIES ORDERED.

Have you noticed what our New England History has to say of his remarkable family and of this remarkable man? Have you read the combined opinions of the New England dailies of this wonderfully gifted Natural Healer? Have you read the aggregated opinions of the great Boston dailies of the professional standing of Old Dr Sweet and of his great cures? No other specialist in New England thus honored. Is this not ample proof of his perfect reliability and great skill?

Have you read in Dr Sweet's Medical Journal—now being furnished free to families—the GRATEFUL TESTIMONY of DISTINGUISHED PATIENTS—not a case but had been abandoned as incurable?

READ THEM ALL! READ THEM ALL!!

If not, why not? You want the best and surest, don't you? Speedy cure means speedy money, does it not? It means raiment, food and shelter for wife and the little ones for the forthcoming winter, does it not?

To furnish the invalid public for the cure of the lame and those afflicted with obscure Chronic Diseases, the most efficient and best equipped private infirmary in Western Massachusetts, OLD DR SWEET'S SANITARIUM, 18 Vernon street, has been stablished, and to further this end the distinguished Dr J. Edward Ray, graduate of Harvard University, has been engaged as assistant. Do you fully comprehend the vast superiority of infirmary treatment as against office or family methods? It must be borne in mind that although one of the great natural bonesetters of Rhode Island, Dr Sweet is the only member of the famous Sweet family who cures Obscure Chronic Diseases with equal certainty as he does lameness or the setting of a dislocated bone or joint. NONE BUT THE BEST IS HIS MOTTO. WATCH HIS INSTITUTION GROW. An expensive apparatus for the illumination of the cavities of the human body by electricity to be put in this week. His family reputation is a safe guarantee for the sick and suffering. Get ready against winter. Examine his methods for the cure of Head, Throat and Lung Complaints, also all types of lameness and obscure Chronic Diseases. Ladies shopping at Messrs Forbes & Wallace's leaving by Vernon street entrance will find easy access to Dr Sweet's office. Secure a Free Copy of Family Journal without delay. Send address of invalid friends. Hours, from 9 to 8; Sunday, 2 to 6.

Our Kitchen

No kitchen is kept cleaner than the premises devoted to the manufacture of NONE SUCH Mince Meat. No housewife can be more fastidious in the matter of preparing food than we are in the selection and preparation of the materials of which it is made. The cleaning of the currants (for one thing) is more thoroughly done by means of perfected appliances, than it would be possible to do it by hand.

Its cleanliness, purity, wholesomeness and deliciousness are good reasons for using NONE SUCH Mince Meat. The best reason is its saving—of time, of hard work, of money. A ten cent package affords you two large pies, without trouble to you beyond the making of the crust. Makes just as good fruit cake and fruit pudding as it does mince pie. Sold everywhere. Be sure and get the genuine.

Send your name and address, and mention this paper, and we will mail you free a book—"Mrs. Popkins' Thanksgiving"—by one of the most famous humorous authors of the day.

One at a Time.

One step at a time, and that well placed,
We reach the grandest height;
One stroke at a time, earth's hidden stores
Will slowly come to light;
One seed at a time, and the forest grows;
One drop at a time, and the river flows
Into the boundless seas.

One word at a time, and the greatest book
Is written and is read;
One stone at a time, and the palace rears
Aloft its stately head;
One blow at a time, the tree's cleft through,
And a city will stand where the forest grew
A few short years before.

One foe at a time, and he subdued,
And a conflict will be won;
One gram at a time, and the sands of life
Will slowly all be run;
One minute, another, the hours fly by;
One day at a time our lives speed by
Into eternity.

One grain of knowledge, and that well stored,
Another, and more on them;
And as time rolls on, your mind will shine
With many a garnered gem
Of thought and wisdom. And, time will tell.
"One thing at a time, and that done well,"
Is wisdom's golden rule.

"SOMETHING ABOUT TEDDY."

If I have a favorite among the boys on our street it is Teddy Gardner Harry King is handsomer, Jack Williams is a shining light in his class, Fred Mills is the champion of his athletic club, but for frank audacity, for startling, yet restful candor, for ways that are confident, beguiling, irresistible, give me Teddy. Fourteen years old is Ted, short, square and freckled; with a refractory back lock which no amount of pounding with a hair-brush can keep down; with hands which sometimes—I may say frequently—call for soap and water; with eyes full of sweetness and life; and a tongue which effervesces like champagne in all the latest schoolboy slang.

Not long ago he walked unceremoniously into my house, and saluted me in the confidential manner suggestive of forthcoming disclosures. "Lemme see—seem's if I smelt ginger-snaps—do I?" he inquired, with an engaging smile.

"I suppose you do," said I. "Ann has been leaving the kitchen door open again. I'm going out in a minute. I'll remember you."

"Oh, don't trouble yourself. I know my way around this house," said Ted, sliding to the door and presently reappearing with the yellow dish under his arm. After hospitably offering it to me he deposited it upon the table, between the tall lamp and a cloisonne vase.

"They're bang up, and no mistake," he announced, fitting two snaps together, and biting through both with dreamy satisfaction, "I mean to leave Ann something in my will for looking after my feeble wants so well, Miss Judy."

"Yes."

"Say, Miss Judy, you know that new girl that's staying with the Allings?"

"Miss Baslington?"

"Is that her name? Well, she's a little—chrysanthemum!" and Ted rolled his long-lashed eyes in a pantomimic display of rapture. "I'm all broke up over that girl. Seen her yet?"

"No, not yet."

"Well, she's a stunner! She knocked me flat the very first round. She sits in the window, and I take off my hat to her now when I go by—little further round that way, but she's worth it! I got a dandy smile off her this morning."

"I thought Miss Baslington was a grown up young lady, Ted," said I.

"Oh, she's 20 or 30, somewhere along there," said Ted, easily, "but what of that? It ain't going to take me forever to get there myself; she'll be glad to have me then; I can wait. Look here, Miss Judy?"

"What, Ted?"

"You and all the nighborhood are going to be asked to our house some evening before long; just keep your best eye open and size her up, will you? I freeze right on to your opinion, you know." Ted got up to go, giving his obnoxious knickerbockers a slap. "Wish my mother'd hurry up with my longus pantus-a-um! Look how tall I'm getting! The fellows'd all respect me more if I wore long trousers. Jim Bryden called me a kid the other day; if he does it again he'll find the kid can punch his head for him!" continued Teddy.

Ted has a brother Stephen, a dignified, steady-going, matter-of-fact young bachelor, whose only fault is in giving no one any occasion to find fault with him. "I never could understand, Miss Judy, how I came to have two such different boys as Stephen and Ted," Mrs. Gardiner used to say, "Stephen never gave me any trouble from the hour he was born, and he is the greatest comfort to me—and yet there is something about Teddy—"

There is, emphatically, something about Teddy.

It was at one of our informal neighborhood gatherings that the fascinating Miss Baslington first appeared. She certainly was fascinating Her auburn hair had a silky sheen, her skin was fair as a pink azalea, she was sweet-voiced, sweet-mannered, sweet-tempered and delightfully ready to be entertained as well as to be entertaining. Ted secured her at once for a lanciers in the long hall, and came to me afterward, glowing with enthusiasm. "She's a rattling good dancer!"

"Ted!"

"Well, she's a bang-up dancer! I'm going to have a waltz with her in the near future. Say, did you see my dancing-school bow just now?" Tell you what, I did her right up with that. Her name is Dora—and I adore her!" added Ted, in a stage whisper, and darted away.

I had my best eye open—they are both pretty observing—and it did not escape me that Miss Baslington seemed to enjoy a quiet talk as much as the dancing, and that Stephen Gardiner himself, his mother's right-hand man, who distributed his attentions with business-like impartiality among the young ladies, engrossed her attention for some time in the corner over behind the piano.

One evening I went across the street to the Gardiners' for a friendly call. They were all out but Mr. Ted, the maid informed me.

"He is studying, I suppose?"

"Well, yez can call it studyin', if ye like," said she, beckoning me to the foot of the stairs; "just listen to him now!"

Wild war-hoops, whistlings, stampings and poundings, interspersed with frequent bursts of song from the latest comic opera, all suggestive of circus, minstrels and polo, came from above. I knew Ted's little study of old, and went up stairs. Ted sat with his back to the door, his ruffled locks standing on end a la Paderewski, his chair tipped back past danger limits, while his feet frantically clutched the legs of the desk and his hands performed a Hungarian rhapsodie on top. A dog's-eared Caesar lay before him; the lexicon was on the floor.

"Getting your execution up, Ted? Don't let me interrupt your rehearsals."

"Why, Miss Judy, is that you? Come right in; you'll find me engaged in passages of war."

"I gathered that information as I came up stairs. I will not interfere with the Latin."

"I've got her most ground out. Caesar! don't I hate the oratio obliqua, though? It affects my brain. See any gray hairs?"

"Not a gray hair."

"Well, I had rather be rich than handsome."

"How is Miss Baslington, Ted?"

"Oh, she's all right! I call her Dora now; oh, I'm getting there!"

"Have you quarreled with Carrie Mills?"

"No; but I can't attend to too many girls at once," said Ted. "Carrie's a nice little thing, though. I play duets with Dora on my violin. Tell you what, she can play—like lightning—no flies on her!"

This was indeed carrying the war into the enemy's quarters, for Ted, in spite of his young Americanism, had a soul for music and played the violin like a saint, drawing forth one plaintive note after another in a way to pull on the heart strings. He had imagination, too, though its expression often bordered on the ludicious. "Hear her cry?" he would say, pensively, as the strings wailed tremolo under his bow. "What you s'pose ailed her? Bet her best fellow went back on her!"

Ted put his face into his Caesar and looked up at me with a mysterious, oneside smile. "Miss Judy, say, Stephen's gone to call on some girl or other to-night."

"What makes you think so?"

"Because I asked him if he wasn't, and he told me it was none of my business; besides, he took his new cane. Wish Steve'd give me his moustache—that's all I'd ask of him. Wouldn't I like to see Steve in love, though!"

"Why?"

"He'd be such a muff at it," remarked Teddy, judicially. "The way to do with a girl is go to right up and get your arms round her neck, and talk her head off; but Steve- he hasn't got any sand! I kissed Dora good-night last time I was there, and she wasn't mad a bit."

(Oh, Miss Baslington! Miss Baslington!)

Not many nights afterward I received a surprising visit from Stephen Gardiner He came, he said, to bring me a book on the manners and customs of the Aztecs for my next club essay, and on being invited to sit down, subsided into a chair, when his brisk manner instantly collapsed, and he stared at the fire in dejection for several minutes without saying a word. Finally he looked around at me saying, "Miss Judy, the small boys all come and tell your their secrets, don't they?"

"It's a way they have," said I.

"And you keep them, don't you?"

"I'm very good at that sort of thing."

"Keep mine, then! I'm in love!—and what's more, I'm getting desperate over it!" and the sedate Stephen, who had been leaning forward on his elbows suddenly straightened up and faced me, his glasses, as the light struck them, glaring at me like a pair of moons.

"Miss Judy," he went on, "I'm not afraid of any man alive. I can make an impromptu speech at a public meeting; I can keep order at the bootblacks' club; I can go into a room full of women without showing the white feather—but let me be alone with that saucy, self-possessed, provoking, bewitching, little piece of humanity, and I'm floored I'm—floored—I'm floored!" Stephen rumpled his thick locks until every hair stood on end, and gazed at me excitedly, then collapsed again.

"And does the young lady know the state of your feelings, Stephen?"

"I don't know anything about it!" said Stephen, still more distractedly; "you can't find out anything from a girl—they sit and smile. She might know it well enough if she cared, for ever since that first evening when she walked into our house like a piece of Dresden china"—

"Oh,—h—Miss Baslington?"

"Miss Baslington.

So! Stephen and Teddy were rivals. The thought was irresistibly comical to me

"Ted seems to have won his way with Miss Baslington," I ventured.

"Oh, Ted! he always gets what he wants He calls her Dora!" Stephen actually groaned. "That boy is a perpetual marvel to me. Miss Judy, I'm a sober, slow-going sort of fellow. I dare say people think me well enough, but I'd give an I got for his assurance, his colossal impudence, his brass! It's an object lesson. It's a—I can't talk about this at home; they wouldn't leave me alone a minute." He got up and stared into his hat for a full minute and a half. "Good evening," he said to the hat, and started toward the door.

"Don't go away discouraged, Stephen," said I, soothingly. "There is no reason why you should not succeed with Miss Baslington; take heart of grace. Ted says this is the way to go ahead," and I repeated Ted's advice.

"Hasn't he the cheek?" said Stephen, in gloomy admiration. "Upon my word, I would do it if I dared—but I don't—I don't. She'd—Well, good evening." This time he said it to me, not to his hat.

I was ready after this for another visit from Ted, but I was not prepared to have him burst in hot with indignation. "Here's a how-dy-do!" he exclaimed, sinking into his favorite chair with a bang; "there's a little picnic for you! Miss Judy, can you give a fellow something to eat? This love business is mighty wearing work!"

"Some doughnuts on the sideboard."

"Just the ticket." Ted made a bee-line for the dining room. "I'll tell you how it was," he began, coming back with his mouth full of doughnut. "I went over to see Dora last night with my violin. Caesar, can't she play! Hands cross over, up and down the middle, chasse right and left, salute-your-partner—well, we were having a first-rate time when all of a sudden the bell rang, and Dora missed a note. Who do you think walked in? Steve! He didn't know I was behind the footlights; no sir! He wouldn't have come if he had. Dora blushed—she doesn't blush for me, mind you—and Steve, what does he do but go and blush too? D'you ever see such a muff? Says I; Hullo, Steve!" and he frowned like anything at me. Dora didn't know it was a frown, but I did—I see Steve at home. Think I was going to abiit, excessit, evasit, erupit? Not much I wasn't. I sit right down and pitched in, till they got talking about Howells and George Elliot, and I couldn't stand that, so I went. I said, "Good evening, Mr. Gardiner'—like that, you know—and says he, 'Bye, sonny'—that made me mad! Now that kind of thing has got to stop!" said Ted with decision. "Haven't I got a mortgage on that girl? Steve can take his How'lls somewhere else—he isn't in it."

"Don't be too sure," said I.

"Huh!" said Ted; "if Steve wants points he better come to me; he won't catch any girl talking George Elliot to her.'

Alas for Ted! It was the old story of the hair and the tortoise A few days later I met him on the street, and he saluted me with his usual beaming smile.

"You've lost Miss Baslington, Ted!" I said mischievously.

"Oh, Dora says she'll be a sister to me," said Ted; "and I've asked Carrie Mills to the next sociable—but I'll tell you one thing, Miss Judy," Ted gave my hand an impressive squeeze in his earnestness: "Steve never'd 'a got that girl if he hadn't had me to do his courting for him—do you catch on?"—New York Tribune.

MONTY'S SCOOP.

Montgomery's acquaintance with the newspaper woman dated from a cold, wet evening in that season of the year, which without being either winter or spring, possesses the disagreeable features of both.

Montgomery was sitting in the hallway of a half deserted building as she came up. He was crying softly. The newspaper woman stopped.

"What's the matter, my boy?" she asked.

"None of yer business!" responded Montgomery, promptly.

"But you're crying," she persisted amused.

The newspaper woman walked on a few steps; then she turned back.

"Say," she said, "I haven't any friends, either. Come on and go to supper with me, I don't like to be alone."

Montgomery wavered.

"Come on," said the newspaper woman Montgomery went.

After supper Montgomery escorted her to the door of the newspaper office where she was employed. From that day they were fast friends.

He fell into the habit of loitering near the office door at the time of day when Miss Dodge would be coming down. When they met they would say:—

"Hello, Montgomery! How's your end of the profession?"

And Montgomery, swelling with pride at being thus included in the limit of journalism, responded:—

"Out o' sight. How's yours?"

Miss Dodge had designs on Montgomery. She meant to civilize him. She invited him to call on her precious-leisure Sunday, once a fortnight. The boy, however, refused.

"Downtown it's all in the perfesh," he exclaimed, "an' it's all right; but up to your place it's sassiety, an' I ain't in it, see?"

It was early in the winter. The newspaper woman was rushed to death. She rode home on the very last car, and the three blocks from the car line to her house had more terrors for her than she would have confessed. There were two nights when she felt someone was following her. Terror lent wings to her feet. The next night a backward glance showed her a figure following her again, shrinking along in the shadow of the trees. It showed her, too, a familiar something in the figure's walk. She stopped abruptly.

"Montgomery," she called, "come out from behind that tree!"

For a moment there was no response Then Montgomery slouched into sight and came shamefacedly to her.

"You see," he said, "it's awful for a lady to be out alone, an' I thought—I thought—"

Then a remarkable thing happened. The newspaper woman stopped, gave him a tremendous hug and kissed him square on his freckled cheek. It made him feel uncomfortable, but somehow he was glad afterward to remember it.

It was a busy winter, socially and politically. There was news, and important news, too, on foot.

There were rumors of an insult to the flag in foreign waters, though no one could say that the thing had really happened, nor what would be the outcome of it.

It was late in the evening of a day that had been exasperatingly barren of developments. Montgomery was on his way home. As he passed the White house two men came out to the gate. Their coats almost brushed the boy, but they did not see him. They stopped while the elder lighted his cigar. Montgomery heard the words:—

"The president approves your course, then?"

"Ultimately, I think he will. We demand an absolute apology, or—we'll force one."

"And if he does not approve it, what then?"

The man had moved on, but Montgomery caught the word "resign."

In a flash he thought of Miss Dodge. He stood still awhile and repeated the words softly to himself:—

"Absolute apology—force one—resign."

He recognized the speaker dimly. Where had he seen him before? It flashed over him in a moment. It was the Secretary of State!

It was nearly midnight. He must get it to the newspaper woman before she went home. He bent his head and dashed down the street. It was a "beat," the biggest one of the season, and she should have it. He flashed past corners blindly. Far down the street he could see the office lights. He must get there before she went home. Two blocks away—one block away—half a block away. He was crossing the last street. Somebody yelled at him. He could not spare the time to pause. There was a ring of hoofs, a shout from somebody, a whirl of lights, and Montgomery was flung to the pavement, dazed and bleeding. Somebody ran to help him, but he was on his feet again.

"Don't stop me, don't stop me," he said, dizzily, "lemme go, for God's sake!"

Somebody tried to stop him, but he stumbled on. The office lights were shining in his eyes, and he knew he had beaten the town

And that is how it happened that a few hours later, when the last line of copy was in, and the news that should make to-morrow's paper the sensation of the world had already had its startling headlines scanned by the proofreader, that a small boy with a pale face and a bandage about his head sat at a banquet finer than he had ever dreamed of. It was laid in the city editor's room, and the managing editor himself was present. He shook the boy's hand and thanked him, and the city editor slapped him on the back.

But the very proudest moment of all was when the newspaper woman leaned over him and said:—

"Montgomery, you are a credit to the profession."

He was afraid she was going to kiss him again, but she didn't.—Washington Post.

FINANCE IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Sunday school needed money, and Mr. Smart, the superintendent, had a new way of getting it.

He proposed giving each boy half a crown. At the end of the month the principal, together with what it earned, was to be returned to him.

The scheme was good, but it didn't work quite as Mr. Smith had anticipated.

The fourth Sunday found the superintendent ready to audit the profit and loss accounts, and he commenced with Johnnie's class.

"How have you done, Johnnie?"

"My half crown has earned another one," said Johnnie, with the air of one having an option on a half.

"Good," said the superintendent. "Not only is Johnnie a good boy in helping the school, but he shows business talent. Doubling one's money in a month requires no common ability. Who can tell but what we may have another budding Croesus among us? Johnnie, you have done well."

"And now, Thomas, how much has your half crown earned?"

"Lost it," said Thomas.

"What, not only failed to earn anything, but actually lost it," said Mr. Smart. "How was that?"

"I tossed with Johnnie," was the reply, "and he won."

Jaglets—"Who invented work, Bill?" Ragletes—"I doan' know; but he ought to have stayed and finished it."—Truth.

The Sand-Man.

I know of a dry little, sly little man
Who comes o'er our threshold whenever he can;
Though little he cares for the sunshine and light;
He haunts our big library when it is night.

When papa is reading his paper with care,
And I'm dozing all snug in the cushioned arm-chair,
When mamma looks up from her sewing—"My dear,
Perhaps you don't know that the sand-man's been here."

Then I hunt round the curtain, on top of the books,
'Neath the table and sofa, and all sorts of nooks,
And out on the stairway, and down in the hall;
But I can't find the sly little sand-man at all!

A CURB PROPOSAL.

Perhaps it isn't altogether fair to tell the story, but really it's quite too good to keep. Besides, its recital at this time is particularly apropos. She comes from Pennsylvania—just where I did not learn, but I rather suspect it was from some town not a million miles from the centre of the Keystone state. Two things attracted my attention to her. In the first place, she was extremely lovely, and the man who cannot appreciate a woman's attractiveness is not much of a man Her hair wasn't "like spun gold," but it was a beautiful burnished brown, and when the sun caught its wavelets the effect was all the more alluring Her eyes were big, brown and bright. They beamed with intelligence and goodness They reminded me of Whittier's distich:—

How brilliant and mirthful the light of her eye,
Like a star glancing out from the blue of the sky.

He was rather an indifferent young man so far as good looks went, but I suppose that what he lacked in that respect he made up in mentality They stood on Pennsylvania avenue, waiting for a car.

"Oh, Henry, here comes our car," she said in tremulous, but very sweet tones.

Henry knew it. He wasn't blind to that fact. Yet he was blind to the fact that several interested people lounged by and too eagerly drank in the conversation of the couple.

"Let it come; there are others," he replied, somewhat recklessly.

"Why, Henry, you are using slang," she murmured, turning a pair of mildly shocked eyes upon him

"By no means," he hastened to reply. "Intone the last clause of the sentence in the sense that I meant it, and you will see that you have erred."

Her lips moved; she was repeating the sentence. Then she smiled brightly.

"You are quite right," said she.

"I thought you would think so," he smiled back. "Do you know that I have something to say to you, Helen?"

The rich, warm color that had suffused her velvety cheeks fled for an instant and then rushed back again.

"Indeed?"

There was a little pathetic quaver in her voice.

"Yes. Can't you guess?"

She shook her head negatively.

"No," she faltered.

"I—I—"

"Papah, boss?"

"Yes, yes; give me a half a dozen."

"Henry," she said a moment later, somewhat reproachfully, "we really must take this car. Papa and mamma are waiting for us."

"We'll take the next one," he answered desperately. "On the car I shall have no opportunity to—and besides, when we get home your father and mother, for the time being, will effectually exclude every possibility of"—

"Oh, Henry," she cried agitatedly.

"It's true," he said, in a tense voice. "You know, Helen," he went on hurriedly, "that ever since I can remember I have at all times expressed a most fervent—"

"Henry, if we don't take a car mamma will never forgive me. You know that I promised to be with her at 4.30."

"Fervent—fervent. Ah, yes, Helen, a most fervent fervency. No, I don't mean that, dear, I meant I have expressed at all times a most intense love for you Your beauty, goodness, grace—yourself in its entirety—all have buoyed me up with constant hope. My love for you has been the one bright guiding star of my life. Helen, without you—"

"Oh, Henry," she murmured, undecided whether to cry or smile and half doing both "how can—can—we miss that car! Just think"—

"Yes, just think," he said excitedly, "just think how overpowering my love for you is! Without you I wouldn't care to live."

'Dat feller's got it bad," said one of the loungers, sotto voce, to his companion.

"He's havin' a struggle wid himself," said the other. But Henry heard not

"I have tried in vain to tell you how much I loved you ever since we came to Washington," Henry continued.

The ordeal was having a disastrous effect on him He was getting warmer and warmer every minute, and the starch in his collar was disappearing like a chunk of ice under the rays of a hot sun.

Helen evidently began to pity him. A tender look crept into her eyes.

"Poor boy!" she murmured. "And do you love me so much?"

"I couldn't tell you in a thousand years how much I love you, dear Helen," he vowed.

"If your love for me is not a passing fancy"—

"Passing fancy! My stars, it's cast iron reality. I can't forget you. Well you be my wife, Helen? Tell me, now or never, Helen."

He was very much agitated now, and he looked it.

"If I give you an answer, will you promise me to take the next car?"

"Yes, a million of them."

"Well, my answer is"—

She leaned forward and whispered something in his ear. I did not learn what it was, but it made Henry the happiest man in Washington at that particular moment.

He almost broke into a cheer. No doubt he wanted to hug and kiss her right there and then. And a moment later he handed her aboard the car, and they were whisked away.—Washington Post.

NOT AVAILABLE FOR HER.

I ran across old Job Holloway, the famous coach driver of half a century ago, yesterday, says the New York Press. He is not less then 80 now. Once I rode with him on the National turnpike through Virginia. There were seven passengers—six men and an old maid. The latter complained of sore throat one morning and inquired of the men how it could be cured. Each said that he had been a victim at some time or other but had forgotton how he had managed to get rid of it. Finally the oldest man in the party said that he had a bad case when he was young, but that the cure he used wouldn't do the old lady any good. At first she thought this was a reflection upon her age, but being of a sensible mind she determined to press him for his prescription.

"But there is no use telling you, madam," he protested. "It won't do you any good."

"I'm sure it will," she urged. "Do tell me. I will certain

McKINLEY AND HOBART.

Biggest Republican Victory Ever Heard of.

AN EMPHATIC ENDORSEMENT FOR SOUND MONEY.

Massachusetts Gives the Ohioan 165,000 Plurality and Wolcott 155,000. The Vote Locally and the Ticket Elected.

The battle is over. William McKinley, the soldier, the statesman, and champion of sound money, has won the victory. Free silver has been repudiated, Bryan, the "Boy Orator," crucified upon a cross of gold, and the honor and financial integrity of the nation of all nations upheld. The blackest cloud which ever gathered on our horizon and threatened to come between our fair land and the sun of prosperity, was blown away last Tuesday by a whirlwind of votes. States which were considered doubtful rolled up tremendous majorities for McKinley. He even captured several of the Southern states, which hitherto have always been found on the side of Democracy, cut down the majorities in nearly all the others, and was also given a handsome vote in the silver states. The Republicans will also have a large majority in the senate and house of representatives. In Illinois Altgeld, the friend of anarchists, was snowed under and McKinley received a plurality of 160,000. Pennsylvania was mindful of her duty and rolled up a majority of 300,000. New York also gave a like majority, and New York city was carried for the first time by a Republican candidate for president. Michigan was also found on the right side, in spite of reports to the contrary, with a majority of 60,000. Delaware and Maryland also fell into line and helped swell the Republican total. New England was also swept by McKinley. Massachusetts leads with 165,000 plurality, followed by Connecticut with 53,000, Maine 50,000, Vermont 35,000, New Hampshire 25,000, while little Rhode Island closes the rear with 23,000. In Massachusetts the Republican state ticket carried all before it. George Fred Williams was buried deep, and Roger Wolcott was given the handsome plurality of 155,000. All the congressmen, with one exception, are Republicans.

Locally, Frederick H. Gillett received the handsome majority of 12,000 for congressman, Bradford gets a re election as senator, while the well-known Col. Young of Springfield was defeated for the House, over which there is no little joy in many localities. W. H. Brainerd for county commissioner and T. W. Kenefick for representative, both Palmer men, are re elected by handsome majorities. The vote in this locality was as follows:

No little surprise has been expressed at the result of the vote in the first representative district, where H. P. Holden, Republican, was defeated by T. W. Kenefick, Democrat, by a majority of 170, the district being normally Republican by something like 300, and many are unable to account for it. There seems to be several reasons. One is the good record made by Mr. Kenefick in the House last year, which no doubt in the opinion of many entitled him to another term. But probably one of the chief reasons is that reported from Monson, in explanation of her vote, that Mr. Holden was alleged to have said that 90 cents or a dollar a day was enough for any workingman to support a family on. This story was circulated to evident advantage among the workingmen of the district, and cost Mr. Holden many votes. Kenefick's large vote in Brimfield and Holden's small majority in Monson is further claimed to have been the result of a feeling on the part of Brimfield that that town should have had the nomination this year, in which opinion Monson joined. A slight analysis of the vote may be interesting. The towns in the district outside of Palmer last year gave the Republican candidate 476 votes and the Democratic candidate 260. The increased vote of a Presidential year is conceded to be largely Republican, but giving each of this year's candidates his percentage of the increase based on last year's vote, and allowing Palmer's vote to be counted as cast, Mr. Holden would have been elected by three votes. The Republican vote in Monson fell off 94 this year, that of Brimfield 85, and that of Wales 5, a total of 184, or enough to have elected Mr. Holden easily. It is evident that the claim of the other towns of the district that "Palmer is not to be depended upon," can be applied to all the rest except little Holland—she cast her ballot straight.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Messrs. Taggert and Lawrence have engaged the vacant store in Holden's block, where they will demonstrate the wonderful X-Rays for a short time. Experts in this line say the results obtained by these gentlemen are the most satisfactory yet produced.

PALMER NEWS.

How Palmer Voted.

An unusually large vote was polled in the election Tuesday, there being only 166 stay-at-homes in a total registration of 1235; of these 67 were in precinct A, 28 in B, 24 in C and 30 in D. In precinct A a large vote, over 350, had been polled at 10 in the morning. Counting was commenced at 10.30, but the returns were not in until 9 30 in the evening. Precinct C was the first to report, at 5 15, followed by D at 5 35 and B about 6. One of the surprises of the day was the large majority given Mr. Kenefick for representative over Mr. Holden, and the surprisingly small number of blank ballots in this connection. W. H. Brainerd for county commissioner also had a large vote. The vote in detail follows:

More Liquor Seized—Two More Convictions for Illegal Selling.

The prosecuting committee is still on the move and is keeping the liquor sellers guessing. Last Friday evening they raided Thomas Hartnett of Three Rivers, and found a small quantity of whisky in a jug and also a small quantity in a bottle. Hartnett was arraigned in court Saturday morning on the charge of keeping a common nuisance, and the case was continued until next Monday. Monday evening they searched the yard in the rear of the Cross block and found under the sill of an outbuilding a keg containing several quarts of whisky. Tuesday morning Marcus Sullivan and Richard Sheehan were arrested on the charge of keeping a liquor nuisance. They were arraigned Wednesday morning, and the case was continued until next Monday. Bail in the sum of $200 each was furnished. Sullivan was until recently the proprietor of the Nassowanno House, and Sheehan was the clerk of the hotel.

The continued liquor cases of William Ritter, the Chicopee brewer, Lawrence Pilcher and Jan Patchtopck, two Polanders in his employ, were at last settled in court Monday morning, and as a result two more scalps are hanging from the belt of the prosecuting committee; that is, two more convictions have been secured. Pilcher was arrested the first of last month for illegally peddling beer in Three Rivers. Ritter and Patchtopck came out to his hearing the next morning and were also arrested. All pleaded not guilty, the Polanders to the charge of illegally selling liquor, and Ritter to the charge of having unlawfully caused liquor to be brought into town. Monday they were represented by Lawyers Loomis of Chicopee and Dunleavy of Springfield, but as the commonwealth had a large amount of evidence, wisely decided not to make any fight. Pilcher withdrew his plea of not guilty, entered a plea of nolo, and was fined $200. Patchtopck also withdrew his of not guilty and pleaded guilty. He was fined $100. Roth were given two weeks for the performance of sentence. The case against Ritter was not prossed.

Rev. H. F. Moulton Receives a Call to a Maine Church.

There is a strong probability that the people of St. Paul's Universalist church will lose their pastor, Rev. H. F. Moulton, who has been with them for five years, he having received a call to a church in Biddeford, Maine. Monday's issue of the Biddeford Daily Journal contained the following regarding the matter:

Rev. Mr. Moulton, who occupied the pulpit of the Universalist church yesterday, is one of the most promising candidates of those that have been heard here since the resignation of the pastor. He held but one preaching service, but all those who heard him expressed their approval of him, and it was evident that there is quite a general sentiment in favor of calling him to the pastorate. The people of the church will meet in the evening, and it is the opinion of some members at least that a vote will be taken calling Mr. Moulton. Mr. Moulton is a young man comparatively, being about thirty years old. He comes here from Palmer, Mass., and is not unknown in the two cities, having relatives here. He is a nephew of Westbrook Berry of Saco, and is also distantly related to Supt. R. E. Gould, of this city.

At the church meeting a unanimous call was extended to Mr. Moulton. This is all the more flattering because it is the third time the church has invited him to become its pastor, the first time in June and again in September, both of which were declined. The call brings with it an offer of a considerably larger salary than is being paid by the Palmer church. The Biddeford church is the only one of the denomination within ten miles, and the population from which the congregation is drawn numbers about 35,000. In addition to this, the location is only ten miles from Mr. Moulton's old home, and he has many acquaintances and friends there.

Mr. Moulton has not yet decided what his action will be, and a decision will probably not be reached until next week, but in view of the circumstances, it is quite probable that he will accept the call.

New Move Toward an Electric Road.

The electric road project in Palmer has received a new impetus within a few days by the announcement that one man stood ready to take $30,000—one-half—of the stock necessary to build a road between the villages of the town, provided the other $30,000 could be raised. Local men who are interested in the matter have taken new courage, and are at work trying to secure the necessary sum, meeting with considerable success, although no extensive canvass has been made as yet.

Mr. Fred Viggers will preach in the Advent chapel Sunday morning.

J. H. Shaw has sold his milk route to Adelbert Ferry of Monson, who has moved his family to this place.

Several houses on Park street have recently been connected with the Palmer Water Company's system.

The selectmen met in their rooms in Memorial Hall building Monday afternoon and transacted the usual business.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society met in the store of Secretary F. D. Barton this afternoon.

Albert Griswold has moved his family from the carpet mill district into the upper tenement of Mrs. Mary Ronan's house on Maple street.

A social dance was given in the dance hall of the Edmund House Saturday evening. Music was furnished by the Monson Orchestral Club.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Palmer Business and Social Club will be held in the club rooms next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Thomas lodge of Masons will hold a special communication next Monday evening and work the third degree. A collation will follow the work.

Willard Eaton Sedgwick gave a party this afternoon to a number of his young friends at his home on Thorndike street, in honor of his sixth birthday.

The regular monthly meeting of the pastoral committees of St. Paul's church will be held this evening at 7.30. A full attendance is requested.

A dividend, first and final, of a fraction over one per cent, has been paid the unpreferred creditors of the insolvent Rogers-Osgood Hat Co. this week.

Rev. C. R. Minard of the Baptist church will exchange pulpits Sunday morning with Rev. Mr. Jenner of the Merrick Baptist church in West Springfield.

The following attractions have been booked for the opera house: Nov. 12th, "Limited Mail;" 25th, "Peck's Bad Boy;" Dec. 3d, "Kodak;" 10th, Gaston's Minstrels.

The Union Thanksgiving service will be held this year in St. Paul's church on Wednesday evening, the 25th. Rev. C. R. Minard of the Baptist church will deliver the sermon.

The work of constructing the new Main street sewer, which has been delayed several weeks by the non-arrival of the pipe, was commenced Wednesday morning by Contractor M. J. Dillon.

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the parlors of the Congregational church at 3 p. m. next Tuesday. This meeting will be of special interest to women, and all are invited to be present.

The ladies of the Baptist church held a birthday party in the parlors of the church Wednesday evening. A large number were present, and a good musical programme was rendered which made the occasion enjoyable to all. Refreshments were also served.

The case of Patrick Lynch, charged with shooting Andrew Pinney, which was to have been tried Wednesday, was continued owing to the inability of Lawyer Taft, who is to appear for the prosecution, to be present. It will probably be tried to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

The first of the Severn chamber concerts will be given in Association Hall, Springfield, to-morrow afternoon at 4, and will no doubt be attended by many of Mr. and Mrs. Severn's Palmer pupils and admirers. Miss Florence Adele Mulford of New York, contralto, will assist.

The Odd Fellows will hold a memorial service in the Baptist church Sunday evening. Rev. Mr. Jenner will preach on "Friendship, Love and Truth." Special music will be rendered by a male quartette composed of E. B. Taylor, W. A. Weld, Fred Royce and C. F. Orcutt.

William McComb and Miss Sarah E. Moulton, both of Springfield, were married Monday at the residence of Rev. H. F. Moulton, Mr. Moulton performing the ceremony in the presence of a few friends. Miss Moulton is well known in Palmer, having formerly lived here.

At the request of the prosecuting committee the cases of John Manning, John Dawson, Michael Rooney, John F. Newbegin and William Manning for maintaining liquor nusiances, and the case of Daniel Matteson for the illegal transportation of liquor, have been continued until next Monday.

The "Old Homestead" was presented to one of the largest audiences ever assembled in the opera house Tuesday evening. Every seat in the house was occupied, and all the standing room taken. Election returns, showing large majorities for McKinley, were announced from the stage between the acts, and were received with applause.

One of the results of the building of the proposed electric railroad in the spring would be the building of a modern theatre. Capitalists have recently been looking over the field and have partially matured plans for a cosy theatre in a central location having a seating capacity of 800 or 1000, with an inclined floor, good balcony, and a stage having 60 feet hight.

There is some talk of resuscitating the village improvement society, long since deceased, and information is desired as to the books of the former society, particularly the one containing the constitution and by-laws. If anyone has the book or a copy of the by-laws will they kindly leave it at the JOURNAL office, to be copied and returned if the owner does not care to part with it.

The first of the series of lectures to be given under the auspices of the Ladies' Tuesday Social Club was given at the home of Mrs. E. P. Ball last Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Annie Russell Marble was the speaker, and gave an interesting talk on "Some recent Scottish writers—Maclaren, Barrie, Crockett." The next lecture will be given Saturday, November 21st, at the home of Mrs. E. G. Hastings. Miss Linda Hawley Brigham will speak on "Glimpses of the Old World."

A number of young people from the Institute and Industrial Home for the Blind at Hartford will give a concert in the opera house on the evening of the 17th. The company is composed entirely of blind people, and includes a brass band, orchestra and glee club. The company is most highly spoken of wherever it has been, and will no doubt present a pleasing entertainment. The proceeds go towards the support of the institute, where the blind are taught to earn their own living.

The following suits were entered at the court house in Springfield Tuesday: Actions of contract—Patrick McKelligott against David J. Downey, both of Palmer, for $500 on a bond for support; T. D. Potter & Company against David J. Downey, both of Palmer, for $39.16 on an account; Henry Trumbull of Monson against Oliver D. Hovey, appellant, of Monson, for $69 50 on an account. Actions of tort—Park Archambeault against Joseph Forest, alias Joseph Foret, both of Palmer, for $3000 for an assault.

Some excitement was caused in front of the bank block yesterday forenoon by a horse which was harnessed to a buggy and hitched to a post. The day was rather a lifeless one, and conducive to an intimate acquaintance with Morpheus, at least so the horse apparently considered, for it went to sleep in the harness and then lost its balance and fell over upon the sidewalk. The animal was quickly righted by the bystanders and no damage was done. The owner had evidently become accustomed to such occurrences, for he did not appear nearly so excited as the spectators.

Saturday was flag day, and was observed in a general manner throughout the village. Many residences were decorated with flags, and on Main street from nearly every place of business the stars and stripes were flying. In the evening a huge pile of inflammable material, well covered with oil and tar, erected on the highest point of Dewey hill, was lighted at 8 30. In a few seconds the whole pile was ablaze, the flames rising to a hight of fifty or sixty feet, and illuminating the whole valley. The bonfire was in charge of a committee appointed by the Palmer Republican Club. Several ardent Republicans also showed their enthusiasm by the burning of red fire.

Mrs. Dora E. Parks, formerly of Palmer, died at the home of her son, Samuel S. Parks, in Chicago, early Wednesday morning. Mrs. Parks had been a resident of Palmer for 40 years, and was a daughter of the late Dr. Samuel Shaw of this place. Mrs. Parks was 63 years and 11 months old at the time of death. Although having been an invalid for many years, her death was entirely unexpected, and resulted from a cold which at about four o'clock on Tuesday afternoon commenced to rapidly develop into congestion of the lungs, from which she died at one o'clock Wednesday morning. She and her husband, William R. Parks, had made their home with their son for over a year.

Fanny Davenport will appear in the Court Square Theatre, Springfield, next Monday and Tuesday evenings in Sardou's famous "Cleopatra," and no doubt many Palmer people will attend. During the vacation just closed Miss Davenport has perfected many details of her already fine portrayal of the "Serpent of the NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

LOCAL NOTICES.

A complete line of Stamped Linens and Silk for sale. Lessons given in embroidery, 35c per lesson. Orders taken for stamping and embroidery. Mrs. E. Entwistle, Monson.

Charles S. Thayer of Amherst was in town Tuesday to vote and visit friends.

Willard Darling cut off the end of his thumb Monday while chopping.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Newton spent the first part of the week in Amherst.

Michael Kennedy fell and broke his wrist Monday, and was attended by Dr. Fuller.

Rev. Harry Blackford will exchange pulpits Sunday with W. H. Pierce of Brimfield.

Willie O'Brien broke his ankle while playing football last Saturday. He was attended by Dr. Fuller.

Mrs. A. D. Norcross, who has been seriously ill this week at her Main street home, is better to-day.

The Universalist Sunday school will give a harvest and Thanksgiving concert in the church Sunday evening.

Dr. Harry A. Merchant was home from the Albany Medical College from Friday until Wednesday morning.

Rev. R. W. Brokaw of Hope church, Springfield, will preach in the Congregational church Sunday in exchange with the pastor.

The remainder of the list of new books recently added to the public library, a portion of which was printed last week, will be found on the fourth page.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gath were paid a surprise visit last evening in celebration of their 10th wedding anniversary by a party of friends and neighbors, who left substantial presents in remembrance of the occasion.

Miss Hattie Twitchell of Springfield will speak at 3 p. m. in the Academy chapel one week from to-morrow, taking for her subject "The Kindergarten." The lecture will be free, and all are cordially invited to be present.

An incident of flag day. Two families reside in a Park avenue house. Both use the porch, and one member of one family put out a flag over it. A member of the other family tore the flag down. And this in Monson!

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Herlihy, who had returned from their wedding trip and were visiting Mrs. Herlihy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy, at South Monson, were serenaded by the Monson Cornet Band Monday evening.

The Monson Republicans will have a parade to morrow evening in celebration of McKinley's election. All are invited to participat, and make the occasion a success, and those who are able are requested to decorate and illuminate their houses.

The Cecilia Bradford Trio will give a concert next Wednesday evening in the Congregational church under the auspices of the Endeavor society. The violin playing of Miss Bradford was greatly enjoyed last year, and they are sure of an appreciative audience.

In answer to an increasing demand, the proprietor of the Monson and Palmer stage line will hereafter make connections with the 10 a. m. train at Palmer for Boston. This will necessitate an earlier start from Monson, and the stage will leave the south end about 9 o'clock.

Nearly 200 students and others gathered in the Academy chapel last Friday evening to hear Mr. Edward F. Morris talk informally on his recent trip to England and the continent. The talk was so interesting and instructive that he has consented to give another at an early date.

It is related that a certain man, after casting his ballot on election day, said with a self-satisfied air, "I didn't want to vote for that McKinley, so the first thing I did was to cross his name off." Doubtless he is one who is opposed to female suffrage on the ground that women do not know enough to vote intelligently.

The pupils and teachers at Hammond Hall observed Hallowe'en last Saturday evening with the customary festivities. An old-fashioned supper was served, at which each guest represented by costume and actions some well-known character of history or fiction. Wierd and prophetic pastimes occupied the evening till the time of the election illuminations.

The Y. P. C. U. of the Universalist church held a meeting Wednesday evening and elected these officers: President, George H. Seymour; vice president, Miss Gertrude Bennett; secretary, Miss Musa Babbitt; treasurer, Miss Sadie Hobbs; chairman of the lookout committee, Miss Mary Hobbs; devotional, William L. Ricketts; social, Miss Lena Babbitt; post office mission, Miss Carrie L. Chapin.

Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert W. Ferry, who have moved to Palmer this week, were given a reception in the Methodist church last Friday evening by the Epworth League, of which both are members, and by the King's Daughters, of which Mrs. Ferry is a member. The affair was a surprise to the couple who, after the company assembled, were sent for. Mrs. W. H. Marble read a poem, after which Mr. Marble made a graceful speech, presenting a sum of money from the King's Daughters, and a number of pound packages from the League, to which Mr. and Mrs. Ferry responded.

The school committee held a meeting Friday evening and voted to close the schools November 20th, and to close them for one week at Christmas. The length of the winter term will be determined by the amount of money on hand later on. Although the town appropriated nearly as much money as was asked for by the committee, the amount has been found insufficient for the work, as unforeseen circumstances have arisen, chief among them being the unusually large number of pupils in the Academy, whose tuition is paid by the town.

The pupils of the Academy were given an opportunity on election day to express their political preferences in an instructive way. After chapel the school resolved itself into a town meeting, and a mock election was conducted in almost exact imitation of the official affair. The members of the civil government class served as checkers and ballot clerks, and a representative of each class and party served as counters. A hectograph fac-simile of the official town ballot was used, and small tables served as booths. The pupils had been previously instructed by the principal and by the teacher of civil government in the use of the Australian ballot, and in the issues that were before the country for decision. The result of the balloting was in keeping with that of the rest of the country. McKinley received 84 votes, Bryan 14, Levering 7 and Palmer 4. Similar majorities were cast for the state officers, and biennials won in the ratio of four to one.

Flag-day was generally observed, many of the decorations being quite elaborate. Noticeable among them were the business places and houses of Heimann & Lichten, Howe & Pease, Rogers & Co., O'Brien Bros., James Pendegrast, E. H. Brown & Co., William Murphy, E. J. Hughes, W. H. Dunham, Sing Lee, H. C. Norcross, G. L. Fuller, A. A. Babbitt, Charles Merrick, Mrs. L. L. Chapin, G. L. Keeney, F. A. Bliss, W. N. Flynt & Sons, G. E. Grout, W. N. Flynt Granite Co., Century Hotel, E. W. Wales, L. C. Flynt, R. M. Cushman, G. C. Flynt, E F. Morris, John Leahy, C. M. Gage, Miss. E. R. Holmes, Rufus Fay, R. P. Cushman, S. Fred Cushman, A. D. Norcross, Dr. G. E. Fuller, W. A. Charles, John Cross, R. F. Bradway, Marcus Bradway, R. C. Millar, E. P. Newton, Mrs. A. A. Gage, L. Hutchinson, Carl Nordstrom. Promptly at 8.30 Saturday evening the bon-fire was lighted on the hill east of the village; at the same time one was started in the Cushman lot by the mill pond, and red fires flashed up from a number of points on Main street, and in front of H. C. Norcross's house, making a very pretty illumination. Several fire crackers were touched off, but with this exception everything was quiet, though the street was filled with people.

BRIMFIELD.

The fortnightly literary and social club met last evening with Mrs. Chamberlain.

Mr. Hall, assistant teacher in the high school, visited his old home in Nashua, N.H., Monday and Tuesday. Mrs. Earle conducted his classes.

LUDLOW CENTER.

Bennett Bros. have bought the milk route of the late W. A. Miller of North Wilbraham.

A meeting of the Grange was held Monday evening, several visitors being present from Belchertown and West Springfield. The first and second degrees were worked upon one candidate, after which a literary programme was rendered. The question, "Is the success of our grange due more to the influence and efforts of women or men?" was ably discussed.

WEST WARREN.

Mrs. James Fuller of Bondsville is visiting Mrs. Charles Crouch.

Miss Jennie M. Barton of Millbury has been visiting friends in town.

Lyman Keith of Palmer, formerly of this town, is a clerk in E. M. Johnson's drug store.

Daniel J. Sullivan's candy and fruit store was broken into Tuesday night, and robbed of all its tobacco and some other things.

The Whitehouse chapter of the Epworth League held its business meeting Monday evening and choose officers for the next six months.

WALES.

Mrs. Heald and son of Camden, Maine, are guests of Mrs. W. A. Lyon.

Mr. Leland and Miss Alice Pepper of Brookfield are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Pepper.

S. F. Pepper and wife, G. W. Dimmick and wife, and William Flynt attended the funeral of their father, Mr. Flynt, in Charlton, Thursday.

A. A. Hubbard and Mr. McKenner went to New York after voting Tuesday to hear election returns, and H. E. Shaw went to Springfield to hear the news, while many gathered at Shaw's telephone office to hear the figures.

A number of neighbors and friends gave Albert W. Williams a surprise last Saturday evening, and left a purse of money. Mr. and Mrs. Williams desire to thank all who have so often and liberally contributed to their relief and necessities during the long sickness of Mr. Williams, who was so badly broken up by being thrown from a wagon.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Will H. Bearse of Providence was the guest of Miss E. Evelyn Bell, Sunday.

Charles Gabb of Northampton spent Sunday in town as the guest of Miss Nellie M. Morgan.

Captain A. S. Wall, who was 89 years old last Sunday, went to the polls Tuesday and cast his vote for William McKinley and the straight Republican ticket. Capt. Wall was a Democrat up to the time of Lincoln's nomination, since which time he has voted the Republican ticket.

North Wilbraham Republicans celebrated in enthusiastic style Wednesday night by a torchlight procession, bonfires, red an green lights, and a general illumination of residences irrespective of the politics of the occupants. Joseph Bergman was chief marshal of the parade, and the line of march was taken up at 7 45 to meet the Crane Republican Club of Wesleyan Academy, when the paraders marched through the principal streets of the village to the music of clarionet and drum. Tupper and Tuette had charge of the cannon, and performed their part well. About 150 men were in line, and the enthusiasm was unbounded.

BELCHERTOWN.

Pliny Clifford of Greenwich inspected E. G. Griggs post, 67, Monday evening Mrs. Marsh of Ware inspected the Woman's Relief Corps. A social was held after the meetings.

A meeting of Union Grange was held Tuesday evening. Several papers on the early history of the town and the Walker family were read, which were very interesting.

Charles Haynes of Three Rivers has purchased a valuable wood lot of F. F. Williams. A portable saw mill has been taken to the lot and the work of cutting the timber begun. It is understood that the price paid for the lot was about $1000.

The agricultural society met Wednesday evening and elected the following officers: President, D. F. Shumway; vice presidents, Guy C. Allen, L. W. Dillon, J. R. Gould, H. C. West and T. J S. Parsons; secretary, G. H. B. Greene; treasurer, William E. Bridgman; directors, G. S. Warner, M. G. Ward, C. S. Knight, G. I. Davis, A. C. Shaw. The treasurer reported $500 on hand, after paying all bills.

A pretty home wedding took place Tuesday afternoon at the home of Dr. G. F. Thompson, when Miss Mary Frances Shea and George Belden Jackson, both of Belchertown, were married by Rev. G. J. Newton, assisted by Rev. A. H. Manee. Only immediate family relatives were present. A brief reception followed the marriage ceremony, after which the newly-married couple left for a two-weeks' tour through New Hampshire. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, on their return to Belchertown, will make their home at Dr. Thompson's.

WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. Henry Brewer is visiting her sister, Mrs. Lindsay, in Suffield, Ct.

Sylvester Travers has exchanged his farm in this town for property in Springfield.

Mrs. Joseph Leavens of Melrose, N. Y., is visiting her parents, Deacon and Mrs. Albert Phelps.

Mr. Belle of Springfield, who has bought the land opposite Lurin J. Potter's residence, is making preparations to build a house in the spring.

The women of the First Congregational church met in the chapel yesterday afternoon and evening and transacted the usual routine of business. Tea was served at 6 o'clock.

The Academy football team defeated the West Springfield high school eleven on the Academy campus Wednesday afternoon. The visitors were outclassed, and only had possession of the ball three times during the game. The score, 18 to 0.

The news of the Republican victory was received with great joy by the Academy students Wednesday morning, who formed a procession and marched to the music of a drum about the campus and to and from chapel. In the evening the Crane Republican Club formed a torchlight procession and marched about the main part of the village and to North Wilbraham and back, a tramp of six miles, amid booming of cannon, red fire, and other illuminations, bonfires, shooting of rockets, and cheers for McKinley. A large bonfire on the campus, where speeches were delivered by Principal W. R. Newhall, Prof. Austin, Prof. Cooper, and others, closed the enjoyable jollification.

An interesting meeting of the granges of Hampden county was held with the local grange Wednesday, all the surrounding granges being well represented. After the business meeting came the literary programme, in charge of the Ludlow grange. Interesting papers were read on the subject, "The farm home and the farm citizen; how the home on the farm can be made attractive to young and old of both sexes; the duties of the farmer and his family to town, country, state and nation." Merritt Morse of Belchertown gave an interesting address, Miss Florence Green of Wilbraham gave readings, and the Misses Edith Allen of Ludlow, Mrs. E. C. Clark of Wilbraham, and the Wilbraham grange quartett gave musical selections.

The marriage of Miss Ella Bliss to Eugene H. Lincoln of Providence, took place at high noon on Monday of last week at the residence of her brother, A. Eugene Bliss, 388 Pine street, Providence. The house was tastefuly decorated with palms, ferns, smilax and cut flowers. The chandelier under which the couple stood was entwined with smilax and roses. They entered the parlor to the music of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by a harpist, Frank Raia, who rendered other selections later. The bride wore a dress of white brocaded satin, trimmed with duchess lace; she wore orange blossoms in her hair and carried a bouquet of roses. Miss Nellie Pichols of New York, a college chum of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Hollis Smith of Providence was best men. Rev. Robert P. Parker performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives of the bride and groom from Springfield, Boston, Wilbraham, Boston, and Providence. A reception followed. Several tables were covered with the presents of china, silver and glassware. The groom has practiced law for some years in Providence, and is coroner for that city; he is also an artist. The bride was educated at Wesleyan Academy, was a teacher in the public schools here for some time, and a graduate from Dr. Emerson's college of physical culture, Boston.

WARREN.

The King's Daughters met with Mrs. Wilson Fairbank this afternoon.

Frank DeLuce is stopping at his home on Washington street for a few days.

The Ladies' Home Missionary Society packed a box of clothing to be sent to Miss Curtis of McIntosh, Ga., to be distributed among the negroes.

The installation of Rev. W. B. Forbush as pastor of the Congregational church will take place next Wednesday. The examining council will convene in the morning, and the installation services will be held in the afternoon.

The Father Mathew bazar opened Wednesday night. Vocal music was furnished by outside talent, and dancing concluded the entertainment. Thursday evening local talent furnished the entertainment, with solos by J. T. Murphy, and Masters Grady and Sweeney in laughable sketches.

Warren is very fortunate in being represented in the Legislature by one so well equipped to do good service as Representative Wilson Fairbank. Mr. Fairbank's long and valuable services in the telephone service have given him unusual facilities for understanding and judging in questions of business and finance, as well as ways and means. The men who have shown executive ability and good judgment in their own line of business are those most capable of caring for the interests of the state.

The election returns were received in Warren very successfully through the service of the telephone company. A long-distance telephone was put in the assessors' room at the town hall, and the majority gathered there, the bulletins being used as fast as received. The Slater Engine Co. also kept open, and bulletined to their employes as fast as the returns came in over their telephone. Caterer Keith furnished a s read during the evening. As the result became more and more certain a cannon was fired several times, and there was general jubilation throughout the town. Warren also showed its spirit and patriotism in responding to the call for flag day. Nearly all of the business houses and many private residences floated the tri colors to the breeze, they danced from the heads of horses, and in the hands of even the wee toddlers. A large bonfire on the hill above school street burned until midnight, and red fires on Main street completed the illumination.

Corner Stone of St. Paul's Catholic Church Laid.

The corner stone of the new St. Paul's Roman Catholic church was laid last Sunday afternoon. A large number of people were present to witness the impressive ceremony. The exercises commenced in the morning, when at 10 30 solemn high mass was celebrated in the presence of Bishop Thomas Beaven in the old church on River street. Rev. P. B. Phelan of Holyoke was celebrant, Rev. M. F. Murphy of Brookfield deacon, Rev. H. J. Wrinn of West-Warren sub-deacon, Rev. J. Meehan of Ware master of ceremonies, Rev. Richard S. J. Burke of Huntington deacon of honor, and Rev. James Boyle of Ware sub-deacon of honor. Stearn's mass and Emerson's Credo were rendered by the church choir. A large number of people, including many from out of town, were present. At 2 p. m. a procession headed by the Warren Cornet Band and made up of the clergy who were to take part in the exercises, and several Warren societies, marched from the old church to the new church on West Main street, where the corner stone, which is at the southeast corner of the edifice, was laid by Bishop Beaven, assisted by Revs. P. B. Phelan of Holyoke, Richard S. J. Burke of Huntington, Henry J. Wrinn of Warren, James Boyle, F. J. Sheehan, and J. Meehan of Ware, M. J. Murphy and J. Dailey of Brookfield, J. P. Tuite and A. Trottier of North Brookfield, G. H. Dolan of Spencer, J. F. Radican of Leicester, M. Clement of Fiskdale, Thomas O'Keefe of Monson and Rev. Mr. Purde of Canada. In the copper box within the corner-stone were placed the name of the pope, the cardinal, the archbishop of the provence, the bishop of the diocese, the pastor of the church, also the name of the president of the United States, the governor of the state, the selectmen of the town, United States coins and the newspapers of the day.

After the laying of the corner stone, Rev. Richard S. J. Burke of Huntington delivered the sermon. Rev. Mr. Burke is an able speaker and gave an eloquent sermon. The choir rendered "Veni Creator" by La Hache, and "Ave Marie" by Wittaseck. The silver trowel used by Bishop Beaven in laying the corner stone will be presented to the person giving the largest contribution to the corner stone offering. The need of a new church has long been felt in Warren, as the old church is not large enough, and for some time it has been necessary to hold two services every Sunday morning. Four years ago land was purchased, a foundation put in and other preparations made to build, but the work was stopped owing to the hard times. This spring Drury property, corner of Main and School streets, was purchased for the erection of the church. The new church resembles a Greek cross, 68 by 100 feet. There is to be a central tower in front, and two side towers. Three double doors lead from the street. The finish of the interior is Eastern ash, with birch floor. The outside of the structure will be completed, but only the basement in the interior will be completed until spring. Chickering and Connell of Springfield are the architects. The building stands in a prominent location, and when completed will be the finest church edifice in this section, and a beautiful addition to the town.

WARE.

The Republicans will have another parade and general celebration in a few days.

The public schools held no session Thursday afternoon on account of the storm.

Mrs. E. Otis Holden has returned from a several-weeks' visit with friends in Pittsfield.

The boot shop property of the George Eddy estate is to be sold at auction on Saturday, the 21st.

Barnes & Therrien have had this week in addition to their usual meats and provisions, venison, partridge, squirrels, etc.

The tenth birthday of Florence, daughter of Thomas Naylor, was celebrated by a party at her home on Monday from 4 to 7.

The electric company started this week to furnish light mornings from 5.30 to daylight, and will continue until the days begin to lengthen again.

Arrangements have been made since Spencer's drug store has been closed to have the Sunday papers on sale at the Ware Drug Store of J. H. Beavais.

John E. Shea, who has been catching for the Brocktons, has been bought off by the New York club. He is a player that Ware may be proud of producing.

There was a good showing last Saturday evening by the Republican parade. Horsemen, footmen, and bicycle riders were out in uniform and good numbers. Flags and red fire were common, and many residences were tastily decorated. The residences of some of the silver men looked very dark in comparison. The Cornet Band and two drum corps were with the battalion. The wind-up was a rousing big bonfire. During the day nearly fifty flags were displayed on Main street alone, and nearly every house had at least one out.

The Methodist people are making great preparations for the trades exhibit and carnival which opens at the town hall the 17th. The spectacular production of the carnival of "Mother Goose" is to be given by fifty characters in costumes, also the musical extravaganza, "The maid and the game pie." The Cornet Band is to give concerts. Floor space is to be used by the following business people: F. E. Marsh, Grigware Tea Store, Epworth League, King's Daughters, Mark Sherwin, H. O. Robinson, Andrew Bryson & Co., J. H. Donnelly, J. B. Sibley, F. P. Clark & Co, Collins & Tucker, C. W. Eddy, H. H. Turner, F. N. Hosmer, E. D. Howard, J. D. Smith, L. B. Sibley, R. E Capron, C. Hitchcock & Co., Marsh Bros., J. F. Robinson. The admission is to be only 10 cents.

When a candidate for reëlection carries every town in his district, as did W. H. Brainerd for county commissioner, it is a pretty sure indication that the voters have little fault to find with his official acts. Mr. Brainerd has been a careful, painstaking member of the board, and well deserved the handsome endorsement he received at the polls.

The wife of Mr. Leonard Wells, of East Brimfield, Mass., had been suffering from neuralgia for two days, not being able to sleep or hardly keep still, when Mr. Holden, the merchant there, sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and asked that she give it a thorough trial. On meeting Mr. Wells the next day he was told that she was all right, the pain had left her within two hours, and that the bottle of Pain Balm was worth $5 00 if it could not be had for less. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida street, San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c and $1.

HOW TO PREVENT CROUP.

SOME READING THAT WILL PROVE INTERESTING TO YOUNG MOTHERS HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THE DISEASE.

Croup is a terror to young mothers, and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy, for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Good advice: Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Many lives of usefulness have been cut short by neglect to break up an ordinary cold. Pneumonia, bronchitis and even consumption can be averted by the prompt use of One Minute Cough Cure. LeGro & Lynde.

Dig down to the cause of your sickness, if you want to get well and stay well. Most likely it's indigestion. The irritating poisons of fermenting, putrid food, felt in the stomach by indigestion, cause headache, neuralgia, nervousness, dizziness, stomachache, nausea, irritability, and all the other well-known symptoms of indigestion.

They also cause many pains and disorders which are often laid to other causes and hence are not easily cured. But as soon as the poisons are removed, all these symtoms and disorders disappear, because there is nothing left to cause them. Nothing succeeds in this like Shaker Digestive Cordial, because it prevents the undigested food from fermenting in the stomach and helps the stomach to digest its food.

Sold by druggists, price 10 cents to $1.00 per bottle.

McKINLEY THE CHOICE

Of the Women of the United States.

RETURNS NOT ALL IN YET.

Prohibition Running Strong With the Ladies.

The ladies' vote has attracted national attention this campaign. It has called forth the vote of many ladies who perhaps would never care to go to the polls to cast a vote. The vote was polled by postal cards and letters sent to the Postum Cereal Food Coffee Co. of Battle Creek, Mich., whose office force have faithfully compiled and reported from time to time the progress of the vote. The deepest interest is shown by the letters and postals, great numbers of which express gratitude for this act which is surely a step towards the realization of some practical plan under which one-half of our citizens, (female though they may be) who are now denied the elective franchise, can have the right to say how and by whom their laws shall be made, their country governed and their sons and daughters protected.

An extract from a letter from a lady in Kennebunk, Maine, expresses "thanks for an opportunity to vote; when woman has the opportunity and an incentive to engage her mind in affairs which pertain to the welfare and prosperity of her people and country, the beings she brings into existence will be improved, elevated, and endowed with the fire of true statesmanship, by the mind of the mother during the prenatal state. Have your statesmen born with a great, clear and patriotic mind, Sir."

That keynote that will ring on eternally until the theory becomes a fact. It is time that the keen, clear mind of woman was sought in affairs of state

The complete vote will be given Nov. 13th, by which time it is expected that all votes will be in.

It is true that this national vote by the ladies brings into prominence the manufacturers whose office is used to compile and report it. The Postum Co. however have already a wide reputation as the originators of a unique article of public need, in the way of their cereal or grain coffee, which is used by many brainy people who cannot digest common coffee. Newspaper men, authors, actors, business men, professors, nervous women and even the children find in Postum food coffee a delicious breakfast beverage that is made so largely from the gluten and phosphates of wheat that a direct result in nervous energy is found in its use, as the food elements go directly to rebuild the lost gray matter in the nerve centres. These facts are facts, and this justly famed American product has made a profound impression on people of all classes.

This explanation is given for those who may not be familiar with the company having the woman's vote in charge.

DRESS GOODS.

Just now is a good time to buy dress goods, for some of the best bargains that people are likely to hear of this season are to be had at the counter. Think of—

Wool Cashmere, 32 inches wide in twenty-seven different colors—at 19c a yard!

Raw Silk and Wool dress goods—regular 75c stuff down to 50c a yard!

Seven patterns, all different; 38 inches wide.

Scotch Cheviots---sold at 75c a yard all season, down to 58c a yard!

Eight different patterns of it, 43 inches wide.

Handsome stuff of broken Checks in Scotch mixtures---87½c goods down to 75c a yard!

Five patterns; 45 inches wide. And dollar and a quarter, dollar and a half, and a dollar seventy-five imported French and German dress goods at 98c a yard!

Trading, in it, was great for three days last week, but there is enough left for a great many dresses yet.

Regular 75c black Bouclé drest goods at 50c a yard!

Five patterns of it.

CLOAKS.

$15 Jackets at $9.75.

---Heavy black Bouclé Jackets, lined all through with striped Taffeta Silk---this season's new styles.

$18 Jackets at 11.75.

---Light and dark mixed Irish Freizes, lined throughout with pretty Taffeta Silk---this season's best styles.

But there is a limit to selling at these prices, of course, and the limit will be reached when the last of these lots go.

OCTOBER 12th, 1896.

Some Men Have No Pride,

And they will wear their old overcoat until it is threadbare, when for a minimum of Money they might get a maximum of value in one of our many styles of warm winter garments.

Our Ulsters are something to be proud of—so much value for so little money. You'll be surprised to see how good a coat we can give you. The prices run at $7, $10, $12, $15, higher if you want to, but there's no use in it—our $20 Ulster is good enough for a prince to wear.

Overcoats run from $5 to $22; the $10, $12, $15 kinds are the ones we sell most of, and when you consider what we are giving for the money its a wonder that any other dealer is selling any—don't see who can be buying them, judging from the number we get rid of. If you'll look at them you'll be among our list of patrons, we feel sure. There are no such overcoats offered anywhere else in this region.

"That hanging was half an hour behind times." "Yes; the sheriff and the condemned man got to talking about their bicycles."—Chicago Times.

Papa—"Willie, you wear out too many shoes." Willie—"That is because I have to walk so much. If you buy me a bicycle you will save money."—Harper's Bazar.

Man to baker boy—"What is your dog's name, sonny?" Baker boy—"Ginger." Man—"Does Ginger bite?" Baker boy—"Naw, Ginger snaps."—New York Recorder.

"Which would you say—that a young lady has a pug nose, or that her nose is retrousse?" "How much is her father worth?"—Washington Evening Star.

"You know, George," she was explaining, "I was brought up without any care," "Marry me, my darling," said George, "and you shall have nothing but care."—Tid-Bits.

He—"Is that your daughter in the parlor singing?" She—"Yes; she's only killing time." He—"Well, she ought to have no trouble doing it with that voice."—Yonkers Statesman.

Jablin—"Jaggins called you a monkey. How can you stand that?" Dilbey—"What would you advise me to do about it?" Jablin—"Make him prove it, of course."—Roxbury Gazette.

Johnnie Fewcads—"I tell you frankly that I shall not be able to pay for this suit until next year." Tailor—"All right, sir." "When will you have it ready?" "Next year."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Salvation Army Apostle—"If you swear at those horses, my good man, you'll never go to heaven." Teamster (humbly)—"I knows it, mum; but if I don't I'll never get to Tonawanda."—Buffalo Times.

They had been sitting in the dark for a long time. Suddenly she asked: "Have you a match?" "No," he replied, "but if you'll help me I can make one." The cards are out.—Cleveland Leader.

A Kansas City post-office clerk prophesies an early winter because he found in the mails the other day two soiled envelopes, addressed in juvenile chirography to "Mr. Santa Claus, Kansas City, Mo."

Mabel—"Whose picture is on your mantelpiece, Jack?" Jack (with confession)—"Er—that's my sister. She's married and lives in Australia." Mabel (calmy)—"Sister by birth or by rejection?"—Washington Capital.

Jagwell—"What makes that hen in your back yard cackle so loud?" Wigway—"Oh, they've just laid a corner-stone across the street and she's trying to make the neighbors think she did it."—Philadelphia Record.

"I've planned such a delightful surprise for my husband." "Really?" "Yes; he has a summer suit nearly as good as new hanging in the wardrobe, and I've put a quarter in one of the vest pockets."—Puck.

"I think it's a shame, Cyrus, that we've let Esmeralda grow up without trying to give her some kind of a musical training. She can't sing at all." "That's true, Emily, but she knows it."—Chicago Daily Tribune.

Hooking Him—Lord Totteringham (over the album of views)—"Don't you—er—love an ancient ruin, Miss Goldox?" Miss Goldox (flutteringly)—"I—I—this is so sudden; but you may ask papa!"—Chicago Record.

"May I kiss you, Miss Jane?" "I am sorry to see, Mr. Briggs, that you, too, are affscted by the prevailing cause of business depression." "And that is?' "Lack of confidence." Then he kissed her.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mrs. Wiggles—"The rain is spattering right through this umbrella all over my new hat." Mr. Wiggles—"I know it. I got badly fooled on that umbrella, but I picked out the best looking handle in the rack."—Somerville Journal.

"I wonder why fat people are so universally good-natured?" queried the speculative boarder. "For the reason," answered the cheerful idiot, "that it would take a fat man so much longer to get mad clear through."—Indianapolis Journal.

He—"Dearest girl, the tire of my heart has been punctured by the tacks of your charms. Be mine, and let us ride tandem through life." She—"How sweet and strange! You have scorched your way to my affections, and I cannot back pedal against your attractions. I surrender the handle bar of my life to your hands, and am sure you will steer our united lives wisely."—Philadelphia Review.

A Gentle Hint—Paterfamilias (severely)—"There was a young gentleman with you in the parlor last night?" Sweet Girl (gently)—"Yes, pa, Mr. Stayer." 'And it was after 11 before he went home, miss. I'd like to know what kept him so late!" "Well, pa, you looked so angrily at me when you came in and saw him that I guess he thought I needed a protector, so he stayed until he thought you were asleep."—New York Weekly.

Some mouths look like peaches and cream, and some look like a hole chopped into a brick wall to admit a new door or window. The mouth is a hotbed of toothaches, the bunghole of oratory, and a baby's crowning glory. It is the patriotism's fountain-head and the tool-chest for pie. Without it the politician would be a wanderer on the face of the earth, and the cornetist would go down to an unhonored grave. It is the grocer's friend, the orator's pride, and dentist's hope.—Monmouth Spring Monitor.

OLD DR. SWEET IN SPRINGFIELD.

The Eminent Natural Bone Surgeon, Herbal Physician and New England's Most Noted Medical Expert Has Arrived.

18 VERNON STREET, - - SPRINGFIELD.

DR. J. EDWARD RAY, Assistant.

1636——Family Medical History——1896.

Nine unbroken generations have given to the world a Great Natural healer. Old Dr. Sweet now here. Stands among the leaders in medicine in America. Founder, Editor and Proprietor of late Health and Home, Boston, also Old Dr. Sweet's Family Medical Journal, Springfield. Have you received a copy? Orders by mail from every state in the Union. If not, send for one at once. Worth its weight in gold. Another edition of 50,000 copies ordered.

Have you noticed what our New England History has to say of his remarkable family and of this remarkable man? Have you read the combined opinions of the New England dailies of this wonderfully gifted Natural Healer? Have you read the aggregated opinions of the great Boston dailies of the professional standing of Old Dr. Sweet and of his great cures? No other specialist in New England thus honored. Is this not ample proof of his perfect reliability and great skill?

Have you read in Dr. Sweet's Medical Journal—now being furnished free to families—the Grateful Testimony of Distinguished Patients—not a case but had been abandoned as incurable?

READ THEM ALL! READ THEM ALL!

If not, why not? You want the best and surest, don't you? Speedy cure means speedy money, does it not? It means raiment, food and shelter for wife and the little ones for the forthcoming winter, does it not? To furnish the invalid public for the cure of the lame and those afflicted with obscure Chronic Diseases, the most efficient and best equipped private infirmary in Western Massachusetts, Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium, 18 Vernon Street, has been established, and to further this end, the distinguished Dr. J. Edward Ray, graduate of Harvard University, has been engaged as assistant. Do you fully comprehend the vast superiority of infirmary treatment as against office or family methods? It must be borne in mind that although one of the great natural bonesetters of Rhode Island, Dr. Sweet is the only member of the famous Sweet family who cures Obscure Chronic Diseases with equal certainty as he does lameness or the setting of a dislocated bone or joint. None but the best, is his motto. Watch his institution grow. An expensive apparatus for the illumination of the cavities of the human body by electricity to be put in this week. Next month the famous X Ray machine goes in. No institution in New England so fully equipped as this one. His family reputation is a safe guarantee for the sick and suffering. Get ready against winter. Examine his methods for the cure of Head, Throat and Lung Complaints, also all types of Lameness and Obscure Chronic Diseases. Ladies shopping at Messrs. Forbes & Wallace's, leaving by Vernon street entrance, will find easy access to Dr. Sweet's offices. Secure a Free Copy of Family Journal without delay. All News Dealers have them to give away. Send address of invalid friends. Hours, from 9 to 8; Sunday 2 to 6. CONSULTATION FREE.

We have fitted up a room at our South Mill and placed it in charge of Mr. John Lines, Superintendent, where our Remnants and other Ladies' Cloths can be seen and purchased. All sales are for net cash, and to be paid for to Mr. Lines before goods are taken away. No samples sent by mail. ∴ ∵ ∴ ∵ ∴ ∵

The First Violin.

Within a bower of graceful palms
He tuned his violin;
And evermore his starry eyes
Her glances sought to win;
Where, smiling o'er her jeweled fan,
With violets in her hair,
All gowned in fluffy white she sat—
The girl upon the stair.

He drew his bow—a lover's heart
Put on an angel's wings,—
And soared to heaven and fell to earth,
And broke among the strings.
Oh, many an eye was dim with tears,
And plaudits rent the air!
He heard them not—he only played
To her upon the stair.

Upon the old musician's grave
The dreary shadows fall;
In yonder room his violin
Hangs silent on the wall.
But in its dusty strings are twined
The violets from her hair
She flung him many a year ago—
The girl upon the stair.

HIS GREATEST ENEMY.

The mysterious Saint Cloud affair had excited and baffled all Paris for a whole month. M. Bermutier, preliminary judge, had been discussing the various aspects of the case before a group of friends.

"It is frightful!" exclaimed one of the ladies, "almost supernatural! Nothing will ever be known."

"Yes, madame," said the magistrate, turning towards her, "probably nothing will ever be known. As for the word 'supernatural,' it has simply no place here. We have here a crime cleverly conceived, very cleverly executed, but so involved in mystery that we cannot disentangle it. Once before, however, I had to investigate a case in which there really seemed something fantastic, and which had finally to be abandoned unsolved."

"Oh, do tell us about it!" cried several ladies with one voice.

M. Bermutier smiled gravely, as became a judge, and began: I was preliminary judge at Ajaccio, and my chief duties were, of course, in connection with affairs of vendetta.

One day I learned that a little villa at the end of the gulf had been taken by an Englishman for years. Every one was soon speculating about this singular person who staid with a single man-servant, never leaving the house except to hunt or fish. He never spoke to anyone, and every morning he used to practice pistol shooting. Rumor said he was some great personage who had left his country for political reasons. Then he was reported to be hiding, after having committed some terrible crime. I could learn nothing about him except that his name was Sir John Rowell. I had him closely watched, but nothing suspicious was ever reported to me. One evening, in passing, I observed him smoking in his garden, and saluted him. He invited me to enter and drink a glass of beer. I at once accepted. He received me most courteously, and we chatted pleasantly on many subjects. In reply to my questions on his mode of life, he told me that he had been a great traveler in Africa, the Indies, and America. I again spoke of hunting, and he related some of his adventures in his pursuit of the hippopotamus, the tiger, the elephant and even the gorilla.

"These are all most dangerous brutes, are they not?" said I.

"By no means," he replied; "the worst of all is man." And he laughed a good-humored English laugh.

"I have hunted man, too, a great deal," he added. He then invited me to see his collection of firearms. The saloon was hung with black silk, embroidered with gold. "It is Japanese cloth," he said.

But a strange object in the center of a large panel caught my eye. It was black, and stood out clearly on a square of red velvet. I approached. It was a hand—a man's hand; not a skeleton hand, white and clean, but a black shrivelled hand, with yellow nails and muscles laid bare. The bones, which had been cut clean near the middle of the forearm as if by a hatchet, showed dark stains as if of old blood. An enormous iron chain was welded round the wrist of this horrible member, fastening it to the wall by a ring strong enough to hold an elephant.

"Why," I exclaimed, "what is that?"

"It is my greatest enemy," the Englishman answered quietly. "It came from America. It was severed by a sabre, skinned with a sharp flint, and dried in the sun for eight days."

I touched the human relic. It must have belonged to some giant. The fingers were excessively long, and were held by enormous tendons, to which pieces of skin still adhered in some places. Skinned thus, the thing was frightful to see. It made one think irresistibly of some cruel vengeance.

"This man must have been very strong," I said.

"Oh, yes," he replied, "but I was stronger. I have had this chain made to hold it."

"This chain is useless now," I said, thinking he was joking; "the hand can't run away."

"It always wants to get away, though," Sir John Rowell answered gravely. "The chain is necessary."

I thought he must be either a madman or a humbug, but his face remained as placid and impenetrable as ever before my searching look. I changed the subject, and began to admire his weapons. I observed three loaded revolvers laying at hand in the room as if the man lived in constant fear of an attack. I returned to see him several times, and then my visits ceased. All had now been accustomed to his presence, and his presence had, therefore, become indifferent to all.

A year passed. One morning my servant awakened me and announced that Sir John Rowell had been assassinated during the night. Half an hour later I was in the Englishman's house along with the chief police authorities. The valet was standing distractedly before the door. At first I suspected this man, but he was entirely innocent. The body of Sir John was lying on its back in the middle of the salon. Everything showed that a terrible struggle had taken place. The victim had been strangled. His face was swollen and discolored and bore a look of deadly fear. He held something between his clinched teeth, and the neck, covered with blood, was pierced by five holes, which seemed to have been made with some sharp iron point. A doctor arrived. After carefully examining the five strange impressions in the flesh, he said:—

"Why, it looks as it the man had been strangled by a skeleton."

I shuddered and glanced at the spot where I had formerly seen the horrible dried hand. It was no longer there. The chain was hanging in its place, broken.

I knelt over the body and found between the clenched teeth a finger of the missing hand, cut, or rather gnawed off at the second phalange by the victim's teeth. We then made an investigation, but nothing was discovered. Neither doors, nor windows, no furniture had been tampered with. The two watchdogs had not even been aroused. The servant said that for a month past his master had appeared dejected. He had received many letters, which he had at once burned. Often in a fit of anger, that looked like madness, he took a riding whip and furiously lashed the hand chained to the wall. He always had arms in his locked room, and during the night he used to speak loudly, as if quarreling with some one. That night, however, he made no sound. It was only on coming to open the windows that he found his master dead. He suspected no one. Although a minute search was instituted throughout the whole island nothing was ever discovered.

Well, one night, three months after the crime, I had a frightful nightmare. I saw that horrible hand running like a scorpion or a spider up and down my curtains and walls. The hideous member galloped round my room, using its fingers like claws. Next day the vile thing was actually brought to me. It had been found in the cemetery at Sir John Rowell's grave. The forefinger was missing.

"This ladies," said the judge, as he concluded, "is my story, I know nothing more."

* * * * *

"But that is neither denouement nor explanation," cried one of the terror-stricken ladies. "We shall not sleep to-night unless you tell us at least how you think it occurred."

"Oh, I think," said he, with a judicial smile, "simply that the legitimate owner of the hand was not dead, but he came to fetch it with his remaining one. I never could tell, though, how he did it."

"No, no," murmured one of the ladies, "it could not have been that!"

"Ah!" said the judge, smilingly, "I thought my theory would not satisfy you."—Translated from the French of Guy De Maupassant.

Some Men Have No Pride,

And they will wear their old overcoat until it is threadbare, when for a minimum of Money they might get a maximum of value in one of our many styles of warm winter garments.

Our Ulsters are something to be proud of—so much value for so little money. You'll be surprised to see how good a coat we can give you. The prices run at $7, $10, $12, $15, higher if you want to, but there's no use in it—our $20 Ulster is good enough for a prince to wear.

Overcoats run from $5 to $22; the $10, $12, $15 kinds are the ones we sell most of, and when you consider what we are giving for the money its a wonder that any other dealer is selling any—don't see who can be buying them, judging from the number we get rid of. If you'll look at them you'll be among our list of patrons, we feel sure. There are no such overcoats offered anywhere else in this region.

"MEIGS' CORNER."
To-day---Gigantic OVERCOAT Carnival.
Hundreds of men start out every-day to buy clothing, and more especially at this season of the year to buy OVERCOATS.
Where do they go? What store do they patronize? They go to the store where business is bettering and bettering every day, constantly giving you honest and square up-to-date clothing. The best store in town for all ready-to-wear outfits, largest selection, best styles, most dependable workmanship, low st of prices. All point toward "MEIGS' CORNER." Our store has been a busy place for a month. Will be even more so to-day, for we start our GIGANTIC OVERCOAT CARNIVAL. This means we will give you a great saving on each coat, grade for grade. 'Tis impossible to give the name of each different fabric we have used in our overcoatings. 'Tis enough to say each will hold your attention.
We place on sale to-day 250 of the Celebrated Home Rule Overcoats.
$10 IS THE PRICE TO EVERYONE.
THE "HOME RULE" OVERCOAT. The cloth is made down in Vasselborough, Maine, by the Vasselborough mills. It's a long fibre, pure Australian Wool, and comes in three colors, Blue, Black, and Brown, made in single and double breasted.
Our several stores use the entire production of this mill's goods. This is an important fact, as we could not otherwise get the same quality of Beaver to give our patrons in a TEN DOLLAR OVERCOAT. The cloth is guaranteed without a blemish, and absolutely fast color. The coats are made medium, and some very long. All are made with extra heavy Farmer Satin linings. Other houses cannot, no, cannot produce a coat equal in style, fit and durability for less than $12, and many will charge you $15.

Indian Cradle Song.

Swing thee low in thy cradle soft,
Deep in the dusky wood;
Swing thee low and swing aloft—
Sleep, as a pappoose should;
For safe in your little birchen nest
Quiet will come, and peace and rest,
If the pappoose is good.

The coyote howls on the praire cold,
And the owlet hoots in the tree;
And the big moon shines on the little child
As it slumbers peacefully;
So swing thee high in thy little nest,
And swing thee low and take the rest
That the night winds bring thee.

The father lies on the fragrant ground,
Dreaming of hunt and fight,
And the pine leaves rustle with mournful sound
All through the solemn night;
But the little pappoose in his birchen nest
Is swinging low as he takes his rest,
Till the sun brings the morning light.

SISTER CALLINE'S CHIL'EN.

The train ran into a little station in the heart of the pine woods, and the conductor sprang to the platform.

"Hurry up there!" he called, running forward to the negro coach.

The steps were overflowing with pickaninnies, so black that at first sight their small features would have been indistinguishable but for the wide crease on each face, filled with even rows of teeth, startlingly white in contrast with their sooty environment.

A fat, good-looking negress, holding an oval bundle, wrapped in an old shawl, close to her breast, seemed to be the center of the crowd, and an old, old negro man, grizzled and wrinkled, was hanging around its margin.

"Is you got um all, Sister Calline?" he asked, anxiously. "'Cfare ef I knows!" said the woman, running her eye over the company. "'Pears lak dere's one on um missin'!"

"All aboard!" shouted the conductor, and the train moved.

"Hyar, mistah!" shricked Sister Calline, "you'se ca'in' off one o' my chil'en!"

The conductor laughed good-naturedly, and was gone.

"Oh!" moaned the woman. "He's done ca'ed off one on um suah!"

The station agent sauntered near. He wore that intensely bored expression only possible to a man who spends his life in a piney woods clearing, seeing four trains a day go in and out, and playing on a barrel head in the intervals.

"Orter have tied 'em along a rope, so's they couldn't get away," he said.

Sister Calline turned her black velvet orbs in his direction.

"You call dat train back, I say," she cried. "He's done ca'ed off one 'o my chil'en."

"S'pose I can call the train back?" said the man, contemptuously. "If you're sure one of 'em is missin' you'll have to set down and wait here till the train comes back. They'll bring it, I reckon."

"Oh, my pore lil' chile!"

Tears began to stream down the black face.

The wrinkled old uncle looked deeply distressed.

"Is you pint plank suah one on um's missin', Sister Calline?" he asked, sympathetically.

Her eyes wandered, vague and troubled, over the dusky, shifting crowd of faces.

"I'se mos' puffickly suah," she said.

"Better count 'em," suggested the agent. "How many are there, anyhow?"

"Der's Lu Roxy Adline, Lucyalier"—

"I'se here, mammy!" interrupted a long-limbed girl of fourteen.

"I told you to count 'em!" said the agent, impatiently.

"I cayn't coun', Mas'r! I's bawn afore de wah. But, anyhow, dey say dere's leben ob um."

"Sister Calline," said the old man, tenderly, "le's we set right down hyar an' I'll coun' um fer ye. I'se a scholar."

"You sholy is kind, Mistah," said Sister Calline, gratefully, setting down on the edge of the platform.

The agent laughed shortly and turned away.

The grizzled old uncle took a red and yellow handkerchief from his pocket and carefully dusted the end of the planks before he took his seat.

He wore a threadbare black suit, which undoubtedly once moved in high society.

Sister Calline looked at him with interest.

"I reckon dat you mus' be a preacher, sah," she said, deferentially.

"Madam, I is. I'se been preachin' de Word dese nine years, eber since my pore old lady died. I was a powerful sinner afore dat."

Sister Calline looked awed.

"I was, suah!" said the old man, retrospectively. "But I'se come inter the kingdom now, suah 'nuff, bress de Lord. Is you got a husban', Sister Calline?"

"I'se a pore widder, Mistah, with all dese chil'en to scuffle fer, an' de Lawd knows what I'se gwine ter do."

Uncle glanced at the bundle in her arms. It had begun to move and whimper.

"Dat your baby, chile?" asked Uncle innocently.

"Dis my baby," replied Sister Calline, looking down at the sooty mite in her arms with maternal pride.

"My po' ole man neber see dis baby. He was blowed up by the biler bustin' in de mill where he wurked. He was done killed when dey brung him home. De doctors tried an' tried to pump some life inter him, but he never spoke no mo'."

"For de lan's sake!" ejaculated the old man.

Compassion was written all over his kind old face. He had been a good darkey from his youth up, and his sinful past was purely fictitious.

"What de mattah wid you ole lady you done los'?"

"Consumpshun!" replied the ole man, solemnly. "It runs in our family. Ole Cunnel Kent's ma died ob it, an' lil' mistis died, too. An' den my ole lady took it an' she died. It's a turrible decease."

"Dat sholy is so!" coincided Sister Calline. "'Scuse my insurance askin' you, Mistah. Does you git your livin' by preachin'?"

"De folks pay me some, an' den I'se got a nice piece o' land an' a lil' house. My ole mas'r give um ter me," said the old man with modest pride.

"Sho! Ain't you too old to work?"

"I wuks some, an' de ars helps me. I'se de onliest one ob de ole sarvan's lef'. I'se ninety-five year ole!"

"Sho, now!" said Sister Calline, much impressed.

"How ole you is, Sister Calline?—hopin' you'll 'scuse me for askin'."

"I dunno 'zakly," said Calline, studying a little. "I 'spect I'se sixty—gwine on fifty."

They had become so interested in their humble annals that the pickaninnies had been lost sight of. They were scattered along the railroad line gamboling like a menagerie turned loose.

"Does you wan' me tu coun' you chil'en, Sister Calline?"

"Co'se I does. Hyar! You-all. Come hyar."

The children paid no attention.

"Dey needs disserplainin, Sister Calline." He rose. "Chil'en, chil'en!" he called in a voice of authority.

The black cloud drew together and bore down on the station-house.

"Now you-all stand still ontwell dis genelman coun's you," commanded the mother. "Lu Roxy, min' yersef. Abe Linkum, stan' up. Don' scrouge so! How he gwine coun', ef yer dodges 'roun' dat way?"

A mild degree of order at last prevailed, and the old man began.

"One, two, tree, fo,' fibe, six, seben, eight, nine, ten! Dere ain't only ten."

"Dawter be 'leben, suah," said Sister Calline. "Oh, what I gwine ter do?"

"I'll coun' um ober agin," said the old man, kindly.

Sister Calline wiped away her tears.

"You am so kind, mistah! I knowed you was a good man when Brer Martin tole me to keep long er you on der train."

"An' I knowed you was a good woman when Brer Martin tole me 'You take good car' o' Sister Calline,' says he. Now I'll coun' um agin."

"One, two, tree," and so on. They went over and over this, but by no legerdemain of counting could ten be made eleven.

Sister Calline grew more and more distressed, and was just breaking in hysterical sobs when the train whistled at the next station below.

They both sprang up, and Calline screamed to the children, who came flying across the track like a flock of wild blackbirds.

When the train drew up and the conductor stepped off, there was Calline to meet him.

"Please, mistah; has you brung back my chile?" she tearfully pleaded.

He looked at her.

"Donner and Blixen? What do you want, woman?"

"I'se got 'leben chil'en," groaned Sister Calline, "an' dis genelman has counded 'um ober an' ober, an' dere ain't only ten."

The conductor ran his eye over the group.

A score of heads were thrust out of the coach, and a murmur of amused sympathy stirred along the line.

"H-m!"

He pulled forth his book hurriedly, and turned over the pages.

"Pass Calline Jackson and eleven children."

He glanced over the huddle of black, bobbing heads, and then at the woman.

His eye fell on the bundle in her arms.

"What's the matter with the baby making eleven?"

There were roars of laughter, and much waving of hats and handkerchiefs as the train moved out

"You done counded um wrong, mistah," said Sister Calline, looking up reproachfully at the old man.

"Is dey all hyar?" he asked with dignity.

"Co'se dey's all hyar."

"Den don't dat pintedly show dat I counded um right?"

Sister Calline's dark countenance wore a troubled expression, but as they went along the piney woods road toward Kentville it gradually cleared up, and when they came in sight of Kent Hall it was beaming.

"Dere's de Cunnel!" said Uncle, pointing to a gentleman dressed in a white duck suit, who sat comfortably in a big armchair on the gallery.

"He's one o' de ars. You jes' wait here a spell ontell I go an' tell him"

"Well?" said Colonel Kent, good-naturedly, laying down his newspaper. "What is it, Uncle Dick?"

"I'se jes' come ter tell yer, Cunnel, dat I'se foun' a good woman dat I laks the best in the world, an' we'se fixed our min's dat we'll marry 'fore long. We reckons ternight is de bes' time."

"Marry!" said the Colonel, astonished. "Such an old fellow as you are!"

"I'se ole, fer a fac', Mas'r, but I'se lived alone nine years an' it's mighty lonesome—"

"That's so," said the Colonel, kindly.

"An' 'pears like I can't stan' it no longer. An' sister Jackson needs a husband ter help her raise her chil'en. Dere's 'leben chil'en, an' none ob 'em missin', countin' um right."

"Eleven! How in the name of General Jackson are you going to take care of eleven children?"

"Dey's gwine to take car' o' me, Mas'r," said the ol' man, eagerly. "Dey's mighty peart chil'en, mighty peart, an' they c'n pick a heap ob cotton an' hoe co'n an' taters an' weed in de gyarden and do a power ob oder turns."

The curiously wizened old face shone as if he had just come into a fortune.

"An' Cunnel," he went on, "I'se gittin' too ole ter wuk much, an' I tinks my meetin' up with Sister Calline is a special proverdence. I want's to git de oration roun' soon dat dere's gwine ter be a weddin' down ter my lil' house ter-night."

"Go ahead, then," laughed the Colonel. "The missus will have a cake baked for you, and, by George, it'll have to be a big one to go round."

The cake was baked in a big iron bake-kettle of ante-bellum associations, and there was a festival in the cabin down by the creek, which lasted into the small hours.—New York Tribune.

WORDS WITHOUT A RHYME.

There are a dozen words in the English language in everyday use for which enterprising people have despaired of ever finding a rhyme. The word "month," for example, is one of these. "Silver" is a word it seems very easy to secure a rhyme for, but as a matter of fact, trying to find something to rhyme with "silver" nearly drove a London writer of verse insane long ago, says the New York Press. As a last resort he advertised in the newspapers and received but one reply. It came from the master of verbal contortion, W. S. Gilbert, Sir Arthur Sullivan's erstwhile partner, who submitted the word "chilver." He wasn't quite clear, he said, as to what chilver might be, but he had seen the word in advertisements of sales of farm stock and had an idea, which is correct, that it described a specie of sheep.

'Orange" is another word without rhyme. "Gulf" is also without an English partner, "culm" and "cusp" are alike solitary. Many poets who have sought in vain for rhymes to "revenge" and "avenge" will not be appeased when they learn that but two exist—"penge" and "Stonehenge." "Colf" is now, happily for versifiers, growing obsolete, for there is no word which rhymes with it. "Scarf" has been daringly linked at the end of a line with "half" or "calf," but this is a practice to be discouraged. "Scalp" rhymes only with "Alp," but like "babe" and "astrolabe," it would require much ingenuity to find an excuse for bringing these words in juxtaposition. "False" has on several occasions, by an abuse of poetic license, been associated with "valse," though the correct French pronunciation of the latter word would destroy the rhyme.

Of the names of places the African town of Timbukto has long been famous for being without rhyme. The nearest success that any poet has ever attained in this respect was when in some old verses describing a desert hunt "cassowary" was made to rhyme with "missionary" and "Timbukto" with "thin buck too."

The Maiden's Quest.

I do not care for riches,
I do not care for fame,
I ask not that my husband
Shall have an ancient name.

I'd rather be a beggar,
With a husband at my side
Who had never loved another,
Than to be a monarch's bride.

I do not ask for greatness,
But the man I fain would win,
Must come in virgin pureness,
A stranger unto sin.

At last her quest was ended,
She found the man she sought;
'Twas a wooden dummy, but it filled
Her prescription to a dot.
—Cleveland Leader.

"WIPED OUT!"

What is that? Look closer, and you will see that it is a gaunt, grim wolf, creeping out of the little grove of cottonwoods toward a buffalo calf gambolling around its mother.

Raise your eyes a little more, and you will see that the prairie beyond is alive with buffalo. Count them! You might as well try to count the leaves on a giant maple! They are moving foot by foot as they crop the juicy grass, and living waves rise and fall as the herd slowly sweep on. Afar out to right and left—mere specks on the plain, are the flankers—brave old buffaloes, which catch a bite of grass and then sniff the air and scan the horizon for intimation of danger. They are the sentinels of the herd, and right well they can be trusted.

The wolf creeps nearer!

All the afternoon the great herd has fed in peace, and as it now slowly moves toward the distant river it is all unconscious that danger is near. Look you well and watch the wolf, for you are going to see such a sight as not one man in ten thousand has ever beheld.

Creep—crawl—skulk—now behind a knoll—now drawing himself over the grass—now raising his head above a thistle to mark the locality of his victim. It is a lone, shambling, skulking wolf, lame and spiteful and treacherous. Wounded or ailing, he has been left alone to get on as best he may, and his green eyes light up with fiercer blaze as he draws nearer to his unconscious prey.

There! No, he is yet too far away. Creep—creep—creep! Now he is twenty feet away—now fifteen, now ten. He hugs the earth, gathers his feet under him, and he bounds through the air as if shot from a gun. He is rolling the calf over and over on the grass in three seconds after he springs.

Now watch!

A cry of pain from the calf—a furious bellow from the mother as she wheels and charges the wolf—a startled movement from a dozen of the nearest animals, and a rush begins. The one wolf is magnified into a hundred, the hundred into a thousand. Short, sharp bellows—notes of alarm—a rush, and in fifty seconds after the wolf has wet his fangs with blood that living mass is in motion to get away from an unknown terror.

The waves rise higher and higher as the confusion spreads. One instant it seems as if ten thousand solid acres of priarie were moving bodily away—again waves rise and fall as the cowards behind rush upon those in front who want to sniff the air and learn the danger. In one minute the alarm runs down the herd to the leaders, further than the eye can see, and the entire herd is going off at a mad gallop, heads down, eyes rolling, and no thought but that of escape. If Lake Erie were to dash itself against a wall the shock would be no greater than the awful crash with which this mass of rattling hoofs, sharp horns and hairy bodies would meet it. The clatter of hoofs and rattle of horns would drown the noise of a brigade of cavalry galloping over a stone-paved road.

Ride out on their trail. Here where the stampede began the ground is torn and furrowed as if a thousand cannon had been firing solid shot at targets. Here and there are calves which have been gored or crushed—here and there older animals with broken legs and disabling wounds. Here where the herd was fairly off, you might as well hunt for a gold dollar as a blade of grass. You look for three miles as you look across it. It is a trail of dirt and dust, and ruts and furrows, where half an hour ago was a carpet of green grass and smiling flowers. The most dreadful cyclone known to man could not have left more horrible scars behind.

Miles away, on the bank of a winding, growling river, are three white-topped emigrant wagons. A camp fire blazes up to boil the kettles—men, women and children stand about, peering over the setting sun at the distant mountains, and glad that their journey is almost done. Butterflies come and go on lazy wing—the crickets chirp cheerily in the grass, and the eagles sailing in the blue evening air have no warning to give.

Hark! Is that thunder?

Men and women turn in their tracks as they look in vain for a cloud in the sky. That rumble comes again as they look into each other's faces. It grows louder as women turn pale and men reach for their trusty rifles The ground trembles, and afar off comes a din which strikes terror to the heart. "Indians!" they whisper. No! A thousand times better for them if savage Pawnee dared ride down where those long-barreled rifles could speak in defense of the peaceful camp.

"A stampede of buffaoes!" gasps one of the men as he catches sight of the advance guard under the awful cloud of dust. Rifles are held ready for a shot, and the children climbed up on the heavy wagon wheels to see the strange procession gallop past.

Here they come! Crack! crack! crack! from three rifles, and a shout as each bullet tells. Next instant a shaggy head, followed by a dust-browned body, rushes through the camp. Then another and another. Then men shout and wave their arms, the women and children turn paler yet.

The roar and din shut out every other sound, and the wagons jar and tremble with the concussion. Now another shaggy head—another—half-a-dozen—a score—a hundred—a great living wave which sweeps along with the power of a tornado, followed by others more fierce and strong, and the camp is blotted off the face of the earth mere completely than by any power of Heaven. Nothing to be seen—no shout to be heard. Wave followed wave across the spot—over the bank—into the stream and across, and when the last of the herd has passed, the keenest hunter can find nothing on that spot of wood or iron or cloth or bone or flesh to prove that a dozen men, women and children were there wiped out of existence, and reduced to shred and dust, —Exchange.

LIQUOR SELLERS IN COURT.

Twelve Defendants Tried on Eighty-one Different Counts.

BIGGEST GRIST EVER IN LOCAL COURT.

Prosecuting Committee Springs a Number of Surprises. Some Pretty Strong Evidence. Witnesses Charged with Perjury. Decisions to be Rendered the 21st.

A large and interested crowd assembled at the district court room Monday morning to hear the trials of the charges brought by the prosecuting committee for illegal liquor selling. There were a number of ladies in the audience, and their numbers increased with each session of the court. As was predicted, the committee had a number of surprises in store, and several of the witnesses summoned were evidently considerably ill at ease and did not relish the situation; that the testimony of several was decidedly unwilling was apparent to all present, while there was little doubt in the minds of many that perjury was committed in several instances. The cases occupied the entire attention of the court until Thursday noon, and decisions will not be rendered until a week from to-morrow. The testimony was taken by a stenographer, and will make about 450 type-written pages.

The first cases tried were those against John B. Dawson, John P. Manning, Michael Rooney and Daniel Matteson, for maintaining a common nusiance in the pool room in the basement of the Converse House block.

Rev. F. E. Jenkins was the first witness. He had seen Dawson at the pool room, selling drinks of various kinds, playing pool, and acting as proprietor of the place. A bar extended along one side and across the end; there was a pool table and a card table in the room, a sink with running water, and glasses near by. When the raid was made May 30th witness found four glasses at the bar, with the scent of whisky in two. Had seen Manning about the place selling drinks and taking pay; had seen Rooney about the place many times, and had frequently seen the outline of a bottle in his pocket. On the night of the arrests—October 29th—when Manning saw witness coming he ran to the door and gave a shout of warning to those inside. Had often seen Matteson about the place and making frequent trips to and from his house; he wore a large coat which was lank when going toward the house, but bulging and heavy on the return trip. When the liquor was seized in the rear of the Cross block on the evening of November 2d, witness was followed and watched by a man often seen in the pool room.

Rev. C. R. Minard testified that at the time of the raid May 30th, he saw Dawson come up from the pool room with a pitcher in his hand and empty the contents, which was of a ruddy color, into the gutter.

E. E. Hobson, a bystander at the time of the raid, also saw Dawson come up with the pitcher and throw the contents upon the ground. He also saw Manning come up with a bottle in his hand, go up Walnut street a short distance and throw it toward Marcy's stable.

L. H. Gager, another of the prosecuting committee, had seen people going and coming from the pool room early in the morning—as early as 6 o'clock; they would stay from two to five minutes; afterward in passing the entrance he noted that the pool table had not been uncovered. Had seen Rooney about the place frequently, and had also noted the outline of the bottle in his pocket; had seen Matteson about the place often and making frequent trips to his house and back, also from the rear of the Cross block in the vicinity of where the keg was found November 2d. He also noticed the lean appearance of Matteson's coat on his outward trips, with its evident additions when he came back; had also seen bottle in Matteson's pocket. Witness went into the place about 6 o'clock one morning and saw a sale being made over the bar by Manning, who at once concealed what he was selling and gave warning to the others. Had seen men there under the influence of liquor, and frequently smelled liquor when in the room.

Adelbert C. Hapgood, employed on the farm of O. D. Wells since February, testified that he bought three glasses of liquor there in September of a man whose name he did not know but whom he pointed out in court (Manning), for which he paid ten cents each; he went in with two men from Brimfield, and each of the three paid for a round of drinks; Manning each time took the bottle from his hip pocket, returning it to his pocket after the drinks were served. The stuff was intoxicating liquor of some kind, but he did not know the name. Did not know how he happened to be called as a witness in the case, his first intimation being when the summons was served by the officer that morning.

Frank B. Pope. Assisted at the raid May 30th, being stationed at the back door of the Converse House; saw Manning come around the corner from Walnut street and throw a bottle against the stable wall; was unable to secure any of the stuff which it contained, but the odor of liquor was strong.

Lyman C. Snow. Was stationed on Walnut street during the raid, where he was passed by Manning with a bottle in his hand, which he threw against the stable wall, where it broke.

Louis Hubert, employed at the wire mill. Once saw a man in the pool room drinking something red, like whisky; the man's breath smelled of whisky. At one time he gave a man 50 cents with which to get a drink; he brought back 40 cents and a smell of liquor on his breath. Had been promised no reward from the prosecuting committee for his evidence. Manning one day told witness at the corner of Main and Walnut streets that he would knock witness's face off; Manning and W. A. Fitzpatrick then followed him to the corner of Church and Pleasant streets, telling him that if he was ever caught spotting they would make it sorry for him; called him vile names which he did not care to repeat; Fitzpatrick told him that if he ever knew of his spotting he would smash his (witness's) face, even if it was in the court room and he had to pay a fine for it.

Town Clerk J. B. Shaw was called to establish the ownership of the pool license, which was in the name of John B. Dawson. H. D. Converse testified that the pool room was rented to Dawson.

S. H. Brown, truckman, with a stand on Walnut street directly in front of the entrance to the pool room, had often seen Dawson, Manning, Rooney and Matteson about the place. Did not think his teams had done any carting for the defendants since May 1st.

Edwin E. Ryther of Bondsville. Searched Matteson's house on the evening of October 28th; found four jugs, one empty and three containing about 12 gallons of whisky, in a trench dug under the floor of the woodshed. L. C. Snow was also present at and assisted in the seizure, and gave the same evidence.

Henry Borgson, wire worker. Knew the defendants; had been in their place many times and had bought drinks several times; also had a bottle filled there; bought drinks of both Dawson and Manning; saw Rooney take bottle from his pocket and hand to the man at the bar; had a drink of whisky from this bottle; had had the same experience with Matteson; had bought many drinks in the place.

Thomas L. Moran. Had been in the pool room perhaps a dozen times in three months; was there with a man called Forrest about October 10; drank soda water there; did not have anything intoxicating to drink; called for soda and supposed he got it; had never been there with a man called Shea. Being asked again he swore positively that the stuff he drank was not intoxicating liquor. At the conclusion of his examination counsel for the prosecution asked that the witness be held on a charge of perjury, and placed under honds for his further appearance, which was done.

William L. Tynan. Had been in the pool room with Shea and Forrest and drank whisky with them; nad been there with Moran, Shea and Forrest and drank whisky with them; brought whisky at other times of both Manning and Dawson; was in there last week with Shea and had whisky.

Samuel Mason. Tried to get a drink there but could not because he was a minor; swore he never had anything intoxicating to drink there; swore he never singed a paper saying he had had a drink there; was shown a paper with his name attached, but swore he never signed it.

George Brown. Had drank soda in the pool room, but never anything intoxicating; had been there before 7 a. m., but went to read the papers; never had anything charged to him there; admitted that on several occasions, after trying the pool room door and finding it locked, had gone immediately to the Nasspwanno House.

H. L. Colburn, proprietor of the Elm City Bazar. Had dealings with Dawson and Manning in the way of exchanging soda; never bought any hard stuff there; had no account there; never bought anything intoxicating there.

William Sanders. Had been in the place frequently to play pool; never bought intoxicating liquor there; did not think he had anything charged to him there.

Thomas L. Moran was again called and insisted that he was never in the place with Shea. Never drank whisky with Tynan, as latter stated; never drank any whisky there; never bought a bottle of whisky there; once asked a man to get a bottle filled with whisky for a friend and he brought the bottle back full, but witness did not know what was in it.

Fred L. Woodward. Knew the defendants; had been in the place but never ran an account there; had nothing charged to him there at the present time.

Humphrey Sullivan of Holliston. At 6.15 on the evening of October 17th had whisky of Manning with Knight and Tynan, from bottle in Manning's pocket; at 10.05 p. m. paid Dawson for four drinks of whisky; at 10.20 had another drink of Dawson; had a drink and a cigar about 9.30. November 4th had a drink of whisky with a stranger at 10.20 a. m. of Dawson; at 2.15 p. m. had one of Manning; at 6.15 had a drink with Tynan, served by Manning; paid for all these, an aggregate of 50 cents. On cross examination it was learned that he sometimes went by the name of Shea, being known by that name in Palmer; was employed getting evidence against illegal liquor sellers; came to Palmer under orders of Boston parties with instructons from them. Had been paid nothing and did not know what he was to receive; pay was not contingent on success.

Edwin F. Knight of Randolph. Was in the pool room Saturday evening, October 10th, with Moran and Tynan; paid Dawson for three drinks of whisky; then Tynan paid for drinks for himself and Knight; in the place later in the evening with Moran and Tynan, and bought three drinks of whisky; Tynan then bought three more; later witness gave Moran a $2 bill with which to get a bottle of whisky; Moran gave a bottle to Manning, who soon returned it, Moran then handing it over to Knight with a dollar and a half; took the bottle to his boarding place, where the party drank some of the contents, which was whisky. October 14th went to the place with a stranger and bought two drinks of whisky of Dawson. Matteson was there at the time and after remarking he guessed he'd go home, passed a bottle to Rooney; had often seen Matteson and Rooney pass bottles to Manning and Dawson; had seen them pass full bottles and receive empty ones, and directly after had drank whisky from the full bottles. On the afternoon of October 15th bought two whiskies, and in the evening two of Manning; also had whisky with Moran, Tynan and Shea; Shea then paid for three; later saw Shea pay for four drinks. Sales were made continuously all the evening, both by Manning and Dawson. On the 28th drank whisky there with Tynan. On the 29th, after the raid, had two drinks with Tynan and Dawson; a new man passed a bottle to Dawson, who passed it back as soon as the drinks were served. On cross examination witness stated he had been a constable in the town of Randolph for the past ten years; had been engaged in liquor prosecutions in Holbrook, Braintree, Weymouth, Brockton, Avon, Quincy and Milton; came to Palmer at the direction of H. H. Faxon's secretary, and later saw L. H. Gager. His pay was in no way dependent upon his success.

This ended the case for the prosecution, and counsel for the defense asked for the discharge of Matteson and Rooney, as neither of these had been shown to be proprietors of the pool room or to have been left in charge, supreme court decisions being that subordinates can not be convicted of maintaining a nusiance unless left in charge. Judge Robinson so ruled, and Matteson and Rooney were discharged.

The cases of Michael Smith, an Italian living near the farm of H. A. Rindge in Monson, for illegal keeping, selling, Sunday violation, and for keeping a common nusiance, were the next to be tried. These were brought by the prosecuting committee of Monson.

J. H. Thompson and C. C. Keep testified to raiding Smith's place Sunday, November 1st, about 2 p. m. They found a five-gallon keg of beer in the cellar, a quart bottle of brandy, and a half pint of whisky in a bureau up stairs; there were 25 empty beer bottles in the cellar and 12 in the pantry. Smith said he kept no liquor for sale, but that the doctor had ordered the beer and whisky for his wife.

J. Franklin Briggs of Medfield. Was at Smith's house Sunday, July 12th; Smith was there, also his wife and 12 men; saw beer kegs in the cellar and Mrs. Smith there serving beer; saw 12 men drinking; saw 48 bottles of beer sold, nine to one man; bought two bottles and paid 20 cents for them.

E. F. Knight. Went to Smith's house Sunday, October 18th, and bought three bottles of beer from Mrs. Smith; Sullivan was with him.

Humphrey Sullivan. Was at Smith's house October 18th with Knight, who got three bottles of beer from Mrs. Smith, paying 25 cents for them.

Smith was found guilty on all four counts, and fined the maximum for the desecration of the Lord's day—$50; on the other three counts he was fined $100 each, a total of $350. An appeal was taken, and $200 bonds in each case furnished.

John F. Newbegin, proprietor, and William Manning, clerk of the Edmund House, were next tried for illegal keeping and maintaining a common nusiance.

Rev. G. S. Butler. Arrested Newbegin and Manning at the hotel on the evening of October 28th; secured a quart bottle of sherry wine on a table in Newbegin's room. Searched Strong's block, connected with the hotel by an interior passageway, on the 29th; in a room off the hall found about 8 gallons of whisky in two jugs, five gallons in one and three gallons in the other; on top of the latter was a small tin tunnel; in another room found a number of empty bottles, some with a little whisky in them.

L. H. Gager gave the same testimony regarding the search on the 29th.

William L. Tynan. Had two drinks of whisky with Forrest (Knight) in a toilet or bathroom on the second floor of the hotel about 10 o'clock one night, served by Manning.

Thomas Moran. Didn't have whisky or anything intoxicating to drink in the hotel on the evening of 27th; was not in the bathroom before-mentioned that evening.

John Coles. Had never seen drinks about the hotel; did not have whisky there about 11.45 a. m. October 21st near the sink in the office; could not remember of ever getting a drink of Sam Ferry; could not remember having had liquor in the hotel recently; was not in the bathroom the night of the raid; did not let three men out of the house after 11 o'clock the night before the raid; had never, to his knowledge, carted intoxicating liquors for Newbegin. At the conclusion of his testimony counsel for the prosecution asked that he be held as a witness in other cases, and also on a charge of perjury.

Humphrey Sullivan. Went to the bathroom of the Edmund House October 19th and bought two drinks of whisky of Newbegin, who took the bottle from his pocket. On the 20th went to the next room to bathroom with Knight and bought two drinks of whisky; Knight bought two, and each paid 20 cents. On the 21st at 10.35 a. m. drank with Knight at the sink near the office, being served by Newbegin; another man had a drink and paid; at 7.35 p. m. had a drink in the bathroom. Had a drink of whisky of Manning on Wednesday of last week. On Thursday morning had a drink of Newbegin in the bathroom; had one at 12.30 in the same place of Manning.

E. F. Knight. Had a drink with Sullivan on the 20th; later had one of Newbegin. On the 21st had whisky of Newbegin with Sullivan; had another drink again in the evening. On the 27th had two drinks of Manning with Tynan in bathroom; later drank whisky with Moran, a large crowd being in the room. About 11 p. m. had a drink with Tynan and two other men; Moran came in as they finished drinking and Tynan asked him to have a drink, which Moran did; Coles was in the room and drank, and afterward let the party out of the hotel. On one occasion saw M. D. Sullivan start to put two intoxicated men out of the front door, but Newbegin stopped him and the men come back. On the 27th had another drink of Manning; on the 29th had a drink with Tynan of Manning in the bathroom Newbegin told witness that he bought good liquors, so as to please his customers and establish a trade.

Albert E. Busteed, of Boston. While in the office of Edmund House October 21st saw a man go to sink near office with a man called "Sam," who would take a bottle from his pocket and fill a glass for the men to drink; asked Newbegin if there was a chance to get a drink; Newbegin called "Sam, let him have——", and a bottle was produced from the sink, from which witness drank whisky; John Coles came in soon and had a drink from same bottle. Later in day witness asked Sam for a drink and was referred to Newbegin, who got a bottle from the office and give him a drink of whisky. From 11.30 a. m. to 12.30 witness saw 15 men got drinks from Sam at the sink.

Counsel for the defense requested that Manning be discharged on the liquor nuisance complaint, because it had not been shown that he was either proprietor or manager of the hotel, which the court did.

On Wednesday morning nine cases against John F. Newbegin—five for keeping, three for selling, and one for keeping a common nuisance between October 20th and November 9th—were tried.

Humphrey Sullivan. Bought two drinks of whisky Oct. 19th, two on the 20th and two the 21st, all of Newbegin; had another drink later on the 21st, paid for by Knight. Last Wednesday at 8.45 p. m. had a drink of whisky of "Billy;" last Thursday morning had whisky of Newbegin in bathroom and paid 10 cents for it; had another at 12.30 of "Billy."

E. F. Knight. Bought two drinks Oct. 20th of Newbegin; had another later of Newbegin. On the 21st had whisky in forenoon of Newbegin; had more that evening of Newbegin; had a drink the 29th of Manning.

Albert E. Busteed. Oct. 21st bought a drink of whisky of a man called "Sam," also one of Newbegin. Saw 15 men between 11.30 a. m. and 12.30 get drinks of "Sam" from same bottle witness had his whisky from.

William Manning was next tried on three charges of single sales, made in the Edmund House.

E. F. Knight. About 10 p. m. Oct. 27th bought whisky of Manning for self and Tynan, paying 20 cents; Tynan then bought whisky for both. Later also bought whisky for self and Moran. Still later drank whisky with Tynan and two others. On 29th, soon after 7 p. m., bought whisky of Manning; all bought in bathroom.

The next cases tried were five against M. D. Sullivan and Richard Sheehan, the former proprietor and clerk of the Nassowanno House—one for keeping and two for selling against Sheehan, and one for selling and one for keeping against Sullivan, all on July 12th, and one against Sullivan for keeping a common nuisance between May 1st and October 1st.

Rev. G. S. Butler. Searched Nassowanno House May 30th. As he went into Walnut street room, formerly used as a barroom, Sheehan went from behind the opposite end of the bar and went out onto Walnut street; there was a strong smell of liquor in the room, and in the sink behind the bar was a pitcher with water running into it; found two glasses near by, one smelling strongly of whisky.

F. W. Lavene. Assisted in the raid May 30th. As he went into office Sheehan stood at head of stairs leading to room below, and immediately made a rush down; witness followed, but the door Sheehan went through was slammed in his face and locked; got through another door and shut off water from pitcher; pitcher was not full; there was a strong smell of liquor in the room, and the spatterings in the sink tasted of liquor.

J. F. Briggs. In company with Perry went to Nassowanno House July 12th about 2 p. m.; were met in the office by Sheehan, who took them up to room 11 on the floor above; Sheehan took bottle from top drawer of bureau and witness bought and paid 20 cents for two drinks of whisky; young man came in with a bottle which he had filled with whisky, which he paid for; Perry then bought and paid for two drinks; Perry remarked on going out that that was his fifteenth drink that day.

Charles Jones, living just beyond the crossing of the highway leading to Three Rivers, and the New London Northern railroad track, was the next defendant. There were two charges of single sales, two for liquor keeping, two for Sunday desecration, and one for keeping a common nuisance—seven in all.

Rev. G. S. Butler. Searched Jones's place Nov. 7th; found 20 barrels and a jug of cider in the cellar; also three pitchers and two glasses; two of the pitchers smelled of cider; took five barrels and the jug; saw man intoxicated on Jones's premises one Sunday in May or June.

L. H. Gager, who assisted in the search, gave the same evidence regarding it.

E. F. Knight. Went to Jones's house Sunday, Oct. 11th; went into room at rear of house, where Jones brought him pitcher of cider; paid Jones 10 cents for it; while there another man had a pitcher of cider and paid 10 cents for it. On Sunday, Oct 18th, had a pitcher of cider with Sullivan of Jones, Sullivan paying 10 cents for it.

L. H. Gager, called again. Some of the cider was old; that in the jug was; thought that some of the cider in barrels was not made this year; some of the barrels stood on end in the cellar; Jones said he had a right to sell cider in jugs and pitchers to be carried.

Humphrey Sullivan corroborated the evidence given by Knight.

Jones was found guilty on all counts, being fined $25 each on the two for Sabbath desecration, and $100 on each of the others—$650 in all. An appeal was taken, and $1400 bonds furnished.

John B. Dawson was next tried on six cases for illegal keeping and six sales between Oct. 10th and Nov. 4th, and one for keeping a common nuisance between Oct. 29th and Nov. 9th.

After Mr. Gager had testified to seeing Dawson about the place as proprietor between the dates named, Humphrey Sullivan gave the same evidence he had given in the first case tried: Purchases of whisky of Dawson Oct. 17th and Nov. 4th, the bottle coming from Dawson's pocket. Knight testified to purchases of whisky from Dawson Oct. 10th, 15th, 28th and 29th, as in the first case.

Two charges against Michael Rooney for selling, and two for keeping liquor were next in order.

Messrs. Gager and Jenkins testified to having seen Rooney about the place frequently, and had noticed the outlines of a bottle in his pocket.

Knight, on the evening of Oct. 14th, when he purchased whisky of Manning, saw Rooney pass the bottle from which the whisky came, to Manning; on Oct. 17th saw Rooney pass bottle to Dawson; frequently saw Rooney pass full bottle and get an empty one in return.

John P. Manning was next tried on four charges for keeping and four for selling.

The witnesses were Sullivan and Knight, and the evidence that already given in the first nuisance case: Sullivan swore to purchasing whisky of Manning twice on Nov. 4th, and Knight to purchases on Oct. 10th, 14th and 15th.

Daniel Matteson's cases—two for illegal keeping of liquor and one for illegal transportation—were heard next.

L. C. Snow gave the story of the search and seizure at Matteson's house.

F. E. Jenkins. Had seen Matteson make several trips daily between Converse House pool room and his house; Matteson's coat was lean and lank going, but bulging and pockets sticking out on his return.

Mr. Gager gave the same evidence. Had also seen bottle in Matteson's pocket. Had noticed that early arrivals at the pool room in the morning, before Matteson arrived, would come out and wait about outside; in such instances Manning frequently came out and looked toward Matteson's home; after Matteson's arrival the hangers-about would go into the pool room with him, stay from 2 to 5 minutes, then come out and go away.

Knight, on Oct. 14th, saw Matteson pass a bottle to Rooney, who at once passed it to Manning; witness then had a drink of whisky from that bottle.

Yesterday morning the first cases taken up were those against George Lee—one for illegal keeping, two for selling, and one for keeping a common nuisance.

F. E. Jenkins. Helped search Lee's place on the evening of Oct. 22d; found gallon jug full of whisky and bottle of beer in bedroom, and a barrel of cider in the cellar; in the kitchen a tin pail and glasses smelling of cider, and in various places about the house several bottles containing small amount of whisky. Had been in the vicinity of Lee's place 15 or 20 times, staying from 15 minutes to 2 hours; at such times had seen numerous people go to and come from the house, staying there from a few moments to two hours; had seen the door open and a large crowd inside; had seen men come from there intoxicated, one decidedly so, others more or less under the influence of liquor. When Lee was arrested he claimed to have been sick in bed four weeks, attended by Dr. Wilkins, who was called and denied having treated Lee; at witness's request Dr. Wilkins examined Lee and pronounced him physically able to be taken into court.

L. H. Gager, who assisted in the raid and had also watched the place, gave the same testimony.

E. F. Knight. Was at Lee's house Sunday, Oct. 11th, paid Lee for and had whisky with a man named Gadsby, who then bought and paid for two drinks. Was there Sunday morning, the 17th; had whisky with Lee, paying 20 cents; soon after had whisky with Sullivan and Tynan, being served by a little girl, Lee being present and taking the pay; Sullivan and Tynan than drank again. Had whisky of Lee the 20th, also the 22d, the little girl served him after asking Lee if it was all right, who said yes.

Humprey Sullivan corroborated Knight's testimony so far as it related to the drinks had by himself (Sullivan).

Thomas Hartnett was next tried for maintaining a common nuisance at his home in Three Rivers, on two charges of illegal keeping, two for selling, and one for Sunday violation—six in all.

L. H. Gager. At Hartnett's place on the evening of October 30th; found on shelf in the pantry a jug containing small quantity of whisky, 9 or 10 barrels of cider in the cellar, and in a shed at the rear several bottles, one smelling of whisky.

Rev. F. E. Jenkins gave the same evidence.

G. S. Butler. Had seen unusual numbers going and coming from Hartnett's house at various times. May 29th, before 7 a. m., saw Hartnett evidently patrolling the premises; he made a peculiar motion with his arms and a team with two men came from behind the house; this was done several times later, and each time men came from behind the house; at one time saw heavy package carried to the house under the same conditions, Hartnett apparently being on watch to see if the coast was clear. On cross-examination, admitted that these observations had been made from his residence on the hill, some 80 rods away, being aided by a spy-glass.

Matthew Povenski was sworn as an interpreter of Polish, and through him Albert Curgan stated that he went to Hartnett's house about four weeks ago, about 6 p. m., and bought a bottle of whisky of Hartnett, paying 50 cents for it.

Joseph Kozycz, with the aid of the interpreter, stated that he had been at Hartnett's frequently during the past summer, and had had beer and whisky several times of Hartnett, sometimes on Sunday, and had paid Hartnett for it.

YOUNG LYNCH WAS INNOCENT.

Charged With Shooting Andrew Pinney, He Proves an Alibi.

A large number of people attended court Saturday to hear the trial of Patrick W. Lynch, charged with committing the assault on Andrew Pinney on Friday afternoon, October 9th. Lawyer S. S. Taft of Springfield appeared for the prosecution, and T. W. Kenefick of Palmer for the defense. Mr. Pinney was the first witness. He testified that on Friday, October 9th, he paid the help in the morning and the mill closed at 1 o'clock. While going to dinner just before 1 he met Lynch on Park street going toward the carpet mill. When he was returning to the mill a little after 2 o'clock a man stepped from the bushes, holding a revolver in his right hand, and with his left hand grasped the bridle, saying "throw up your hands." Mr. Pinney asked him what he wanted and he replied, "Money." Mr. Pinney said, "Get out," and the man fired. Mr. Pinney then struck him with his whip and he fired again. Both shots took effect. The man was about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches in height, and would weigh about 150 pounds. He was shabbily dressed and wore a mask over his face with holes for the eyes. His eyes were light and his voice very gentle. A coat and pair of pants found near by were shown him and he recognized them as the ones worn by his assailant. On the Sunday following, while thinking the matter over, it came to him that the voice was that of young Lynch, although he had not heard Lynch speak since he came from Concord reformatory, where he had been for five years. He had had some trouble with Lynch on account of depredations committed by him at the carpet mill.

Bridget Sullivan, an employe at the carpet mill, testified that October 9th, while going from the mill to her home after 1 o'clock, she met Lynch above the walnut tree. Edward Colgrove was ahead of her and she saw him stop a short time and speak with Lynch.

Edward Colgrove, another employe at the mill, testified that a little after 1 o'clock he met Lynch on the afternoon of October 9th, near the walnut tree. Before meeting him he heard two shots fired. When he came up to Lynch he asked him if he had been shooting. Lynch at first denied that he had, but afterwards admitted it and showed his revolver. He thought it was a 22 caliber. Several weeks before this Lynch came up to him and another boy while they were in front of the opera house, pulled out a revolver and said, "Throw up your hands." A revolver given to Inspector Boyle of Springfield by Mrs. Lynch was shown him, and he thought it was the one Lynch showed him near the walnut tree the day Mr. Pinney was shot.

William Kerr testified that on several occasions he had been out with Lynch shooting at squirrels, birds, and so forth. He had bought the cartridges. He identified the revolver shown in court as the one they had by scratches on the handle. It was a 22 caliber. The revolver was out of order, and it was necessary to turn the cylinder with the hand after cocking it.

Robert Studley testified that with several others he went to the scene of the shooting and in the woods near by found the coat and pants exhibited in court. He also noticed a foot-print with a square toe and a heel-plate on the outside of the right heel.

Inspector Boyle of Springfield police testified that he talked with Lynch in Springfield after he was arrested. Lynch denied having done the shooting, and said he knew nothing of the affair until Mr. Northrop and Mr. Ferry told his father while they were picking apples in the orchard. Mr. Boyle said that several days after Lynch was arrested, in company with Police Connor of Chicopee, he visited Lynch's home. Mrs. Lynch gave him a revolver. He noticed that Lynch wore shoes not exactly square-toed, but with heel-plates on the outside of both heels.

Dr. Hendee testified to having attended Mr. Pinney. At first he was of the opinion that the wounds were made by balls larger than 22 caliber, but by going through cloth the bullet would be deflected and the opening made larger. The wound in Mr. Pinney's thumb was made by a 22 caliber bullet.

A recess was here taken until afternoon.

After the recess Lynch was put upon the stand. He testified that on the day of the shooting he became angry at his father and left the house, came to the village and visited his grandmother on Dublin street. After starting for home he met Mr. Pinney near the schoolhouse on Park street; also met Colgrove. Colgrove asked him what he had been shooting at. He told him a squirrel, and showed his revolver. He also met Miss Sullivan. After passing these two persons he walked toward his home; went into the lot below the Carey house and picked a few chestnuts; saw a young lady coming down the road; walked on above the Carey house and sat down on a stone to wait for her; it proved to be Miss Kinnevan. He walked home with her and then continued his way to his house. Mr. Endicott was reading a paper near the door when he arrived. He ate his dinner, went up stairs and changed his clothes, then harnessed up the horse for Mr. Endicott and then went to the orchard back of the barn to help his father pick apples. In the evening he went to Palmer and got his shoes at the store of Edward Goods, where they had been repaired. They had heel-plates on. He admitted having pointed a revolver at Colgrove in front of the opera house as testified to by Colgrove, but said, "That was a long time before Mr. Pinney ever thought of being shot." He said he had had the revolver about eight years, having swapped a fiddle for it. When he went to Concord he placed it in a drawer, on his return he broke open the drawer and took the revolver; his mother did not know he had it since he returned. The first he knew of the shooting was when Mr. Northrop and Mr. Ferry told his father in the orchard.

Miss Lizzie Kinnevan testified that she left the mill at 1.15, and while going home met Lynch as he said; they walked along together. She arrived at home about 1.45. The last she saw of Lynch he was going towards his home.

I. P. Endicott testified that he has been boarding at Lynch's house a little over a year. On Friday afternoon, just after dinner, he was sitting near the door reading and saw Lynch coming from the direction of Mrs. Kinnevan's; asked him to hitch up the horse for him, which he did after he had eaten his dinner; it was either two o'clock when he asked him to hitch up the horse, or when he, (Endicott) got into the wagon to come to Palmer. On the way down he met several men who told him Mr. Pinney had been shot; did not meet Mr. Northrop and Mr. Ferry.

Catherine Lynch, mother of the defendent, corroborated the testimony of Lynch in regard to his doings after he reached home. She went to the barn after eggs and saw him go to the orchard to help his father pick apples. She then went up stairs and picked up Lynch's clothes to hang them up; saw the revolver and took it down stairs and placed it in the cupboard; knew Lynch had the revolver; had seen him take it several times and heard him shooting near the house.

Edward Lynch corroborated the testimony in regard to his son being in the orchard and the coming of Northrop and Ferry.

Mr. Ferry testified that he was at the house of Mr. Northrop when Mr. Pinney went by and told them he had been shot. They arrived at Lynch's home about 2.45; went to the orchard and saw young Lynch; he seemed to be in a natural state; did not appear sweaty or disturbed.

Mr. Goodes was called and testified that Lynch got his shoes the Wednesday before, instead of Friday evening, as stated.

Inspector Boyle was recalled and testified that Mrs. Lynch told him and Chief Connor that the revolver had been in a glass dish in the cupboard all the day that Mr. Pinney was shot. She had seen it there several times.

Both lawyers then made strong pleas and the judge reserved his finding until Monday morning.

In giving his decision Judge Robinson carefully reviewed the evidence. He said the testimony of the commonwealth created a strong chain of circumstantial evidence against Lynch, but the testimony of the defense, although contradictory in some respects, proved a strong alibi. He therefore discharged him.

SOUND MONEY CELEBRATION.

A Big Crowd Enthuses Over the Election of McKinley and Hobart.

Monson celebrated the McKinley victory with plenty of noise and show last Saturday evening. Not in recent years has any event aroused so much enthusiasm as this, and it was carried out very successfully under the management of Robert H. Cushman, who made the first move, although the subject had been talked over by others. Nothing was done until Friday morning. A mass meeting was called for that evening, when details for a parade were arranged. Not as many torches could be purchased as were desired, but red fire and fireworks, together with the lanterns in the barges and coaches, helped to supply the deficiency.

About 8 o'clock the procession formed in front of Memorial Hall and proceeded south to the Hampden road, to Ellis's village, to Bridge street, to Green, to Main, north to High, to Pleasant, to Flynt avenue, to Mill street, to North Main, to Main, disbanding at Memorial Hall. The procession was made up of a mounted battalion led by H. C. Norcross, the horsemen wearing gold sashes; division marshaled by M. F. Moore; Monson cornet band; second division, marshaled by S. Fred Cushman; coach decorated with the national colors and occupied by twelve young ladies; coach from Stafford Springs, carrying a number of men wearing light colored tall hats; third division, marshaled by C. L. Gould; barge prettily decorated and occupied by a dozen young men wearing tall black hats; carriage containing four young men, the carriage illuminated and bearing inscriptions; fourth division, marshaled by E. J. Donovan; eight horsemen formed the advance guard of 40 Academy students; barge from R. M. Reynolds's straw works, trimmed with bunting, flags and lanterns; two pictures on the barge attracted attention, one being that of a pompous McKinley rooster, the other a dejected Bryan parrot, under which was the inscription "I talked too d—d much;" the large bore this legend: "We are the people," and was occupied by people dressed to represent Uncle Sam, a son of Erin, John Chinaman, a gold bug, a negro, a Dutchman, a Populist, a cowboy, a bloomer girl and "the heavenly twins." A team belonging to R. M. Reynolds carried the fireworks which were used along the route, and at intervals fireworks were set off on the Dr. Fuller lot east of the village. The band's efforts were supplemented by the various yells; Monson Academy gave theirs whenever opportunity presented, and these were among the others: "Gold, gold! Gold, gold, gold! Is the standard we uphold!" "Who are we? Who are we? Voters for McKinley!" also "Rah, rah, rah! Flippity flop! This is the gang from the south straw shop!"

The people living along the line of march and others decorated and illuminated their houses very finely, and many burned colored fire. Among the many houses, besides all the places of business, were those of W. A. Charles, Dr. Fuller, A. D. Ellis, D. W. Ellis, R. M. and T. Reynolds, Rufus Fay, Charles Merrick, A. D. Norcross, F. E. D. R. P. and S. F. Cushman, Jr., Mrs. G. W. Farrington, Miss Holmes, Mrs. W. N. Flynt, L. C. and G. C. Flynt, C. F. Orcutt, E. F. and F. E. Morris, W. H. Gifford, Marvin Bradway, R. F. Bradway, Henry Wentworth, Ralph Clifford, Prof. Tufts, John Leahy, C. H. Wright, H. G. Rogers, and Dr. C. W. Jackson. The streets were crowded with people, and all agree that Monson can do anything well which she attempts.

Death of Mrs. E. L. Perrin.

Christiana S., 51, wife of Edward L. Perrin, foreman of the carding departments of R. M. & T. Reynolds's mills, died at her Bridge street home Wednesday morning. She had been an invalid for years, and was confined to her bed several weeks before her death, a great sufferer, but very patient. She was possessed of a singularly sweet disposition, and had many friends. The funeral will be held at the house tomorrow morning at 11, and friends are invited without further notice. Rev. Harry Blackford will officiate and the burial will be in the Center cemetery. Mrs. Perrin was born in Woonsocket, R. I., 51 years ago. Her maiden name was Allen. She was married to Mr. Perrin June 10, 1866. They came to Monson 25 years ago, residing there since with the exception of a few years. Mrs. Perrin leaves one daughter, Miss Myrtis, and a neice, Mrs. E. N. Gagnon of New York, whose home was for a time with the family. She also leaves these sisters, Mrs. Maria Melville, Trenton, N. J., Mrs. Mary Chandler of Woonsocket, R. I., and these brothers, Ethan and Owen Allen of Milbury, Arnold S. Allen of Uxbridge, and Benajah S. Allen of Pascoag, R. I.

Child Badly Scalded.

The three-years-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brogan of South Monson was badly scalded Monday afternoon by setting down in a pail of boiling water. She is expected to recover, however, and is as comfortable as could be expected.

Miss Salena Orcutt is visiting friends in Springfield.

Miss Vilora McCollum has returned from a visit to her home in Maine.

Mrs. Howe Grant left Monday for Boston, where she will remain several weeks.

Miss Mabelle E. Watson is assisting Miss Bessie Sutcliffe at No. 1 grammar school.

Robert Lewis lost two fingers in an accident at the Flynt company's quarry Saturday.

Miss Blanche, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Cushman, has scarlet fever. Mrs. Cushman is also ill.

Mr. Hatch, father of Edwin C. Hatch of South Monson, has been ill about two weeks. Mr. Hatch is probably Monson's oldest resident, being over 95.

The circle of King's daughters will meet with Mrs. Truman Bradway next Friday evening, and as there is especial business to come before the meeting it is desired that as many members as can will be present.

It is said that already longing eyes and yearning hearts have turned towards Postmaster Herlihy's position, but as Mr. Herlihy is serving the people satisfactorily, outsiders are failing to enthuse over ousting him. His commission runs to December, '99.

A sum of money was received at the JOURNAL office this week from a Monson subscriber, unaccompanied by the name of sender or any other means of identification. Will the person who sent the money please communicate with office regarding the matter.

All member of Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps who expect to attend the celebration of the 10th anniversary of L. L. Merrick corps at Palmer next Thursday evening, and who desire to go in the 'bus, are requested to notify Mrs. Julius N. Graves on or before Monday evening.

The lecture to be given to-morrow afternoon by Miss Hattie Twitchell of Springfield, on "The Kindergarten," merits the attention of all who are interested in the training of children. Miss Twitchell is the principal of the training school for kindergarten teachers in Springfield, and comes highly recommended, both as a speaker and a leader in her line of work. A desire has often been expressed to have a kindergarten established in Monson, and it is hoped that no one will lose this opportunity of learning more of the methods and aims of this important work. The lecture will be at 3 p. m in the academy chapel, and will be free.

When the remodeling of the Methodist church was begun it was thought that the work would be completed about December 1st, but delays have occurred which may lengthen the time to January 1st. The metal ceilings have been placed, the pulpit platform has been built and the building wired for electricity. The windows are now being put in. There are to be two memorial windows, one presented by Rev. W. H. L. Starks of Ocean Grove, N. J., for his daughter, Mrs. Clarissa Starks Thompson, and in memory of Mrs. Emma Starks; the other is to be presented by Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Marble in memory of Horace Marble, Mr. Marble's father, and Homer Earle, Mrs. Marble's father.

Prof. J. S. R. Coy will give the first of this season's series of organ recitals in the Congregational church next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, and all are invited. Prof. Coy gave three recitals last year which were much enjoyed. He will be assisted by E. H. McClosky, tenor, of Boston, who is well known as a concert singer and who has been heard in musical festivals. The programme:

Marche aux Flambeaux. Guilmant
Serenade. Schubert
Cujus Animam, from Stabat Mater. Rossini
E. H. McClosky.
Entr' acte Gavotte de Mignon. Thomas
Communion in G. Batiste
Song. Selected.
E. H. McClosky.
Walters' Prize Song, from Die Meistersinger Wagnne
Invocation in B flat. Guilmart
Martha Overture. Flotwo

The choir of the Universalist church will repeat by request the sacred song rendered at the harvest concert last Sunday evening. The soprano, Mrs. C. H. Bruce, leaves Monday for her new home in Lexington.

WILBRAHAM.

Joseph Leavens of Melrose, N. Y., is visiting Dea. A. A. Phelps.

Thieves recently stole about forty hens from the coop of Mrs. Austin Atchison.

Miss Sarah Phelps has entered a school in Boston, where she will train herself for a nurse.

The body of Otis K. Ladd, a former resident, was brought here from North Adams for burial last week Thursday. Mr. Ladd was well known in this town, and greatly respected by all.

LUDLOW.

The up-town schools closed to-day for the Thanksgiving vacation.

The Grange will give a drama, entitled "The turn of the tide," this evening. The receipts will go toward paying for the new piano which has recently been purchased.

The home of Mrs. Lucy Booth at the Center was the scene of a pretty gathering last Friday evening, when about 60 friends of Mrs. Booth's son, Charles, and bride called to extend their congratulations. Mr. and Mrs. Booth were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents.

BELCHERTOWN.

Dr. Ira D Hasbrouck of New York has engaged rooms and will open an office in town.

William Orlando has purchased the property of H. F. Howard near the depot. The price paid was $500

Samuel Capen killed a porcupine weighing 30 pounds near his home one day last week. Mr. Capen's dog was badly wounded by the animal while assisting in the killing.

Miss Lizzie M. Goodnow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton H. Goodnow, and Victor Damon, both of this town, were married at Greenfield Saturday evening by Rev. Jerome Wood. The marriage was contrary to the wishes of Miss Goodnow's parents, as she is only 17, but all has now been forgiven, as is usually the case, and the young people are happy.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

The question now is: "Who'll have the post office?

Mrs Nellie Buffington of Springfield was in town Tuesday.

George D. Keith spent Sunday with friends in Palmer.

Quite a party of young people enjoyed a straw ride to Springfield Monday night in Lane's 'bus, to witness the McKinley parade.

The parishioners of Rev. H. B. Mason are rejoicing over his continued improvement, and are in hopes to have him with them once more ere many weeks.

People living in the "Castle" were somewhat startled Sunday evening owing to the discovery of fire in a pile of papers in the basement, which at one time threatened to destroy the ancient edifice, but by the prompt action of one of the tenants, Mrs. Moriarty, the flames were subdued before any damage was done.

WALES.

William Underwood is home for a week's vacation.

George Parker is building an addition to his home.

LeRoy Heald of Camden, Maine, is employed by W. S. Lyon for the winter.

Mrs W. A. Lyon is spending a few days in New York, getting the fashions in millinery.

Mrs. John Heck and two children have the scarlet fever; there are several other cases in town.

Two families moved from town to Spencer this week, leaving some of the merchants "in the soup."

H. W. Needham and Everett Bradley are reshingling the Warren Shaw homestead, occupied by J. E. Loudon.

On and after Nov. 16th the Wales stage will run until further notice on the winter schedule, leaving Wales at 7 a. m., excepting Mondays, when it will leave at 5 30 a. m.; returning it will leave Palmer at 4 30 p. m. except Saturdays, when it will leave at 5 30

HAMPDEN.

Deputy Sheriff McCann of West Springfield happened to be in town Monday evening and was called upon to arrest a suspected horse-thief. The man was found in the barn of Farmer Burleigh and could give no satisfactory explanation why he happened to be there. He was taken to Springfield and given a hearing Tuesday morning; he pleaded not guilty and his case was continued. On Wednesday Inspector O'Day of Worcester came to Springfield and positively identified the man as a noted horse thief who has been in the business for a number of years. In 1887 he was arrested and sentenced to Sing Sing for eight years, being released in 1894. He operated principally in Westchester county, New York, stealing horses in that vicinity and travelling by night to the eastern part of this state, where he would appear with several western horses to sell. He would repeat the operation here and in due time appear in New York with several eastern horses for sale. He was taken to Worcester by Inspector O'Day on a charge of having stolen a pair of horses in that city in 1888.

BRIMFIELD.

Mrs. Sumner Parker is visiting friends in Douglas.

Mr. Anderson of Monson is visiting his daughter, Mrs. H. L. Converse.

Rev. Harry Blackford of Monson occupied the desk of the Second church last Sunday.

Miss Jennie Livermore of Chicopee was home over Sunday.

New Books in the Public Library.

All of the new books in the town library are now ready for circulation. There are a good number which will be of especial assistance to the teachers and pupils of the schools. Those relating to nature study are: Gibson's "Sharp Eyes," Chapman's "Birds of Eastern North America," Matthew's "Familiar Trees and Their Leaves," Apgar's "Trees of Northern United States," Mrs. Dana's "How to Know the Wild Flowers," Scudder's "Frail Children of the Air," Miss Miller's "Bird Ways," and "Four Handed Folk," Burrough's "Fresh Fields," Bamford's "Up and Down the Brooks," and a number of Thoreau's works. WARREN.

The Knowles steam pump works has increased its force of men by 8 or 10 new employes since election.

Sayles & Jenks's woolen mill, which has been shut down while a new water-wheel was being put in, will soon resume work.

The Slater Engine Company has nearly completed arrangements for the starting of its new foundry, and it is expected work will begin in two weeks. But a few hands will be employed at first, and only the smaller castings made. J. F. Shanley will be the foreman.

The warrant is posted for a town meeting to be held in the town hall Monday afternoon, the 23d. The most important articles are: To see if the town will authorize the overseers of the poor to complete the barn at the town farm with money obtained from the sale of lumber; to see if the town will build a hose house on land of the Knowles steam pump works, or act in any way relative thereto; to see if the town will buy 1000 feet of hose for the fire department; to see if the town will accept an extension of School street as laid out by the selectmen, and also a road at West Warren from North street to the house of Desire Peltier.

Congregational Pastor Installed.

Rev. William Byron Forbush was installed as pastor of the First Congregational church Wednesday, the exercises taking place at 2 p. m. In the morning Rev. Mr. Forbush was examined by a council of thirty members. Rev. J. F. Gaylord of Barre called the council to order; Rev. A. B. Bassett of Ware was chosen moderator, and Rev. S. W. Brown scribe. The records of the parish and church regarding the call of Mr. Forbush, and his acceptance, were read. Mr. Forbush then gave a history of his life from the time he entered college to his last pastorate at Yarmouth. After a short secret session the council dinner was served. In the afternoon a large number of people were present at the installation exercises. The following was the programme carried out:

Organ prelude J. E. Lombard

Charge to the pastor, Rev. J. F. Gaylord
Right hand of fellowship, Rev. E. B. Blanchard
Hymn 1019, "Oh, where are kings and empires now?"
Charge to the people, Rev. Harris G. Hale
Hymn 787, "O holy Savior! Friend unseen."
Benediction by the pastor.

W. B. Forbush was born in Springfield, Vt., February 20, 1868, and was graduated from Dartmouth college in 1888. He took his theological course in Theron seminary in New York. He received the degree of doctor of philosophy from New York university in 1892, and degree of doctor of letters from Hanover college in 1895. While pastor in Riverside, East Providence, R. I., he was lecturer in Brown university on "Comparative philosophy." For the past two years he has been settled over the Tabernacle church of Yarmouth, N. S., and held the office of chairman of the denomination in the maritime provinces for '96 97. Mr. Forbush is married, and has three young sons.

Immense Election Celebration.

The enthusiasm of the citizens of Warren, over the result of the election, vented itself Thursday night in a celebration which will long be remembered. Promptly at 8 o'clock the blazing of beacons on the hill tops, the resounding boom of cannons, and the reverberating notes of whistles and bells, signalized the opening of the event. The town was a blaze of light; the shop whistles, the factory bells, all testified to their rejoicing over the prospect of future prosperity. The 'siren" whistle, which was used for the first time at the Knowles pump works, touched every note in the gamut in unceasing ecstasy. Nearly all the business houses, residences and shops were radiant with light and floated the tri-colors to the breeze. Promptly at 8:30 the procession started. It was one of the longest ever seen in town, composed of nearly a hundred horsemen, 25 bicyclists, and hundreds on foot, beside a number of floats. The Warren Cornet band and the Bookfield band furnished music. The Knowles pump works displayed a pump; the Slater engine works an enormous banner borne aloft by a number of small pages, making a striking and effective display; Butterworth Brothers, a huge sheet of "American tin;" besides these there were many clever transparencies and banners. The line of march covered quite a large part of the town, and rockets, Roman candles and red fire marked its progress. At about ten o'clock the parade disbanded at the town hall, where a collation was served. The cannons, which had done such good service, ceased. Later, as the stillness of the night was broken by the strains of the Brookfield band, as it marched homeward to the tune of "Rally 'Round the Flag," an answering chord responded in many hearts, as we realized nothing could more fitly close the event than this tune, which was the keynote of the whole occasion, for 'twas not a partisan, but a patriotic, celebration.

THE BOSTON JOURNAL LED.

The Election News Was Superior to that Printed in Any Other Boston Paper.

The Boston Journal proved its superiority over the other Boston papers by the admirable manner in which the news of the Presidential election was given on the morning after the great contest. The Journal did not issue a small sheet, giving fragmentary reports, but gave the largest paper printed in Boston that morning. Every state in the Union was covered by means of the Journal's special correspondents, and the news from the crucial points was complete and accurate in every detail. In spite of the rush of election news the Journal did not omit any of its regular departments, and nothing was slighted, as was the case in other papers. One thing which enabled the Journal to print the earliest and most accurate news of the election was the fact that it was the only morning paper connected with the Associated Press, which has all the morning papers in the parts of the great West, where the chief interest centered.

LADIES IN EARNEST.

An Echo of The Campaign.

Political managers and the public in general have been deeply interested in the national vote of the women in this campaign. This was carried on by means of postal cards sent by women all over the United States to a designated manufacturing office whose clerical force handled and counted the ballots. While it is true that the ballots cannot be counted for the favorite Presidential candidates of the fair voters, the movement has underneath it a deep significance, giving an excellent illustration of the drift of opinion among the women, on public matters, as compared with the expressed opinion by the men.

It will be observed that the Prohibition vote is very much heavier in proportion to the other votes, than is shown in the men's election. There are some thousands of names which cannot be counted as votes, for the reason that only those whose signatures appeared on the postal card or envelope, were counted. Many of the ladies, in their honesty of purpose, failed to realize that much unfairness might creep in if votes were counted on the testimony of some other individual than the voter. The vote has been strictly fair and accurately reported, no prejudice being allowed in the office of the Postum Cereal Food Coffee Co., whose office force, by the way, are about equally divided in their opinions on the Gold and Silver question.

This Woman's Vote has called forth letters from many prominent women throughout the country, and while they know the votes do not count de facto, the writers appreciate the underlying motive in the movement, which is to bring to the front the idea of the right of women to express their opinion as to who shall make the laws under which they, as well as the men, are governed. There is a quaintness through the following letter that will be appreciated, perhaps. The letter comes from Baltimore, Md. Never mind the name or the candidate she voted for.

"Postum Cereal Food Coffee Co.,
Battle Creek, Mich.

Gentlemen:—

I am very grateful to you for the beneficent privilege of voting this fall. Through this one act, you prove that you think that your mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts are citizens of these United States. I never was a foreigner, and yet this is the first time I have ever been a citizen.

I have never been a traitor, nor a spy of any kind, never was a bank-robber, counterfeiter or thief, never placed in a reformatory and let loose a few days before election, never been a drunkard nor a pauper. The opposite sex tell me the reason why I have never been a citizen, is because I was not born right. Therefore, for over a half a century, I have been unable to cast my vote.

It pleases me to cast my first vote for true American principles. I sincerely trust that the women of our land will be free to vote hereafter and demonstrate that we are progressing in the right direction, for our vote will be an honest one for an honest purpose, for right thinking, right living, which will give us an honest and intelligent lot of voters, whose efforts will be to put into office the men that will stand firm against all that is evil. It is of great concern to us who shall be our rulers, and if they stand for political power and greedy ends alone, the inevitable result must be wicked in their administration.

In the hope that the right may ever be uppermost, I am,

Yours very truly,
Mrs——"

The postal cards and letters have been dragging along by various delays of mail, and it has been impossible to give a correct report until now. It is published even at this late date, in order to give a clear idea of how the ladies expressed themselves.

Battle Creek, Mich., Nov. 7th, 1896.

Personally appeared before me, a Notary Public in and for Calhoun County, Michigan, C. W. Post, Chairman of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., who makes affidavit that the above report of the receipts in the Women's Presidential Vote, is accurate and correct to the best of his knowledge and belief.

James Boughton, Notary Public.

The Company, who have paid out a considerable sum of money to conduct this Women's Presidential Vote, have conducted the matter in the best shape they were capable of, and that part of the work is presented to the ladies and to the politicians and public at large, with the knowledge that it has afforded considerable interest to all parties in this intensely interesting campaign. No prejudice of any kind has been allowed to creep into the work. It has naturally brought the Postum Cereal Food Coffee Co. into prominence, and this might be looked upon by some people as something of an advertisement for them. A great many letters have been received, inquiring about the Postum Cereal Food Coffee, and possibly it would not be amiss to make public explanation in this column.

Inquiry developed the fact that about one person in every three, has some form of disorder, caused by coffee drinking. They are slow to admit the reason, but find that their trouble leaves them when coffee is left out of their diet. It makes little matter about the theories, although it is known to physicians and chemists that certain alkaloids exist in coffee in small quantities, the same as found in morphine, whisky, strychnine and tobacco. The proof is plain enough, that for some reason, coffee is a direct poison to very many people. A warm, nourishing, palatable beverage is wanted at breakfast and perhaps at the other meals. The chocolate, cocoa, etc, fails to fill the want in many cases. After some hundreds of experiments, extending over a period of about twelve months, the Postum Food Coffee was finally discovered. It is a strictly pure product of the cereals (grains) alone. No coffee, chicory or other ingredients of any sort are contained in it. The color when brewed, is the deep seal brown of Mocha which changes to a rich golden brown when cream is added, and the taste is almost identical with the milder and more expensive grades of Java.

About 70 per cent of Postum Food Coffee is made from the part of the wheat berry that contains the gluten and phosphates. It is well known that brain workers exhaust the phosphates rapidly.

It will well repay any individual who has any form of physical disorder, to try for ten days or two weeks leaving off the common coffee entirely and using Postum. A strong healthful nervous system will eliminate almost any form of disease, and by leaving off coffee, one gets hold of the active cause of nervous prostration, and by taking on Postum Cereal Food Coffee, one directly builds in the phosphates and the needed elements to reconstruct the gray matter in the nerve centers throughout the body.

Samples of Postum can be had by mail, free upon application at the home office at Battle Creek, Michigan. Fancy grocers throughout the United States can furnish it.

The demand for Postum has been enormous, and has attracted the attention of many imitators. There is but one original and palatable Cereal Food Coffee, as can be easily determined by test. The red seals, containing the words 'It makes red blood" and the registered trade mark of Postum Cereal on the package, will protect the buyer.

The wife of Mr. Leonard Wells, of East Brimfield, Mass., had been suffering from neuralgia for two days, not being able to sleep or hardly keep still, when Mr. Holden, the merchant there, sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and asked that she give it a thorough trial. On meeting Mr. Wells the next day he was told that she was all right, the pain had left her within two hours, and that the bottle of Pain Balm was worth $5 00 if it could not be had for less. Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida street, San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c and $1.

HOW TO PREVENT CROUP.

SOME READING THAT WILL PROVE INTERESTING TO YOUNG MOTHERS HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THE DISEASE.

Croup is a terror to young mothers, and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy, for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Good advice: Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

To Kidney Sufferers.—An Opportunity Worthy of Your Notice.

If you suffer with kidney disease or any ailment arising from an improper action of the kidneys or urinary organs, this offer we make to the people of Palmer should interest you. In the advancement of medical science the kidneys, being almost the organs of the greatest importance to human health, have not been neglected, and in placing before you such a cure as Doan's Kidney Pills, the proprietors recognize how far so many statements of the makers of similar preparations have fallen short of their claims, being convinced that no remedy for kidney complaints in existence equals Doan's Kidney Pills for such ailments; strengthened in these convictions by letters that are daily received of the work they are doing for mankind's benefit. Old backs and young backs are being constantly freed from never ceasing aches, and many a lame and shattered one, stooped and contracted, is strengthened, invigorated and infused with new life. With such a medicine, an offer of this kind can be made without hesitancy, for while we lose the box we give to you, we make a friend that assists us in the sale of many others.

ONE FULL BOX,

Of Doan's Kidney Pills will be given away free to every person suffering with kidney ailments at the undersigned address. First come, first served, and only this one chance offered. Remember this is not a sample box, but a regular size box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which retails at 50 cents. God's Angel.

God's angels drop like grains of gold
Our duties 'midst life's shining sands;
And from them, one by one, we mold
Our own bright crowns with patient hands.

From dust and dross we gather them;
We toil and stoop for love's sweet sake,
To find each worthy act a gem
In glory's kingly diadem,
Which we may daily richer make.

INGENUITY OF THIEVES.

It has not been many years since a well-know jurist chanced to ask a friend the time of day as he entered the temple of justice, remarking at the same time that he had forgotten his watch at home. At the conclusion of his duties he returned home, and when he asked his wife for his chronometer was not a little surprised to hear that she had given it to a young man who had come for it, representing that the jurist had sent him. The young man was a thief. He had heard the judge remark that he had forgotten his watch. Without a moment's delay the cunning rogue ran to the judge's house and told the good lady of the house that her husband had sent him for the watch. It was a clever story, plausibly told, and it won the watch

The proprietor of a large jewelry house in Cincinnati can scarcely have forgotten his experience with an expert knave. It was along toward noon one very hot day in the summer of 1875 when a ministerial appearing fellow in a black suit, with a white tie, entered the store. He leisurely walked to the show case and asked to see some diamond studs. After some hesitation he bought a small stone, for which he paid $35. He then wished to look at some rings—thought of making his wife a present. As he followed the clerk to the showcase containing the diamond rings he began to eat an apple. Several valuable gems were looked at with dissatisfaction. One valued at $500 pleased him, but was not just what he wanted. At length he saw one in the case he thought was just the thing. As the clerk reached to get it the parson-like customer pressed the $500 ring deep into the apple he was eating and cleverly tossed it out of the door. The clerk didn't notice the move, but a fellow who was standing on the outside did, and hastily picked up the apple and departed. The diamond purchaser decided not to get his wife a present till another day. He was on the point of leaving when the clerk missed the ring.

"Wait a moment, please," called the clerk, who was nervously looking over the tray, "I cannot find that large diamond ring you were looking at."

The sactimonious gentlemen in black at once returned and remarked the clerk must be mistaken. The search continued, but was fruitless. The proprietor was called, and in a very austere and blunt way insinuated that it might be found in the folds of the ring-buyer's garments.

"I am the Rev. Dr. G——n," said the customer, in tones of excited wrath, naming a clergyman who lived in a village about thirty miles distant, that I did not come here to be insulted."

Well, the proprietor became angry and called a policeman, and the alleged clergyman was removed to a back room, protesting indignantly at the treatment. A short consultation was held, and a telegram was sent to the address given by the prisoner, making inquiry as to his character and whereabouts. The reply was slow in coming, and it was decided to search the prisoner. He was forced to strip, and every fold and crease in his clothes was searched. it is needless to say the ring was not found. The telegram from the village, thirty miles away came, saying that the Rev. Dr. G——n was one of the most reliable men in the town and that he was visiting friends in Cincinnati. Up to this time the proprietor had been of the opinion that the customer was a pious fraud, but the telegram changed his tune. He wanted to make amends right away. The parson talked heavy damages and law, but was at length soothed to silence by four crisp $100 bills. In some way the story of the minister's insult leaked out. His friends heard it and asked him about it. In the end he called at the jewelry store to see about it, and the proprietor was not a little amazed to find he had been duped. Detectives were at once put on the case, and in a few days arrested the bogus clergyman and his confederate trying to pawn the ring. They were the notorious "Frenchy" LaMountain and Cal Duncan.

A night watchman who was employed to protect a jewelry store in Denver against the ravages of thieves, was neatly outwitted by the notorious Billy Forrester some years before his death. The firm carried an immense stock of gems, and kept them in a large old-fashioned safe. Forrester had, by long years' experience, become so familiar with safes of that pattern that he could tell when to reverse and when to turn the knob forward, by placing his ear close to the door above the combination, and in this way could open the safe in a short time. By taking a wax impression of the keyhole he made a key for the front door. Having previously located the safe in the store, he was now ready to begin. It was a cold, snowy, stormy night, about 10 o'clock, and Forrester walked up to the store with an air of ownership and unlocked the door. He carried a sample case in his hand. Going in, he turned up the gas in the rear of the store and then shook down the stove. He leisurely worked the combination to the safe, and in less than half an hour he had before him thousands of dollars worth of costly jewels and watches. At this very interesting point the night watchman came in.

"Good evening," said the cordial burglar, as he continued to remove valuables from the safe to his sample case

"Come back to the fire and warm yourself; it is very cold out to-night."

The patrolman allowed that it was, and sauntered back to the stove.

"I'm packing up my samples," went on the thief, suavely. "Going out on the road in the morning, and thought I would get ready to-night. There! isn't that a beauty?" he asked, holding out an elegant Jurgenson for the watchman to examine.

In this way Forrester packed over $9000 worth of gems and watches into his sample case, chatting cheerfully with the night watchman all the while.

As he was about to close his sample case he stopped suddenly as if struck by a happy thought, and then picked up a very pretty ring. Turning to the watchman he asked him if he had a wife. The watchman had, and, with a careless laugh, Forrester tossed him the ring, saying: "Give her that and tell her it is a mark of appreciation for the faithful service rendered by her husband."

The brilliant guardian of other people's property was delighted, and was unusually wide awake all the rest of the night. It was not until morning that he became aware of the hoax that had been practiced upon him. Forrester by that time was well out of the way, and his connection with the robbery was not discovered till a few days before his death, when he confessed it."—Advocate.

OLD DR. SWEET IN SPRINGFIELD.

The Eminent Natural Bone Surgeon, Herbal Physician and New England's Most Noted Medical Expert Has Arrived.

18 VERNON STREET, - - SPRINGFIELD.

DR. J. EDWARD RAY, Assistant.

1636——Family Medical History——1896.

Nine unbroken generations have given to the world a Great Natural healer. Old Dr. Sweet now here, Stands among the leaders in medicine in America. Founder, Editor and Proprietor of late Health and Home, Boston, also Old Dr. Sweet's Family Medical Journal, Springfield. Have you received a copy? Orders by mail from every state in the Union. If not, send for one at once. Worth its weight in gold. Another edition of 50,000 copies ordered.

Have you noticed what our New England History has to say of his remarkable family and of this remarkable man? Have you read the combined opinions of the New England dailies of this wonderfully gifted Natural Healer? Have you read the aggregated opinions of the great Boston dailies of the professional standing of Old Dr. Sweet and of his great cures? No other specialist in New England thus honored. Is this not ample proof of his perfect reliability and great skill?

Have you read in Dr. Sweet's Medical Journal—now being furnished free to families—the Grateful Testimony of Distinguished Patients—not a case but had been abandoned as incurable?

READ THEM ALL! READ THEM ALL!

If not, why not? You want the best and surest, don't you? Speedy cure means speedy money, does it not? It means raiment, food and shelter for wife and the little ones for the forthcoming winter, does it not? To furnish the invalid public for the cure of the lame and those afflicted with obscure Chronic Diseases, the most efficient and best equipped private infirmary in Western Massachusetts, Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium, 18 Vernon Street, has been established, and to further this end, the distinguished Dr. J. Edward Ray, graduate of Harvard University, has been engaged as assistant. Do you fully comprehend the vast superiority of infirmary treatment as against office or family methods? It must be borne in mind that although one of the great natural bonesetters of Rhode Island, Dr. Sweet is the only member of the famous Sweet family who cures Obscure Chronic Diseases with equal certainty as he does lameness or the setting of a dislocated bone or joint. None but the best, is his motto. Watch his institution grow. An expensive apparatus for the illumination of the cavities of the human body by electricity to be put in this week. Next month the famous X Ray machine goes in. No institution in New England so fully equipped as this one. His family reputation is a safe guarantee for the sick and suffering. Get ready against winter. Examine his methods for the cure of Head, Throat and Lung Complaints, also all types of Lameness and Obscure Chronic Diseases. Ladies shopping at Messrs. Forbes & Wallace's, leaving by Vernon street entrance, will find easy access to Dr. Sweet's offices. Secure a Free Copy of Family Journal without delay. All News Dealers have them to give away. A HALF-WITTED HERO.

"Talking of remarkable escapes," remarks the drummer, "I think I know very few to beat that of which the hero was poor, half-witted Bill Smith, whom I met at an apalling mining disaster in Scotland 10 or 12 years ago. At that time I was doing my yearly round of the manufacturing towns in England to get a line on the newest thing in carpets, and ran north to Glasgow to visit some friends. The district for miles around is fairly honeycombed with coal mines. One forenoon the startling information reached the city that there had been an explosion in one of the pits at Blantyre, a village seven or eight miles away, and curiosity drew me thither. I don't believe I'll ever forget the awful spectacle. Over 200 men were entombed, great volumes of smoke shot up the pit-mouth, and the wives and mothers stood by as near as they dared, weeping and wringing their hands for the doomed men below.

"Rescue parties were quickly made up, but they were driven back repeatedly by the blinding, choking fumes that belched from the pit mouth. The cries of the women were heartrending as they entreated the rescue party to go down. As quickly as human hands and human hearts could do it a fan was placed in position and the cage lowered over the deadly shaft. Still the men, inured as they were to danger, shrank back. Billy Smith pushed his way through them. He was a big, strong lanky fellow, sluggishly good-natured and known in the village as the man who didn't know much. He had wandered into the village half a dozen years before, with a dirty, limping cur at his heels. When he was asked his name, he said it was only Billy, nothing more. So they stuck Smith to the Billy because it was easy and rigged him out with a full name.

"Haud the pup," he said, quietly, "and let me gae doon" An elderly woman who had three sons in the pit blessed him with the tears streaming down her cheeks, while the men stood back abashed and half ashamed. Billy was lowered quickly, and in a few moments—it seemed like an eternity to the wailing women above—he signaled for the cage to be brought up. It carried three men and a boy, blackened, choking, but unhurt.

"A few of the rescue party went down with the cage again, for the shaft was clearer now, and more of the entombed miners were quickly sent to the top. Then the horrors of the scene began to present themselves. There had been a great upheaval in the mines by the force of the explosion, and the passages were hopelessly choked up with tons of fallen coal and debris. More men went to the rescue. They dug their picks into the awful wall in front of them, urged on by the energy of despair. Night fell, but still the monotonous ring of the pick struck through the mine, which even now was the tomb of many a strong man struck down in his prime. Presently a sort of opening was made into the stubborn wall of coal which blocked up the way, and a man's arm protruded. The victim was quickly dug out and conveyed to the pit mouth. He was beyond all human help. He was not badly mangled; he had been simply choked to death by the fire damp. His widow had hovered all the day near the pit and in the blackness of the night the flickering lights of the lamps shed feverishly on her wan face. They had been married only a month and she was on her way to the pit with her husband's dinner when the roar of the explosion reached her ears. The dead man was tenderly laid at her feet. She flung herself on the body, kissed the poor blackened face and patted the limp, lifeless hands as she cried out: 'Speak to me John! For God's sake speak to me!'

"As the rescuers in the mine dug farther into the opening they had made, the deadly fire damp rushed through and drove them back. The fatal fumes pursued them, and they hurriedly gave the signal to be drawn up till the pit could be cleared of the foul air. Only half-witted Billy Smith remained. You see he did not know much. He flung himself on the damp ground and lay there for hours, helpless and half conscious.

"By and by his dull intelligence told him of the buried miners in their living tomb beyond. He took up a pick and dug, dug, slowly at first, but some God-given feeling within him prompted him to persistently work. For seven hours he dug on till the ring of his pick reached the entombed men. Sweeter music never struck mortal ears. They, too, seized their picks and dug through the black wall to meet their rescuer. Suddenly it fell through, and a hole was left large enough for a man's body to pass through. Day was breaking at the pit mouth when the weary, wretched watchers there were startled to receive a signal for the cage. It was quickly lowered and came up presently with a grewsome collection of limbs that had been torn off dead bodies and living men.

"The work of rescue now went bravely on, and the awful extent of the calamity was soon discovered. A dozen or so more miners were dug out alive, and as each pitload reached the mouth the rescued miners were seized by their friends and hurried off to the village public house. Soon the sounds of revelry swept down to the pit mouth, where wornout, broken-hearted women stood waiting for their dead, and strong men sobbed for their boys. The dead miners were drawn up the shaft in a pitiable state. Some had their arms or legs torn off, others had lost their heads, while more had their faces so blackened that the scorched skin peeled off at a touch.

"Suddenly somebody in the crowd cried, 'Where's Billy Smith?' Nobody knew, and two good-natured miners volunteered to go down the shaft to see if he had been hurt in the mine. They searched perfunctorily enough, for they did not suppose that he had been left behind. But a faint moan reached their ears from among the debris which had fallen near the hole that had been battered in for the rescue of the entombed miners. They cleared the rubbish away quickly and pulled out a man. Yes, it was Billy. He had dug his own grave. He was hauled to the top and laid down. Brandy was poured down his throat, and by and by he opened his eyes. 'Whaur's my dog?' he faintly choked out. Somebody brought the cur to him and laid it in his arms. He hugged it closely, and then, with a smile on his blackened, scorched face, he quietly died. Billy was a man who didn't know very much, you see. He simply knew enough to die for others."—Exchange.

OLD-TIME MINISTERIAL SALARIES.

The Evangelist has a pathetic article about the poor pay of Rev. Jonathan Edwards in Stockbridge, Mass. This was in the days when Congregationalism was established by law, and the town had to provide for the support of the ministry. At a town-meeting February 22, 1750, it was voted that "in case Rev. Jonathan Edwards should settle with them in the work of the ministry" he should receive the sum of six pounds 15 shillings and fourpence, about 35 dollars lawful money. Besides this he was to have 100 sleighloads of firewood, of which the Indians were to furnish 80 and the white settlers 20, which they were to chop in the woods and draw on sleds to his dwelling-house. This was not all, however, that Mr. Edwards received. He was to have a place to live and plenty of ground on which he could raise vegetables and whatever was necessary. All kinds of livestock in those days were very cheap, judged by our standards. It is interesting, however, to compare the money part of his salary with that of Bishop Asbury and the other preachers of an early day. According to the records, the amount he received per annum was $64, and up to the time of his death in 1816 he never rose beyond that sum.

Before determining whether these salaries were munificent or otherwise, it is necessary to compare the incomes of the Christian people of those days and of the citizens, the taxable property, and all of the other elements. Dr. Dorchester's researches into the early domestic life of New England show that, while the money consideration was not large, the condition of the orthodox minister was not one of relative starvation. In the mountains of Virginia, within 25 years, we have heard a dispute about spring chickens between a farmer's wife and the purveyor for a hotel 20 miles away. He wanted to pay her 5½ cents apiece; she wanted about nine cents. They compromised at last, according to our recollection, on six or seven, and he took away 150 or more spring chickens ready for broiling. In that country, until the people were, so to speak, corrupted by the lavish gifts of visitors, they would have called a man an extortioner who charged another more than 12 cents for a dinner. This was at least nine years after the civil war.—New York Christian Advocate.

Our Kitchen

No kitchen is kept cleaner than the premises devoted to the manufacture of NONE SUCH Mince Meat. No housewife can be more fastidious in the matter of preparing food than we are in the selection and preparation of the materials of which it is made. The cleaning of the currants (for one thing) is more thoroughly done by means of perfected appliances, than it would be possible to do it by hand.

Its cleanliness, purity, wholesomeness and deliciousness are good reasons for using NONE SUCH Mince Meat. The best reason is its saving—of time, of hard work, of money. A ten cent package affords you two large pies, without trouble to you beyond the making of the crust. Makes just as good fruit cake and fruit pudding as it does mince pie. Sold everywhere. Buy Your OVERCOAT To-day of
MEIGS & COMPANY.
The Reasons: Solid as a Brick Wall.

We are making elaborate preparations for To-day's Trade, and our efforts will not be useless because we have what the people want and what is to be found nowhere else. : : : : : : : :

THE BEST. THE BEST. THE BEST.

The present week finds us receiving a most liberal recognition from the people and prompts us to make an effort which will make to-day a memorable event. The Overcoat Season is just opening up and we wish to give our patrons a chance to see and determine for themselves what we can do for them, and also to show that if our competitors can imitate us in the daily press, that it is as far as they are able to go.

We have MEN'S and BOYS' OVERCOATS and REEFERS by the thousand, and it would be a useless task to undertake to describe the color and particular style of every coat.

'Tis sufficient to say that from $6.50 to $35, we can give you Overcoats made of Beavers, Chinchillas, Meltons, Montagnacs, and Kerseys, in black, blue, brown, and Oxford colors, single or double breasted.

We wish particularly to call your attention to a Boys' All-Wool Reefer at $5, and a Men's All-Wool Overcoat at $10. These two articles are strictly All-wool, fast color, and carved out in the very latest style.

OUR CELEBRATED HOME-RULE OVERCOATS.
What They Are, How They Are Made, and How They Will Wear.

'Tis with an inborn sense of satisfaction that we speak of this, Our Celebrated Overcoat, knowing how great the advantage is to us in selling a good overcoat and to you in buying one. Blue, black, and brown, All-wool Beaver cloth, woven by the Vassalborough Mills of Vassalborough, Me. Made in three lengths: long, medium and short; plain seam, strap seam; single or double breasted; and linings, color, pockets, all will bear inspection.
These Overcoats are fully equal in style, fit and finish, to overcoats sold by other houses for $15, and the wear, color and durability are equal; not because we think so, but because IT IS SO. You will know and say so after inspection.
Match the Boys' Reefer if you can. We wish to bring to the attention of everyone who has a boy OUR BOYS' REEFERS—they are strictly All-wool Blue Chinchilla and Black Beaver Cloth, made with wide sailor or velvet collars, heavily braided, and range from 3 to 16 years, at $5.

Are you economically inclined? If so, save from 15 to 25 per cent and get for your boy the Bargain with which we start the Winter season.

We have Boys' Reefers and Overcoats from $2.50 to $12 which we will show you, all new and nobby, at the lowest possible prices.

If your boy needs an Overcoat, Reefer, Suit or Pair of Pants for Sunday, to look neat and be happy

Thanksgiving Reverie.

I'm going home to Thanksgiving to-day;
Through the mists of the past I make my way;
The train I shall take is more rapid by far
Than lightest balloon, or swiftest car;
On memory's track I dart away,
Going home to Thanksgiving to-day.

I shall hear the echo of hurrying feet,
As loved ones hasten my coming to greet;
I shall watch at the casement for those who come
To join the ranks in childhood's home;
Not one of the number will be away,
As we gather home to Thanksgiving to-day.

Now the board is spread—the mirth is stilled,
Not a place is vacant,—each seat is filled
As father, mother, and children come
To share in the bounties of Harvest Home
And silently lift the heart in praise
For the blessings that crown our Thanksgiving Day.

E'en the speechless friends, with pleading airs,
Come fawning around the children's chairs.
Now puss in the velvet conceals her claws,
And Fido sits up with folded paws
Claiming a share, in his doggish way,
Of the feast that is spread on Thanksgiving Day.

We sing again our Thanksgiving song;
I catch the notes as they float along:—
"We plow the fertile meadows,
And sow the furrowed land,
But yet the waving harvest,
Depends on God's own hand;
It is His mercy gives us
The sunshine and the rain,
That paints with verdant beauty
The mountain and the plain;
Every blessing we enjoy,
Comes to us from God,
Then praise his name, then praise his name,
For he is ever good."
Then into silence it sinks away,
The song we sing on Thanksgiving Day.

Who says "'Tis a dream?" Who dares to say
That the fleeting years, as they rolled away,
Carried our loved ones along on their tide
Till half have crossed to the farthest side,—
Passed from our aching hearts away,
To the realms of eternal Thanksgiving Day?

And yet 'tis true; we meet no more
An unbroken band, as in days of yore;
While those that remain, who met with us then,
Have changed from youth to bearded men,
With here and there a sprinkle of gray
In locks that were fair, youth's Thanksgiving Day.

But though we may wander the wide world o'er,
From north to south, and from shore to shore;
Though wealth should flatter, or poverty frown,
Or the burden of sorrow bear us down,
Yet we cannot forget, while reason holds sway,
The youthful visions of Thanksgiving Day.

TOM'S THANKSGIVING.

"It was very provoking that the seamstresses and such people would get married, like the rest of the world," said Mrs. Greenough, half in fun and half in earnest. Her fall sewing was just coming on and here was Lizzie Brown, who had suited her so nicely, going off to be married; and she had no resource but to advertise, and take whomsoever she could get. No less than ten women had been there that day, and not one would answer.

"There comes Number Eleven; you will see," she cried, as the bell rang.

Kitty Greenough looked on with interest. Indeed it was her gowns, rather than her mother's, that were most pressing. She was just sixteen, and since last winter she had shot up suddenly, as girls at that age so often do, and left all her clothes behind her.

Mrs. Greenough was right—it was another seamstress; and Bridget showed in a plain, sad-looking woman of about forty, with an air of intense respectability. Mrs. Greenough explained what she wanted done, and the woman said quickly that she was accustomed to such work—would Mrs. Greenough be so kind as to look at some recommendations? Whereupon she handed out several lady-like looking notes whose writers indorsed the bearer, Mrs. Margaret Graham, as faithful and capable, used to trimmings of all sorts, and quick to catch an idea.

"Very well indeed," Mrs. Greenough said, as she finished reading them. "I could ask nothing better. Can you be ready to come at once?"

"To-morrow if you wish, madame," was the answer, and then Mrs. Graham went away.

Kitty Greenough was an impulsive, imaginative girl; no subject was too dull or too unpromising for her fancy to touch it. She made a story for herself about every new person who came in her way. After Number Eleven had gone down the stairs, Kitty laughed.

"Isn't she a sobersides, mamma? I don't believe there'll be any frisk in my dresses at all if she trims them."

"There'll be frisk enough in them if you wear them," her mother answered, smiling at the bright, saucy, winsome face of her one tall daughter.

Kitty was ready to turn the conversation.

"What do you think she is, mamma—wife or widow?" And then answering her own question: "I think she's married, and he's sick, and she has to take care of him. The solemn, still way she has comes of much staying in a sick room. She's in the habit of keeping quiet, don't you see? I wish she were a little prettier; I think he would get well quicker."

"There'd be no plain, quiet people in your world if you made one," her mother said, smiling; "but you'd make a mistake to leave them out. You would get tired even of the sun if it shone all the time."

The next day the new seamstress came, and a thoroughly good one she proved; "better even than Lizzie," Mrs. Greenough said, and this was high praise. She sewed steadily, and never opened her lips except to ask some questions about work. Even Kitty, who used to boast that she could make a dumb man talk, had not audacity enough to intrude on the reserve in which Mrs. Graham intrenched herself.

"He's worse this morning," whispered saucy Kitty to her mother; "and she can do nothing but think about him and mind her gathers."

But, by the same token, "he" must have been worse every day, for during the two weeks she sewed there Mrs. Graham never spoke of anything beyond her work.

When Mrs. Greenough had paid her, the last night, she said:

"Please give me your address, Mrs. Graham, for I might want to find you again."

"Seventeen Hudson street, ma'am; up two flights of stairs; and if I'm not there, Tom always is."

"There, didn't I tell you?" Kitty cried, exultingly, after the woman had gone. "Didn't I tell you that he was sick. You see now, 'Tom's always there.'"

"Yes; but Tom may not be her husband, and I don't think he is. He is much more likely to be her child."

"Mrs. Greenough, I'm astonished at you. You say that to be contraditious. Now it is not nice to be contradictious; besides, she wouldn't look so quiet and sad if Tom was only a boy."

But weeks passed on, and nothing more was heard of Mrs. Graham, until at last Thanksgiving Day was near at hand. Kitty was to have a new dress, and Mrs Greenough, who had undertaken to finish it, found that she had not time.

"Oh, let me go for Mrs Graham, mamma," cried Kitty eagerly. "Luke can drive me down to Hudson street, and then I shall see Tom."

Mrs. Greenough laughed and consented. In a few minutes Luke had brought to the door the one-horse coupe which had been the last year's Christmas gift of Papa Greenough to his wife, and in which Miss Kitty was always glad to make an excuse for going out.

Arrived at 17 Hudson street, she tripped up two flights of stairs, and tapped on a door on which was a printed card with the name of Mrs. Graham.

A voice with a wonderful quality of musical sweetness in it, answered.

"Please to come in; I cannot open the door."

If, that were "he," he had a very singular voice for a man.

"I guess mamma was right after all," thought willful Kitty. "It's rather curious how often mamma is right, when I come to think of it."

She opened the door, and saw not Mrs. Graham's husband, nor yet her son, but a girl, whose face looked as if she might be about Kitty's own age, whose shoulders and waist told the same story, but whose lower limbs seemed curiously misshapen and shrunken—no larger, in fact, than those of a mere child. The face was a pretty, winning face, not at all sad. Short, thick brown hair curled round it, and big, brown eyes, full of good humor, met Kitty's curious glance.

"I am Tom," said the same musical voice—which made Kitty think of a bird's warble—in a tone of explanation. "I can't get up to open the door because, don't you see, I can't walk."

"And why—what—Tom—"

Kitty struggled desperately with the question she had begun to ask, and Tom kindly helped her out.

"Why am I Tom, do you mean, when it's a boy's name; or why can't I walk? I'm Tom because my father called me Tomasina, after his mother, and we can't afford such long names in the house; and I can't walk because I pulled a kettle of boiling water over on myself when I was six years old, and the only wonder is that I am alive at all. I was left, you see, in a room by myself, while mother was busy somewhere else, and when she heard me scream, and came to me, she pulled me out from under the kettle, and saved the upper half of me all right."

"Oh, how dreadful!" Kitty cried, with the quick tears rushing to her eyes. "It must have almost killed your mother."

"Yes; that's what makes her so still and sober. She never laughs, but she never frets either, and oh! how good she is to me."

Kitty glanced around the room, which seemed to her so bare. It was spotlessly clean, and Tom's chair was soft and comfortable—and indeed a chair ought to be which must be sat in from morning till night. Opposite to it were a few pictures on the wall—engravings taken from books and magazines, and given, probably, to Mrs. Graham by some of her lady customers. Within easy reach was a little stand, on which stood a rose bush in a pot, and a basket full of bright colored worsteds, while a book or two lay beside them.

"And you never go out?" cried Kitty, forgetting her errand in her sympathy—forgetting, too, that Luke and his impatient horse were waiting below.

"Not lately. Mother used to take me down into the street sometimes; but I've grown too heavy for her now, and she can't. But I'm not very dull, even when she's gone. You wouldn't guess how many things I see from my window; and then I make worsted mats and tidies, and mother sells them; and then I sing."

Kitty stepped to the window to see what range of vision it offered, and her eye fell on Luke. She recalled her business.

"I came to see if I could get your mother to sew two or three days for me this week."

Tom was alert and business like at once.

"Let me see," she said, "to-day is Tuesday," and she drew towards her a little book, and looked it over. "To-morrow is engaged, but you could have Thursday, Friday and Saturday, if you want so much. Please write your name against them."

Kitty pulled off her pretty gray glove and wrote her name and address with the little toy pencil at the end of her chatelaine; and then she turned to go, but it was Tom's turn to question.

"Please," said the sweet fresh voice, which seemed so like the clear carol of a bird, "would you mind telling me how old you are? I'm sixteen, myself."

"And so am I sixteen," said Kitty.

"And you have a father and mother both, haven't you?"

"Yes, indeed," said Kitty.

"Oh, I've only mother, but she is good as two. Must you go now? And I wonder if I shall ever see you again?"

"Yes, you will see me again," answered Kitty, cheerily; and then, moved by a sudden impulse of her kind, frank young heart, she bent over and touched her lips to the bright, bonny face of the poor girl who must sit prisoner there forever, and yet who kept this bright cheerfulness all the time.

"Oh, mamma, I've had a lesson," cried Kitty, bursting, into her mother's room like a fresh wind, "and Tom has taught it to me; and he isn't he at all—she's a girl just my age, and she can't walk, not a step since she was six years old.

And then Kitty told all the sad, tender little story, and got to crying over it herself, and made her mother cry, too, before she was through.

And after dinner she sat half the evening in a brown study. Finally she came out of it, and began talking in her usual impulsive manner.

"Can't we have them here to Thanksgiving, mamma? There's not a single pretty thing in that house except Tom herself, and the rose-bush; and everything did look so bare, and clean, and poverty-stricken; and I know they'll never afford a good dinner in the world. Oh, say yes, mamma, dear. I know you'll say yes, 'cause you're such a dear, and you love to make everyone happy."

"Yes, but first of all, I must love to make papa happy, must I not? You know he never wants any company on Thanksgiving but grandpa and grandma, and Uncle John. I am sure you would not like to spoil papa's old-fashioned Thanksgiving day."

Kitty's countenance fell. She saw the justice of her mother's remark, and there was no more to be said. She sat thinking over her disappointment in silence which her mother was the one to break.

"But I've thought of a better thing, Puss," said this wise mamma, who was herself every bit as tender of heart as Kitty, and cared just as much about making people happy. "No doubt Mrs. Graham and Tom would just as much prefer being alone together as papa prefers to be alone with his family; and how will it suit you if I have a nice dinner prepared for them and let you go and take it to them in the coupe? Mrs. Graham is hardly the woman one could take such liberty with; but I will beg her to let you have the pleasure of sending dinner to Tom."

"Oh, you darling!" and Mrs. Greenough's neck ruffle suffered, and her hair was in danger, as was apt to be the case when Kitty was overcome with emotion which could only find vent in a rapturous squeeze.

Before bed-time Kitty had it all planned out. She was to go in the coupe and take Bridget and the basket. Bridget was to mount guard at the horse's head while Luke went upstairs with Kitty and brought down Tom for a drive; and while they were gone Bridget would take the basket in and see that everything was right, and then go home.

Mrs. Greenough consented to it all. I think she enjoyed the prospect of Tom's ride herself, just as much as Kitty did. While Mrs. Graham was sewing there she made the arrangement with her, approaching the subject so delicately that the most sensitive of women could not be hurt, and putting the acceptance of both drive and dinner in the light of a personal favor to Kitty, who had taken such a fancy to Tom.

The last afternoon of Mrs. Graham's stay Kitty called her mother into her room. Mrs. Graham saw spread out upon the bed a thick, warm, soft jacket, a woolen dress, a last year's hat.

"You know them by sight, don't you, mother mine? They are the last winter's clothes that I grew away from, and have taken leave of. May Tom have them?"

"Yes indeed, if you'll undertake to give them to Tom's mother."

Kitty had seldom undertaken a more embarrassing task. She stole into the sewing room with the things in her arms.

"You'll be sure, won't you, Mrs. Graham, not to let Tom know she's going to ride until I get there, because I want to see how surprised she'll look?"

"Yes, I'll be sure, never fear."

"And Mrs. Graham, here are my coat, and hat, and dress that I wore last year, and I've grown away from them. Would you mind letting Tom wear them?"

"Would I mind?" A swift hot rush of tears filled Mrs. Graham's eyes, which presently she wiped away and somehow then the eyes looked gladder than Kitty had ever seen them before. "Do you think I am so weakly, wickedly proud as to be hurt because you take an interest in my poor girl, and want to put a little happiness into her life—that still sad life which she bears so patiently? God bless you, Miss Kitty; and if He don't, it won't be because I shall get tired of asking Him."

"And you'll not let her see the hat and jacket until I come, for fear she'll think something?"

At last Mrs. Graham smiled—an actual smile.

"How do you think of everything?" No, I'll keep the hat and jacket out of sight, and I'll have the dress on her all ready."

When Thanksgiving came Kitty scarcely remembered to put on the new apron that Mrs. Graham finished with such loving care; scarcely gave a thought to family festivities at home, so eager was she about Tom's Thanksgiving. She was to go to Hudson street just at noon, so that Tom might have the benefit of the utmost warmth of which the chill November day was capable.

First she saw the dinner packed. There was a turkey, and cranberry sauce, and mincepie, and plum pudding, and a great cake full of plums, too, and fruit, and nuts; then Mr. Greenough, who had heard about the dinner with real interest, brought out a bottle of particularly nice sherry, and said to his wife:

"Put that in also. It will do those frozen up souls good once in the year."

At last impatient Kitty was off. Bridget and the basket filled all the spare space in the coupe, and when they reached Hudson street, Luke took the dinner and followed Kitty up stairs, while Bridget stood by the horse's head, according to the programme. He sat the basket down in the hall where no one would be likely to notice it in opening the door, and then he stood out of sight himself while Kitty went in.

There was Tom, in the warm crimson thibet—as proud, happy-looking a Tom as you could find in Boston that Thanksgiving day.

"I have come to take you to ride," cried eager Kitty. "Will you go?"

It was worth ten ordinary Thanksgivings to see the look on Tom's face—the joy and wonder, and then the doubt, as the breathless question came:

"How will I get down stairs?"

And then Luke was called in, and that mystery was solved. And out of a closet came the warm jacket, and the hat, with its gray feather; and there were tears in Tom's eyes, and smiles round her lips, and she tried to say something, and broke down utterly. And then big, strong Luke took her up as if she were a baby and marched down stairs with her, while she heard Kitty say—but it all seemed like a dream, and Kitty's voice like a voice in a dream:

"I'm sorry there's nothing pretty now to see at this time of year. It was so lovely out doors six weeks ago."

Through Beach street they went, and then through Boylston, and the Common was beside them, with its tree-boughs traced against the November sky, and the sun shone on the frog pond, and the dome of the State House glittered goldenly, and there were merry people walking about everywhere, with their Thanksgiving faces on; and at last Tom breathed a long, deep breath which was almost a sob, and cried:

"Did you think there was nothing pretty to see to-day—this day? Why, I didn't know there was such a world!"

The clock had struck twelve when they left Hudson street; the bells were ringing for one when they entered it again. Bridget had gone, but a good-natured boy stood by the horse's head, and Kitty ran lightly up stairs, followed by Luke, with Tom in his arms.

Kitty threw open the door, and there was a table spread with as good a Thanksgiving dinner as the heart could desire, with Tom's chair drawn up beside it. Luke set his light burden down.

Kitty waited to hear neither thanks nor exclamations. She saw Tom's brown eyes as they rested on the table, and that was enough. She bent for one moment over the bright face—the cheeks which the out door air had painted red as the rose that had just opened in honor of the day—and left on the young, sweet, wistful lips a kiss, and then went silently down the stairs, leaving Tom and Tom's mother to their Thanksgiving.—Louise Chandler Moulton.

THE PEARL.

The pearl is the one gem that comes to us perfect from the hand of nature, and to this its great antiquity as a gem is largely due. Precious stones whose beauty and brilliance depend on polishing and cutting would naturally be discovered and utilized later. The discovery of the diamond, for instance, probably dates within historic times. Though known earlier, it was not generally included among the gem treasures of royalty even as late as the seventh century. The modern cutting of diamonds in regular facets was invented as recently as 1456. Indeed it is quite probable that the pearl was the first gem known and treasured by prehistoric man—since the search for food must have been the first occupation of the earliest of the race, and the shining pearl would thus have been discovered in river mussels if not in marine oysters. Certain it is that the Old Testament and the ancient written histories allude to pearls, and that remoter evidence is found in the tombs and excavated cities of still earlier eras. The Egyptians, Babylonians and Assyrians held the pearl in an esteem verging on reverence.—Popular Science Monthly.

Old-Time Pumpkin Pie.

Take a sharp knife—the best of its kind—
And pare off the pumpkin's golden rind;

Then cut into cube-shaped blocks of buff,
And slowly simmer till soft enough.

Run through a sieve—the best to be bought—
Till you have of the sifted pumpkin a quart.

Oh the "cropple-crown" hen will mourn to-day
From her rifled nest in the scented hay.

For ere your pumpkin pies you can bake,
Out of her nest you must nine eggs take.

Beat yolks and whites in a separate dish
Till both are foamy and light as you wish.

White sugar, one cup and a half you take,
And two quarts of milk, your pies to make;

Then of cinnamon, nutmeg and mace, each one,
You take a teaspoonful ere you are done.

Next spices, sugar, eggs, pumpkin and milk,
You must beat together till "smooth as silk"—

(That is the curious, homely phrase
My grandmother used in those old-time days)

Now a dozen of raisins, more or less,
To each pie will add flavor, you must confess.

The whole must be baked in a shell-like crust,
And just as it hardens, with sugar you dust.

If you follow this rule, when done, you'll cry,
"Here's a genuine, old-time pumpkin pie!"

MADE A BAD "SITTER."

When the Princess of Wales was a young bride, she was constantly in request for sittings to portrait painters, sculptors and photographers. She was not, however, a good "sitter," and used to pout when compelled to endure the tediousness of sitting in a studio. Mr. Frith, the painter, was engaged to paint a picture of the prince and princess, and he gives a pleasant glimpse of his tribulations with the Princess Alexandra.

The princess, says Mr. Frith, was very young and very beautiful, as all the world knows. She graciously consented to come to my house and to afford me every assistance in the way of sittings for my picture.

The princess is also well known for her kindness of heart. Oh, how that heart would have ached if its owner had realized the aching of mine when I—too soon—discovered that the illustrious young lady did not know that keeping her face in one position for a few minutes even was necessary to enable an artist to catch a resemblance of it.

The first sitting can I ever forget? I did not dare to complain till after two or three fruitless attempts. With down-right failure staring me in the face, I opened my heart to the Prince of Wales.

"You should scold her," said the prince.

Just at this time the princess was sitting for her bust to the celebrated sculptor Gibson, R. A., in a room at Marlborough House. I was sent for by the prince, and before I was admitted to an interview I was shown into the sculptor's studio, and found him waiting for a sitting from the princess. The bust was already in an advanced stage. I did not think it was very like, and in reply to Gibson I said so

"Well, you see," said Gibson, "the princess is a delightful lady, but she can't sit a bit."

At that moment I was summoned to the prince, whom I found with the princess, and I saw, or thought I saw, a sort of pretty, smiling pout, eloquent of reproof and of half anger with me. The prince had something to show me—photographs, I think—and then he led the way to Gibson, the princess and I following.

No sooner did we find ourselves in the sculptor's presence than—after some remarks upon the bust—the prince said:

"How do you find the princess sit, Mr. Gibson?"

"Now, thought I, "if ever a man was in an awkward fix you are, Mr. Gibson, for after what you said to me a few minutes ago you cannot in my presence compliment the beautiful model on her sitting."

The prince looked at Gibson, and Gibson looked in dead silence at the prince and then at the princess. Then he looked again at the prince, smiled and shook his head.

"There, you see, you sit properly neither to Mr. Gibson nor to Mr. Frith."

"I do, I do!" said the lady. "You are two bad men!"

And then we all smiled, and Gibson went on with his work, the princess sitting admirably for the short time that I remained.—Youth's Companion.

TEXAS HUMOR.

Everyone knows that Phil Sheridan said of Texas, "If I owned Texas and hell, I'd rent Texas and live in hell." Possibly out of respect for so great a man the Texan's answer was suppressed, but it was good just the same. He said with great promptness, "Well, Gin'r'l, yer know a cuss allers will take up fer the place he come frum."

The Texan has a strong sense of humor, and it manifests itself in other ways than repartee. The legislator who proposed that all trains running into Texas should be detained for ten minutes at the state line and required to whistle three times in acknowledgment of the sovereignty of the state didn't expect to be taken seriously. He wasn't; but his colleagues thought it would be such a good joke on the railroads that they made the suggestion law and for a time religiously enforced it.

The Texas women have their share of humor, and they can be sarcastic, too, as the following conversation between the daughter of a Texas congressman and a New Yorker at a Washington ball testifies:

"You are from Texas?" the New Yorker said in very much the same tone that he would have used had he asked if she was from Hawaii or some other remote place.

"Yes," she said, smiling sweetly.

"Lots of cowboys out there," he said, like a man who knew.

"Yes," she said doubtfully.

"You've seen some of course?"

"Oh, yes." This in a tone of conviction.

"In what part of the state?" he went on.

"Oh, I didn't see any cowboys in Texas. The ones I saw were on Broadway, New York."—New York Sun.

SPAIN'S DECLINE.

A little more than three centuries ago Spain was the first power in the world. She was not only superior to any other power, but might be said to be superior to all of them united. She was universally feared. With the exception of England almost every power had been defeated by her armies. Spain held almost all of the new world, especially those parts that were most favored in climate, and most rich in the precious metals. With the defeat of the "Invincible Armada," however, the naval power of Spain received a

PALMER NEWS.

HOLLAND SINNERS IN COURT.

Heavy Sentence Given Henry Leno for a Second Liquor Offense.

Henry Leno of Holland was before the district court Monday morning for keeping a liquor nuisance, and was given the maximum penalty, $100 fine and a year in the house of correction. Leno is an old offender. His place was raided only last August, and he was found guilty, being fined $100 at that time; he begged a reduction to $75, and on condition that he go out and stay out of the business, he was allowed to settle at that figure. Last Sunday morning Deputy Sheriffs Studley and Northrop of Palmer, with Officers Haynes and McCormack of Springfield, visited Leno's place and found about 2½ quarts of whisky in various bottles and places, and about a quart of wine. Leno was left in the kitchen with Officer McCormack while the others searched the place, and soon made a break for the woods, with the officer in close pursuit. It was a beautiful sprint, with Leno the winner, though the officers soon surrounded the timber and closed in on him. Lillian McGuirke, alias Russell, Leno's housekeeper, was also arrested for liquor selling. On this charge she was found guilty and fined $100; on a charge of lewdness she was sentenced to Sherborn for one year. An appeal was taken in each case, and bail furnished.

Relief Corps' Tenth Anniversary.

The Woman's Relief Corps celebrated its 10th anniversary yesterday. In the afternoon a regular meeting of the corps was held in Memorial Hall, about 150 invited guests being present, large delegates coming from Monson, Ware and Springfield. After the meeting the J. W. Lawton corps of Ware presented the local corps with a set of kitchen tinware, beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums, the presentation speech being made by their president in a poem written for the occasion. Mrs. G. O Henry, president of the local corps, responded with a few fitting remarks. An entertainment consisting of a farce, readings, and musical selections, followed. Supper was served at 6 o'clock to all invited guests. The evening exercises were attended by L. L. Merrick post, G. A. R., and C. W. Cross camp, Sons of Veterans, also by many invited friends of the corps. Department Commander W. P. Derby and staff, Department President Mrs. Brigham, and Department Inspector Mrs. Gilman of Roxbury were present. Interesting speeches were made by the above-named officers, and a tableau entitled "Living pictures of the civil war," was presented. Handsome gold and silver Japanese pin trays were given to all attending the afternoon exercises as a souvenir of the occasion.

Beef Stealers Kill an Animal in the Pasture.

Jerry Rourke, a farmer living over the line in Monson a short distance east of the electric company's plant at Blanchardville, is mourning the loss of a 2-years-old bull, which disappeared Monday night—that is all but the hide, head, heart, and one fore foot. The animal was killed in the pasture about 60 rods from the house, dressed, and the carcass carried off. Mr. Rourke does not know exactly what time it was done, but thinks it must have been between 7 and 9. His dog barked furiously at one time, but thinking it was someone passing in the road Mr. Rourke went to the door and commanded him to stop. The pasture cannot be seen from the house, so the beef stealers had a good chance to work, although the place where the work was done was close beside the highway. He thinks there were several engaged in the enterprise, as one party of four, one carrying a mallet, was seen by a neighbor in the highway in that vicinity in the evening. The creature was one which Mr. Rourke had raised for breeding purposes, an Ayrshire, and was considered an extra fine animal.

Palmer High School Football Team Defeats Monson Academy.

Palmer high school and Monson Academy met on the gridiron Saturday afternoon, and after 40 minutes of pushing, rolling over each other, fumbling and falling on the ball, withdrew from the field with Palmer victorious by the score of 10 to 4. The play of both sides was characterized by looseness, but too much could not be expected, as it was the first game of the season. The Palmer eleven played with true Yale dash and vim, and with more practice will make a hard team to beat. The center withstood all the onslaughts of the Monson backs, while the ends and tackles were not slow in getting down the field with the ball and downing the runner. The backs were not afforded the best of interference, and considering this fact made good gains. Phillips played the cleanest game for Monson, making their only touchdown in the last half on a blocked kick. Riley and A. Shaw scored the touchdowns for Palmer, and H. Shaw kicked a goal. The game was delayed several times on account of injuries to the players, which however, were only slight.

Coming Masonic Celebration.

Sunday, December 13th, will mark an important era in the history of Thomas Lodge of Masons, for on that day an even century will have rolled by since the lodge was granted its charter. The lodge has flourished remarkably well during the 100 years of its existence, and is now in a position to celebrate in a fitting way this important event, for which elaborate preparations are being made. As the anniversary falls upon Sunday, the celebration will take place on the following Tuesday, the 15th. A part of the programme has already been arranged, which includes afternoon exercises in the Congregational church, to which the public will be invited. There will be an address of welcome by the W. M. of the local lodge, with response by M. W. G. M. Edwin B Homes of Boston. A historical address will be given by O. P. Allen, and Rev. George C. Lorrimer, D. D., pastor of Tremont Temple, Boston, will also give an address. In the evening a banquet will be served in the opera house, and Past Master George Robinson will act as toastmaster.

Another Arrest for Illegal Liquor Selling.

Samuel Ferry was arrested Sunday evening for illegal liquor selling, being charged with a sale to A. E. Basteed on October 21st. He was arraigned Monday morning, pleaded not guilty, and the case was continued until 10 a. m. to-morrow, he furnishing $200 bail for his appearance. Ferry's arrest was an outcome of the cases tried last week, Basteed stating that he bought of Ferry in the Edmund House. During the trial one of the witnesses, Sullivan, testified that he bought whisky in the Edmund House of a man whose name he did not know, but who was called "Billy." It was supposed that this was William Manning, but when he came to be pointed out to Sullivan the latter stated that he was not the one of whom he purchased. Sullivan then went out and identified his "Billy" as James Donnelly. While the officers were after a warrant for him he hurriedly left town. Ferry also disappeared for a couple of days, and was arrested on his return Sunday night.

HIS RESIGNATION ACCEPTED.

Rev. Mr. Moulton to Go at Once to His New Pastorate.

A meeting of St. Paul's Universalist parish was held Tuesday evening, with a large number in attendance. W. W. Leach was chosen moderator. The resignation of the pastor, Rev. H. F. Moulton, was at once taken up for action. Several of the members of the parish feelingly spoke of his work and their regard and love for him and his family. As it was understood by the parish committee that the resignation would not be reconsidered, it was voted to accept the same, to take effect the first day of December. The following resolutions were unanimously accepted:

Our Pastor, Rev. H. F. Moulton, having been called to a larger field of labor, and having resigned our pastorate, we desire, in expression of our love and esteem, to adopt the following resolutions:

Resolved, that in Rev. H. F. Moulton we have found a true minister of God and of our Lord, Jesus Christ; that he has strengthened our Church, not only in numbers but also spiritually, and has so borne himself as to win the respect of the other churches in town and the community generally; that his pastorate has been pleasant as well as profitable, and with sorrow and reluctance do we look upon the severance of the formal ties binding us together, and we assure him (what he already knows) that he may always turn to his first pastorate and find a welcome here. May God bless him in his new field of labor.

Mr. Moulton will not preach again as pastor of St. Paul's church. In his letter of resignation he said:—

I shall preach no formal "farewell" sermon, I cannot. I shall speak no formal "good-byes," I cannot. My individual makeup is perhaps a little over sensitive to them. As a boy, when a friend would go away from my home, and as the "good-bye" was in order, I never could be found until the friend was well on his way home, then I would come out of my hiding place. I am still a child in this particular. I do not like to speak formal "good-byes" now, any better than I did then, so you must excuse me from such an ordeal.

Rev. Charles Conklin of Springfield, and one of the Universalist district missionaries of the state, will occupy the pulpit of the church next Sunday morning. The parish committee has already received several applications for the pastorate, but they have written to a young divine whom they wish the people to hear, and they hope that he will consent to be a candidate. In all probability a pastor will be selected within a few weeks, perhaps a month at the longest. This is the wish of the retiring pastor; in a letter to the parish he said: "I wish that you might secure my successor at once, and love him and work with him as you have with me."

Mr. Moulton is in the process of packing his household effects; he hopes to get moved before the cold of winter, and expects to go the first week of next month. His mother, Mrs. Lydia H. Moulton, will leave Saturday morning for Ware, where she will visit friends for a week, after which she and Mrs. H. F. Moulton will spend two weeks at the home of the latter's mother, Mrs. A. M. Smith.

Would Like Information.

Editor Journal:—In your issue of October 30th I find the following among the district court items:—

Thursday, William Sellick was found guilty of drunkenness and paid $5. When searched the night before, a pint bottle of whisky was found upon his person. After he was discharged he remained in the court room and finally asked for his property. He was told that the Court had no right to give it to him, and he went away feeling worse over losing his bottle than paying his fine of $5.

While I am in no way in sympathy with the liquor business, and agree that the retention of the bottle was without doubt a good thing, I should like to be informed if there is any authority for the action of the Court. Had it any more right to retain the bottle, which was evidently personal property, than it had to retain any other article of personal property which the man might have had about his person? A. R. F.

☞Investigation shows that after Sellick was discharged he asked Deputy Sheriff Studley, who arrested him, for the return of his bottle; the officer referred him to Judge Robinson. Sellick repeated his request to him, but he declined to make any ruling in the matter, holding that it did not come within his jurisdiction. Judge Robinson holds that an officer cannot in such cases return liquor taken from a person without rendering himself liable to prosecution for illegal selling, as the statute provides that "the delivery of intoxicating liquor in any place is prima facie evidence of a sale." In such a case however, the burden of proof would lie with the officer, to show that it was not a sale. Regarding the legal status of the matter, Judge Robinson is of the opinion that in cases like the above, if the claimant should establish ownership in the property it could not be withheld from him. It is understood that in the large cities, while the officers always keep such liquor from discharged prisoners, they admit they have no legal right to do so. [Ed.

The Town Owns the Bridge.

After an investigation into the matter, the Boston Duck Company has acknowledged that it has no ownership in the canal bridge which the selectmen proposed to move from Bondsville to the No. 2 mill at Thorndike, and has withdrawn its objection to the removal, and the bridge has been taken to its new location. Investigation proved that it was another bridge over the canal in which the company had partial ownership.

The factory of Woolrich & Co. is being wired for electric lights.

Mrs. Phetteplace will preach in the Advent chapel Sunday morning and evening.

A list of the new books recently added to the library will be found on the 4th page.

The King's Daughters met at the home of Mrs. W. H. Higgins on Park street this afternoon.

A delegation from Thomas Lodge of Masons visited Day Spring Lodge of Monson Tuesday evening.

Contractor Dillon has finished the short strip of sewer on Main street, from Walnut to Thorndike street.

Judge Robinson will render a decision in the liquor cases tried last week, to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

The physical culture class will meet in the vestry of the Congregational church hereafter, on Wednesday afternoons.

Rev. C. R. Minard will preach in the Baptist church Sunday morning upon the subject, "The man who lost his religion."

The types last week made a slight error in the amount which Charles Jones was fined for cider selling; the fine was $550 instead of $650.

The town clerks of the 1st Hampden representative district met in Palmer last Friday and canvassed the vote of the recent election.

The first snow of the season came last Saturday morning, though not enough to whiten the ground. In the eastern part of the state the fall was heavier.

All the schools of the town except the high school, closed this afternoon for a week's vacation. The high school scholars will have next Thursday and Friday only.

The special train on the New London Northern road to Willimantic Wednesday evening carried quite a number of Palmer people to the comic opera production, "Wang."

A union Thanksgiving service will be held in the Universalist church next Wednesday evening. Rev. C. R. Minard of the Baptist church will deliver the sermon.

The road scraper has been run over Main street, smoothing up the surface. Hollow spots have been filled with clay and gravel, and the surface put in as good condition as possible for the winter.

William Merriam, chairman of the board of overseers of the poor, has received the report of the state agent concerning the Palmer town farm, which states that it is A No. 1 in every respect.

Jason Palmer has recently purchased a large timber lot in Greenwich, and also two tie lots in Hardwick. He has placed a mill upon one of the lots in Hardwick and has already commenced clearing.

A number of the young friends of Miss Clara French gave her a surprise party at her home on Maple street Wednesday evening, the occasion being her birthday. A pleasant time was enjoyed by all.

A supper was given in the social rooms of the Universalist church Tuesday evening. At a business meeting which followed it was voted to hold the annual turkey supper and fair on Wednesday, December 9th.

Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Minnie E. Dunn of Monson to John F. Dawson, employed in LaSalle's barber shop, the ceremony to take place next Wednesday at 11 a. m. in St. Patrick's church, Monson.

The second lecture in the series to be given by the Tuesday Club will take place at the home of Mrs. E. G Hastings tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Miss Linda Hawley Brigham will speak on "Glimpses of the Old World."

The Odd Fellows are arranging a social dance for Thanksgiving evening in the opera house, for the entertainment of the young people who will be home for that day and will want to meet as many of their friends as possible.

A party of friends from Three Rivers called on Amos Olds at his home on School street Monday evening, and a neighborhood prayer meeting was held, which was greatly enjoyed by all. There were over 50 present, and 48 testimonies were given.

A hearing was held in the district court Monday morning regarding the liquors seized at Daniel Matteson's on the evening of October 28th, and those found in Strong's block the 29th. No one appeared to claim the stuff, and the cases were continued until to-morrow.

Miss L. H. Brigham gave a lecture last evening for the Guild of Holy Trinity church of New York city, her subject being "Days in Acadie." Miss Brigham lectured for the Guild last year, and in a large list of speakers was one of the only two asked to return this ye r.

The pastor of the Congregational church will speak Sunday morning on "Escaping a wasted life." In the evening he will speak on "A noble ideal and how to attain it." The Men's Sunday Evening Club has secured Mr. J. J. Eberhardt to assist in the musical part of the service, with cornet and autoharp.

The attraction at the opera house next week will be the "New Peck's Bad Boy," which will appear on Tuesday evening. It is announced that the play has been entirely rewritten and improved; the specialties are said to be bright and catchy, and the singing particularly strong. The tickets will be 50, 35 and 25 cents, and seats will go on sale to-morrow morning.

Hoodlumism evidently started in for a display of itself Sunday night, the top of the W. C. T. U. drinking fountain on Main street being found on the ground on the opposite side of the street Monday morning, the fence along the bank property on Church street being broken down and a sign or two missing from some of the stores, but no serious mischief was done.

Aatrea Rarallese, a "Dago" from the Monson quarry, was fined $5 in the district court Wednesday for larceny, and paid it from a wad as big as a man's fist For some time the Flynt Company has been missing tools, and this man had been suspected. This week he was preparing to leave for Italy, when his possessions were searched and a quantity of the missing tools found.

Work on the buildings of the epileptic hospital has progressed rapidly during the past few months. All the grading about the buildings was finished this week, and externally they are completed. The appliances for the steam heat have been put in and the plastering in two of the buildings is nearly completed. Contractor Dodge has discharged most of his large force of men.

The mains of the Palmer Water Company have been flushed out this week. As a rule the hydrants were found in good condition, but the one at the corner of Thordike and Park streets will have to be dug up. The water runs from it all right, but when shut off the water refuses to run off at the bottom, the drip-hole being closed by some substance, probably a root from an elm tree which grows close by.

Carlton A. Perry, son of Rev. E. A. Perry, formerly pastor of the Universalist church of this village, is president of the Republican club of Tufts College. In the great parade on the Friday evening before election he commanded the Tufts division of over 200 students of that college. His division received much credit for its fine marching and manly bearing. Portraits of Mr. Perry appeared in the Boston dailies, notably the Globe and Journal.

The figures which are given as a result of the month's weighing of the mail received at and sent out from the local post office, show something of the volume of business done there. Exclusive of the mail handled by the Southbridge stage line, 20,520 pounds were received and 16,411 pounds were sent out. This is an average receipt of about 684 pounds daily, and 547 sent out. About 100 pounds were received and 150 sent out daily on the stage line.

Mrs. Susan Hunt will have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the death of her daughter, Mrs. Anna Barlow, which occurred this morning of consumption, after an illness of four years. Mrs. Barlow was the last of five children, two others having died within a few years. When the first symptoms of the dread disease were discovered everything possible was done to overcome them, and the struggle has been a hard and unceasing one. Besides her mother, Mrs. Barlow leaves a husband and little girl.

The concert given in the opera house Tuesday evening by a company of blind people for the benefit of the Industrial School for the blind at Hartford, was well attended and much enjoyed by the audience. The music was of a high order; the singing of the male quartett, and the solos on the piano, violin and cornet by different members of the company were worthy of special mention. An interesting exhibition of work done by the blind in the school was given.

Clarence H. Heaton, 24, died last Friday evening of consumption, after a lingering illness at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Heaton of Blanchardville. He had but recently moved to this town from Brooklyn, and as at that time this disease had already fastened itself upon him, little opportunity was afforded him for becoming acquainted with many people, but he was well liked by all who knew him for his amiable disposition and uprightness of character. His body was taken to Brooklyn for burial Sunday evening.

George F. Taylor, a vagrant, was before the district court on Wednesday and was sent to assist on the state farm at Bridgewater for two years. Taylor was here about a year ago and was sentenced to a year. After being returned to the "cooler" he sent word and asked His Honor to make it 18 months, as 12 would bring his release in cold weather. His request was declined, but he was promised 24 months if he ever appeared in the local court again. He appeared Tuesday night at Hotel d'Allen, and in the morning refused to work, evidently fishing for that two years, which he got.

"Sunapee," part one in "The Lakes of New England" series, issued by the Lake Publishing Company and printed by C. B. Fiske & Co., is on sale at LeGro's and at Allen's. The work comprises over 40 pages, 9 by 11½ inches, of half-tones and letter press illustrative and descriptive of the various points of interest about Lake Sunapee, N. H., and was edited by William Young, the dramatist. The cover is of heavy embossed hand-made cardboard, tied with silk cord, the inside pages being on 100-lb paper. The work will be in demand by all who have ever visited that charming mountain-lake.

The cantata entitled "A Day in the woods" will be given by the children of St. Paul's Universalist Sunday school under the direction of Mrs. W. H. Small, next Tuesday evening, with a chorus of over 50 voices. Following is the cast:

Miss Clara Green spent Sunday at her home in Brimfield.

George Whitney of Norwich, Ct., has accepted a position as overseer of weaving in the Palmer Mill.

There will be preaching in the Baptist church next Sunday by E. A. Thomas at 10 45 a. m., also at 7 p. m.

Mrs. Ella Nutting, who has been spending a few weeks with relatives in this place, has gone to Monson for a few weeks.

THORNDIKE.

Peck's Bad Boy, Nov. 25, opera house, Palmer.

The rink will be open for skating as usual to-morrow evening.

Miss Katie Mayett of East Berkshire, Vt., formerly of this place, is visiting her grandmother.

Miss Nellie Flynn will leave to-morrow for Hartford, where she will spend a two-weeks' vacation with friends.

The benefit to Patrick Riley, the young man who is blind, which was given on Saturday evening, was well attended and a success.

Prof. Treadway of Westboro, who was to organize a class in dancing, has practically given the matter up, as there were not enough who were willing to join the class.

Daniel J. Sullivan, who has been acting as second-hand in the spooling and beaming rooms, has been promoted to the position of overseer by the resigning of Mr. L. E. Shuttleworth. His friends are pleased to learn of his advancement, and wish him every success in his new position.

Next Wednesday evening the Columbian band will give its annual concert and ball at Union Hall, which will no doubt be well patronized, as usual. Previous to the dance a concert will be given by the Holyoke Cadet Band orchestra, with the following programme:

March. "Phonograph"	Voelker
Overture. "Seeing the Elephant"	L. O. DeWitt
Clarinet Solo. "Blue Bells of Scotland"	W. Clements
	Felix Labrecque.
Waltz. "Wang"	W. Morse
Selection "Irish Artist"	L. O. DeWitt
Polka. "Entire Act"	F. W. Stimson

Two Accidents in One Day.

Patrick Hurley, Jr., who is employed in the dye house, met with a painful accident on Monday afternoon, his hand being caught between two rollers and bruised. The same day William Andrews, who is employed in the finishing room, had his hand caught in one of the machines.

Took Aconite by Mistake.

Mrs. Miller, wife of J. W. Miller, the coal dealer, met with an experience Tuesday morning which came near being fatal, and one which she will not care to repeat. She had been ill, and was taking medicine from a bottle which stood beside another containing aconite. Sometime during the morning Mrs. Miller took her medicine as usual, as she thought, but as it did not taste right she examined the bottle and discovered that she had by mistake taken aconite. With rare presence of mind she at once prepared an emetic of mustard water and salt, and took it in large draughts until the arrival of Dr. G. LaFountain, who attended her afterwards. Had the aconite been given about half an hour to work in the stomach, the result would no doubt have been fatal.

BONDSVILLE.

Peck's Bad Boy, Nov. 25, opera house, Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collis visited friends in Monson Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Lillian Kempton of Palmer visited Miss Florence Bond Saturday and Sunday.

Several from this place attended the chrysanthemum exhibition at Springfield this week.

Miss Agnes Carmody has returned to Amherst, after visiting with her parents a few days.

Mrs. A. L. Squier and son Donald of Amherst are visiting Mrs. Squier's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Ryther.

Miss Jennie Ross, who has been spending the fall with Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Smith, is visiting friends in Holyoke.

Butler Sedgwick has returned from a brief vacation which he has been spending in New Haven, Ct., and Brooklyn, N. Y.

While Thomas Cross, the barber, was chopping wood a short time ago, he was severely poisoned by coming into contact with dogwood, so that he was unable to do any work for a few days, but is now recovered and about business as usual.

The sidewalks which have been anticipated by the residents on the Belchertown side ever since last spring, have at last appeared. Workmen arrived Monday and will probably finish to-night. The walk is of concrete and is 4½ feet wide and about 700 feet long. The work is being done by L. C. Hill of Chicopee, and the contract price is 40 cents per square yard.

The entertainment and supper given by the Epworth League in the church vestry last Friday night was very successful. About 125 set down to supper, and the society cleared about $25. The entertainment was well rendered, and the shadow pantomimes of Messrs. Shaw, VanTassell and Ryther were very laughable. There was also music and reading, and recitations by Miss Murdock of Thorndike. Quite a number were present from Palmer and Thorndike.

Officer Collins had quite an exciting chase after the Polish couple he arrested last week. They managed to elude him here and took to the railroad track, going in the direction of Springfield. Mr. Collins procured a team and drove to Three Rivers, but they had already passed there, so he kept on to Collins, where he left the team and started up the track. He had only gone a little ways when on rounding a sharp bend in the road he met them face to face. They were very much surprised, but made no resistance and were soon on the way to Palmer, where they were locked up.

More Would-be Postmasters.

Two new candidates for post office honors have appeared in the field this week. Petitions are in circulation for Lewis R. Holden and Harry L. Ryther, both of them young Republicans, and either capable for the position.

THE war in Cuba has assumed a new aspect within a week, and affairs there are in a more unsettled state than ever. General Weyler, the commander of the Spanish troops, has been compelled by severe criticism at home to take the field in person, and is, or was at last accounts, in pursuit of Maceo, the insurgent leader, who was gradually falling back into the mountains and avoiding the pitched battle which Weyler was attempting to force. All the troops at Havana, Weyler's headquarters, have been ordered out to his support, and the city is practically unguarded. Gomez, Maceo's right-hand man, is in a position to attack the city, and it would not be surprising if he should give it his attention, though with the means at his command it is doubtful if he would accomplish much beyond hurrying Weyler back and relieving Maceo, if indeed the latter is in need of relief, which may be doubted in view of his demonstrated ability to do pretty much as he pleases in spite of the immense number of troops in the field against him. Weyler has not been officially heard from for several days, and with the strict surveillance kept over outgoing dispatches by the Spanish authorities, who will allow nothing unfavorable to them to go, it is difficult to tell just what the state of affairs is. There are rumors of Weyler's defeat by the Cubans, and also reports that he has been asked by the home government to resign. It would not be at all surprising if his present move should be the turning point of the struggle, with the odds in favor of the Cubans.

FROM all points come reports of the decline of the A. P. A. and the defeat of candidates backed by it. In Michigan, one of the strongholds of the order, its candidate for Congress was invited to stay at home by a most emphatic vote; Massachusetts' chief exhorter in this line was denied a third year in the Legislature by the sensible voters of Springfield; Chicopee turned down the A. P. A. candidates in the caucuses for city nominations last Friday, and now Springfield has decided that she has been dictated to by this unAmerican order long enough, and last night its delegates in the caucuses were given a severe 'frost." After a fruitless hunt for a candidate for mayor, the A. P. A's. went to the polls with a list of delegates for an unknown candidate, but were successful in only one ward, and that evidently by mistake. It is plainly evident that the order is on the wane; the end cannot come too soon.

IT IS hardly to be expected that I. B. Allen, the negro who has been elected to Gov. Wolcott's council from the fourth district, in Boston, will resign, as he is being asked to by many. Mr. Allen was legally elected, and as he is the first of his race to attain such honor in Massachusetts, proposes to keep what belongs to him. No one can blame him. The Republicans who nominated him in a district considered hopelessly Democratic simply to catch the vote of his countrymen, must swallow their chagrin and discomfiture and make the best of it. If the man's character is not of the best, as is claimed, they should have taken that into consideration before.

NO LITTLE interest is manifested in the decision to be given in the district court to-morrow morning concerning the illegal liquor cases tried last week. The evidence presented by the prosecuting committee was decidedly conclusive, and it is hard to see how conviction can be escaped in the majority of the cases.

A JEWISH rabbi of Cleveland, O., claims that President Cleveland exceeded his prerogatives of office in mentioning Christ in his Thanksgiving proclamation, which he says no other president ever did.

IT IS announced that the honor of carrying the electoral vote of Massachusetts to Washington is likely to go to William B. Plunkett of Adams.

THE state highway commission, it is said, will ask the next Legislature for $800,000 for roads. It ought to get it.

Death of Alpha Hatch.

Alpha Hatch, 95, died Sunday morning at the home of his son, Edward M. Hatch, at South Monson. He had been confined to his bed two weeks, and his death was due to old age. He was probably the town's oldest inhabitant.

Mr. Hatch was of sturdy New England stock, his grandparents being among the first settlers of Stratford, N. H., and his mother, Susan Brown Hatch, was the first white child born there. His father, Noah Hatch, was for two and a half years George Washington's hostler. Mr. Hatch was born in Stratford June 22d, 1801. He lived there until his marriage to Lucinda Marshall in 1823, when he removed to Northumberland, N. H., where he carried on a farm. Later the couple removed to Slaterville, Ct., where they resided a few years, then returned to Northumberland. Mrs. Hatch died there in 1855. He afterward married Eliza Swett, of Bethlehem, with whom he lived about 25 years. After Mrs. Hatch's death he went to Lancaster to live with his son William. When the latter died a year ago Mr. Hatch came to Monson. He was one of eight children, four sons and four daughters, all living from 60 to 80 years. By his first wife he had these children, Lovina, who died when 18, William W., George C. of North Conway, N. H., Mrs. Susan Ray of Woonsocket, R. I., Mrs. Mary Bennett of Providence, who is twin to Edward M., Horace of Randolph, and Roswell and Sarah, who are dead. Mr. Hatch was deaf and his eyesight had failed considerably, but he was interested in all topics of the day. Since Lincoln's time he had been a strong Republican, and when told of McKinley's election said to his son: "You will live to see the good times which are surely coming, but I shall not." He was a good story teller, and recalled many incidents of the war of 1812, and of the country's growth since that time. On his last birthday a family party was given in his honor, and a photograph was taken in which four generations were represented. The funeral was held Tuesday, Rev. Harry Blackford officiating. The burial was in the Center cemetery. Mr. Hatch was not a church member, but inclined toward the Baptist faith. His motto was, "Let and let live: the black man as well as the white man."

Leg Broken by a Falling Tree.

Francis Hughes has a broken leg, the result of an accident while chopping down a tree. The tree fell part way to the ground and lodged. In starting it Mr. Hughes was near enough to become entangled in it, and it fell across his leg, pinning it between the tree and a stone. Dr. Fuller attended him.

Miss Letha Potter is spending the week in Springfield.

Mrs. C H. Bruce left Monday for her new home in Lexington.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Norcross, who have been ill, are improving.

Mrs. L. W. Wood, president of the Woman's Relief Corps, is ill.

Lewis W. Dunton of Spencer has been the guest of J. S. R. Coy this week.

Contractor Julius N. Graves has built a storm porch over the post office entrance.

The Ladies' Circle of the Universalist church served a chicken-pie supper Wednesday evening.

Edward Cantwell is about to build a house on his Pearl street lot. Frank Maguire has the contract.

Dr. G. E. Fuller has been reappointed aid-de-camp to National Commander Clarkson of the Grand Army.

Rev. Harry Blackford will preach Sunday in the Universalist church on "Thanksgiving."

E. J. Fosket has the frame up for a pretty dwelling on the corner of North Main street and Belmont avenue.

Rev. W. H. Marble will preach in the West Warren Methodist church Sunday in exchange with Rev. Mr. Porter.

J. S. R. Coy's organ recital at the Congregational church Tuesday evening was listened to by a large audience, and with much pleasure.

The sociable at the Congregational church last Friday evening was very enjoyable. The Misses Dunton of Worcester gave a pleasing entertainment.

Harry Rheims is the new superintendent at Cushman's brick mill. He has moved his family into the tenement occupied by the former superintendent, James Stott.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Maggie Foley and William Hughes; also for the wedding of Miss Minnie Dunn and John Dawson of Palmer. Both marriages will take place at St. Patrick's church.

Miss Acksah Beardsley of Somers spent yesterday at Horace Squiers'. Miss Beardsley was one of the first women employed by Merrick, Fay & Co. in the manufacture of straw goods some 60 years ago, and worked there about 35 years.

Monson relatives of James Herlihy of Valley Forge, R. I., have received cards for his marriage, next Wednesday, to Miss Anna Louise Pryor. Mr. Herlihy is a native of Monson, and is a brother of Postmaster John P. Herlihy, Jr.

Artist Peterson has recently painted a portrait of the late William N. Flynt which has been presented by the Flynt family to the Academy, and has been hung in the chapel. Mr. Peterson has gone to North Adams for two or three weeks; his family are at the Century Hotel during his absence.

Rev. James Tufts paid the Academy a visit Monday for the first time since he was assaulted, addressing the students in the chapel. In speaking of his close intimacy with the school since 1852 he said that probably there had not been more than a half dozen pupils in the school with whom he had not been acquainted.

A demonstration of the wonderful X-rays will be given next week in Keeney's building on Main street by Messrs. Taggart & Lawrence, who come with the highest recommendations for successfully demonstrating this wonderful unknown quanity. They were at Palmer last week, where universal satisfaction was given their patrons.

The Epworth League of the Methodist church held a business meeting Monday morning at which reports were given of the work of the various departments. The plan of making birthday offerings for missions was adopted, the record to be kept in a birthday book. It was voted that one-tenth of the income should be used by the mercy and help department.

A large party of Monson people attended the wedding of Miss Anna Billings Converse and Louis Howland Perrin in Springfield Wednesday evening, including the bride's brother, Cyrus H. Converse, class of '97, Monson Academy, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Flynt, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Flynt, Mrs. W. N. Flynt, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Cushman, Miss Esther R. Holmes, Miss Mabelle L. Anderson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. S. Hatch. The bride was a graduate of the Academy, class of '93.

There was an audience of good size at the Academy chapel last Saturday afternoon to listen to Miss Twitchell, principal of the normal kindergarten in Springfield. Considerable interest was shown in the subject, "Kindergartens." Miss Twitchell began by giving a sketch of Froebel's life, then an account of the formation of the first kindergarten with Froebel as teacher. As the plan of the modern kindergarten is a mystery to many, a portion of the time was used in explaining the work. Mothers know that the children are amused and entertained, but they do not always realize the educational benefit to be derived. The child has a threefold nature, the physical, the mental, and the spiritual. In the kindergarten a conscientious effort is made to develop this three-fold nature, and it is the only educational institution which has this work in view. In every song, story, or play there is a plan to develop the active body, the unfolding mind, and the character of the child. At the close of the lecture an opportunity was given for questions, and every moment was occupied. Another meeting was appointed for Saturday, Nov. 21, but as the hall cannot be used at that time, the day has been changed to Monday, Nov. 23, at 4 p. m. All who are interested in kindergartens are cordially invited to be present.

The senior class of the Academy is arranging a course of entertainments similar to that of last year's class, to be given in Memorial Hall this winter. There are to be five numbers: Dec 4, The Unity Company of Boston—Mr. Walter S Cotton, violinist, Mr. Hoyt L Conary, reciter; Jan. 15, Prof. Hibbard, miscellaneous readings; Jan. 29, Miss Mary Proctor, stereopticon lecture on astronomy; Feb 19, Tremont Male Quartette of Boston, with Miss Elvie Burnett, reader; March 12, Chas. F. Underhill, monologue impersonation of Dickens', "David Copperfield." The price of course tickets, with reserved seats, is to be $1.25.

LUDLOW CENTER.

The Ladies' Aid Socity has reorganized with the following officers: President, Mrs. L. E. Booth; vice president, Mrs. F. Towne; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. A. A. Gove; chairman of directors, Mrs. L B. Joy.

Mrs. Amanda R. Hubbard of Ludlow and John J. Overing of Belchertown were married at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. John Hobzson, on Wednesday of last week. Rev. A. J. Quick performed the ceremony.

HAMPDEN.

Mrs. William Johnson gathered ox-eye daisies in full bloom last Friday.

F. L. Parsons and wife of Johnstown, Pa., are the guests of Rev. N. L. Parsons.

Mathias Casey, who has bought the William Spellman property, will take possesion Oct. 1st, and has the lumber ready for a new barn, which he will erect at once.

Quite a number of Hampden people are to spend the winter out of town: Mrs. Anna Leonard with relatives in the West, Mrs. Sheldon and Mrs. Spaulding in New Jersey, Mrs. Stoddard in Hebron, Ct., Mrs. William Chaffee at Chicopee Falls, Mrs. Gideon Day and daughter Stella have gone to Kingston, Canada, and Mrs. Marcus Beebe goes to Boston.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. P. M. Brigham of Worcester is visiting her father, Capt. A. S. Wall.

J. M. Perry and family will spend the Thanksgiving season with friends in Boston.

Charles N. Gabb of Northampton was in town Sunday, the guest of Miss Nellie M. Morgan of East Wilbraham.

The North Wilbraham patrons of the post office have no cause for complaint that there are not candidates enough for the office of postmaster here, should a vacancy occur, there being up to this writing four candidates in the field.

The Advent church at East Wilbraham and a barn belonging to Thomas Marshall came very near being destroyed by fire Sunday. A brush fire raged in the vicinity, and only by the prompt action of the residents of that part of the town was prevented from reaching these buildings.

Deputy Sheriff Studley of Palmer has sent a warrant to Worcester for John Lyons, alias James Johnson, the horse thief who was captured at Hampden last week, for his arrest for stealing a horse a few years ago from Frank Rindge, of this place. In the event of the evidence in the Worcester case not being strong enough to hold him, this will be brought against the fellow.

WEST WARREN.

John J. Shaw has sold his apples to parties from Huntington.

One of our townsmen was fined last week for driving over the unfinished state road.

Mrs. L. M. Moore of Hartford has returned home from a visit with Miss D. P. Johnson.

Mrs. A. Pierce and Frank L. Barnard of Saugus have been visiting Miss Dolly Johnson.

The young men are getting ready for a football game Thanksgiving Day on Crossman's lawn.

Mr. M. J. Sullivan gives another recital of his piano pupils at the No. 3 boarding house this evening.

Found Dead in Bed.

James Chapman, 78, was found dead in bed Monday, heart disease evidently being the cause. Mr. Chapman was a remarkably vigorous man, working as usual the Saturbefore his death. He was a native of Scotland, but had been in this country a number of years. He leaves 7 children, 39 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren. His wife's death occured three years ago under precisely similar circumstances.

Successful Liquor Raid.

Officers raided the hotel Saturday night, and after a two-hours, search captured a considerable amount of whisky and beer. The stuff was found under the floor of the closet. The place was raided two weeks ago and a jug of whisky and a case of beer were found in the rooms of two of the boarders. John Paraso claimed the whisky and Judge Tyler ordered it returned; the beer was claimed by a drug clerk in E. M. Johnson's store, but his story was not satisfactory, and the beer was confiscated.

WILBRAHAM.

The public schools closed to-day for a Thanksgiving vacation of one week.

The Ladies' Society met yesterday afternoon and evening with Mrs. C. L. Hubbard.

James Merrick is building a two-story addition to the ell of his house for cold storage.

There will be two schools in No. 4 schoolhouse hereafter, and the building will be remodeled accordingly next week.

The ladies of the M. E. church held a social at the home of Rev. Nathaniel Merrill Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Rev. Mr. Tenney of the Mass. Total Abstinence League has canvassed the schools this week to obtain the signatures of pupils to the pledge.

Mr. and Mrs. James Phelps started for Ashville, N. C., Monday. Mr. Phelps has been superintendent of the Sunday school for nearly three years, and will be very much missed.

Union services were held in the Methodist church Monday evening, at which Miss Danforth, a returned missionary from Japan, the guest of Mrs. Fayette Nichols, gave an address upon "Missionary work among the Japanese," where she lived for five years.

Rev. W. R. Newhall, principal of Wesleyan Academy, will preach in the First Congregational church next Sunday in the absence of the pastor, Rev. M. S. Howard, who has been invited to South Yarmouth to commemorate the 40th anniversary of his ordination and installation.

Newton lodge of Masons was visited Wednesday evening by District Deputy E. A. Blodgett of Springfield, accompanied by S. D. Sherwood, C. F. Cooper and A. D. Otto. The Master Mason degree was worked, and the visiting delegation highly complimented the local lodge on the proficiency shown. Refreshments were served, and speeches made by Principal Newhall of the Academy, and others. The Springfield guests were entertained during the afternoon at the home of C. E. Peck, Grand Lecturer of the Grand Lodge.

WALES.

Town Painted Red.

The non-partisan sound-money element of Wales celebrated the election of McKinley and Hobart on Saturday night. Such a parade was never known within the memory of the oldest inhabitants. The parade was led by mounted horsemen, of which Alonzo Jones was captain, mounted on a large silver mare and tailed steed, and dressed in full military uniform. Following the horsemen was the Fiskdale Brass Band, furnishing music which was well appreciated; then came 200 torches, followed by 500 people. The parade marched through the entire village. The houses were nearly all well lighted with candles. Among those who decorated to add to the beauty were: Fred Royce, store lighted with Chinese lanterns; the residences of Orlando P. Smith, LeRoy Squier and Deacon Needham were lighted with Chinese lanterns in artistic style and made an excellent show; Rev. G. W. Davis, who has rooms in the hotel, illumined them; A. A. Hubbard had his home trimmed with bunting and old-gold, which showed off to good advantage; Mrs. W. Green and Miss Rose Bailey made a tableaux of two little girls which was very beautiful; Mr. Coy's home was well lighted, and banner made by his daughter were displayed in the windows; H. E Shaw had his piazza well decorated with Chinese lanterns in festoons; W. H. Lathrop had a banner made of McKinley's picture in a large frame; the stores of W. A. Lyon & Co., and W. Chamberlain & Co. were well lighted with candles, with festoons of bunting in the windows; the home of H. A. McFarland was well lighted, and in the windows were pictures of McKinley and Wolcott, with gold and sound money mottos, while in the front yard was a banner with the names of McKinley and Hobart, Wolcott and Crane in letters tinted in gilt; Mrs. Kline decorated her piazza and showed her usual interest in politics; the "what-you-call-it" band from Monson, consisting of fifteen members well equipped with horns, assisted in making lots of noise and furnished a good deal of fun. The large gilt rooster furnished by Mr. James Gill of Springfield was a very noticeable object in the procession. After the march a large lot of fireworks were displayed and a band concert given, in which the Monson horned band took a prominent part. The exercises were closed with display of red fire.

WARREN.

Mr. and Mrs. Shumway spent last Sabbath in Brockton.

The Tuesday Club met with Miss Cutler Tuesday afternoon.

The Brookfield Medical Association met at Hotel Ramsdell Wednesday.

The whist club met with the Misses Holman on Quaboag street Monday evening.

Mrs. J. W. Chadsey and Miss Chadsey have been spending the week in Boston and vicinity.

Extensive preparations are being made for the presentation of the cantata of "Esther" next week.

The Ladies' Circle of the Universalist church met with Mrs. Charles Blair Thursday afternoon.

The funeral of Mr. Farnsworth, formerly a pattern maker for the Slater Engine Co., was held at Fitchburg Wednesday.

F. H. Moore closed out his stock at auction Thursday morning, and will leave soon for Florida, where he will spend the winter.

Miss Laura Blair entertained a party of fourteen last week, all of whom were schoolmates of hers in the "Old red schoolhouse."

The silver trowel used at the dedication of the corner stone of St. Paul's Catholic church has been presented to Dr. Dalton, as the largest donor.

The wedding ceremony of Mr. Thomas Cronin and Miss Johanna Moyanhan was performed by Father Leonard at his home Wednesday afternoon.

A union service of the Brookfield, West Brookfield and Warren churches was held in the Congregational church at West Brookfield Tuesday evening.

A large number attended the first entertainment of the Spencer lecture course Monday evening. It was given by the Jessie Conthoni concert company, and was very pleasing.

A large audience attended the union service in the town hall Sunday evening. Rev. A. R. Nichols spoke first, giving a comprehensive history of the religious fanaticism of the Turks. He was followed by Rev. W. B. Forbush, who made a strong plea in behalf of the protection of our missionary interests; and finally, Rev. T. A. Fisher pleaded earnestly that our national honor be protected by demanding redress for losses sustained by American citizens residing in Turkey. About $50 was received for the relief fund.

Electric Road to be Extended to West Warren.

It is understood that the Warren, Brookfield and Spencer electric road will soon be extended to West Warren, in accordance with the agreement made with the selectmen last summer in return for the privilege of laying rails in this town. The estimated expense will be $18,000, and the contract provides for a power-house and electric plant at West Warren, to give the extra power which will be necessary.

BELCHERTOWN.

The Center, high, grammer and primary schools and the district schools closed today.

Adjutant W. A. Snow of E J. Griggs post has lately been appointed an inspection officer.

The weight of the mails at the post office for the thirty days required were: Mails sent out, 1983 pounds; received, 3320 pounds.

About 50 young people enjoyed a dance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thayer in Union district Thursday evening of last week.

The Belchertown creamery report shows 19,879 pounds of butter for the month of September, and 20,569 for the month of October.

The annual meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E will be held this evening at the chapel. Reports will be read and officers for the coming year will be elected, followed by a sociable with a collation.

The harvest home concert by the Methodist Sunday school was largely attended Sunday evening, and the exercises were of much merit. The singing by the trio of little girls deserves special mention.

Misses Grace and Edith Towne gave a very enjoyable chicken-pie supper in honor of eight of the teachers of the public schools Tuesday evening. Among the guests were C. A. Guild, J. A. Lane, Miss Whelan, Miss Allen, Miss Shaw, Miss Smith and Miss Hawkes.

A special meeting of the social circle of the Congregational church was held Monday evening for the purpose of filling vacancies caused by the resignation of officers. Miss Lydia A. Barton was appointed president and Mrs. A. L. Kendall and Mrs. Spencer vice presidents.

Mrs. S. A. Dunbar, Mrs. L. A. Davis, Mrs. Fannie Gleason, Mrs. G. H. Lowell, Mrs. M. A. Plaintiff, Mrs. Katie Smith, Mrs. F. G. Shaw, Mrs. H. C. West and Mrs. M. M. Whitmarsh have been appointed a committee by E. J. Griggs Relief Corps to canvass Belchertown and Granby for the names of veteran soldiers or sailors now living within their limits. The object of this is to secure the names and rank of veterans now residing in this territory.

Cows Poisoned.

Two cows belonging to Miss Foley, who lives north of the village, were poisoned this week. The loss to Miss Foley and her family is considerable, as she has no cows remaining.

Sons of Veterans Camp Organized.

At a meeting held Monday evening in Grand Army hall for the purpose of organizing a camp of the Sons of Veterans, the following officers were elected: Captain, George H. Draper; first lieutenant, O. B. Davis; second lieutenant, C. J. Shaw; camp council, H. R. Gould, B. W. Fellows, C. H. Goodwin. Officers appointed by the captain: First sergeant, A. H. Cutting; quartermaster sergeant J. H. Gould; color sergeant, William Shaw; sergeant of guard, William Thompson; musician, Paul Shumway; corporal of guard, William Chamberlain; camp guard, Thomas Condon; picket guard, H. N. Chamberlain. Another meeting was held Wednesday evening at Grand Army hall.

Hunting for a Snake in His Stomach with "X" Rays

John R. Bardwell, a Belchertown farmer living in the Holyoke district, went to the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston Tuesday with the hope that the "X" rays would disclose the identity of some foreign substance in his stomach, which has bothered him since last August. While drinking from a spring he drew something into his mouth that slipped down his throat before he could prevent it. At the time he feared that he had swallowed some live object, and told his wife so when he reached home. For some weeks no bad results followed, although he was sensible that there was something foreign in his stomach, but for the past five or six weeks the commotion has steadily increased until it has become very uncomfortable. He claims that he can feel whatever it may be come up his throat, and if asleep it wakes him. He obtains relief by drinking salt and water, and has no doubt but that he swallowed either a small snake or lizard.

WARE.

Arthur Riendeau, on whom an operation for appendicitis was performed, died Tuesday night.

George Jaques is to have a winter job plumbing in Atlanta, Ga., and expects to start soon.

The Blue Ribbon League is to have a mock trial early next month. There has been an average attendance at the rooms of 17 since July. The rooms are open every evening, and all are invited to come in.

Mrs. Hattie A. Livingstone, 28, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Hinckley, died at the home of her parents Thursday morning. She leaves a little boy three or four years old. The funeral is to be to-morrow at 9 o'clock, and the interment will be at South Hadley.

The Dramatic and Musical Club is to present the French play, "Les Brigands de Franconie," for the benefit of the Canadien Circle, St. Jean Baptist Society, at the town hall on Friday evening, Dec. 4th. Tickets are to be on sale at the store of J. H. Beauvais on Friday, Nov. 57th.

John H. Storrs is to give a banquet to the firemen to-morrow evening, as has been his custom for the past few years, and a number of business men, together with the town officials, are invited to be present. The banquet is to be served at the Mansion House and at the Storrs House, as the number is too large for one hotel to take care of. Mr. Storrs and his invited guests are to be at the Mansion House. These occasions are always enjoyed and greatly appreciated, and if a fire ever starts in Mr. Storrs's property he may be sure that the best work of the fire department will be at his service.

The great attraction this week has been the "World's Fair in Miniature" at the town hall, and a more beautiful exhibit has never been seen in Ware or this part of the country. Twenty-four of our tradesmen and merchants have had booths fitted up in the hall and most tastefully decorated wherein to show their wares. A column for each one could no more than do them justice, but space will not permit; they were all most excellent. Coffee, tea, cocoa, beef tea and grape juice were dispensed free, and many artistic and useful souvenirs were given away. While we may not mention all, we think no one will feel jealous if we take note of that of J. B Sibley & Son, hardware and tools, for they had no doubt spent ten times as much time preparing their exhibit as any other. The exhibit was open two afternoons and three evenings, with entertainments each evening. The last afternoon and evening each visitor was asked to deposit a vote for the four most artistically arranged booths, and the results will appear in the STANDARD of next week. The exhibit was gotten up under the auspices of the Methodist society, and will net them a handsome sum; $90 was taken the first evening for admissions. The total admissions amount to about $250.

Narrow Escape from Death by Coal Gas.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cahill and little daughter Gertrude, narrowly escaped death by suffocation from coal gas Tuesday night. On retiring the covers of the stove were left partly open, a common practice with many people, in order that the fire might die out. Mrs. Cahill slept with her child, who was restless that night, and Mr. Cahill slept in another room. Soon after 1 o'clock he heard a noise in the kitchen, and on investigating found his wife and child partly unconscious on the floor. He got them back into bed and finally discovered the source of the trouble. He closed the stove and opened all the windows, but all were so affected by the gas that no one could go for assistance, and it was after 5 o'clock before Dr. Spencer was called. All have now nearly recovered, but Mrs. Cahill was badly bruised by several falls.

Indigestive poisons are the bane of the dyspeptic's life. When sick, see if your sickness is caused by indigestive poison. If so take Shaker Digestive Cordial. This is the only certain way of being permanently cured, because it is the only way that gets rid of the poisons. You know that fermented food is poisonous. You know that poison is unhealthy. Shaker Digestive Cordial clears the stomach of fermenting food, and purifies the blood and system of indigestive poisons. It cures indigestion and the diseases that come of it. Headache, dizziness, nausea, stomachache, weakness, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, irritability, etc. These are a few of the symptoms, caused by indigestive poisons, cured by Shaker Digestive Cordial.

At druggists, price 10 cents to $1.00 per bottle.

The wife of Mr. Leonard Wells, of East Brimfield, Mass., had been suffering from neuralgia for two days, not being able to sleep or hardly keep still, when Mr. Holden, the merchant there, sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and asked that she give it a thorough trial. On meeting Mr. Wells the next day he was told that she was all right, the pain had left her within two hours, and that the bottle of Pain Balm was worth $5 00 if it could not be had for less. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

It doesn't make any difference how many shoe stores open along the street, Broadhurst Bros. shoe store is always filled with patrons. It is the one reliable shoe store of Springfield that hasn't changed its location or number—376 Main Street, in thirty years of successful business.

LIKE OLD FOLKS

Little Tots Want Coffee for Breakfast.

"Please let me have a little cup of coffee to break my doughnuts in—you have it, and why can't I?" It is hard to refuse the cute little folks, even when we know the coffee and tea are injurious beyond a doubt, for hot coffee and sweet bread and butter or doughnuts taste so good for breakfast. A physician has discovered a method for preparing grains so as to produce a beautiful drink, an exact fac-simile of the finest Mocha coffee and fattening and nourishing. It fits a place with weak stomachs and for the little folks' "coffee." The coffee habit can be dismissed instantly when the new food drink is used in its place, and health is assured because of the fact that it is made only of pure and wholesome grains. "It make, red blood" is the motto, and Postum is the name. Grocers sell it and it is made by the Postum Cereal Co., Limited, Battle Creek, Mich.

A reliable grocer will never offer a cheap or weak imitation of a genuine original artical because he happens to make a little extra profit. But it is well to observe that when genuine Postum Cereal coffee is ordered, that you get Postum and not a spurious imitation offered as "just as good."

Dangers in Food Supplies.

A lecturer on cooking the other day made the surprising statement that the asylums are being filled with country people in much greater proportions than city people, mainly because they were more careless in regard to their food. While a diet of fat meats may be more characteristic of people living in rural districts, there are other dangers just as insidious to which the residents of the big cities are subject. Scientific research is every day emphasizing the fact that man is what he eats.

Probably there have been no more active advocates of pure food then the manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder. The vigorous campaign against adulterations carried on by them was no doubt due in a large part to the fact that in scarcely any other division of food supplies are harmful ingredients used lavishly as in the compounding of baking powder. The absolute purity of the Royal has become in the nature of an axiom, and its proprietors are naturally disposed to spread broadcast the doctrine of pure food. It has been claimed without contradiction, that no other article of human food has ever received so many emphatic endorsements from the highest authorities.—Journal of Health.

The Ideal Panacea.

James L. Francis, Alderman, Chicago, says: "I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as an ideal panacea for coughs, colds and lung complaints, having used it in my family for the last five years, to the exclusion of physician's prescriptions or other preparations."

Rev. John Burgus, Keokuk, Iowa, writes: "I have been a minister of the Methodist church for 50 years or more, and have never found so beneficial, or that gave me such speedy relief as Dr. King's New Discovery." Try this ideal cough remedy now. Trial bottles free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

HOW TO PREVENT CROUP.

SOME READING THAT WILL PROVE INTERESTING TO YOUNG MOTHERS. HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THE DISEASE.

Croup is a terror to young mothers, and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy, for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Good advice: Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

REACHES THE HUB.

The Little Conqueror Comes to Boston. People Are Becoming Enthusiastic.

(From the Boston Globe.)

When the welfare of the public is at stake our citizens are interested. The little conqueror has come and conquered. Boston has proven no exception to the rule; everything is swept before the onward march. Enthusiastic people are talking about their experience. Many a reader of this knows where the photographic studio of Mr. C. H. Foster is, at 28 Hanover street, and no doubt a number know Mr. Foster personally—a Bostonian for 35 years, and a man whose statement should satisfy the skeptic. This is how he speaks of his case. To our representative he said: "About 15 years ago I was a very sick man with diabetes. That is what the doctors called it. They told me I would not live for many years, and advised salt water air at the seashore as the only thing that could be done for me. This appeared to help me, but for the last ten years I have suffered excessively from most distressing pains across my kidneys, which were constantly there, until I began to take DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS, and they have relieved my suffering to the extent I hardly expected would ever be my lot. I had backache so bad at times it required almost superhuman energy to keep up. There was a dull, heavy, indescribable sensation in my head. My appetite was irregular, utterly failing me at times. My work taxed me and made my backache worse. Then I read about Doan's Kidney Pills. I was suffering greatly at the time, and decided to try them. I got a box at Knight's pharmacy, 97 Court street, and commenced taking them. After the first few days I knew they were doing me good, and as I continued the backache disappeared and rapidly improved. The backache left me, and I no longer experience former suffering. My head is clear, and I feel brighter. The urine used to contain a heavy sediment. Doan's Kidney Pills have restored it to a normal condition. I feel to-day a hundred per cent better than in years. I regard my case as being really wonderful, and if my recommendation of Doan's Kidney Pills will induce sufferers from kidney disorders to try them I gladly authorize you to use it."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box, or sent by mail on receipt of price. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Old Red Hoss Mountain.

I've been to Red Hoss mountain, where Field once dwelt and wrote;
I've seen the Place de Casey, but Casey's tabble ote
Is gone; and so is Casey. A solitary pine
The fires have spared now shadows the Gosh-all Hemlock mine.

There's not a cabin standing, so that a man may say,
"The conversazzhony in this abode held sway."
Aye, everything has perished save earth and sky and space;
The bard of Red Hoss mountain is gone to his own place.

The trees that made the forest have fallen one by one,
Until old Red Hoss mountain lies bare beneath the sun;
Yet, in the death-like stillness that hangs upon the air,
I love to sit and fancy I feel his presence there.

The mines are all abandoned, the rain-washed trails are dim;
But where are all the people who tramped these trails with him?
And where are all the actors he staged here long ago,
When magpies, "like winged shadows, were floating to and fro?"

Sweet soul! he knew a heartache if e'en a robin cried,
Then how he must have sorrowed when Martha's baby died;
When strong, rough men stood weeping who had not wept for years;
With Martha's heart nigh breaking and Sorry Tom in tears.

The brook that sang so "lonesome-like, an' loitered on its way,"
Is singing just as softly and lonesome-like to-day.
One pine above the Hemlock and just one willow weeps
Down in the ragged canyon where "Martha's younket" sleeps.

Nerves

Are the Messengers of Sense,—the Telegraph System of the human body.

Nerves extend from the brain to every part of the body and reach every organ.

Nerves are like fire—good servants but hard masters.

Nerves are fed by the blood and are therefore like it in character.

Nerves will be weak and exhausted if the blood is thin, pale and impure.

Nerves will surely be strong and steady if the blood is rich, red and vigorous.

Nerves find a true friend in Hood's Sarsaparilla because it makes rich, red blood.

Nerves do their work naturally and well,—the brain is unclouded, there are no neuralgic pains, appetite and digestion are good, when you take

OLD DR. SWEET IN SPRINGFIELD.

The Eminent Natural Bone Surgeon, Herbal Physician and New England's Most Noted Medical Expert Has Arrived.

18 VERNON STREET, - - SPRINGFIELD.

DR. J. EDWARD RAY, Assistant.

1636——Family Medical History——1896.

Nine unbroken generations have given to the world a Great Natural healer, Old Dr. Sweet now here. Stands among the leaders in medicine in America. Founder, Editor and Proprietor of late Health and Home, Boston, also Old Dr. Sweet's Family Medical Journal, Springfield. Have you received a copy? Orders by mail from every state in the Union. If not, send for one at once. Worth its weight in gold. Another edition of 50,000 copies ordered.

Have you noticed what our New England History has to say of his remarkable family and of this remarkable man? Have you read the combined opinions of the New England dailies of this wonderfully gifted Natural Healer? Have you read the aggregated opinions of the great Boston dailies of the professional standing of Old Dr. Sweet and of his great cures? No other specialist in New England thus honored. Is this not ample proof of his perfect reliability and great skill?

Have you read in Dr. Sweet's Medical Journal—now being furnished free to families—the Grateful Testimony of Distinguished Patients—not a case but had been abandoned as incurable?

READ THEM ALL! READ THEM ALL!

If not, why not? You want the best and surest, don't you? Speedy cure means speedy money, does it not? It means raiment, food and shelter for wife and the little ones for the forthcoming winter, does it not? To furnish the invalid public for the cure of the lame and those afflicted with obscure Chronic Diseases, the most efficient and best equipped private infirmary in Western Massachusetts, Dr. Sweet's Sanitarium, 18 Vernon Street, has been established and to further this end, the distinguished Dr. J. Edward Ray, graduate of Harvard University, has been engaged as assistant. Do you fully comprehend the vast superiority of infirmary treatment as against office or family methods? It must be borne in mind that although one of the great natural bonesetters of Rhode Island, Dr. Sweet is the only member of the famous Sweet family who cures Obscure Chronic Diseases with equal certainty as he does lameness or the setting of a dislocated bone or joint. None but the best, is his motto. Watch his institution grow. An expensive apparatus for the illumination of the cavities of the human body by electricity to be put in this week. Next month the famous X Ray machine goes in. No institution in New England so fully equipped as this one. His family reputation is a safe guarantee for the sick and suffering. Get ready against winter. Examine his methods for the cure of Head, Throat and Lung Complaints, also all types of Lameness and Obscure Chronic Diseases. Ladies shopping at Messrs. Forbes & Wallace's, leaving by Vernon street entrance, will find easy access to Dr. Sweet's offices. Secure a Free Copy of Family Journal without delay. All News Dealers have them to give away. Send address of invalid friends. Hours, from 9 to 8; Sunday 9 to 6. CONSULTATION FREE.

An Old Thanksgiving Day.

In my bachelor apartments, lonely and alone I sit,
With my feet upon the table, and my pipe well filled and lit;
And I'm dreaming, dreaming, dreaming, as I blow the smoke away,
Of the dear old home, and how it looked on each Thanksgiving day.

I can see it as it stood there, on that little village street,
Half hidden by the branches, unassuming, plain, and neat.

Ah! that was home, my childhood home, where mother's loving face
Lent sunshine to our childish hearts and filled the dear old place
With brightness that was heaven born, for love was ever there,
And happiness I've ne'er since known, was breathed upon the air,
And dreaming now, I listen in a half unconscious way,
For voices now as silent as that old Thanksgiving day.

In this hazy, smoky dreamland, is a pleasure, sweet and sad,
For I live again those happy days, when I was but a lad.
And we gathered 'round that table, where the roasted turkey lay,
Not one of us was absent on that old Thanksgiving day,
Ah! How tempting looked that turkey, as my father, after grace,
Heaped each plate, and passed it, smiling on each eager up-turned face.

I can hear the tuneful jingle of those large, old-style sleigh bells,
And the merry shout and laughter, as it joyously now swells,
From a score of happy children, in the crisp November air,
And I see myself, too, shouting with the other children there.
Ah! I'm dreaming, only dreaming, and the smoke has cleared away,
T'was a vision of a well-remembered old Thanksgiving day.

WAGE EARNING WOMEN.

Concerning the complaint of men that women "are taking the bread out of their mouths," there was a time when a woman left to support a family could make a living by tailoring, cooking, plain sewing, washing and ironing, keeping house for wages, or by copying papers for lawyers. But men have set up tailor shops and factories for ready made clothing; built steam laundries; invented the clubs and its luxuries for wealthy bachelors who might want housekeepers; hired men as cooks and waiters, and invented the typewriter. When women found themselves crowded out of these lines by the advance of invention they turned to the man and asked all sorts of work, taking what they could get—doing men's work and getting a woman's pay for it.

It is noticeable, too, that girls rarely work for themselves alone; there is usually an old or an invalid mother, a father unable to work, or younger brother and sister. And as for older women who work, there is so often a lazy or a bad man to blame that men would better not look too closely into the matter if they wish to state so strongly that women work simply to get men out of work. As for young women not marrying now that they work for a living, that is a good remark of the young woman in the treasury department at Washington: "Well, you know a girl doesn't want to give up a $1200 place for a $600 man."

"May I kiss you, Miss Jane?" "I am sorry to see, Mr. Briggs, that you, too, are affected by the prevailing cause of business depression." "And that is?" "Lack of confidence." Then he kissed her.—Clevenald Plaindealer.

A Valuable Prescription.

Editor Morrison of the Worthington, Ind., Sun, writes: "You have a valuable prescription in Electric Bitters, and I can cheerfully recommend it for constipation and sick headache, and as a general system tonic it has no equal." Mrs. Annie Stehle, 2065 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, was all run down, could not eat nor digest food, had a backache which never left her, and felt tired and weary, but six bottles of Electric Bitters restored her health and renewed her strength. Price 50c and $1. Get a bottle of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

THE BEST SALVE in the world for cuts bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

THE MOUTH.

The curve to the upper lip is called by poets "Cupid's bow."

In 1820 there were 100 practicing dentists in the United States.

The mouth of which the corners turn upward is an indication of a good-humored, merry nature.

The human tongue, according to the surgeons, is composed of fibrous, areolar and fatty tissues.

The bill of the woodpecker is said by naturalists to be as hard as the enamel of the teeth.

Every tooth is provided with a nerve, and if any doubt is felt on this point an exposure of the nerve will demonstrate the accuracy of the statement.

Several kinds of apes are provided with large pouches on the sides of the mouth. One kind of African ape can carry a quart of corn on each side of his jaw.

In the carnivora the eyeteeth are best developed and the molars least. The cat, for instance, can hold her prey with ease, while the act of chewing is performed slowly and with difficulty.

The bills of ducks, geese and swans are provided with serrations which meet each other and answer the purpose of both teeth and saws. Every one has noticed the ease with which a duck can cut in two a piece of leaf or other substance designed for food.

The sea anemone has a mouth resembling the flower of the morning glory. Any small sea animal approaching too near finds the mouth closed over him. It remains closed until all the digestable parts have been assimilated, and then opens and rejects the bones or shelly portions.

"I told Miss Wolightly that I would go round the world for her sake." "What did she say?" "She answered that half round would do."—Chicago Record.

SHE WAS ARMED.—They had been mutual friends, and that fact enabled him to speak without an introduction.

"Sloppy, isn't it?" he remarked persuasively.

"Rather," she replied.

A freezing silence followed, but he had no intention of letting the opportunity slip.

"You wear a very long hat-pin, do you know?" he said. "Weally, the end reaches out quite far."

"Yes, it's quite a protection."

"But it's all rusty."

"That isn't rust."

"No? How very queer!"

"It is the blood of chappies who have spoken to me in the street car without an introduction."

"That fellow must have forgotten something," said the conductor, as the chappie bounced from the car without asking him to stop.—Detroit Free Press.

SHE DREW A HEART.—He was no palmist, yet at her request he took her hand and looked it over. "Well," he said. "You would best stay in Draw one card." "Do you think I dare?" she asked. He again examined the cards. There were four hearts and a small spade. Then he looked at her attentively. "Yes," he said. "Throw out the spade and draw for a flush. If you can't draw a heart there's no heart there." The announcement of their engagement will be found in the society columns. There is no need of repeating it here.—Chicago Tribune.

The Maple.

O come, for the day is delaying
To see what young Autumn has done,
While his master-piece grand he's displaying
To his critic, the all-seeing sun.
Its green, and its gold, and its crimson,
Its scarlet, and crimson, and gold,
Together are blending
In tints never ending,
And harmonies rare to behold.

O come, while the breezes are blowing
And tossing each flamelet in air;
All the gems of a monarch's bestowing
Cannot with such brightness compare;
For oh, it is touched with the morning,
With the glintings of sunset it glows,
Every leaflet aflame
Puts all genius to shame,
And shadows the crown of the rose.

O put by your brushing and broiling,
And throw down your hammers and spades;
There'll be time left you for toiling
When this bit of Paradise fades.
O yes, there'll be time left for toiling—
For toiling there always is time,
Though in the transition
Of soul glimpses elysian
The soul misses all the sublime.

I have read a most marvelous story
Of a country, in regions unknown,
Wherein stands a city whose glory
Is caught from the Infinite Throne—
And a tree by the banks of a river,
Which none but immortals may see,—
I cannot tell how
We can look on it now,
But I'm certain that this is the tree.

A TRAGEDY OF DUTY.

The little village of Daignton lies inland from the coast about two miles, and the high ground that runs westward by the sea is a favorite walk in summer time for the villagers. It was late autumn and a misty evening, however, when Mary Micklethwaite took her way thither, and there was no one on the road but herself.

The sun was already near the horizon as she came in sight of the sea; in the gray mist it hung like a ball of fire, making a red pathway across the water. The girl turned in among the furze bushes out of sight of the road, and, seating herself on a pile of stones, absently watched the ball drop towards the sea line.

She was a perfectly unromantic figure, with a broad, good-humored face, a thick waist, dressed in a purple gown, with red flowers in her hat. Presently, at the sound of a footstep brushing through the furze, she got up, and turned to meet a young man who a moment after came in view.

They shook hands awkwardly by way of greeting, and the young man said—

"I'm sorry, my lass; I'm afraid that I'm a bit late."

"Don't name it," said the girl. "I knew it was a chance if you'd get off."

They moved slowly towards the stones, and sat down side by side in an embarrassed silence; the young man made holes in the ground with his stick, and the girl pulled off her brown thread gloves and rolled them up into a tight ball in the palm of one hand. The young man spoke first.

"Well, Mary," he said, clearing his throat, "has your father anything different to say to-day?"

"No, Jack, it's just the same—it's all no use," returned the girl. "I suppose we must grin and abide."

"You told him about the place in Binghampton and all?" said the young man.

"Yes," said the girl sadly. "I put the best face on it I could, but he wouldn't let me say much. He's that mad to think I should want to have you at all, and when he's like that you can't change father, not if you was to crown him with gold."

"You told him we didn't mind waiting?" persisted the young man. "I dare say he'd think he couldn't do without you in the shop first off, but we're not to mind a few month's, eh, Mary?"

"I never had the chance to tell him that," was Mary's reply. "He commenced calling me for what I'd done, and said I wanted to disgrace him. He says I needn't think to go to the choir any more; he puts it all down to that. I shan't mind that much when you are gone."

"Mary," said the young man, suddenly and earnestly, "will you come in spite of your father? I don't see but what we should think of ourselves as well as of him. I'll go to Binghampton and get things ready for you, and I'll put up the banns, and you can come there to be married."

"Oh!" cried the girl in great distress. "I couldn't go agin' father, like that. Why he'd never hold his head up again! You see, he's only got me, now mother's gone, and I don't know what he'd do in the shop. I thought we could get one of my cousins and we could show her about things, but to leave on a sudden like that—"

Jack was not easily to be turned from his point; he was slow-witted, as was the girl, but the pain of this had pricked him to a keener insight than hers. Mary was aware of nothing but the dull pain of parting; Jack had a forecast of the years to come. He put it bluntly, with the unconscious brutality of his class; they were young, they were poor, her father was old—was he to spoil their lives in this way? A few years and he would be dead, and it would concern him no more, but they had two-thirds of their lives to live, and was it right they should be spoiled for an old man's whim?

Mary had no logic wherewith to meet this cogent reasoning; she had only a blind sense of duty to guide her. It had never come in her way to question her obedience to her father, and the idea now only frightened her.

"Doesn't it stand to sense?" cried Jack, in a last despairing appeal.

"Well, yes, it stands to sense," the girl allowed; "I don't know as I can rightly say all I want. There's sense and sense, Jack. When father talks it's sense, and when you talk it's sense; and it's as if I'd like to do one thing and my conscience tells me to do another. I can't go agin, father, Jack—I can't indeed!"

There was little more said between the two as they took their way homeward. Outside the village they paused by common consent.

"Then I suppose it's good-bye, Mary?"

"I suppose it is, Jack."

They shook hands again awkwardly and separated.

Jack left for Binghampton early next morning without having seen Mary again.

Simon Micklethwaite was a person of consequence in Daighton. He was the owner of a small piece of land, on which were half-a-dozen cottages and the shop he himself occupied, the only piece of freehold not attached to the manor for miles around. There was no other shop in the village, and besides having a thriving drapery and grocery business "Micklethwaite's" possessed the only spirit license, and was the district post office. Simon himself was a hard-headed business man, much respected by his neighbors.

He had been elected poor-law guardian for the district: folks said that, since he had sat on the board with the squire and the clergyman, he held his head higher than ever. If he had been the squire himself he could not have been more indignant at the idea of his daughter wishing to wed with the son of one of his own cottagers.

Jack Saunders had been a schoolmate of Mary's at the village school. For some years past he had been away, first serving his apprenticeship as a carpenter and then working as a journeyman at the same trade. Chance had given him a few months' work near his old home, and in that time the friendship between the two had been renewed.

After Jack had gone, Mary went back to her old life uncomplainingly. It never occurred to her to neglect her duties, or be "saucy with her meals" as a protest against the hardness of her lot; there was no shadow on her broad and kindly face to touch her father's compassion. Once, about a month after she had parted from her lover, there came a sore trial to her obedience.

She was stamping and sorting the morning letters, when she found one among them addressed to herself. It bore a Binghamton post-mark, and Mary thrust it into her pocket with a guilty look towards her father. All through the day it lay there unopened, a heavy load upon her conscience, it is true, but a joy deep and thrilling as well, the like of which she had never known before.

When evening came, and she could leave the house for an hour or more unnoticed, it was towards the sea she went to read her letter, on the same spot where she and Jack had parted. It was then Mary felt that her father had laid a tax upon her harder than she could bear. If she might have letters such as this now and then, life would be very easy, she thought, but there was no need to ask her father's consent to that; she knew too well what his answer would be, and to get them unknown to him would be well-nigh impossible.

Mary was simple and truthful by nature, and deception of any kind would have been painful to her; yet, perhaps, if it could have been done without her father's knowledge, she might have consented to this correspondence, for the gleam of hope that it held was very sweet to her. But when she thought of the inevitable discovery, and the tempest of wrath she would have to face, she could not hesitate. That night in her room she wrote her answer to Jack, repeating that she could not "go agin' father," and begging him to write no more.

After this the monotony of her life went on unbroken. She formed a habit of walking out towards the sea on fine evenings, and sitting on the pile of stones where she and Jack had sat together for their last talk. Sometimes she brought her knitting with her, but more often she sat watching the changing color of the sea, and the white-winged vessels passing to and fro.

It would have surprised her very much to be romantic, yet it is true that when she was not thinking of her school-days with Jack, or of their shy courtship and brief spell of happiness, she was weaving impossible day-dreams of how her father might relent, or how Jack, become suddenly wealthy and famous, should come to claim her, with credentials that not even a landed proprietor and a poor-law guardian could deny.

It gave the girl a curious pang now and then to be shaken out of her dreaming by the passing of a pair of lovers in their evening stroll. She could not have told why the sight of this made her own trouble more present to her, nor why it was so impossible to take up the broken thread of her reverie. She knew nothing about self analysis, and could only dry her eyes and hasten back to the village to get her father's supper, hoping the while he would not notice how the even red of her cheek had spread over nose and eyebrow.

Micklethwaite, for his part, was pleased with his daughter's obedience in his own hard way, and was at no trouble to consider moods and feelings.

Ten years had passed since Jack Saunders had gone to work at Binghampton, and many changes had come about. Jack was a good workman, and after being foreman for three years, had been taken into partnership by his master. The firm was at work on some cottages they had built outside the town as a speculation, and one of these Jack was finishing, for he was about to be married. He had only been home once in ten years, on a five-days' trip in Whitsunweek, and then he had not seen Mary, who was away visiting some cousins. Since then his parents had died and his connection with Daignton had ceased.

Jack hardly knew himself how this marriage had come about; it was not altogether through his own volition. He had been lodging for some three years with a widow about ten years older than himself. She had been from the first almost embarassingly kind to him, and Jack had resented many of her ways with the impatience of a man who likes to be independent. Fate had at last given him helpless into her hands with an attack of typhoid, and only her unremitting care had pulled him through.

The doctor was very emphatic in telling him that he owed his life to his nurse, and somehow it came to be understood that when he was well again they should be married. The new house was nearly ready, and if Jack lingered a little over the final details it was not from any real reluctance to fulfill his promise, but because his illness had left him disinclined to exert himself more than he could help.

At length, however, the house was furnished, and Jack awoke one morning to realize that it was his wedding-day. There was a flower in the glass on the table which he was to wear in his coat, and his new clothes were ready on the chair, laid there by the careful hands of the widow. A loud, cheerful voice hailed him from below; it was the foreman of the works, who was to be the best man, calling him to get up.

Downstairs, the parlor was already being set out with the wedding breakfast, and Jack had the kitchen to himself for his hasty meal. There was a letter on the table which had been brought from his works; the hand was unfamiliar, and he let it lie there until he had poured out some tea and helped himself to some rashers of bacon from the oven. Then he opened the letter, and propped it up against the teapot while he read:

"DEAR JACK" [it ran], "I write to tell you about father, for I suppose you won't have heard. He had the influenza very bad and was buried three weeks come Friday. I would have wrote before, but my time has been put up with lawyers. It all comes to me—there is very near ten thousand invested and three hundred in the bank. If you are of the same mind, as I hope and believe there is nothing in the way now, you can come and help me manage, I can't go on without. I wouldn't have wrote in such a hurry only they keep saying I must have a man. Father says nothing about it in his will—about the marrying, I mean. I think he maybe thought better of it. Yours ever constant MARY MICKLEWAITE."

The widow had donned her wedding-gown, and the party was ready to start for church. She came bustling into the kitchen, and cried out in dismay when she saw Jack's untouched breakfast.

"Why, deary me! What ails the man? It might be his own funeral he was going to!" she said, in real concern, when she saw how pale he looked. Jack pulled himself together, and protested he was all right but he did not feel a bit hungry; and as it was too late to make any further delay the widow had to be content with thinking that she would make him have a substantial meal afterwards.

Towards evening, when the wedding party had dispersed, and the newly-married couple were left in possession of their new home, Jack had half an hour to himself, while Mrs. Saunders helped the little maid to prepare tea. It was then he answered Mary's letter. This is what he wrote:—

"DEAR MARY,—Your letter came too late. It came on my wedding day. God help us both! I cannot say any more.
Your sorrowful J. Saunders.
P. S.—My wife is a good woman."

Temptation.

With visored brow Temptation came—
I did not know him by his name,
But cried aloud: "Begone, O Shame!"

He turned away, and going cried:
"Many thy peers have opened wide
Their arms and begged me to abide.

"Riches was I to them, and health,
Honor and pride that watten wealth,
And all fair things that come by stealth.

"Many thy peers have smiled on me,
Fair dames and lords of high degree;
They name me 'Opportunity.'"

"Soft name," I cried, "for such as thou;
Take the grim mask from thy dark brow,
And let thy face declare thee now!"

"Not so—for thee I have no name;
I was Temptation ere I came
But thou hast killed me, calling "Shame!"

A HERO OF THE WAR.

"Here's to Major McKinley's very good health," said the jolly clubman, as he raised his glass to his lips. A half dozen other jolly clubmen followed suit thirstily.

"You fellows still celebrating, and the election more than a week old, too?" asked an eighth man, as he joined the group. "Still talking about the returns, I suppose, and prosperity, and all such good things?"

"No," said the man who had offered the toast, "we are only drinking every thirty minutes by the clock to the returns and to Major McKinley and to prosperity, but we are talking about heroism and heroes."

"Looks to me as if you might bunch the three and do your drinking to them in a lump, say every fifteen minutes."

The late comer was evidently short on drinks, but the crowd was not to be moved out of the even tenor of its way.

"Every half hour's the rule this afternoon," explained the toastmaster. "Every man of us has told of some deed of heroism that has come under his personal observation. One told of a man whom he saw throw himself into a swift current to save a child that had fallen overboard; another, of a woman who went to states prison to keep her guilty brother from going there; and two others of men who had rushed into burning buildings and willingly given their lives to save others. I told of two heroes that I saw in battle. So you see, we've had heroes of flood and flames and shot and shell. Now, who is the greatest hero that you ever ran across, and what kind of stuff was he made of?"

"I don't know his name," said the eighth man, looking up at the sky through his empty glass, "but I do know that he was made of the very best of stuff that a hero is made of. I met him just after the battle of Gettysburg, before we got the smoke of powder out of our eyes. Somehow I found myself with a slight flesh wound over in the Confederate lines just at the tag end of the battle. The dead and wounded were lying all about me. Suddenly I heard somebody near me cry out lustily:

"'Go it, boys, go it! Give the Yanks plenty of ammunition.'

"I looked around, and to my amazement, the voice was that of an old man, fully sixty-five, lying a little to my right. He wore the gray and both of his legs had been completely shattered by a shell, but he didn't seem to know it, and smiled hopefully as he called repeatedly to some of his lagging comrades to keep up the fire until the very last. Presently along came the surgeon of the regiment, looking after the wounded. He was a courteous, kindly, knightly Southern gentleman.

"'Why, old fellow, what are you doing here?' he said in a cheery voice to my old man. 'You are entirely too old to be in the service. How does this happen?'

"'I'm old but I never shirked,' answered the old man with spirit, and then he stopped to yell again to his comrades to go it. Suddenly he began to feel terrible pain, and then he said: 'Are you the doctor?'

"'Yes, I am,' answered the surgeon. 'I'm going to have you moved as soon as the firing ceases, and then see what I can do for you.'

"'Oh, don't bother about me,' he answered wearily, 'I'm done for, I reckon, an' you'd better tend to some that's younger. It don't matter at all about my dyin' now. They're all fixed an' well pervided fer. One hundred acres of good lan', two mules, an' a horse,' he added, half to himself with a peaceful smile.

"'Who?' asked the doctor, giving him a swallow of brandy.

"'My wife an' my daughter, sah. You see, it was this way. When the war broke out I was an ole man, nigh on to sixty, I reckon, an' somehow I'd never been a good manager. I had tried, but I didn't have nothin' but just what I made over my rent. An' that was little enough, God knows. I know'd my day for 'cumulatin' anything was over, and it nigh worried me to death to think about leavin' the ole woman an' Sal to do real hard work. Then the war came an' there was my chance. The owner of the plantation where I lived was richer than he was brave. He come to see me one day, an' he says:

"'John, you ain't got your folks well fixed to leave 'em, have you?'

"'No,' says I, 'and it worries me past all peace.'

"'Now, let me tell you,' says he. 'I want a substitute to fight for me, an' here's your chance to provide well for your folks. Age exempts you from fightin', but if you go in my place to the war, I'll deed your wife this very day one hund'ed acres of my best lan', two mules an' a horse. Is it a bargain?'

"I studied a while an' then I says: 'It is.' Sure enough, he was as good as his word. He deeded a hund'ed acres an' the stock to the ole 'oman and Sal that very day, and the next week I was gone to the war. I ain't never been home since, but have fought it straight through. I got interested in the cause after I got good at work fightin', an' I ain't never flinched even, but what brought me here was pervidin' for Sal and the ole 'oman. I could not bear to leave 'em empty handed to fight 'ginst the world, an' I knowed it was too late in life fur me to ever do anything fur 'em.'

"His voice was growing weaker as he told his story, but as he finished he raised up and with a regular rebel yell sang out: 'Go it boys, an' give 'em hell—them Yankees!' Then he fell back and in a dazed way, said: 'The ole 'oman an' my little Sal. A hund'ed acres—half of it good bottom land—a horse—an'—an' two fust-rate mules. It was the best the ole man could do fur 'em,' and with these words and a marvelous look of love and peace on his face he stopped breathing.

"I stretched out my hand and took that of the surgeon, and the tears as well as the blood of those who wore the blue and those who wore the gray were mingled over that simple man's story. To me he was a real hero."

"So he was," said one of the jolliest of them.

"Here's to our heroes, the living and the dead," announced the toastmaster, raising his glass, and all responded silently.—New York Sun.

"Are you a daughter of the revolution?" he asked. "I think I am," she answered feelingly; "I ride a wheel."—Detroit Free Press.

PALMER NEWS.

HEAVY LIQUOR SENTENCES.

Guilty in 64 Cases—$3050 in Fines are Imposed in 21.

Judgment in the the recently-tried liquor cases was given in the district court this morning. Motions to dismiss were made in the case of Daniel Hartnett for Sunday violation, and in the second cases against Newbegin and Dawson for keeping a liquor nuisance, and decision in them was reserved.

In giving the result of his finding Judge Robinson remarked that the large aggregate of cases marked the work of the prosecuting committee as faithful to itself, the town, and the voters which had appointed it. He noted the entire absence of any attempt to "make" evidence to support the cases brought, and congratulated the committee and the town on this fact. He also complimented the attorney for the defense on the fairness with which he conducted the cases, and remarked that trials would be more pleasant to all if this were the universal practice. The evidence had been carefully considered, and found to be clear and strong. In imposing penalties he had deemed it wise to withhold sentence in a majority of the cases; and in imposing penalties he had taken those cases charged before the raids; for while the defendants knew that they were engaged in on unlawful business, the raids were a warning to them that they should have heeded, and later cases were continued for sentence. The penalties imposed were $100 in nuisance cases, $150 for a first sale (with two exceptions of $100) and $250 for a second, with $100 for illegal keeping. The summary:

	Cases.	Convictions.	Fine.	Cases.

Exciting Football Game.

Never did Yale and Harvard battle more valiantly upon the football field than did Palmer high school and Monson Academy on the driving park yesterday afternoon. It was a stubbornly fought game, interesting throughout, and one just suited to keep the large number of spectators in an excited state, running up and down the side lines in a manner which settled the large amount of turkey undoubtedly eaten an hour or two before. The center men of both teams held well, and but comparatively few gains were made through them. Shaw's punting and Connor's running with the ball for Palmer were features, while Brainerd and Millen distinguished themselves by making several pretty tackles, the latter several times throwing his man for a loss of several yards. Newbegin managed the high school team with good judgment. Too much cannot be said of the work of Philips, Converse and Pendergast for Monson. Neither side scored in the first half. After four minutes of play in the second half Connor made a brilliant run half the length of the field for a touchdown. Soon after Pendergast made a good run to the five-yard line from near the center of the field, and Converse was shoved over for a touchdown. Both attempts at goal were a failure. After this neither side scored, but the ball was in Monson's territory nearly all the time. The game was called with the ball in possession of Palmer near the center of the field. Score: Palmer 4, Monson 4. The line-up:

Palmer high school.		Monson Academy.
Hopkins, l. e.		r. e., Brown
Brainerd, l. t.		r. t., Mooers
Moran, l. g.		r. g., Bugbee
Knowlton, c.	Captain.	c., Gavin
Wing, r. g.		l. g., Ball
Studley, r. t.		l. t., Murphy
Millen, r. e.		l. e., Needham
Newbegin, q. b.		q. b., Philips
Connor, l. h. b.	Captain.	r. h. b., Thacker
LeGro, r. h. b.		l. h. b., Converse

Touchdowns, Connors, Converse. Referee, Calvin Hastings; umpire, Guy Stanchfield; linesmen, W. Tuthill and W Riley; timekeeper, Harry Sisk. Time, two 20-minute halves

District Attorney Gardner to Move to Springfield.

District Attorney Charles L. Gardner, and son Charles, are to open law offices in the Court Square theater building in Springfield next week, and will make that city their home. The firm name will be Gardner & Gardner. The practice here has been sold to W. W. Leach, who has been in the office since 1880. While Mr. Gardner will remove his business interests to Springfield, his family will remain here for some time yet. Mr. Gardner has been in Palmer since about 1870, and during that time has become well known as a successful attorney. He has also been a prominent Republican, and has been honored by that party with many positions of trust, the last being an election to the office of district attorney for the Berkshire-Hampden district in 1892, and a reëlection in 1895. He has made many warm friends while in Palmer, and his departure will be deeply regretted. Charles G. Gardner, the other member of the firm, is a graduate of Wesleyan Academy and Amherst College, and was admitted to the bar in 1894, being taken into partnership with his father the same year.

B. and A. Time Table Changes.

The winter schedule will go into effect on the Boston and Albany road next Sunday, and involves several changes at Palmer. The noon trains between Boston and New York are taken off, though as they did not stop at this station this change does not materially affect patrons of the road in this section. On account of the withdrawal of these trains, the 11 a. m. train out of Boston, now leaving Palmer at 1.17 p. m., is hurried up 17 minutes and will hereafter leave at 1 o'clock. Camp's accommodation train now leaving at 1.38 p. m. will be set forward to 12.24, so as to pick up New York passengers along the line west of Worcester and land them in Springfield in time to take the New York train there. The 5.49 p. m. accommodation will be changed to 5.47, and the 8.47 train to 8.51.

Going east there is but one change at Palmer, the 3.12 p. m. express being set forward to 2.39.

On the Ware River branch the train now arriving at Palmer at 10.10 will be changed to 9.52, and the 1.13 p. m. to 12.49. Going north the present 11.45 train will leave at 10.20.

Robert J. Leedham, a Former Palmer Boy, Drowned at Reading, Pa.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Leedham, for a number of years residents of Palmer, now of Reading, Pa., will be pained to learn of the death of their youngest son, Robert J., 16, by drowning at Reading last Sunday. Young Leedham and another lad about the same age were owners of a canvas canoe, in which they spent much time last summer; on Sunday they arranged to take their last sail of the season and then take the canoe home for the winter. After going about a mile the wind suddenly shifted and overturned the craft, about 90 feet from the shore. Young Leedham tried to swim ashore, but being burdened with heavy clothing and chilled by the cold water, was unable to reach it. His companion managed to grasp an end of the canoe, and was finally rescued more dead than alive, but eventually recovered in about half an hour. Mr. Leedham was in Baltimore, and the sad news was sent him by telephone.

J. F. Duffy of Holyoke was home for Thanksgiving.

Lawyer Samuel Parks of Chicago has been in town this week.

W. W. Tuthill of Middletown, N. Y., is visiting his brother, J. H. Tuthill.

The Greyhounds beat the Pine street team at football Tuesday afternoon, 22 to 3.

Miss Louise Gendron of Warren was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holt, Sunday.

Thomas A. and William M. Roche spent Thanksgiving with Mrs. John Chaffee of Ware.

Mrs. E. H. Hitchcock and Miss Mary S. Hitchcock of Warren are guests of Mrs. Mary S. Foster.

Rev. F. A. Fischer of Warren will occupy the pulpit at the Universalist church next Sunday morning.

A good sized audience greeted the presentation of "Peck's Bad Boy" at the opera house Wednesday evening.

Miss Maria and Lizzie Maloney of Indian Orchard spent part of the week with their cousin, Miss B. A. Murphy.

G. W. Lyman has broken ground for a house on his lot near Shearer's Corner, purchased at the recent auction sale.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church shipped a barrel of clothing etc., to an Oklahoma home missionary this week.

The house of Frederick Thompson, on the corner of Central and Park streets, is being treated to a new coat of paint externally.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will be held in the district court room next Tuesday at 2 p. m.

The annual meeting of the Royal Arcanum will be held next Tuesday evening for the election of officers. A full attendance is desired.

Several attended the concert and ball given by the Columbian Band of Thorndike at Union Hall in that village Wednesday evening.

Manager Fitch of the opera house has booked the following attractions: December 3d, Kodak; 6th, Gaston's Minstrels; 24th, "O Hooligan's Wedding."

A Thanksgiving ball was held in the opera house last evening. Although not many were present, it was a pleasant and social affair, and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Albert Weeks of Brimfield was before the district court on Tuesday charged with larceny. He pleaded guilty, and was sent to the house of correction for two months.

The pastor of the Congregational church will preach Sunday morning on "Readjusting Christian thinking." In the evening there will be a "Question-box" service, under the care of the Men's Sunday Evening Club.

A new spring has been discovered on the land of the town farm, which yields an ample supply of water for all purposes. As the spring is lower than the buildings, a hydraulic ram has been put in to force the water up to the house and barn.

The familiar white horse belonging to S. W. Lawrence departed this life Monday. He had reached the age of 29, and had been in the possession of Mr. Lawrence nearly all that time. Patrick Downs, the veteran marksman, with his trusty rifle, acted as executioner.

The Noss Jollity Company will present the "Kodak" at the opera house next Thursday evening. This company appeared here a year ago, and gave an unusually good performance. This year it is said to be stronger than ever, and will surely afford an enjoyable evening's entertainment.

A union Thanksgiving service was held in the Universalist church Wednesday evening. Music was furnished by the church choir. Rev. H. F. Moulton read the governor's proclamation, and Rev. C. R. Minard of the Baptist church preached an interesting and helpful sermon, taking his text from Luke 12 : 56, "How is it that ye do not discern this time."

The cantata, "A day in the woods," was presented by the children of the Sunday school of St. Paul's church Tuesday evening and was well attended. An interesting programme, in which all the parts were well taken, was given. Much of the success of the entertainment is due to the efforts of Mrs. W. H. Small, under whose personal direction it was given.

A large number attended the second lecture in the course of the Tuesday Club, at the home of Mrs. E. G. Hastings Saturday afternoon, when Miss Linda Hawley Brigham spoke interestingly on the subject, "Glimpses of the Old Word." The next lecture will be held at the home of Mrs. J. B. Shaw, December 12th, at 3 p. m. Mrs. Annie Russell Marble will speak on Carlyle and Emerson."

Home from school for Thanksgiving: Miss Flora Studley and Miss Lula Dillon from Bridgewater Normal; Miss Ola Northrop from Mount Holyoke; Miss Bessie Royce from Tilton Seminary; Miss Bertha Royce from Dean Academy; Miss Clara Smith and guests, Misses Keeny and Volk, from Wesleyan Academy; Ned Gardner from Amherst; Harry Sisk from Tufts Medical; Louis Cross from Boston University Medical.

The funeral of Mrs. Anna Barlow was held Monday afternoon, Dr A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Old South church of Worcester, assisted by Rev. F. E. Jenkins of Palmer, officiating. The bearers were from the Helping Hand Club of Worcester, of which the deceased was a member. Mrs. Rufus Flynt sang two selections The floral offerings were especially fine and very numerous, from friends in Palmer, Worcester and Hartford.

Samuel Ferry takes exceptions to the statement last week that he, on account of the liquor cases tried the week before, had disappeared for a couple of days; he says he was at the post office every day, and has not been out of town to remain over night for two years. He also says he was not arrested for illegal selling; the officer simply told him that two warrants were out for him and that he'd better appear in court Monday morning, which he did.

Landlord Pierce of the Converse House has received a flattering offer from Selig Manilla of Springfield to take the temporary management of the Hotel Russell in that city, and will probably accept, commencing his duties next Sunday. Mr. Pierce will retain his Palmer hotel, making frequent visits to it. The Hotel Russell is the finest furnished hotel in Springfield, and under Mr. Pierce's management will undoubtedly give entire satisfaction to its patrons.

By reason of the change of time on the Boston and Albany railroad, several changes in the closing of mails have necessarily been made. The mail for Worcester and Boston, which goes now on the 3.12 p. m. express, will be closed at 2.15; the mail for Springfield which now goes on the 1.17 p. m. train will close at 12.30. Mail placed in the west box at the station after 10.53 a. m. will lie there until the next morning. No mail goes to Springfield after 4.16 p. m. until 8.45 p. m.

A pleasant farewell reception was given Monday evening to Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Moulton by the people of the Universalist church at the home of Mrs. A. M. Smith on Thorndike street. A large number of St. Paul's parishioners and townspeople were present. During the evening, Mr. W. H. Small, superintendent of the Sunday school, with a fitting speech, presented Mr. and Mrs. Moulton in behalf of the church people with a liberal purse of gold and silver. Mr. Moulton responded with a few appropriate remarks.

J. H. Hourne, state delegate to the agricultural fair, has made his report, a copy of which has been sent to Secretary F. D. Barton. In his report he says that the September exhibition was excellent in all its departments. He speaks well of the exhibit of cattle, sheep, horses, vegetables and poultry, and of the exhibit of fancy and domestic articles. He says that the society may be congratulated on the character and extent of the exhibits, as all departments were full and worthy of commendation, and none of the side shows objectionable.

A session of the probate court was held Wednesday in the district court room, and the following business transacted: Letters of administration were granted to Maurice Moriarty in the estate of Ellen Slattery, late of Palmer, the executor named in the will having declined the trust. An affidavit of the notice of appointment was filed by Hannah A. Smith, administratrix of the estate of Melville Smith, late of Monson. Widow's allowance was granted in the estate of George F. Chamberlain, late of Brimfield. Sale of personal estate was granted in the estate of Mary A. Williams, late of this city. An account was ordered to be rendered in the estate of Charles C. Smith, late of Monson.

James Varley and William Stewart, two "Weary Willies" of the most emphatic type, enjoyed the hospitalities of Landlord Allen at his Hobo Hotel Monday night, and Tuesday morning refused to do even the slightest service asked of them. They were brought before the district court for vagrancy. In making out the papers their place of residence was designated as Palmer, and on this account they were discharged, Judge Robinson holding that there was no law to prevent a person asking aid in his own town, that he would be entitled to do things in his own town which would be denied an outsider. The discharge was no doubt a disappointment to the men, as they had both pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy, and evidently expected a snug berth during the cold weather at the expense of the commonwealth.

PALMER CENTER.

Miss Whelan is spending her vacation at her home in West Hampton.

The following scholars have not been absent nor tardy during the term just ended: Maggie Mahoney, Josie Mahoney, Edward Mahoney, Agnes Mahoney, Walter St. John, Dalory St. John, Lucy Bacon, and Edward McCormack.

Mrs. Alfred Trumble died at her home here Saturday, aged 74. She had been an invalid for about two years, the result of a shock, making her nearly helpless, as far as her mind was concerned, and death has been a gracious release from her suffering. She leaves one son and three daughters by a former marriage. The funeral was held Tuesday morning at 10, Rev. C. R. Minard officiating. The body was placed in the tomb, and later will be taken to Clinton for interment.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss Webb of Springfield spent Thanksgiving with her sister, Mrs. A. W. Warriner.

Miss Lena Lavene is visiting Mrs. Shina in Waltham during the vacation week of school.

William Kuss has been taken to the Springfield hospital for treatment. He has not been improving very rapidly for the last few weeks, and it was thought best to take him to the hospital.

THORNDIKE.

Fred Bishop of Orange spent Thanksgiving with his pareuts here.

S. W. Moran of Lynn paid a short visit to friends in town on Thursday.

Miss Maggie Hartnett of Springfield spent Thursday with her parents in town.

Rev. and Mrs. G. M. Gerrish spent Thanksgiving with friends in Williamsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. John McKenna of Amherst are spending their honeymoon in town.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Tabor spent Thanksgiving with friends in Slatersville, R. I.

Mrs. E. B. Williams returned this week from Boston, where she has been visiting.

Miss O'Donnell of Holyoke spent the week in town as the guest of the Misses Lawlor.

The dance given by the Polish inhabitants in the Exchange block Wednesday evening was well attended.

Dr. and Mrs. M. W. Flynn of Pittsfield, formerly of this place, paid a flying visit to friends here on Thursday.

Miss Mary Laplant of this place and Grail Fleury of Three Rivers were united in marriage on Tuesday. Miss Ora Chabbott was bridesmaid and Bennie Vignault best man.

Miss Annie Brosnan of Amherst, formerly of this town, was united in marriage at the latter place this week to John McKenna of that town. Many Thorndike friends and relatives were present at the wedding.

John Weimett of Ware and Miss Cora Mongoe of this place were made one on Tuesday by Rev. Joseph Marchand of St. Anne's church of Three Rivers. A reception was held at the home of the bride's mother in the evening which was largely attended, several coming from out of town.

Hurt by a Falling Tree.

Paul Fortune met with what came near being a serious accident on Tuesday, while chopping in the woods in the south part of Belchertown. He was felling a tree and in some way was caught between two trees and badly injured about the spine.

The Columbian Band's Ball.

The annual concert and ball by the Columbian Band of this place was held at Union Hall on Wednesday evening, and was largely attended. The Holyoke Cadet Band Orchestra furnished music and gave good satisfaction, and Mr. Kelley of Springfield was at his best as prompter. The affair was one of the pleasantest of the season, and the band is contemplating holding another grand ball on New Year's Eve.

BONDSVILLE.

Mrs. F. S. Talmadge is very sick at her home in Amherst.

The King's Daughters met with Mrs. Fisherdick Monday evening.

Mrs. Michael Sullivan is seriously ill at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moriarty, in South Belchertown.

John Ellis and Miss Jennie Harris were married in St. Bartholomew's church Wednesday afternoon by Rev. B. McKeany.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Childs and family spent Thanksgiving in Lowell, where Mrs. Childs has been visiting this week with her mother, Mrs. Hall.

Since being moved to the hospital in Springfield, Philip Beauregard has improved a great deal, and there is no doubt of his final recovery.

Rev. and Mrs. Smith and family spent Thanksgiving with Mr. Smith's parents at Holyoke. Mrs. Smith visited friends in Russell the fore part of the week.

Prof. and Mrs. James B. Page and daughter Beryl of Amherst, and Mrs. Hannah Bishop and two children of Gilbertville, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Russell, Thanksgiving Day.

The Young Men's Dramatic Club gave a social dance in Liberty Hall Thanksgiving Eve, but the attendance was not very large, owing to the dance in Thorndike, which attracted quite a number from this place.

The Loyal Legion held an open meeting in the church vestry Sunday afternoon. The children gave a very interesting exercise and wore their new regalias for the first time. Quite a number of visitors were present.

R. L. Bond and J. W. Hanson of Boston took a two-days' hunting trip to New Salem last week. They had good luck the first day, but it stormed all the next day and they were obliged to give up, to their great disappointment.

A gang of workmen from the Springfield Construction Company is at work this week taking up the bridge over the lower canal. The bridge will be taken to Thorndike, where it will be placed on the canal. A good many persons who used the bridge for a short cut to the Belchertown saloons will now have to go around by the main road.

The schools of the village closed Sunday for the Thanksgiving vacation. An excellent programme was provided by the school, and the children in some were furnished with refreshments. Miss Thayer is spending her vacation at her home in Hingham, and Miss Cleveland is visiting Miss Barney at the latter's home in South Hadley.

Ever since the 4th of July a fire has been burning or smouldering in the pile of rubbish in the old canal near the lower dam. All kinds of rubbish from the mill is dumped there, and when wind blows in the right direction the smoke and smell is something terrible. Residents in the vicinity will be glad if there is ever snow enough to cover it up and extinguish the fire.

While coupling cars in the Boston and Albany yard last Saturday "Ed" Mann of West Springfield, the rear end brakamen, had his hand caught between the drawbars and severely injured. No bones were broken, but he recieved a very painful injury and it will be some time before he can resume work. Mr. Mann returned to Springfield on Conductor Smith's train, where his hand was dressed by Dr. Breck.

It looks now as though there would be more building done the coming year than for the past year or two. The Boston Duck Company is putting in the foundation for a tenement house on the street leading to the Massachusetts Central depot, and T. D. Potter & Co are digging the cellar for one on Pleasant street, on the lots purchased from the Luther Collis estate. If these tenements rent readily, Potter & Co. will probably erect others. There has long been a scarcity of desirable tenements, and they will fill a long-felt want.

Some of those who are home for the Thanksgiving vacation are Miss Margaret Bruce from Bridgewater Normal school, Morris Landers of Amherst Agricultural college, Miss Lizzie Clifford of Westfield, Miss Ora Parent of Smith College, Daniel Sullivan of Amherst, and Olin Parent and Erving Strong of Wesleyan. Among others who spent Thanksgiving Day in town were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kempton of Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Fleming of Enfield, Mrs. and Miss Golden of West Ware, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Landers and daughter of Indian Orchard, P. H. Landers of Northhampton, George Farr and William Donovan of Indian Orchard, and John Fitzgerald of Springfield; while O. A. Parent and family spent the day with A. S. Morse of Belchertown, and A. P. Knowlton and family with Mr. Nathaniel Knowlton of Wilbraham.

MONSON.

THREE THANKSGIVING WEDDINGS.

Foley—Hughes.

Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Foley, was married at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning at St. Patrick's church to William S. Hughes, clerk in Gage Brothers' store. The ushers were J. M. and M. J. Foley, brothers of the bride, and Edward J. Hughes, brother of the groom. Miss Mary Cuddihy presided at the organ. Rev. Thomas O'Keefe celebrated low mass. The bride was becomingly attired in brown, with trimming of cream colored satin and lace. She wore a brown velvet hat with brown plumes and trimmings to match the gown, and carried a mother of pearl rosary. Miss Annie Foley, sister of the bride, attended her, and was similarly dressed. Nicholas Hughes, brother of the groom, was best man. A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. The presents were numerous and very fine. After a short trip the couple will go to house keeping on Harrison avenue.

Hathaway—Margeson.

A quiet home wedding took place at the house of Charles L. Hathaway, Wednesday at 12 o'clock, which united in marriage Miss Viola Hathaway of Monson and George W. Margeson of Winthrop, Rev. William H. Marble performing the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Margeson left Wednesday afternoon for Winthrop, where they intend to make their future home. Quite a number of useful and valuable presents were received.

Dunn—Dawson.

The wedding of Minnie Dunn and John P. Dawson of Palmer took place at St. Patrick's church at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning, Rev. Thomas O'Keefe performing the ceremony. Miss Josie Hannifan was bridesmaid, and James Dunn, brother of the bride, was best man. The bride and the bridesmaid wore dresses of blue and gold novelty goods, with trimming of navy blue velvet and white satin, with large hats of the same color. A reception was held at the bride's home at the quarry village after the ceremony. The couple will live in Palmer. Many handsome presents were received.

The Academy closed Wednesday noon for the week.

Frank Morris of Amherst College is spending a few days at home.

Miss Alice Erskine left to-day for her home in Randolph, Vt.

Mr. and Mrs. Luke March of Ashfield are guests at C. R. Bullington's.

Mrs. Peterson sang very acceptably in the Congregational church Sunday.

Henry Butler has a new bakery wagon, to be used on his Monson route

Miss Carrie Webb sang in the Universalist church Sunday and was well liked.

Dr. Harry Merchant, of the Albany Medical School, is home for a few days.

Mrs. Charles Thayer of Amherst is visiting her parents on Harrison avenue.

Dr. Arthur T. Robinson of Mansfield spent Thanksgiving with his parents.

Dr. G. H. Stone of the Albany Medical School is spending a few days at home.

C. A. Bradway has purchased a building lot of W. H. Bugbee on Pleasant street.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cross spent Thanksgiving with Mr. Cross's parents at Norwich.

Mrs. Joseph Wilkins of Washington, D. C., is spending a few days with her parents on Granite street.

Mrs. Lillian L. Chapin and daughter Carrie spent Thanksgiving with friends in Springfield.

Arthur King of Worcester spent Thanksgiving with his parents on South Main street.

Miss Etta Gardner of Swanzea is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. H. Gifford, on Pleasant street.

William L. Ricketts returned Tuesday after a two-weeks' visit in Ohio and New York city.

Mrs. Alfred Wallace is spending a few weeks with her sister at Meriden and Hartford, Ct.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Marble are spending a few days with Mr. Marble's mother in West Gardner.

Mr. and Mrs. James Herlihy of Valley Falls, R. I., are spending the week with friends in town.

Misses Grace and Lena Marshall of Warren are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Patrell.

A Thanksgiving service was held in the Congregational church yesterday morning. Prof. James H. Tufts gave an address.

Miss Frevla Osborne was pleasantly surprised at her home Monday night by a number of her friends and schoolmates.

Robert McIntosh, a former student of Monson Academy, now employed at Springfield, spent Sunday with friends in town.

Miss Annie V. Cameron has resigned her position as teacher at Colton Hollow, and taken similar position at East Longmeadow.

Mrs. Justin Carew, who has been treasurer of the King's Daughters, has resigned, and Miss Stymie Loggie has been elected to fill the vacancy.

The S. Homer Eaton Concert Co. of Boston will give a concert in Memorial Hall December 8th, assisted by Prof. J. S. R Coy, and Miss Annie Murray of Springfield.

On account of the change of time on the Boston and Albany railroad, the Monson stages will leave the south end for Palmer at 1.30 p. m., instead of at 2 p. m., commencing next Monday.

H. C. Norcross has on exhibition at his store a skate-fish weighing 40 pounds, caught by Edgar Squier and Edward Aldrich last Monday off New London. It is claimed to be the largest one ever captured.

Principal A. N. Burke of the Academy was called to his home in Norwich, Ct., Monday, by the death of his father, Mr. George Reynolds, who had been ill for several months with heart failure.

William A. Gates of Palmer died Sunday at the age of 75, at the home of Mr. Lanphear in the west part of the town, after several weeks' illness. The funeral was held Tuesday, and the burial was at Barre Wednesday.

The Monson Cornet Band is to give an entertainment in Memorial Hall December 17th, having secured the Temple Quartet, also Eugene Hill, reader, both of Springfield. An orchestra of ten pieces will also be represented in the programme.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Patrell gave a very enjoyable party to a number of their friends Tuesday night. The evening was occupied by playing whist and with music. Miss Musa Babbitt won the first prize, a very pretty souvenir cup and saucer; Miss Lena Marshall of Warren received the booby prize. Refreshments were served and all passed a very pleasant evening.

The ninth annual concert and ball of the Monson Fire department at Memorial Hall last evening was a very pleasant event. About 100 dance tickets were sold, and although not as many as last year, yet it was considered a good number, as it threatened storm all the afternoon and evening. The music for the concert by the First Regiment Orchestra of Brattleboro, Vt., was the very best; Prof. E. Wales was prompter.

The inspection of A. A. Gage camp, Sons of Veterans, which was to have taken place last Tuesday night, was postponed until December 8th on account of sudden sickness in the family of the inspection officer, T. E. Chappell of Holyoke. A special meeting was appointed for December 1st, to nominate officers for the ensuing year. The camp is in excellent condition, having a good balance in the treasury and a membership of 45, nine having been admitted during the past year.

The tickets for the Academy course of entertainments will go on sale at Keeney's drug store next Monday at 4.15 p. m. These entertainments are all of superior merit, and will doubtless be well patronized. Principal Burke has not spared expense to secure the best talent, relying upon the public to do their part as in the past. The course tickets are $1.25 for five entertainments, and the first will be next Friday evening in Memorial Hall, by the Unity company, consisting of Miss Edith Castle, soprano; Miss Jessie M. Downer, pianist; Walter S. Cotton, violinist; Hoyt L. Conary, reciter. As Mr. Conary appeared before a Monson audience last year, he will prove a drawing card.

WILBRAHAM.

The many friends of Fred Warner will be glad to know he is convalescing from injuries received by a bicycle collision a few weeks ago.

The women of the First Congregational church are arranging for a "Bazar," to be held afternoons and evenings of the 1st, 2d and 3d of December.

WEST WARREN.

The schools closed this week for Thanksgiving week only.

Miss Estella B. Watts of New London, Ct., is visiting friends in town.

Rev. W. H. Marble of Monson preached in the M. E. church last Sunday.

The musical given by M. J. Sullivan last Friday evening was largely attended.

Several from this place attended the Queen Esther Cantata at Warren this week.

The young men of the Q. S. C. gave a reception in their rooms Wednesday evening.

The children have been gathering money and filling bags for the Little Wanderers in Boston this week.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. David Wallace of Westboro visited her sister, Mrs. H. W. Cutler, Tuesday.

P. M. Brigham and wife of Worcester were visitors at E. W. Watts on Thanksgiving Day.

Mrs. Lyman Powers and family of Mittineague, and Miss Lizzie Knowlton of Springfield were the guests of Mrs. D. W. Mowry, Wednesday.

The ladies of Grace church are making arrangements for a chicken supper, to be held next month.

John Wilson, who has been employed at the paper mill for some time as backtender, has given up his position to accept a like one in Mittineague. His friends regret to lose him, but wish him success in his new field.

Rev. Henry B. Mason went to the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston Monday for treatment, and his people will be pleased to hear that it will not be necessary to amputate his leg, as upon examination the surgeons decided that a slight operation, removing a small portion of the bone, would be all that would be required, and the assurance from the staff is given that the old wound would not trouble him again. This is good news for him, and also for all his friends, who were fearful lest it might be necessary to remove the leg. He writes that he expects to be with his friends at North Wilbraham by January 1, 1897.

HOLLAND.

W. S. Wallis and family have removed to Springfield.

A. F. Blodgett holds the record for shooting this year. His bag for one week was 26 partridges, 5 woodcock, 6 gray squirrels and 7 rabbits.

Death of G. L. Webber.

George L. Webber, one of Holland's best known and respected citizens, died at his home in that town Nov. 19, after an illness of about four weeks. He was born Nov. 8, 1821. Although for years he had followed the occupation of a farmer, he was, in his younger days, a wheelwright, making and selling wagons to all the neighboring towns. He was always closely connected with the town government, occupying every place of trust that its citizens could give him, and representing his district in the General Court in 1871, making for himself an enviable record. He was deacon of the Congregational church for the last sixteen years of his life, also superintendent of its Sunday school. From its incorporation he was a director of the Wales Bank, and at different times had been its vice president and auditor. Always cheerful and ever willing to do a kindness for any of his fellowmen, he will be missed greatly by his large circle of friends. Thus is ended a long and useful life, one of which it can truthfully be said "well done." He leaves a widow and four daughters, Mrs. C. F. Hunt and Mrs. H. E. Wallis and Misses Fannie and Edith Webber, all of Waltham, Mass.

BELCHERTOWN.

Cynthia, 54, wife of John Peck, died Wednesday morning of inflammation of the stomach.

The house on New street owned by H. F. Howard has been sold to Mrs. Cornelia C. D. Williams for $875.

Col. Olin, secretary of state, and Capt. J. G. B. Adams were entertained at the home of Capt. John Anderson over Sunday.

A few days ago a Belchertown woman, while disposing of some superfluous paper, threw an envelope into the fire containing $30.

A speaking contest will be held at Belchertown about the middle of December, in which five towns will be represented. Miss Nettie Shaw will be the contestant from Belchertown.

The members of the Y. P. S. C. E. met at the chapel last Friday evening and elected the following officers: President, Miss Alice Walker; vice president, Walter Ross; secretary, Miss Alice Smith; treasurer, George B. Jackson; chairman of lookout committee, F. L. Stebbins; prayer meeting, Miss Grace Towne; Sunday school, Miss Nellie Rice; temperance, Miss Lizzie Bartlett; social, Walter Ross; welcoming and visiting, Miss Edith Towne; missionary, Miss Etta Fuller; music, Mrs. R. H. Long; flower, H. A. Hopkins; ushers, George B. Jackson and J. A. Lynn.

The Snake in His Stomach Proves to be Heart Trouble.

John H. Bardwell, who went to Boston a week ago last Tuesday to visit the Massachusetts General Hospital in search of relief from a stomach trouble, supposedly caused by some live object in his stomach, which he thought he swallowed some time last August while drinking from a spring, has found that his trouble is caused by his heart, the symptoms being identical with what he supposed were the movements of some live object in his throat and stomach. Mr. Bardwell had such a firm belief in the existence of a snake or lizard in his stomach that he visited the Emergency hospital as well as the Massachusetts General before could be convinced. At the Emergency hospital he was examined with "X" rays.

BRIMFIELD.

The Hitchcock Free High School closed Wednesday for a recess until next Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Earle remain at Goodale Hall, Mr. Hall has gone to his home in Nashua, N. H., and Miss Dugan spent Thanksgiving with her parents in Montague.

Miss Ida Agard, who teaches in East Longmeadow, is spending her vacation at the home of her mother.

Miss Adella Adams, teacher of the Fiskdale grammar school, is at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Edward Hitchcock.

Miss Fannie Traverse, a teacher of West Warren, is at the home of her parents in Brimfield.

A party of eight, including the teachers of the Hitchcock Free High school, attended the performance of the cantata of Esther at Warren Tuesday evening.

There will be an entertainment at the town hall Saturday evening, December 5th, under the auspices of the Ladies' Union. Homer Loring of Newton will play the cornet, Miss Lydia Hitchcock will sing, and Miss Lola Andrews will recite. There will also be selections by others.

Death of Mrs. Jane M. Webster.

Mrs. Jane M. Webster, widow of the late Luman Webster, died at her home in Brimfield Monday after a painful illness caused by enlargement of the liver. Mrs. Webster was born in Brimfield, August 31, 1826, and had spent most of her life in her native town. Her father was Eaton Hitchcock, well remembered as a singing teacher and a remarkable singer in the days of singing schools. Although feeble health had made her life a secluded one for a good many years, Mrs. Webster had many warm friends. She was a kind neighbor, and possessed fine sympathies combined with naturally bright social power. She had an unusual appreciation of the poetic in nature and literature, and these interests, cultivated through reading, were a source of comfort and enjoyment to her until a few weeks before her death. During her last illness she was a patient sufferer, and thoughtful of the comfort of those who ministered to her. She leaves a son, George A. Webster, and a sister, Mrs. Kendrick B. Webster of Springfield. The funeral was held at her late residence Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Peirce officiating. The relatives present from out of town were: Mrs. K. B. Webster, Mrs. Ida Webster Gaylord and Miss Carrie Bacon of Springfield, Bert Webster of Southbridge, and George E. Tarbell of Warren. There were beautiful and choice flowers. Mr. Peirce, who had known Mrs. Webster long and well, spoke of her thoughtful and well-stored mind, her clear philosophic insight, her interest and belief in high truths, and her faith in God. These qualities, combined with her social disposition and keen humor, made her companionship interesting and profitable, and she will be much missed, even though her life was so retired.

WALES.

The Excelsior woolen mill has shut down for a week, to put in a new engine.

The scarlet fever cases are now nearly well; no signs of the disease spreading.

Mr. and Mrs. George Switzer of Springfield, spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Switzer.

The blacksmith shop owned by W. Royce has been reopened this week by Mr. Meserve of Brimfield.

The Thanksgiving proclamation was read last Sunday in the Baptist church, but no public service was held in the daytime. On Thanksgiving evening the regular meeting was held.

Wales, instead of Palmer, is this time the place of assault on an aged couple, which received a severe pounding at the hands of their assailants. Mr. and Mrs. William Harris were visited by a large company of their friends, both young and old, at their home in the W. H. Lyons' dwelling. Mrs. Lyon very kindly opened her large and pleasant rooms to the company, who after pounding the couple with butter, sugar, tea, coffee, raisins, etc, and playing different games and enjoying themselves generally, went home at a seasonable hour.

Tenth Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fox celebrated the tenth anniversary of their wedding Wednesday evening at their home on Main street. About 75 invited guests gathered at their home and spent a very pleasant evening. Refreshments in abundance, consisting of cake, coffee and ice cream, were served in the parlor, and cigars in the smoking room for all who indulged in the weed. Many very pretty and useful presents were left for the happy couple, consisting of tidies, sofa pillows, mats, tinware, and a large quantity of silver. Among the guests were Mrs. Barnes of Sturbridge, mother of Mrs. Fox, Alfred Barnes and wife and two sons, Beatrice and Ruth Chamberlain, Misses Alice and Ethel Whittemore and Carl Cory of Sturbridge, George Switzer and wife of Springfield, Rev. G. W. Camp and wife and daughter Mabel, Mr. and Mrs. Alders, Mr. and Mrs. William Harris, W. McKeon and wife, Edmund Clark and wife, Fred Royce and wife, H. W. Needham and wife, C. G. Needham and wife, W. W. Eager and wife, H. North and wife, Fred North and wife, T. Warrington and wife, D. E. Parker and wife, E. L. Needham and wife and son, J. H. Hall and wife, W. Lyon and wife, A. A. Hubbard and wife, J. H. Loudon and wife, O. C. Switzer and wife, W. Flynt and wife, H. A. McFarland and wife, Mrs. Kate Needham Williams, Mrs. Watson, Julia Flynt, Mary Converse, Bertha Bryant, Beatrice Hall, Arthur Hall, Gertie Flynt, Mrs. Mandigo, Mrs. A. W. Williams, Mrs. Ira Nelson, Mrs. P. W. Walbridge, and Winifred Williams of Wales; Mrs. Heald and son of Camden, Maine.

WARREN.

Mr. Morse will continue the fish market at Mr. Moore's old stand.

The King's Daughters met with Mrs. D. L. K. Hathaway last Friday.

The milk will be brought to the car in the afternoon after the first of December.

Miss Etta Sylvester and Miss Blodgett, of the Springfield corps of teachers, are home for Thanksgiving.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barnes and family of Springfield were guests of Mr. Lyman Powers, Thanksgiving.

Union Thanksgiving services were held in the Methodist church. Rev. W. B. Forbush preached the sermon

Miss Edith C. Buck, who teaches in the high school building, has resigned to accept a position in Cochituate.

An intermediate department of the Christian Endeavor society is being organized at the Congregational church.

All the schools have been taking a week's vacation with the exception of the high school, which closed Wednesday.

The first of the evening services in the Congregational church was held Sunday evening, and was very pleasing. An attractive musical programme was rendered by the choir, a violin solo by Mr. Valva, and a vocal solo by Mrs. deLaval with violin obligato, were very sympathetically rendered. The services will be continued through the rest of the year.

The twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Tucker occured last Sabbath. A large number of friends and neighbors made them a surprise visit Saturday night, and a very pleasant social evening was spent. Some very handsome gifts in the line of silver, cut glass and china were given them. On Monday, Mr. and Mrs. Tucker entertained a family party of relatives from Warren and Monson.

Another case of diphtheria developed last Friday in the family of Daniel Coogan on River street. The board of health has obtained from the state board a stock of antitoxin, and it is expected that a depot will soon be established for the absolute detection of diphtheria. The having of antitoxin on hand ready for use was well repaid early in the week by its use in a case which yielded immediately, and from which the recovery has been rapid.

The cantata of Esther was given to good houses for three nights, and was one of the most effective and pleasing entertainments ever given in Warren. The stage was enlarged and electric lights were put in, which, with the crimson drop curtain and scenic effects, made an exceedingly good stage setting. The costumes were all very effective and becoming. The chorus showed the result of patient practice and through leadership; the solos were all exceedingly well rendered, and while the out-of-town soloists were heartily received, equally effective work was done by local talent. The tambourine chorus and shield drill were especially pleasing features of the entertainment. Now that so much musical ability has been shown to exist, other similar entertainments are hoped for the future.

WARE.

P. Gargan, the irrepressible, was in town for Thanksgiving. He is reporter for the Lynn Item.

A. F. Richardson and daughter went to Kingston, N. Y., to spend Thanksgiving with his nephew.

J. F. Howard gave Shakesperian recitals at the high school assembly hall on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, to the satisfaction and enjoyment of the audiences. A portion of the proceeds go to the high school library.

The team belonging to Casey, the South street grocer, ran from Walnut street to the store Tuesday, demolishing the wagon and scattering groceries by the way. Howard Lashua, who was in charge, jumped out and was not much hurt.

Miss Ida B. Roberts of Springfield, contralto, will sing in the East Congregational church next Sunday evening. The following are her selections: "Thy King," Rodney; "Forever with the Lord," Gounod; "The Promise of Life," Cowen.

The firemen's banquet last Saturday evening, by invitation of John H. Storrs, was as usual, a fine social success, and the hearty thanks of all were extended to Mr. Storrs for his generosity. Owing to the larger number this year, the banquet was at both the Mansion and Storrs Houses

The wife of Mr. Leonard Wells, of East Brimfield, Mass., had been suffering from neuralgia for two days, not being able to sleep or hardly keep still, when Mr. Holden, the merchant there, sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and asked that she give it a thorough trial. On meeting Mr. Wells the next day he was told that she was all right, the pain had left her within two hours, and that the bottle of Pain Balm was worth $5 00 if it could not be had for less. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

The Ideal Panacea.

James L. Francis, Alderman, Chicago, says: "I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as an ideal panacea for coughs, colds and lung complaints, having used it in my family for the last five years, to the exclusion of physician's prescriptions or other preparations"

Rev. John Burgus, Keokuk, Iowa, writes: "I have been a minister of the Methodist church for 50 years or more, and have never found so beneficial, or that gave me such speedy relief as Dr. King's New Discovery." Try this ideal cough remedy now. Trial bottles free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

EASY TO GET FAT.

If Your Drink is Right

Skinny people generally are so because of their inability to digest the food which is passed from the stomach into the bowels. The bowel digestion is weakened. Starches of the grains make a fat tissue, but if the bowel digestion is weakened by coffee, tobacco, whisky, etc., the person remains skinny. Leave off the weakening habits and use in the place of coffee, Postum Cereal, the health coffee. It is made by the Postum Cereal Co. lim., Battle Creek, Mich., entirely of grains and is fattening. It looks like the finest Mocha coffee. Persons who care to lay aside their hurtful habits and eat plain, well cooked food and some fruit, and drink Postum, will feel a great improvement in a week's time. Nature is a powerful builder if left free to work without drugs and poisons.

It should not be forgotton that 80 per cent of the body is liquid, therefore a healthful liquid is of the greatest necessity.

Wily grocers sometimes work in cheap imitations of Postum Cereal coffee if the customer will stand it.

A SERIOUS SUBJECT.

That Will Well Repay Our Citizens to Carefully Consider.

Kidneys can't talk, but if you don't treat them rightly you will hear from them.

They have a language of their own, this is how they tell you?

When you work too hard, what follows? You are tired, aren't you?

It's just the same with the kidneys, they get tired, they have so much to do.

You stoop over at the same occupation.

You strain yourself lifting.

You walk too far, or ride too far.

You call this overexertion. You cannot sleep when night comes.

Your back aches. Your head aches, often you ache all over.

Oh, you say, it's because I'm tired.

Now this isn't right, It's because your kidneys are tired.

They can only do just so much, and the lifting, stooping, straining or exerting has retarded their action.

The heart has pushed the blood into them faster than they can filter it.

The filter is overtaxed and becomes clogged.

They cry for assistance in many aches that follow.

Nothing starts the kidneys working quicker than Doan's Kidney Pills.

It is useless to take them for any disorder of the stomach or derangement of the liver.

Indirectly they will help such troubles by throwing off some of the effete or waste matter of the body through the kidneys, but they won't cure liver complaint any more than they will cure consumption.

They are non-purgative, easy to take, convenient to carry; they produce no reaction; and can be given to the weakest child.

Doan's Kidney Pill for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name, DOAN'S, and take no other.

Dr. Cilley, of Boston, says Ayer's Hygienic Coffee can be used freely by invalids and children. It not only being agreeable to the taste, but highly nutritious as well. Grocers sell it.

Here is Good News for Men Suffering From Nervous Debility, Weakened Powers and Exhausted Vigor.

Weak men suffering from nervous debility, weakened powers and exhausted vigor, can now take new hope. Here is something which will powerfully interest them. It is a fact that until now sufferers have been debared from seeking a cure by the great specialists in these complaints owing to the cost of travel to the large city and the high fees charged by these eminent physicians.

Here, therefore, is a chance for weak men in our community which should not be lost. Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who has the largest practice in the world, and who is without doubt the most successful specialist in curing this class of diseases, offers to-give free consultation by mail to all weakened, vigorless and nerve-exhausted men. You have the privilege of consulting Dr. Greene by letter describing your complaint and he will, after carefully considering your condition, send you a letter fully explaining all your symptoms, telling you everything about your complaint so plainly that you will understand exactly what ails you. He will also give you his advice, based upon his vast experience and wonderful success in treating and curing such cases, as to just what to do to get cured. All this will cost you nothing and you can thus have consultation with the best-known physician and acknowledged most successful specialist in the world, without leaving home and at no expense whatever. The Doctor is the discoverer of that greatest of medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and he has discovered many other most valuable remedies. Write to him now, for this is the chance of a lifetime to get cured which you may never have again.

WEDDING INVITATION Engraved or printed. The latest styles and prices right. Samples on application at the JOURNAL Office. WEDDING CARDS.

"For five weeks I lived on cold water, so to speak," writes a man who suffered terribly from indigestion.

He could hardly keep anything on his stomach. What stayed, wasn't properly digested and gave him terrible pangs.

This is not an uncommon case. Dyspeptics don't get enough nourishment. They are generally thin and weak.

They may eat enough, but they don't digest enough. Much of what they eat turns into poison. If this keeps on there's no telling what disease they may get next.

That's why it is best to take Shaker Digestive Cordial, as soon as symptoms of indigestion appear.

It cures all the evils of indigestion, and prevents the evils which indigestion causes.

Sold by druggists, price 10 cents to $1.00 per bottle.

HOW TO PREVENT CROUP.

SOME READING THAT WILL PROVE INTERESTING TO YOUNG MOTHERS. HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THE DISEASE.

Croup is a terror to young mothers, and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy, for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Good advice: Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Chapter About Children.

A dear little girl with eyes of blue,
And yellow curls and a dimple, too;
And we loved to tease her as some folks do,
And ask her the silliest questions.

"Oh, what is Poppy, say, little Ann?"
"Poppy? Poppy? Why, Poppy's a man,"
She smiled at us brightly as onward we ran
With the silliest, silliest questions.

"And what is Sissy?" The blue eyes gleam.
"Sissy's a girl," she says, with a scream
Of laughter as light as a rippling stream,
At this silliest, silliest question.

"And Botty? Botty is surely a toy
Of golden metal with no alloy?"
"Botty? Botty? Why, Botty's a boy."
The silliest, silliest question.

"Then what is Mommy?" The blue eyes shed
A faint love glance, low drooped the head,
"Why Mommy is Mommy," little Ann said
To this silliest, silliest question.

Oh, dear little girl with eyes of blue,
And yellow curls, and a dimple, too,
Yes, Mommy is Mommy the whole world through;
So good-by to the silliest questions.

BURIED GLACIERS.

Eight or ten miles to the north, on the same side of Robertson's bay, north of Greenland, is a plateau about a mile long, a quarter wide and with a precipitious face to the sea of 15 or 20 feet, and which stands back from the water's edge not more than 30 or 40 feet. To the west rise the lichen covered cliffs to a height of from 3000 to 5000 feet, capped with towers and pinnacles of brown basalt. To the north is the terrible and frozen expanse of the Verhoeff glacier, producing every few hours, with groans and cannon-like explosions, great icebergs. This plateau, both top and sides, is a mass of flourishing vegetation, chiefly grass, which, when one walks through it, reaches above the knees. From among this verdure buttercups, poppies, cinquefoil and dandelions thrust their golden heads in wild profusion. Yet beneath this rich vegetable life, as glorious in its luxuriance as in the meadows of temperate regions, without other sustenance than that derived from decayed moss and grass, is a portion of a dead glacier, a body of ice which is the sole formation of the plateau, conquered and buried in the first instance by the indomitable traveling power of weak-looking clump moss.

This sounds like a traveler's tale, but the explanation of the phenomenon is very simple, and similar examples are found in many places along the fiords of this northland. In the case of the plateau, many centuries ago, judging by the thickness of the growth of vegetation, the glacier at the head of the bay, known as the Verhoeff glacier, extended out to the sea, covering all the space from cliff to cliff, except a narrow gorge on each side of the moving, gigantic, frozen river. In these gorges clump moss struggles bravely for existence, but while the glacier moved forward, crushing and burying everything in its path, this form of vegetable life could do little more that hold its own.

In the course of time, from some unknown cause, the glacier began suddenly to recede to the point where it now discharges, that part of it which was in the water floating away in the shape of icebergs and those which were on the shores remaining stationary, to be slowly melted by the summer sun. This was the opportunity for the mosses. Caring nothing for the cold, they crept slowly, inch by inch, over the quiet mass of ice, perhaps then 50 or more feet thick, and made their way, first in thin, netlike layers, and then, as time passed on and strength was gathered, in thick masses, till they reached the edge, which fronted the bay. Here, as the sun each summer slowly melted the face of the ice wall away, they matted themselves firmly and dropped over, lower and lower, until they reached the rocky shore, and the huge block of ice was completely hidden. Year after year the mosses grew and flourished, the young plants trampling the older underfoot until the latter, rotting, turning into a rich mold, burying the conquered fragment of the ice king deeper and deeper. Then grass seeds found their way into the moss, blown hither by the winds or carried there on the feet of birds. They germinated and increased, and by their greater vigor in turn almost blotted out the moss. To give finish to the charming picture this created, blooming plants took up their abode and flourished, until every summer the plateau is a garden of green, gold and white. How long this condition of things will last of course it is impossible to say. At any time nature, who now holds the Verhoeff glacier in check, may unloose her hands, and then the frozen river will likely pour down and out the bay once more, crushing beneath it in its flow the vegetation which now holds up its head in triumph.—W. E. Meehan, in Independent.

FACTS ABOUT SUGAR.

Sugar exists in the sap or leaves of nearly two hundred different kinds of trees.

Gibbon says that sugar was first brought from Asia to Europe A. D. 625.

Some writers say that there is a variety of sugar cane indigenous to America.

The word "caramel" is of Greek origin, and signifies simply black honey.

Leavulose is that sugar most liberally found in honey and various fruits.

The longest run in candy has been made by chocolate creams and caramels.

Etymologists declare that the sugar cane has 227 varieties of insect enemies.

Sugar is boiled, more or less, for candy, according to the kind to be made.

Maltose is that variety of sugar produced by the action of diastase on starch.

It is said that the dark varieties of sugar cane resist disease better than the light.

It is said that in France the production of beet root averages eleven tons per acre.

In 1803 there were eighty-one sugar estates in the delta of the Mississippi alone.

Candy stores located in the neighborhood of schools generally do a thriving business.

The cultivation of sugar extended from India to Persia some time in the ninth century.

It is said by botanists that sugar cane is not found growing wild in any part of the world.

Preserved fruits, in a state fit to be eaten, have been taken from the ruins of Herculaneum.

The sugar cane has been cultivated in every part of Africa that has been explored by whites.

For caramels and other dark candies the brown sugar is almost exclusively employed.

Manitose is a peculiar sugar found in mushrooms and one or two other vegetables.

Fat pork, baked in honey, was a favorite confection among the ladies in the days of Horace.

The sugar cane is a variety of grass whose saccharine properties have been developed by cultivation.

The "sweet cane" mentioned in Isaiah xliii : 24 is supposed by some critics to mean sugar cane.

Cane sugar, heated and treated with chlorate of potash, forms a detonating mixture of great intensity.

Nearchus, the admiral of Alexander the Great, noted the growth of the sugar cane in India B. C. 325.

ANOTHER LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR

Advises Use of Dr. Greene's Nervura Because He Knows It Will Cure.

Lieut.-Governor Fletcher Bids the Weak, Nervous and Discouraged to Hope, for the Wonderful Dr. Greene's Nervura Will Surely Cure Them.

The world believes its great men.

Their word is accepted as truth, their example followed, their advice taken.

Knowing this fact, the illustrious Lieut.-Governor of Vermont, Hon. Henry A. Fletcher, of Proctorsville, Vt., who is the descendant of a long line of Statesmen and Rulers, tells the people if they wish to get well, if they desire to get back their health and strength, to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy because he knows from personal experience, from its use in his own family and among his friends, and from having observed time and time again its wonderful curative powers, that it will surely and certainly cure, that it will give strength to the weak, strong nerves to the nervous, natural refreshing sleep to the sleepless, perfect digestion to the dyspeptic, rich, red blood to the feeble, freedom from pain to the rheumatic, in fact, sound and vigorous health to all who use it.

Lieut.-Governor Fletcher's family have been leaders and advisers of the people and publicly identified with the history of the United States for more than a hundred years. His father was both Lieut.-Governor and Governor of Vermont and his grandfather was one of the framers of the Constitution of Massachusetts.

Certainly no higher testimonial, no greater proof of a medicine's wonderful power to cure can possibly be given than is here bestowed upon Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy by this most distinguished statesman and head of the government of the state.

Surely no one who is ill, worn-out, run-down, weak, nervous, discouraged and disheartened by repeated failures to be cured can require any greater proof, any stronger testimony that Dr. Greene's Nervura will cure, that it will certainly restore health and strength to the weak and nervous sufferer, than Lieut.-Governor Fletcher's powerful words wherein he states that he has personally used it in his family with greatest benefit, knows it to be a most wonderful curer of disease, and earnestly recommends its use by all who are out of health and need medicine.

The great Statesman says:

"I have long heard of the good effects of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and have used it in my family. I have heard cases among my neighbors who have derived great benefit from its use and can truly say, that as far as my experience and information go, the results are highly satisfactory. This letter can be published for others' good."

If you are a sufferer from weakness or disease, do not hesitate to take Dr. Greene's Nervura and get well after such a testimonial from so illustrious and distinguished a Statesman.

Do you think so eminent a man of such high official position would lend his name and give his emphatic advice to use Dr. Greene's Nervura unless he knew positively its great value, its wondrous power to cure? He knows that his words will be heeded and his advice to use this grand remedy followed because of his high standing and he unhesitatingly tells the people, speaking the welcome truth to the sick with the voice and dignity of official authority, that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will cure the weak and suffering, will give health and strength, renewed life, restored energies and the zest and happiness of living.

Remember also that this is no so-called patent medicine, but the prescription and discovery of Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, the successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, who can be consulted without charge, personally or by letter.

New York Tribune

1897.

Recognized as a Great, Safe, Clean Family Paper—A Force in Public Affairs and Potent for Entertainment and Culture of Every Member of the Family.

A COLORED SUPPLEMENT WITH THE SEMI-WEEKLY.

There is a place in the United States for a weekly of really high intellectual quality, and the American people have given THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE a lavish welcome. During the past year THE WEEKLY was taken in over 24,000 families and read by about 1,250,000 people. Every effort will be made to brighten and enrich the paper and make it necessary to thousands of new friends.

Patriotic, self-respecting, enterprising, THE TRIBUNE is fearless and scholarly in editorial comment on public affairs, steadfast in principle, and not whirled about with every gust of passion; and it exhibits in every issue the truly American qualities of quickness, directness, brilliancy and force. It has won from Democratic rivals, by its thoroughly American spirit, the admission that it "commands the respect of all parties." In directing attention early and pointedly, to the availability of McKinley and Hobart for the Republican nominations in 1896, THE TRIBUNE played a now well known and important part.

THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE ministers to all the sweet and wholesome interests of life: and it is distinctly a paper for families and for those who want the spirit and the editorials of the leading Republican paper of the United States. It has an excellent Agricultural page, a page of Science and Mechanics, a charming page especially for women, a strong array of market reports of unchallenged excellence, and book reviews, foreign letters, and bright miscellany, in addition to the news of the week.

It can usually be subscribed for with local county weeklies. Sample copies free.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY is printed on Tuesday and Friday, and gives twice as much matter as The Weekly

The craving for color on the part of the young, and even of other members of a family, has now been recognized by THE SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE in the publication of a colored supplement of 16 pages, with each Friday's paper. If not gratified in a proper way, the liking for pictures and innocent bright reading matter will incline many to seek in the less desirable publications that which they cannot find in their favorite paper. The jokes and quaint paragraphs, and the fifty or more political cartoons, humorous sketches and half-tones, and other amusing contents of the colored supplement will prove a welcome addition to the wiser and weightier parts of the paper. It is printed on superfine paper, and its 16 pages are themselves fully worth the price of the SEMI-WEEKLY. Sold separately, as a pictorial weekly, "Twinkles" readily brings 5 cents a copy, and in the course of a year the reader would receive more than he has paid for THE TRIBUNE itself. The piquant comicalities of the supplement will lend new value to bound volumes and make each copy valuable long after the date of publication.

This edition is not offered in combination with local weeklies. The colored supplement will be sent only to subscribers, who forward the regular price of the SEMI-WEEKLY, $2.00 a year, to THE TRIBUNE direct.

Sample copies of Friday's SEMI-WEEKLY free.

DAILY, $8.00 a year. SUNDAY TRIBUNE, $2.00. SEMI-WEEKLY, $2.00. WEEKLY, $1.00. TRIBUNE ALMANAC for 1896, with full election returns, out in January, 25 cents a copy.

On The Hight

HE.

I dreamed last night, my darling,
That you stood on a hight.
Arrayed in shimmering garments,
And glorious to the sight;
And all the roads of all the earth
Led up to where you stood,
The very apotheosis
Of gentle maidenhood.
And people came from near and far,
To gaze in wonderment upon
You in your regal state;
But, ah! my love, in all that throng
That had been drawn to thee,
One person only held thy gaze—
And, I, oh! joy, was he.

SHE.

And in your dream, pray tell me,
As I stood upon that hight,
Arrayed in shimmering garments,
And glorious to the sight—
There, on that lofty pinnacle,
As I in splendor stood,
The very apotheosis
Of gentle maidenhood—
And, as the people pressed around—
The lowly and the great,
To gaze in wonderment upon
Me in my regal state—
Oh, tell me, tell me truly;
And relieve my troubled mind—
As I stood up there in glory,
Did my skirt hang straight behind?

—Cleveland Leader.

THE SHERIFF HAD SEEN ACTING.

The "Three Sevens" outfit was camped in the cottonwoods up on Paladuro creek, close to the line of No Man's Land, and every one was busy, for it was the season of the spring round-up. No Man's Land is that long, narrow strip of the Indian territory that prevents northwest Texas and southeast Kansas from coming in contact. Of course, it is out of the jurisdiction of either state, and for years Uncle Sam's officials zealously avoided it for many reasons.

Late one afternoon the sheriff of Broncho county came riding into camp inquiring for Denny Murphy. The sheriff's sudden appearance occasioned no surprise, for a warning of the same had preceded him fully three hours, and, as a direct result, Mr. Murphy, one of the best cowmen in the whole outfit, rode calmly over the border and into the land where subpoenas came not and warrants lost all their vitality.

A few days before the fugitive had been on one of his periodical tears down in the little settlement of Quirtville, and had been far more turbulent and violative of the peace and dignity of Broncho county than usual. He had clubbed the piano player in French Pete's dance hall nearly to death with the butt of a six-shooter; had shot all the lights and window-panes in the resort; also three fingers from Pete's good right hand, and had then ridden away, defiant, vociferous and unscathed. The after-clap was now present in the "Three Sevens" camp in the shape of the sheriff and those documents that begin so sarcastically with the word "greeting."

But, to use a slang phrase, the outfit gave the sheriff the laugh, informing him that Denny had "moseyed;" that, as a cowman, there was too much doing for him to spend any time tending to such minor affairs; that the sheriff would have to wait until the round-up was over, and he had better get down, stake his horse, and spend the night, for it was getting late, and Quirtville was a long ride back. The sheriff promptly accepted the invitation. He was an officer of experience and not given to chasing rainbows.

During the winter just passed some of the cowboys had been visiting civilization down in Fort Worth, and had attended the theater. Their minds being still filled with the glories of the experience, they diverted the camp-fire talk, after supper, to things theatrical.

This brought out the sheriff strong, for he had in his day been all over the country, and never lost an opportunity of attending the playhouse.

"Boys," said he, "I've seen a feller called Booth play the part of a devil named Iago so that my fingers itched to get holt of my gun. I've seen a dago named Salvini play a play named 'The Outlaw,' all in dago talk, but I didn't have to know that lingo to find out he was a worse used man than any that ever set foot in these whole United States. There's a woman, too, Clara Morris; she gave me a chill that lasted a week. But I've seen a man, a common plain man, who could lay over them all. I saw him do just one piece of acting and right after I had to hang him.

"It was a good while ago, just after they first got to electing me sheriff. I had a man in the jail and two deputies were staying right with him all the time, 'cause we couldn't take no chances of his getting away, him being convicted of murder and waiting for his day to come to be hung in. It was a mighty mean, low-down murder, too. Jury wasn't out more'n five minutes over it. His lawyer had tackled all the courts he could get into, but it was no go, and the feller's time was sure coming; only a couple of days off, it was. I think even right then old man Dunn and his carpenter were out in the jail-yard working away on the gallows.

"Well, on this day when you could hear them carpenters knocking and sawing back in the yard, who comes into my office room where I was sorting out some papers, but this feller's lawyer and a little old lady dressed in black clothes. She was a mighty nice looking old lady, leaning considerably against the lawyer, like she was nervous and tired. The lawyer tells me she has an idea that the fellow we were going to hang was her boy. He'd been loose from her a good lot of years, and she wasn't certain it was him, but she took up the notion somehow and wanted to see to make sure.

"Boys, I was broke up. I sorter felt her notion was right. These women folks is what makes hangings hard for the sheriffs. When a man thinks of a feller's mother it gets right next to him, sure.

"Course, I couldn't do nothing but agree, and I went with them, unlocked the doors and feeling bad. When we got to the cell there was the feller sitting on a stool, reading a book in the light that sifted through the bars of his little window hole. The two deputies were right there, too, one on each side, looking glum and sour, for this guarding business is a tough, mean job.

"The feller was a big, stout man, over six foot high. He had thick whiskers over his jaws and chin. They were black as a crow and his face had the prison bleach on. He hadn't been taking any care of himself, so he had a shaggy, animal sort of a look about him.

"It wasn't much light in there, and there wasn't much room. The guards stood a little to one side and the man stood up as we come in, looking mighty curious at the little old lady.

She was all in a tremble and staggered toward him, her poor, shaking hands stretched out. She was saying:—

"'George, George! My poor, poor boy. It's your old mother come to you.'

"I'll never forget to my dying day how pitiful her voice sounded. There come a big jump in her throat right there. But the man looked at her sorrowful-like for a second or two. His face never gave him away nor his voice neither. He says:—

"'Madam, there is one happiness still left me. I can convince you of your mistake. Some likeness there might be, but I am not your son. I never saw you before in my life. My mother died years ago. She has been spared the pain of seeing me here, as you can go away relieved of the thought that your son is as I am.'

"He talked so steady, so sure, so naturally sorry for the little old lady, too, and yet so like the gospel truth that you bet I felt relieved for her sake. She drew back and caught the lawyer's arm, saying:—

"'It has been so long ago. I am very feeble and don't feel well. The voice seems like, yet unlike. I must be mistaken. Poor fellow, I am indeed sorry for you, and will pray for you.'

"Even at this the fellow never turned a hair. Then we all turned and went out, leaving him and his guards just as they were before.

"It was all a lie. It was his mother. He begged as I never heard a human beg for me and the deputies not to tell; to save his mother from such a truth and her heart from breaking. He never told her nor nobody else. She's dead herself now, so it's no difference.

"Gentlemen, that was acting. Think of a man pulling himself together, meeting her so sudden, and then fooling his own mother without any preparin' or nothin'. That fellow's nerves were iron, I tell you. There must have been some sort of a good streak in him, anyhow. He died plum game, too. I was a heap shakier at the hanging than he was. I hated to do it, but I had to."—Philadelphia Times.

In Florida, where the heat at night at some seasons of the year is almost as unbearable as in the day, it is not unusual to ice the bed before retiring to rest. This is done in a very simple way. A metal vessel or pot, much in the form of an ancient warming pan used by our grandfathers, is filled with broken ice, and after standing until the ice has completely cooled the vessel, it is placed between the sheets and moved to and fro over the surface of the sheets and pillows until they are quite cold. This coolness of the bedclothes is very soothing to the heated and wearied body, and invarably induces immediate sleep.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Our Kitchen

No kitchen is kept cleaner than the premises devoted to the manufacture of NONE SUCH Mince Meat. No housewife can be more fastidious in the matter of preparing food than we are in the selection and preparation of the materials of which it is made. The cleaning of the currants (for one thing) is more thoroughly done by means of perfected appliances, than it would be possible to do it by hand.

Its cleanliness, purity, wholesomeness and deliciousness are good reasons for using NONE SUCH Mince Meat. The best reason is its saving—of time, of hard work, of money. A ten cent package affords you two large pies, without trouble to you beyond the making of the crust. Makes just as good fruit cake and fruit pudding as it does mince pie. Sold everywhere. Be sure and get the genuine.

Send your name and address, and mention this paper, and we will mail you free a book—"Mrs. Popkins' Thanksgiving"—by one of the most famous humorous authors of the day.

New York Tribune
1897.

Recognized as a Great, Safe, Clean Family Paper—A Force in Public Affairs and Potent for Entertainment and Culture of Every Member of the Family.

A COLORED SUPPLEMENT WITH THE SEMI-WEEKLY.

There is a place in the United States for a weekly of really high intellectual quality, and the American people have given THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE a lavish welcome. During the past year THE WEEKLY was taken in over 24,000 families and read by about 1,250,000 people. Every effort will be made to brighten and enrich the paper and make it necessary to thousands of new friends.

Patriotic, self-respecting, enterprising, THE TRIBUNE is fearless and scholarly in editorial comment on public affairs, steadfast in principle, and not whirled about with every gust of passion, and it exhibits in every issue the truly American qualities of quickness, directness, brilliancy and force. It has won from Democratic rivals, by its thoroughly American spirit, the admission that it "commands the respect of all parties." In directing attent on early and pointedly, to the availability of McKinley and Hobart for the Republican nominations in 1896, THE TRIBUNE played a now well known a d important part.

THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE ministers to all the sweet and wholesome interests of life; and it is distinctly a paper for families and for those who want the spirit and the editorials of the leading Republican paper of the United States. It has an excellent Agricultural page, a page of Science and Mechanics, a charming page especially for women, a strong array of market reports of unchallenged excellence, and book reviews, foreign letters, and bright miscellany, in addition to the news of the week.

It can usually be subscribed for with local county weeklies. Sample copies free.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY is printed on Tuesday and Friday, and gives twice as much matter as The Weekly.

The craving for color on the part of the young, and even of other members of a family, has now been recognized by THE SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE in the publication of a colored supplement of 16 pages, with each Friday's paper. If not gratified in a proper way, the liking for pictures and innocent bright reading matter will incline many to seek in the less desirable publications that which they cannot find in their favorite paper. The jokes and quaint paragraphs, and the fifty or more political cartoons, humorous sketches and half-tones, and other amusing contents of the colored supplement will prove a welcome addition to the wiser and weightier parts of the paper. It is printed on superfine paper, and its 16 pages are themselves fully worth the price of the SEMI-WEEKLY. Sold separately, as a pictorial weekly, "Twinkles" readily brings 5 cents a copy, and in the course of a year the reader would receive more than he has paid for THE TRIBUNE itself. The piquant comicalities of the supplement will lend new value to bound volumes and make each copy valuable long after the date of publication.

This edition is not offered in combination with local weeklies. The colored supplement will be sent only to subscribers, who forward the regular price of the SEMI-WEEKLY, $2.00 a year, to THE TRIBUNE direct.

Sample copies of Friday's SEMI-WEEKLY free.

DAILY, $8.00 a year. SUNDAY TRIBUNE, $2.00. SEMI-WEEKLY, $2.00. WEEKLY, $1.00. TRIBUNE ALMANAC for 1896, with full election returns, out in January, 25 cents a copy.

Strength for To-day.

Strength for to day is all that we need,
As there never will be a to-morrow;
For to-morrow will prove but another to-day,
With its measures of joy and sorrow.

Then why forecast the trials of life
With such sad and grave persistence;
And watch and wait for a crowd of ills
That as yet have no existence?

Strength for to-day—what a precious boon
For earnest souls who labor!
For the willing hands that minister
To the needy friend or neighbor.

Strength for to-day, that the weary hearts
In the battle for right may quail not;
And the eyes be dimmed with bitter tears,
In their search for light may fail not.

Strength for to-day, on the down hill track
For the travellers near the valley;
That up, far up on the other side,
Ere long they may safely rally.

Strength for to-day, that our precious youth
May happily shun temptation,
And build from the rise to the set of sun,
On a strong and sure foundation.

Strength for to-day, in house and home,
To practice forbearance sweetly;
To scatter kind words and loving deeds,
Still trusting in God completely.

Strength for to day is all we need,
As there never will be a to-morrow;
For to-morrow will prove but another to-day,
With its measures of joy and sorrow.

MR. WILSON.

"A chilly town! A chilly town!" murmured H. Pemberton Wilson as he limped around to the sunny side of the warehouse F and slowly let himself down to a recumbent position on the hot, tarry boards.

"A chilly town. That's what. Even in the summer time," said H. Pemberton Wilson, as he threw a stray nail into the muddy slip and lazily watched the rings enlarge and lose themselves in faintest ripples. "You take any train, and it lands you here, and the only comfort of living here is that there's so many trains out. I s'pose my stomach thinks I'm tryin' to go without anything for a week just on a bet. The country lanes must be sighin' for me. I wonder if turnips are getting large enough?"

To designate H. Pemberton Wilson as a hobo would simply corroborate his opinion of himself.

He has carved "Hobo Wilson" on many a section shanty and milepost between Scranton, Pa., and Council Bluffs, Ia., and there were friends who knew him as Rooster.

On one Indiana trip he had earned the title of Come Again Wilson, because he had a persistent way of getting on a train after being put off.

Like many another of his class, he was not devoid of sentiment or philosophy. He carried in his breast pocket a speckled volume of Burns' poems. He had forgotten to return it to a public library in southern Illinois. The book opened of itself at the lines, "A man's a man for a' that." Hobo Wilson read the poem as he lay with his back against the warm boards of warehouse F, and then he put the book back into the pocket of his coat, which he had thrown down deside him.

At the bend in the river a vessel was being unloaded. The click of the machinery and the noisy dumping of the big buckets at the regular intervals became rather soothing when the rhythm was understood. Hobo Wilson tapped with his thumb, keeping time, and looked through the rigging of a lumber schooner in the second slip beyond at the coughing smokestack which reached up from a small planing mill. The mill was buzzing in changeable tones, like a nest of discordant bumblebees.

The smoke rolling from the stack drifted through the rigging, which the yards and netted lines seemed to cut into irregular shapes. Hobo Wilson watched drowsily until to his blurred vision there were many fantastic forms floating in the foggy maze. And he was not greatly surprised when one of these forms took on the outline of a dwarfish human being and floated slowly toward him. It poised for a moment above a hawser timber and shook itself, a shower of soot falling from it. Then it settled into a comfortable sitting attitude and looked at him.

"Well, Rooster, how's everything?"

The voice was rather small and shrill. Hobo Wilson could not answer at once. He was marveling at the appearance of his strange visitor. The little man was hardly three feet high. Under the slouch hat was a good natured and wrinkled face, decorated on the chin with a tuft of beard, which might have been gray at one time, but which was now blackened and dusty, the same as his face and clothes. The latter were of rough quality—a hickory shirt, a shoddy pair of trousers fringed at the bottoms and held up by one suspender, and a pair of worn shoes much too large and laced with hemp twine.

"Are you down on your luck, Rooster?" asked the little man.

"I'm livin' on the air," said Hobo, "but where did you come from?"

"I just dropped in with the smoke. Don't you know me, eh?"

"That's what; I don't

'Listen, Hobo Wilson. Do you remember last Saturday morning when you were at Hammond and divided your handout with a brother who alighted from a box car a day out from Louisville and very hungry?"

"I do. 'A man's a man for a' that.'"

"True enough, Rooster. That was a good deed. More than once I have seen you give a comrade a good place on the truck."

"Where was you?"

"I dare say you didn't look up into the rolling cloud of smoke to see the good fairy of the hoboes."

"Fairy!"

"Cert. You didn't expect the guardian fairy of the hoboes to tear around the country in all kinds of weather with a little white robe and some ostrich feather wings."

"I s'pose not."

"Hobo Wilson, I've watched you. I never saw you do a pard any dirt. The good things of this world must not be given to brakemen and farmers and people who work. Are you hungry?"

"Sure!"

"Then feel in the pockets of that coat beside you and believe me when I tell you that every man must live before he dies."

"Sufferin' brake beams!" gasped Rooster, as he drew from one pocket after another crumpled rolls of bank bills. He heaped them up on ths faded check cloth, and his tears fell on them.

"No more drillin' in the snow; no soup-houses; never again in a bucket. Pard, you've done"—

But when he looked up again the one gallused fairy had disappeared, and the smoke which was pushed through the rigging and rolled away was blacker than ever.

He put all the money in his pockets, first throwing away the balls of twine, the old old pocketknife and the needle and thread wound about a beer cork.

On the street car he could find no bill less than $5, and the conductor grumbled about the change.

"Give me the change, confound you," said Mr. Wilson, "or else I'll have that number off your cap."

Thereupon the conductor quieted down and gave him his change. Mr. Wilson tossed 10 cents to a baby on a seat in front of him and then settled back to enjoy his ride. He had never known of a more beautiful day. He observed with much satisfaction that every one else seemed as happy as he. The women in the doorways were smiling, and children romped along the sidewalks. He counted the money from one pocket and found that it amounted to $65, or 1300 glasses of beer. The other passengers watched him curiously.

He alighted at Polk street and walked over to Dinny's place. The old crowd was there.

"Come up, you fellows," said Mr. Wilson, "and drink all you can hold. I mean it," he added, as they did not seem willing to stand up and take the chances. "Here's the stuff."

He dribbled out on the bar silver which the conductor had given him.

"Drink up that money!" shouted Mr. Wilson, "and say Dinny, give me a good cigar."

While the boys were taking away the "scuttles" as fast as they could be passed up, Mr. Wilson went out to purchase a wardrobe. He knew the place to go, because he had stood before it many a time looking at the brilliant neckties and white collars. The proprietor met him gruffly, but melted into smiles when he saw the roll of money.

"Fix me up from the skin out," said Mr. Wilson. "Give me the best stuff you've got and hand it out quick. Have you got a back room?"

Certainly he had a back room. Mr. Wilson was shown to that apartment and was treated to every courtesy. One by one the necessary articles were pushed into the room. At the end of ten minutes he was a new man. His neck felt the dignified embrace of a collar for the first time in years. The stiff shirt had straightened him up. He put his money into his new clothes and strolled out. The big officer who had once kicked him moved respectfully aside to allow him to pass.

"I'll hire some one to lick that fellow," said Mr. Wilson, as he directed his steps toward a fancy barroom.

He drank cocktail after cocktail, and the only effect was to increase his general cheerfulness and make every one around him more attentive to his wishes.

"Where's the best restaurant in town?" he asked, leaning over the bar and familiarly addressing the man in the white garments.

"It's two blocks down."

"I'll show you where it it," said a man who wore clothes almost as good as those of Mr. Wilson; "come with me."

Mr. Wilson locked arms with the gentleman who introduced himself as president of a bank and said he was proud to be allowed to walk along the street with Mr. Wilson. They met several distinguished citizens whose names Mr. Wilson had read in scraps of newspapers around the lodging house.

They met the mayor, the postmaster, Mr. Armour, Mr. Field, Mr. Pullman and others. Every time Mr. Wilson was introduced the whole crowd went and had a drink. Mr. Wilson showed them how much money he had, and they slapped him on the back and said he was a good fellow.

At last Mr. Wilson and the banker sat down to dine. They had lobster and pie and champagne and all kinds of drinks, and Mr. Wilson gave the waiter a dollar to fan him while he was eating. Mr. Wilson ate two lobsters, for they were the first he had tasted in ten years, and every one in the house watched him when he pulled out such a lot of money and demanded to know how much he owed the place.

After that he and the banker went riding in an open carriage, and all the people along stopped to see them go by. They halted in front of a saloon and had the bartender bring three bottles of champagne out to the carriage—one for Mr. Wilson, one for the banker, and one for the driver.

While they were drinking the champagne out of the bottles a crowd gathered around. Mr. Wilson ordered a policeman to disperse the crowd, and he did so promptly.

"Now, what shall we do next?" asked the banker, putting his arm around Mr. Wilson's neck.

"Oh, take a little ride and then have something more to drink. Drive up, there!" and he stood up in his seat and kicked the driver in the back.

So they drove up one street and down another, while the bands played and women at the windows waved handkerchiefs. Mr. Wilson leaned back in the cushions, thoroughly happy and counting his money, when he felt a sudden pain in his right foot.

The pain became more sharp.

He raised himself to his elbow.

He was getting the "hot foot." A heavy policeman was pounding the sole of his shoe. The club was lifted again, but Hobo Wilson drew back his leg.

"Go wan, now! Get a move!" said the policeman, giving him a kick with the broad of his foot.

"Well, I'm goin'," whined Hobo Wilson, whose head was all in a whirl as he came to his feet. He picked up his coat and limped around the corner of warehouse F, and at each step the cruel truth became clearer to him.

"Thank goodness for one thing," said he, "I can still taste the lobster."

There was one remarkable circumstance in connection with this adventure, and it is a puzzle to Pemberton Wilson, alias Hobo Wilson, alias Come Again Wilson, alias Rooster. He remembers throwing away the pocketbook, thread and needle and string when he found the money.

Sure enough, when he searched his coat afterward, he found that of his personal property only the copy of Burns remained.

ENGLISH AS SHE IS SPOKE.—"Papa, is Mrs. Bigelow very poor?"

"No, Cederic. Mrs. Bigelow is well off; don't you know what a nice house she has?"

But she sleeps in the hen coop, papa."

"Why, Cederic."

"She said she did."

"What do you mean?"

"Don't you remember when she was here to dinner night before last she excused herself and said she must go home early because she went to bed with the chickens?"—Harper's Round Table.

Failed but Once.—"Don't be afraid. Come right in—my wife's out. Have a little something? Here's a nice quality of old"—"Good heavens, man, you've got the wrong bottle! Look at that label! Don't you see it's marked 'Poison?'" "Oh, that's all right. That saves it from the hired girl. My own invention, you know. Clever, isn't it? Never failed but once." How was that?" "Hired girl couldn't read."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fuzzy—"I don't believe that errand boys, as a rule, are slow, do you?" Buzzy—"No, indeed. Why, I know a boy in particular who can read the whole of a penny novel while he's walking half a mile."—Tid Bits.

We call the, God, and wait for thee,
With longing day by day,
While thou art coming all the time
In nature's common way.

BAUBLE LORE.

The solitaire diamond still reigns supreme as an engagement ring, though occasionally, when money is no object, a large ruby takes its place. Opal rings are much in vogue. In fact, opals used in any way are very popular at present.

Watches are continually growing smaller in size. The plain gold watch is no longer bought by women of fashion. The enameled watches, thickly studded with jewels, are those most in favor. The more odd the watch, both in design and shape, the more it is prized.

Though an effort was made last year to make the watch chain popular again, it met with but little success. The chatelaine proudly holds its own. Its convenience is much in favor, and in addition to that, when fastened to the corsage, it is decidedly ornamental.

One of the smallest of the new watches is about the size of a ten-cent piece. It is shaped like a ball, with the face of the watch showing at the bottom. The ball is of pink enamel, thickly studded with pearls.

The oddest watch of the season entirely disguises the fact that it is a timepiece. It is exactly like a large green beetle, and may be pinned either to the belt or the corsage. The body of the beetle is dull gold, studded with different colored gems. The wings are folded close to the body, but when a hidden spring is touched they lift up, as if the beetle were about to fly, and disclose underneath the face of a tiny watch.

The newest chatelaines for watches consist of three or four jewels cut in the shape of bars and linked together by very small gems. A dark blue enamel watch will swing from a chatelaine made of bars of sapphire, connected, perhaps, with pearls or small diamonds. The top of the chatelaine to which the pin is fastened may be of Roman gold, but its decoration will consist of a large sapphire.

Girdles and belts will continue to be fashionable throughout the winter, and there are many magnificent buckles designed to be worn with them.

A girdle which is as odd as it is beautiful is made of Russian silver exquisitely enameled. It has the appearance of gilt, studded with bits of vari-colored enamel. The buckle which fastens it is shaped like a shield and is held together by a small sword. Other girdles, also, of Russian origin, are of silver, engraved and filled in with a composition of Neillo, which is then burned into the silver.—New York Journal.

OLD-TIME MINISTERIAL SALARIES.

The Evangelist has a pathetic article about the poor pay of Rev. Jonathan Edwards in Stockbridge, Mass. This was in the days when Congregationalism was established by law, and the town had to provide for the support of the ministry. At a town-meeting February 22, 1750, it was voted that "in case Rev. Jonathan Edwards should settle with them in the work of the ministry" he should receive the sum of six pounds 15 shillings and fourpence, about 35 dollars lawful money. Besides this he was to have 100 sleighloads of firewood, of which the Indians were to furnish 80 and the white settlers 20, which they were to chop in the woods and draw on sleds to his dwelling-house. This was not all, however, that Mr. Edwards received. He was to have a place to live and plenty of ground on which he could raise vegetables and whatever was necessary. All kinds of livestock in those days were very cheap, judged by our standards. It is interesting, however, to compare the money part of his salary with that of Bishop Asbury and the other preachers of an early day. According to the records, the amount he received per annum was $64, and up to the time of his death in 1816 he never rose beyond that sum.

Before determining whether these salaries were munificent or otherwise, it is necessary to compare the incomes of the Christian people of those days and of the citizens, the taxable property, and all of the other elements. Dr. Dorchester's researches into the early domestic life of New England show that, while the money consideration was not large, the condition of the orthodox minister was not one of relative starvation. In the mountains of Virginia, within 25 years, we have heard a dispute about spring chickens between a farmer's wife and the purveyor for a hotel 20 miles away. He wanted to pay her 5½ cents apiece; she wanted about nine cents. They compromised at last, according to our recollection, on six or seven, and he took away 150 or more spring chickens ready for broiling. In that country, until the people were, so to speak, corrupted by the lavish gifts of visitors, they would have called a man an extortioner who charged another more than 12 cents for a dinner. This was at least nine years after the civil war.—New York Christian Advocate.

THE MISSING WORD.

"This"—

The youth who heard her hung upon her words with eager expectation.

—"is"—

He knew that, having laid his all at her feet, the whole happiness of his future depended upon those words.

—"so"—

But now an angry flash replaced the anxiety in his face. He started to his feet.

—"s"—

"Enough."

It was the youth who gave vent to this last exclamation, and in no uncertain tone.

"I offered you my heart and hand and all the rest," he said, "because I believed you were out of the ordinary, unconventional, unique. But what you were about to say proves you to be of the same size and make as all the rest."

"I don't know where you smoke now," replied the beautiful girl with cold, calm dignity. "But you seem to be out of gear. What do you imagine I was going to say?"

"Just exactly," returned the youth with vibrant emphasis, "what every woman has said in every comic weekly in every country under the sun. You were going to answer as Eve answered the first words spoken by Adam under the influence of the apple. You were going to say"—

His voice sank until it became a hoarse whisper.

—"'This is so sudden.'"

The girl drew herself up to her full height and looked down upon him.

"Again I must remind you," she said in the same chilling accents, "that you are out of plumb. I had no intention of saying anything of the kind. I was about to remark, if you had not interrupted me, not that it was so sudden, but"—

A gleam of hope came into his eyes now. He drew a shade nearer and held his breath.

—"stupid."—New York Evening Journal.

"Batts is quite a Bohemian in his ways, isn't he?" "Batts? No. Never. He got hold of a $5 bill last week, and what do you think? Went and bought a meal ticket."—Indianapolis Journal.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 4, 1896.

ALONG with the collapse of the wire nail trust comes the smash of the window glass association. Although $2,000,000 is the figure which the dissolution is said to have cost the manufacturers, there will be few outside to mourn.

DID you ever stop to think on the vastness of area of this country of ours? Last Friday, which was so warm and balmy in New England, was a day of blizzards, wind and snow storms in the Dakotas, during which many lives were lost.

THE contest for the chairmanship of the Republican state committee seems to be between Col. A. H. Goetting of Springfield and Rev. A. E. Winship of Somerville. For various reasons it would seem that the choice of the former would best conserve the interests for which the party stands.

GREAT destitution is prevailing among the poor this winter, owing to the hard times of the past year, and of course falls heaviest in the large cities. A canvass of only half of Chicago has shown 8000 destitute families, about 35,000 persons, and it is estimated that the total in that city will reach 70,000.

A CHANGE in the postal rules which would be of great accommodation to business men is the suggestion that they be allowed to take to the post office bundles of letters or circulars and pay the postage on them by weight, instead of being compelled to affix a stamp to each one. It would be a great boon to the business house sending out large quantities of mail, while the government would make a considerable saving in the cost of the stamps necessary.

IS THE A. P. A. in Palmer dead, or simply lethargic? It is some time since anything has been heard from it, though a recent revival of its meetings would seem to indicate that it has not yet wholly given up the ghost. It has been said that they will try for the scalp of F. A. Ruggles next spring, should he be a candidate for re'election as a member of the school committee, and as Mr. Moulton's removal from town will make a vacancy to be filled, it would not be surprising if they should attempt to make their strength felt.

BAFFLED in his attempts to quell the insurrection in Cuba by any other means, Gen. Weyler has decided that the only way in which he can conquer the country is to kill every person whom he meets, and has accordingly announced that no quarter will be shown to previous non-combatants in the province of Pinar del Rio; they must take one side or the other, or their lives will pay the forfeit. If there was never before any excuse for interference on the part of the United States, the interests of civilization and humanity at large would seem to justify the taking of action now.

SERIOUS danger threatens the cities of Chippewa Falls and Eau Claire, Wis., situated a short distance apart on the same river. An immense ice gorge has formed at Chippewa Falls, and the water is now 28 feet above low water mark and rising a foot an hour. The ice gorge is 40 feet high, and the water in the stream below is going down, showing that little is finding its way through the ice. Down the stream is Eau Claire, which, if the ice should give away, will be practically wiped out of existence. Railroad traffic through the Chippewa valley is suspended, and the greatest alarm is felt.

THE withdrawal of the noon train service between Boston and New York over the Boston and Albany is said to be for the reason that the New York, New Haven and Hartford road refused to run these trains over its tracks. They were the fastest and most popular trains on the Albany, but they interfered with the traffic over the "Shore line" of the Consolidated road, and so had to come off when the latter gave the word. The Albany road is unfortunately situated regarding its New York travel—no matter how quick time it may make between Boston and Springfield, the New Haven road can loiter along from there to New York at its own sweet will and thumb its nose to the Albany road and its patrons. There ought to be a way of compelling the New Haven road to decently accommodate the New York travel which must of necessity go over it.

UP IN the little town of Wendell, in Franklin county, which the state census of '95 credited with a population of 529 people and 135 voters, a serious state of affairs exists by reason of greed for public office. At the annual town meeting last spring bids of $98 and $93 were made for collecting the taxes, and for some reason the highest bidder was elected. He failed to qualify within the time allowed by the statutes, though it has been the custom for the collector to qualify when the tax book is given him, along in the fall. The selectmen thereupon appointed another collector, and both claim the right to collect the taxes. The citizens are in doubt as to which has authority to give them legal receipts, and are not paying their taxes. In the meantime the town is without money, and the school teachers among others are wondering when they will receive what is due them. The case will be in heard in the supreme court next Monday.

TO SAY that the work done by the prosecuting committee has been a surprise to the people of Palmer would be putting it mild, to say the least. A record of 81 cases brought, convictions following in 73, with fines aggregating $3800 in 28 cases, the balance being continued, is one never even dreamed of by the most sanguine of previous prosecutors. The evidence, too, was of the most convincing, and left no doubt in the minds of those who were present at the trials; and if that already presented is not sufficient, the committee announces that it has about as much more which can be brought on these same cases, if they come to trial in the superior court. With the weight and character of the evidence, it is hard to see how the defendants can escape. The results attained by the committee prove the soundness of that trite saying, "Don't monkey with the buzz saw while in motion." When it was found that a no-license regime was to exist in the town, the committee—consisting of Rev. F. E. Jenkins, Rev. G. S Butler, and L. H. Gager—was appointed mainly through the efforts of two factions in the town meeting. Mr. Jenkins had been an ardent worker for a no-license vote, stoutly maintaining that such a vote could be enforced, and many who did not believe that it could thought the opportunity a favorable one in which to allow him to prove his statements; the other faction was that which thought that with two clergymen on the committee they would have a "soft snap;" in fact, one of the convicted defendants remarked the day after the committee's appointment, "He's only a minister, we'll have an easy time." They did for a time, and while the committee was apparently doing nothing but looking on from the outside, did a rushing business, but when the drag net was finally drawn they were all neatly gathered in. Whether they will take warning and go out of the business remains to be seen. At all events several of them have evidently changed their minds regarding the qualifications of the committee for the position, and will not vote to reappoint the present members should a no-license vote be cast next March. The committee has proved that its appointment has not been in vain, and that illegal liquor selling in Palmer can be reduced to a minimum.

PALMER NEWS.

WOMAN HELD UP THIS TIME.

Attempt to Take Her Diamonds From Her in Her Own Dooryard.

An unusually bold attempt at robbery was made at 7.30 Tuesday evening, when a man seized Mrs. H. D. Converse by the throat in the dooryard of her residence on the corner of Main and Thorndike streets, and demanded that she give him her diamonds. She escaped from the fellow, and beyond a severe fright was none the worse for her experience. Mrs. Converse had started to go to the house of Mrs. F. N. Carpenter, just across the dooryard, making use of a path which connects the premises at the rear, and near the barn. She had nearly reached the house when a man stepped from under a small tree and seizing her by the throat said, "Give me your diamonds. "Mrs. Converse wore a fur cape over her shoulders, and the fellow's grasp was on the collar of this, so that when she started back his hold slipped off; she started on a run for the house of Mrs. Carpenter, only about a dozen feet away, and the fellow followed, saying "D—n you!" as she slipped out of his grasp, but she reached the door ahead of him and he at once left. Dr. J. P. Schneider, who has an office in the house, saw the whole performance through the window, but not plainly, and thought it was children scuffling in the yard.

It is not thought that the fellow was lying in wait for Mrs. Converse, but rather for her husband, who is in the habit of collecting his rents on the first day of the month, and not infrequently has had considerable cash about him on the evening of that day. He has been in the habit of going to the barn each night about 7 or a little later to look after his horses, and it is supposed the man who made the assault was someone cognizant of these facts. He had evidently been waiting for some time, as tracks in the snow under the tree showed that he had moved about considerably. As Mrs. Converse, in passing to the other house, would be obliged to pass directly under the tree where he was standing, he probably thought he would make the best of the opportunity. She can give no description of the assailant, other than that he was slightly above her height, and that his hands were soft and warm. This is Mrs. Converse's second experience with robbers. Several years ago, before her marriage, she went down stairs one evening and found a man in the parlor, who knocked her down and escaped through a window, with money which he had secured.

MAN DROWNED AT THORNDIKE.

John Coughlan of Springfield Meets Death Within Easy Reach of Help.

A sad drowning accident occurred in Thorndike Monday morning, by which John Coughlan of Springfield, employed by the Springfield Construction Company in placing the bridge recently moved from Bondsville over the canal near the No. 2 mill, lost his life before the eyes of his fellow workman and within easy call of several hundred people in the mill near by. One trestle had been placed in position and was supported by several ropes and a plank. The men who were engaged in placing the other trestle in position found that it was necessary to remove this plank. Coughlan climbed upon the trestle for this purpose; he threw the plank down and had no sooner done so than the trestle gave way and precipitated him into the canal. He could not swim and was helpless; ropes were thrown him but he seemed to make no effort to grasp them, and after coming up once, sank. The canal was drawn off and the body was found near the lower gate. It was taken out by the workmen and Medical Examiner Holbrook summoned. Although no marks were found upon his body, it is thought that Coughlan was injured in his fall, and this, with the swift current and the fact that he was heavily clothed, are the reasons assigned why he did not remain upon the surface of the water longer. Coughlan was unmarried, but leaves a mother and a sister in Canada. He was a good workman and had been in the business about five years. He is well spoken off by those who were at work with him. The foreman in charge of the job was not present at the time of the accident, but arrived soon after. He says that the accident was the fault of the men at work, as the trestle could not help falling when the plank was taken away. As the canal at this point is very narrow it seemes peculiar that the unfortunate man was not rescued, but the men say that it all happened in a moment and they did all possible in their power to save him in that short period of time.

Symptoms Resembled Hydrophobia.—C. T. Brainerd's Two Cows Die from Unknown Cause.

Two cows belonging to C. T. Brainerd have recently died from unknown cause, but with symptoms which might apply either to hydrophobia or poisoning. The first was found to be sick on Monday of last week, and died on Wednesday; the other showed the first symptoms last Saturday morning, and died on Monday morning. The animals seemed to lose the use of their legs, and it was with difficulty that they could be made to move; their appetite also left, and they would not eat even the most tempting food. The local board of health was notified of the condition of the animals, and when the second was taken sick the cattle commission at Boston was telephoned to, but on account of the red tape which must be gone through with—certain papers from the local board of health being required before the state board will act—the animal was dead before they got around to it. Mr. Brainerd's dog also died about three weeks ago with much the same symptoms.

Agricultural Society Officers.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society was held in the district court room Tuesday afternoon, and these officers were elected: President, A. D. Norcross of Monson; vice presidents, C. K. Gamwell of Palmer and O. E. Bradway of Monson; secretary and treasurer, F. D. Barton of Palmer; delegate to the state board of agriculture for three years, O. P. Allen of Palmer; directors, G. W. Sherman of Brimfield, D. R. McCray of Hampden, C. D. Richardson of West Brookfield, E Bliss of Wilbraham, G. C. Flynt and F. D. Rogers of Monson, J. F. Foley and D. L. Bodfish of Palmer, E. R. Carpenter of Charlton City, G. H. B. Greene of Belchertown. It was voted to mortgage the society's property, subject to the approval of the state board.

A Mad Dog, Some Think.

A dog belonging to B. M. Griswold created considerable excitement Saturday by acting in a strange manner, running through the streets and biting several other dogs. He afterwards disappeared and has not since been found. A rumor was circulated that he was mad and much uneasiness was felt by the owners of the dogs bitten, as one owned by C. W. Robinson died from the effects of injuries received, but as yet none of them have shown any symptons of hydrophobia.

Held for Perjury in Liquor Cases.

Thomas Moran and John Coles, whose testimony in the recent trials for illegal liquor selling was flatly contradicted by the witnesses for the prosecution, and whose holding for perjury was asked by the prosecuting committee, were before the district court last Friday. They waved examination and were bound over to the grand jury in bonds of $300 each, bail being furnished.

Two More Liquor Fines.

The cases against Samuel Ferry for illegal liquor keeping and selling were tried in the district court last Friday afternoon, and he was found guilty in both. A fine of $100 was imposed in each case, and an appeal was taken, bonds in the sum of $600 being furnished.

The price of the book is $1 50 a copy.

William Tanner, 66, died Saturday at the residence of H. T. Huntington on Pine street. The immediate cause of his death was Bright's disease, from which he had been suffering several months. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon, the burial taking place in the cemetery at Four Corners. Rev. F. E. Jenkins of the Congregational church officiated. Mr. Tanner was formerly a resident of Greenfield, but has lived for a number of years in this town and Monson. He leaves a wife, a brother and a sister.

The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Flynt on Central street was the scene of a pretty event last Friday evening, when their daughter, Miss Hattie, gave an informal party to a number of her young friends. The evening was enjoyably spent in playing whist and dancing, music being furnished by Mrs. W. H. Small. Refreshments were served. Those present were Misses Lula A. Dillon, Ola M. Northrop, Pearl Lawton, Bessie Royce, Bertha Royce, Eloise Stone, Blanche Hellyar, Blanche Ramsden, Carrie Fish, and Messrs. Clarence Wing, Harold Shaw, Ralph LeGro, Granger Clark of Thorndike, Edwin Gardner, Albert Shaw, Henry Holbrook, Arthur Holbrook, Guy Stanchfield, Brigham Ball and Calvin Hastings.

Lovers of good music will have an ususual opportunity next Tuesday evening, when Mrs. W. H. Small will give an organ recital in the Congregational church, assisted by Mrs. Carrie E. Hancock. contralto, of Worcester. Mrs. Small's ability as an organist is well known, and Mrs. Hancock is one of the best known singers in Central and Eastern Massachusetts. All seats are reserved, and are now on sale at Allen's price 25 cents. The programme for the recital will be:

Toccata et Fuga in D minor,	Bach
Elevation,	Guilmant
Cantilena. Nuptiale,	Dubois
Song. "Ab Benediction,"	Barri
America, and variations,	Rinck
Song. "The Angel Came,"	Cowen
Serenade,	Gounod
March Soleunelle,	Lemaigre
Song. Selected.
Offertoire de St. Cecelia,	Batiste

It was too good to keep, so the victim told the joke on himself. A Palmer man who enjoys sports and sporting, saw an advertisement announcing that for 25 cents the "Ram's Horn," an illustrated Chicago weekly, would be sent three months on trial. Judging from the title and locality that the paper would be likely to contain something spicy, he invested a quarter. The first number came, and the subscriber was quite taken with the illustration on the first page; he pondered on it awhile and then turned to the other pages, where he found the work was good and the illustrations above the average of illustrated papers, so he concluded that he had made a good investment. But when he came to read some of the contents and found that he'd got hold of a first-class illustrated religious weekly, he decided that his subscription would lapse at the end of the first three months.

THREE RIVERS.

Dec. 10, Palmer opera house, Gorton's Minstrels.

M. E. Church Memorial Windows.

The cathedral windows have been placed in the auditorium of the Methodist church, and are double. The Starks-Thompson memorial window is at the southeast corner. The central design of each section is a bunch of lillies. Above in one section is a dove with the inscription, "Peace I leave with you. My peace I give unto you." Opposite there is a crown with the inscription, "Let not your heart be troubled." The inscription at the base is "Presented by Rev. W. H. L. Starks, Emma O. Starks, Clarissa Starks Thompson." The Marble-Earle and King's Daughters window is in the northeast corner. The central design of each section is geometrical. The Marble-Earle part has at the top for an emblem an open Bible, with the inscription, "Search the Scriptures." At the base are the words "In memory of Horace Marble and Homer Earle." This is the gift of Rev. William H. Marble and his wife, Sarah Earle Marble. The other section was presented by a donor whose name is withheld for the present. The cross and crown appear as the emblem at the top, and the inscription is "In His Name." At the base are the words "In memory of the order of King's Daughters." The progress in the church repairs has been somewhat delayed by a miscalculation of the amount of room required for the stairs, and it has been necessary to tear out a portion of the ceiling. The cost of repairs is now estimated at $2500.

That Dangerous Railroad Crossing Again.

A. M. Guilford had a narrow escape Saturday morning at the station crossing. A south bound freight train had passed a few minutes before Mr. Guilford drove from the station down Washington street. Just as the horse reached the track a car which had been switched from the train went whizzing by, barely missing the horse's nose. The animal was badly frightened and Mr. Guilford had difficulty in keeping him from running away. The crossing is a dangerous one, as the station on the north and the Flynt Company's storehouse on the south side of the road make it impossible to see the track for any distance when going south. Mr. Guilford's case is by no means an isolated one, and something should be done to make this crossing safe. Another source of complaint is the siding at the station, where merchandise is unloaded. The roadway where teams drive in and turn around is narrow, and terminates in an embankment a number of feet high.

Silver Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson M. Tucker celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary Monday, and a company of friends called during the evening and presented substantial tokens of regard. Mrs. Tucker was before her marriage Miss Burt. Mr. Tucker is a native of Monson, and the couple have since their marriage occupied their present home on Granite street. They have four children, Mrs. Helen B. Wilkins of Washington, D. C., Misses Mabelle L. and Daisy, and George. It will be remembered that their eldest daughter was married last summer to Joseph Wilkins, and that the bride on that occasion wore her mother's wedding veil. Several weeks later Mr. Tucker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Tucker, celebrated their golden wedding.

Her Arm Amputated.

Mrs. William Stone of South Monson had her arm amputated near the shoulder Saturday. It will be recalled that Mrs. Stone underwent amputation of the member below the elbow last summer, the result of an injury to the wrist received when a child. For a number of years the wrist had been the cause of much suffering, and finally the bone became so diseased that amputation was necessary. The wound healed well, but it was found later that a second operation must be performed. Mrs. Stone is getting along well.

The annual meeting of Day Spring lodge of Massons will be held next Tuesday evening.

Eighty-five copies of "The Students Hymnal" have placed been in the Academy chapel.

R. F. Bradway has been on his semi-annual trip to the furniture exposition, held in New York this week.

The Unity company will give the first entertainment of the Academy course in Memorial Hall this evening.

Charles Adams, who in spending some time in town, will give a vocal concert in the United Workmen's hall to-morrow evening.

Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps will hold its annual meeting for the election of officers next Wednesday evening, and a large attendance is desired.

The Y. P. C. U. held a meeting last evening to consider the advisability of issuing a church paper, and took the preliminary steps toward the realization of the same.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. McElwaine of Kokomo, Ind., spent Saturday with the family of John Orcutte. Mr. McElwain was for a number of years a resident of Monson.

Dr. W. H. L. Starks of Ocean Grove, N. J., who has been spending several weeks with his daughter, Mrs. C. G. Thompson, has returned to his home for a week or more.

The Ladies' Circle of the Universalist church will meet next Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Harlow Chapin on Green street. The Circle is planning a Christmas sale of aprons, etc.

Edward F. Morris will give the second of his informal talks on his recent trip to Europe in the Academy chapel next Friday evening, at 8 o'clock. All interested are invited to attend.

The Junior Endeavor Society will present the farce, "Editha's Burglar," at the Congregational church next Wednesday at 7 p. m., after which there will be a sociable with cake, cocoa, and home-made candy.

Rev. B. F. Eaton of Tufts College preached in the Universalist church last Sunday. Rev. Harry Blackford will take for his subject Sunday, "Unconscious Godliness the highest quality of a Christian life."

A pleasant social was held Wednesday evening in the Congregational church parlors, and an amusing farce was presented by the young people. The supper was under the management of Mrs. C. M. Gage.

The Monson Orchestra promises a fine entertainment in Memorial Hall next Tuesday evening, having secured the S. Homer Eaton concert company of Boston, assisted by Miss Anna Murray and J. S. R. Coy.

The third quarterly conference of the Methodist church will be held to-morrow evening; Presiding Elder Thorndike will be present. Dr. Thorndike will preach Sunday morning, and go to Wales in the afternoon.

In his sermon at the Congregational church last Sunday morning Rev. F. S. Hatch refered to the day as being the ninth anniversary of his pastorate, and spoke of the cooperation of his people with him in his work.

The formation of a kindergarten seems quite probable. Persons desirous of having their children attend will please confer with Miss Wood. As but 15 can be accommodated, they will be taken in order of their application.

G. L. Fuller, the shoeist, has inaugurated a novel way of influencing cash trade, by giving each customer a 5-cent coupon for each $1 invested. When a customer has 20 coupons he is allowed that amount on any subsequent purchase.

Will Carleton gave a volume of his poems to the woman who sold the largest number of tickets for his recent entertainment, given under the auspices of the Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Methodist church, and she has presented the book to Mrs. W. H. Marble, the president of the society.

William S. Stacy, 81, died early this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Stephen Lamb, on Moulton Hill, death being due to pneumonia. He leaves four daughters and two sons. The funeral will be held at 1.30 Sunday afternoon at the house, and the burial will be in the Moulton Hill cemetery.

Prof. Charles C. Stearns of Hartford will speak in the Congregational church Sunday morning, giving "Some account of recent archæological discoveries." Prof. Stearns is a travelled student, competent to speak concerning the monuments and inscriptions of the East, where so many important discoveries have been made in recent years.

Mrs. Annie Russell Marble of Worcester will give a lecture under the auspices of the Currents Events Club at the home of Mrs. A. D. Ellis next Friday, at 3 o'clock. The subject will be, "Three famous women: Mary Lamb, Dorothy Wordsworth, and Christina Rosetti." Tickets can be obtained of Mrs. L. C. Flynt or Mrs. S. F. Cushman, Jr.; price 35 cents.

Local Germans have been quite excited over the happenings in the case of two relatives of Mrs. John Gast of South Monson. The two men came from Germany last week and were held in New York on a charge of breaking the contract labor law. Mr. Gast went to New York to investigate, but did not succeed in effecting their release. Mrs. Gast then took matters into her own hands, and returned home triumphant, accompanied by the men. Germans from several of the surrounding towns have called to talk the affair over and offer congratulations.

WALES.

A number of the young friends of Lewis D. Royce made him a surprise visit Wednesday evening, presenting him with a handsome silver mounted silk umbrella. Refreshments were served during the evening, games, etc., indulged in, and a very pleasant time was enjoyed.

WEST WARREN.

William S. Merritt, 57, formerly of this town, was run over by a coal car at Amherst last Friday morning, both legs being cut off below the knees. He died from the effects of the accident at noon The funeral was held at 10 o'clock a. m. Monday, at Amherst, the burial taking place in Warren.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

William H. Bearse of East Providence was a visitor in town Sunday, the guest of Miss Bell, of Main street

James Eagan, for many years clerk and for several years manager in the store of W. E. Stone, has purchased the stock and good will of the former proprietor, and took posession Tuesday. Mr. Eagan will keep a full line of groceries, and will run a drug store in connection with the same.

Rev. H. B. Mason is reported as very comfortable at the hospital in Boston. The operation was performed on his leg last Friday, and the patient is now on the road to recovery. An X-ray photograph taken of his leg before the operation showed the dead bone, or as the surgeons put it, a bare bone, and also located twenty-four shot which have been imbedded in the tissue of the leg since he was accidentally shot twenty years ago.

WILBRAHAM.

Fred Reid, who is teaching school in Vermont, has been visiting Harry Clark this week.

The winter term of the public schools began Monday. No. 4 school has been divided into two, Miss Merrick retaining the advanced grade and Miss Winifred Miller taking the primary.

Rev. M. S. Howard of the Congregational church repeated the sermon last Sunday evening which he preached at South Yarmouth recently on the occasion of the celebration of the fortieth anniversary of his ordination.

The following officers of Newton Lodge of Masons were installed by Worthy Grand Lecturer Chauncey E. Peck Tuesday evening: W. M., C. C. Bebee; S. W., C. G. Robbins; J. W., A. W. Lyman; treasurer, F. W Green; secretary, W. H. Day; M., W. T. Eaton; C., F. E Clark; S. D., L. J. Potter; J. D., F. A. Gurney; S. S., D. H. Eaton; J. S., L Stacy; tyler, J. M. King.

BRIMFIELD.

The Ladies' Union will give an entertainment in the town hall to-morrow evening.

Orus E. Parker has exchanged his large farm on Tower Hill for property in Springfield

The slaughter house of John Springfield caught fire Monday afternoon, but the blaze was extinguished before any serious damage was done.

Thirty-three volumes of the Atlantic Monthly, dating back to 1857, volume 4, and three volumes of Little's Living Age have recently been added to the town library. These, together with magazines which the library subscribes for, make 71 volumes which have just come from the bindery. Additional shelf room in the library is now necessary on account of the large increase of books this year. The library has received from John M. Warren of Worcester the gift of several extension cases which are used by the teachers in the outlying districts for transporting books.

BELCHERTOWN.

Dr. Hasbrouck has taken the position of tenor in the Congregational church choir.

Mrs. Susan Bridgman has gone to Green Cove Springs, Fla., where she will spend the winter.

George N. Barrett, a travelling salesman, is visiting at the home of his father, J. S. Barrett.

The Literary Club meets in the chapel to-night and will take up the second reading of Tennyson.

Mrs. C. D. Williams and sister, Mrs. Hyde, are expected soon to occupy their newly-purchased house on New street.

The Maple street resident who lost $30 by fire last week, has been presented with a check for that amount by a friend.

The directors of the Creamery Association have advertised for cream gatherers on the seven different routes, for five different butter routes, and also for the sale of butter-milk at the creamery.

Mrs. George L. King has been appointed special commissioner, to administer oaths and perform the duties usually devolving upon such an officer. Mrs. King has an office in the news room of F. L. Plaintiff.

Union Grange has elected the following officers: Master, R. W Lyman; overseer, E A. Randall; lecturer, M. A. Morse; steward, M. E. Williams; assistant steward, A. E. Pease; chaplain, F. L. Stebbins; treasurer, H. F. Curtis; secretary, Mrs. M. G. Ward; gate-keeper, Jasper Knight; Pomona, Miss Harriette Greene; Flora, Miss Olive Goodwin; Ceres, Miss Rose Olds; lady assistant steward, Mrs. E. A. Randall; executive committee, G. H. B. Greene, H. F. Curtis and Herman Lane.

WARREN.

Miss Howe is the guest of her cousin, Miss Mary Howe, at Dr E J. Buck's.

The Tuesday Club was entertained by Mrs. George deLaval Tuesday afternoon.

The Woman's Board of Missions met with Mrs. Joseph Hitchcock Wednesday afternoon.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union met with Mrs. Nellie F. Adams Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Webber of Holyoke and Mr. Charles Chapin of Springfield have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Fairbank this week.

Rev. Mr. Moulton of Palmer preached in the Universalist church last Sabbath in exchange with Rev. Mr. Fisher.

A horse belonging to Mr. Benway of West Warren ran away on the old road to West Brookfield Monday, and collided with a team driven by Sexton Douglas. The occupants of both carriages were badly shaken up, and Mr. Benway's horse was so badly injured that it had to be killed.

The third of the entertainments in the lecture course was given by Col. L. F. Copeland Tuesday night. In order to make railroad connections Col. Copeland changed his subject to a shorter lecture, entitled, "Seeing the Elephant," which proved to be a very pleasing subject, consisting of very clever delineations of various phases of human nature, told in a very humorous style. Colonel Copeland is a very versatile speaker, and held the sympathy of the audience from the start.

The funeral service of Mrs. E. F. Strickland was held at her late home on Bacon street this afternoon. A devoted wife and mother, a kind neighbor and a loyal friend, Mrs. Strickland has been an invalid for many years and had been critically ill since last July. She died at Lexington, Mass Four daughters, Mrs. Frederick Rice of Lexington, Mrs. Winthrop Jameson of Cambridge, Mrs. Albert of Whitney, and Miss F B Strickland of Warren and one son, Mr. Frank Strickland of Springfield, survive her Her husband died several years ago.

WARE.

There was a good attendance at the Blue Ribbon League roll call meeting on Tuesday evening. P. J. King, the president, gave some account of the work done by the League the past year; Miss Lucy Hitchcock gave a guitar solo, and Miss Blanche Hatch an interesting recitation. Refreshments were served at the close of the entertainment.

An Old Man Runs a Race.

Daniel Nolan of this town, ex-selectman and a well known brick mason, won a wager of $100 last Saturday in a rather unusual manner. Mr. Nolan heard several young men say that there was no man in Ware who could run from the post office at Gilbertville to Main street in this village, about 4½ miles, in 45 minutes, and that they were willing to back up their opinion with money. He covered their money and won the wager, covering the distance in 40 minutes, 14½ seconds, which is excellent time for a man of his years. Dr. Auger, F R Cunningham and T. C. Gleason accompanied him with a team and kept the time. Great excitement prevailed during the race, people all along the route cheering Nolan on, and when he came into Ware hundreds of people gave him a round of applause. Mr Nolan is well known in town, and owns considerable real estate. He was a member of the board of selectmen three years ago. He is 52 years of age.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age, was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future" 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by LeGro & Lynde. Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

A REMARKABLE NOVELTY.

The Boston Sunday Journal Starts a Series of Photographic Interviews.

It has remained for the Boston Sunday Journal to inaugurate a novelty which will be appreciated by all newspaper readers of New England. It is a series of photographic interviews with society leaders, in which a full page of genuine photographs taken in the home show vividly the different points of interest brought out by the writer. The wonderful beauty and accuracy of the Sunday Journal's pictures have made them famous all over New England, and these pictures are the most interesting yet published. They are beautiful, novel and perfectly true to life. The first in the series was Mrs. William Lee, the representative society woman, wife of the well-known publisher, and Honorary Regent of the Daughters of the Revolution, and there will be given in turn equally interesting interviews with leaders of New England.

In using Ayer's Hygienic Coffee, don't make it too strong. Grocers sell it.

LIKE THE PARENTS,

Boys Can Have Their Coffee Now.

When a good healthy boy sits down to his breakfast and sees Pa and Ma have their coffee to dip toast in and sip, he feels slighted that he can't have some too. But parents know that it is really poisonous to children and refuse them. Postum, the grain coffee made by Postum Cereal Co. lim., Battle Creek, Mich., is exactly like coffee in looks and yet it is made of the healthful grains and is nourishing and fattening. Boys and girls can drink it every meal if they like. It is simply food of the most nourishing sort, but so prepared that it fills the eye of even a careful expert.

Dr. E Schoene, 1176 Milwaukee Ave., Chicago, says "I am very much pleased with Postum. It is a delicious drink, and I think preferable to all similar products, such as Health Coffee, Malt, etc"

A reliable grocer will never offer a cheap or weak imitation of a genuine original article because he happens to make a little extra profit. But it is well to observe that when genuine Postum Cereal coffee is ordered, that you get Postum and not a spurious imitation offered as "just as good."

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men says is to one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhoea and dysentery. I always recommended it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it, Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat.' Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

The Ideal Panacea.

James L. Francis, Alderman, Chicago, says: "I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as an ideal panacea for coughs, colds and lung complaints, having used it in my family for the last five years, to the exclusion of physician's prescriptions or other preparations"

Rev. John Burgus, Keokuk, Iowa, writes: "I have been a minister of the Methodist church for 50 years or more, and have never found so beneficial, or that gave me such speedy relief as Dr. King's New Discovery." Try this ideal cough remedy now. Trial bottles free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

REACHES THE HUB.

The Little Conqueror Comes to Boston. People Are Becoming Enthusiastic.

(From the Boston Globe.)

When the welfare of the public is at stake our citizens are interested. The little conqueror has come and conquered. Boston has proven no exception to the rule; everything is swept before the onward march. Enthusiastic people are talking about their experience. Many a reader of this knows where the photographic studio of Mr. C. H. Foster is, at 28 Hanover street, and no doubt a number know Mr. Foster personally—a Bostonian for 35 years, and a man whose statement should satisfy the skeptic. This is how he speaks of his case. To our representative he said: "About 15 years ago I was a very sick man with diabetes. That is what the doctors called it. They told me I would not live for many years, and advised salt water air at the seashore as the only thing that could be done for me. This appeared to help me, but for the last ten years I have suffered excessively from most distressing pains across my kidneys, which were constantly there, until I began to take DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS, and they have relieved my suffering to the extent I hardly expected would ever be my lot. I had backache so bad at times it required almost superhuman energy to keep up. There was a dull, heavy, indescribable sensation in my head. My appetite was irregular, utterly failing me at times. My work taxed me and made my backache worse. Then I read about Doan's Kidney Pills. I was suffering greatly at the time, and decided to try them. I got a box at Knight's pharmacy, 97 Court street, and commenced taking them. After the first few days I knew they were doing me good, and as I continued the backache disappeared and rapidly improved The backache left me, and I no longer experience former suffering. My head is clear, and I feel brighter. The urine used to contain a heavy sediment. Doan's Kidney Pills have restored it to a normal condition. I feel to-day a hundred per cent better than in years. I regard my case as being really wonderful, and if my recommendation of Doan's Kidney Pills will induce sufferers from kidney disorders to try them I gladly authorize you to use it."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box, or sent by mail on receipt of price. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

BOYS AND GIRLS

Send Your Favorite Teacher to McKinley's Inauguration.

The Boston Globe has started a voting contest to decide who are the 30 most popular school teachers (men or women) in New England. The 30 successful teachers with 30 pupils (boys or girls) will go to Washington to witness the inauguration of President-elect McKinley, as guests of The Globe.

The trip will be made in special Pullman cars, the party will see all the buildings, etc., in the capital city and will stop at the best hotel in Washington.

All expenses, even to paying for a substitute for the teacher while absent, will be paid by The Globe.

See The Globe, daily or Sunday, for full particulars.

Weak Men and Women Will be Glad to Learn This.

Tired bodies, pale and sunken cheeks, haggard eyes, sleepless nights and weak nerves, are ruining our lives and killing our people. No wonder these poor sufferers bless Dr. Greene for his great offer. He is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, and the discoverer of that wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. He has established a system of letter correspondence at his office, 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., by which all can write him about their complaints, and by mentioning the symptoms they suffer from and telling him how they feel, they will receive an answer from him, free of charge, giving a complete description of their case and telling just what ails them. He gives most careful attention to every letter, tells just what to do to be cured perfectly and permanently, and makes all understand exactly what their complaint is. And all this costs nothing. No journeying to the city, no doctor's fee, the best medical advice and consultation in the world, and nothing to pay. The Doctor makes a specialty of treating patients through letter correspondence, and it is wonderfully successful. Write him at once, reader, and you will almost certainly be made strong and well.

Under the Snow.

Under the snow lies a secret, my dear,
Under the snow;
And it whispers the coming of roses fine,
And the golden bell of the jessamine vine,
This secret under the snow.

Under the snow sleeps a song, my love,
Under the snow;
And its notes unwaken to buttercups fair,
Or the violets' call in soft summer air;
This song sleeps under the snow.

Under the snow lisps a prayer, my sweet,
Under the snow;
And it melts in a hope on the crocus leaf,
And promises life in the hyacinth wreath,
This prayer down under the snow.

LITTLE SCOTCH GRANITE.

Burt and Johnnie Lee were delighted when their Scotch cousin came to live with them. He was little, but very bright and full of fun. He could tell curious things about his home in Scotland and his voyage across the ocean. He was as far advanced in his studies as they were, and the first day he went to school they thought him remarkably good. He wasted no time in play when he should have been studying, and he advanced finely.

At night, before the close of the school, the teacher called the roll and the boys began to answer. "Ten." When Willie understood that he was to say ten, if he had not whispered during the day, he replied, "I have whispered."

"More than once?" asked the teacher.

"Yes, sir," answered Willie.

"As many as ten times?"

"May be I have," faltered Willie.

"Then I shall mark you zero," said the teacher, sternly; "and that is a great disgrace."

"Why, I did not see you whisper once," said Johnnie that night after school.

"Well, I did," said Willie, "I saw others doing it, and so I asked to borrow a book; then I lent a slate pencil, and asked a boy for a knife, and did several such things. I supposed it was allowed."

"Oh, we all do it" said Burt, reddening. "There isn't any sense in the old rule; and nobody could keep it, nobody does."

"I will, or else I will say I haven't, said Willie. "Do you suppose I would tell ten lies in one heap?"

"Oh, we don't call them lies," muttered Johnnie. "There wouldn't be a credit among us at night if we were so strict."

"What of that, if you told the truth?" laughed Willie, bravely.

In a short time the boys all saw how it was with him He studied hard, played with all his might in playtime; but according to his account, he lost more credits than any of the rest. After some weeks the boys answered "Nine" and "Eight" oftener than they used to. Yet the schoolroom seemed to have grown quieter. Sometimes when Willie Grant's mark was even lower than usual, the teacher would smile peculiarly, but said no more of disgrace. Willie never preached at them or told tales; but, somehow, it made the boys ashamed of themselves, just the seeing that this sturdy, blue-eyed boy must tell the truth. It was putting the clean cloth by the half-soiled one, you see; and they felt like cheats and story-tellers. They talked him all over, and loved him, if they did nickname him "Scotch Granite," he was so firm about a promise.

Well at the end of the term, Willie's name was very low down on the credit list. When it was read, he had hard work not to cry; for he was very sensitive, and had tried hard to be perfect. But the last thing that day was a speech by the teacher, who told of once seeing a man muffled up in a cloak. He was passing him without a look, when he was told the man was Gen——, the great hero.

"The signs of his rank were hidden, but the hero was there just the same," said the teacher. "And now, boys, you will see what I mean when I give a little gold medal to the most faithful boy—the one really the most conscientiously 'perfect in his deportment' among you. Who shall have it?"

"Little Scotch Granite!" shouted forty boys at once; for the child whose name was so low on the credit list had made truth noble in their eyes.—The British Evangelist.

A WHOLESALE WAY WITH RATS.

The cunning of rats makes attempts to catch them in traps almost futile, their keen scent recognizing the place where a hand has been, and warning them to avoid so dangerous a locality. The use of gloves smeared with anise seed may lull the suspicions of the animal, but traps will never be the means of greatly diminishing its numbers where it has fairly established itself. The best course to take where the extermination of a colony of rats becomes necessary is to make them help destroy one another in the following manner.

A number of tubs, proportionate to the number of rats in the place from which it is desired to rid them, should be placed about, the middle of each occupied by a brick standing on end. The bottom of these tubs should be covered with water to such a depth that about an inch of brick projects above it. The top of the tub should be covered with stout brown paper, upon which a dainty meal of bacon rind and other scraps dear to the rat palate figures, a sloping board giving the rodents facilities for partaking of it. The feast should be renewed for several nights, so that all the rats in the neighborhood may get to know of the good food which is placed within such easy reach.

When it is judged that this policy has pursued long enough, the center of the brown paper should be cut in such a manner that any rat venturing on it will be precipitated into the cold water below. It might be thought that the result of this would be the capture of a rat, or at the most two, for each tub prepared, but no such meager result for the trouble that has been taken need be feared. The rat, finding his trust abused and himself struggling in the water at the bottom of the tub, soon recovers sufficiently from the shock to discover that there is an island of refuge, on to which he clambers, and squeals his loudest for help. Now the squeal of a rat in trouble attracts every one of his kind within hearing, and very few moments will elapse before the victem of misplaced confidence is joined by one of his friends. The new comer is as quick to discover the chance of escape from a watery grave as was the original victim, but when he attempts to avail himself of its presence, it becomes apparent that there is not room for more than one upon it. The first comer resists with tooth and nail the efforts of his companion in trouble to dispossess him of his coign of vantage, and the squeals which form an accompaniment to the fight for a footing upon the brick attract more rats to the scene of the tragedy. The conflict waxes more and more furious as rat after rat topples into the water, and by morning bedraggled corpses in plenty will gladden the eye of the man whose losses at the tooth of the rats have induced him to adopt this means of thinning their numbers. Some years ago the plan described above was tried in a city warehouse, with the result that 3000 rats were destroyed in a single night.—Cornhill Magazine.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Why

Do people buy Hood's Sarsaparilla in preference to any other,—in fact almost to the exclusion of all others?

Because

they know from actual use that Hood's is the best, i. e., it cures when others fail. Hood's Sarsaparilla is still made under the personal supervision of the educated pharmacists who originated it.

The question of best is just as positively decided in favor of Hood's as the question of comparative sales.

Another thing: Every advertisement of Hood's Sarsaparilla is true, is honest.

JUDGE AND SENATOR.

Judge Willard Martin Gives His Powerful Indorsement to Dr. Greene's Nervura.

The Eminent Judge, Senator and Director of Barre National Bank, Says He Has Used Dr. Greene's Nervura in His Family With Great Benefit.

JUDGE WILLARD S. MARTIN.

The world wants to be convinced. What people want is proof that a medicine will cure; then they will use it gladly.

Someone you believe in, a prominent person who you know will tell the exact truth and who has seen the wonderful effect and observed the remarkable cures wrought by the remedy he recommends, is what you want, and when such testimony is given, you will not hesitate an instant to follow his advice, obtain the remedy and thus be speedily cured.

When therefore the Hon. Judge Willard S. Martin, of Plainfield, Vt., Associate Judge of the County Court, Senator from Washington County, and Director of the Barre National Bank, a man honored and esteemed throughout the entire state, tells you to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and backs up his advice by telling you that he has repeatedly used it in his own family with the greatest benefit and that he has known of its having cured many people in his locality and elsewhere, you can certainly have the utmost confidence in the wonderful curative powers of this grand medicine and take it yourself if you are sick, ailing or out of order, with absolute assurance of beneficial results.

Read His Honor's, the Judge's own words in which he advises you to try Dr. Greene's Nervura and be convinced that this wonderful curer of diseases is just what your case requires:

"I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura and blood nerve remedy in my family and have found good results from its use. Especially in cases of sleeplessness and nervousness has it been of benefit to some of my family.

"I have heard of many from this locality who have derived benefit from its use. My son was in a large school when a fire started and at one time threatened to be disastrous, which excited him and unsettled his nerves, and on visiting home, he used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy with quite satisfactory results.

"We are glad of this opportunity to recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura for others' use, and give permission to publish this letter for the good of others."

No greater proof that a medicine will cure you can possibly be given than these words of an honored Judge and distinguished Senator. Take Dr. Greene's Nervura and feel again what it is to be well—to feel powerful and vigorous, to have strong, steady nerves, to sleep soundly and wake mornings refreshed and energetic. No matter how badly you may feel, Dr. Greene's Nervura will go to the root of your disease and cure you of your troubles.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy should not be classed with ordinary patent medicines; it is a physician's prescription, endorsed and recommended by the most eminent doctors of our land. Its discoverer, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, and can be consulted in all cases free of charge, personally or by letter.

The Stork and the Kangaroo.

Said a stork to a kangaroo:
"I must be related to you.
A resemblance I see
Betwix you and me,
That leads me to think it really must be,"
Said the stork to the kangaroo.

To the stork said the kangaroo:
"What you say perhaps may be true.
I've really no doubt
That by searching about
Some far-away kinship we might ferret out,"
To the stork said the kangaroo.

Said the stork to the kangaroo:
"I think it is fun, do not you?
To mount to the sky—
For you surely can fly
If we are related." "Oh, no, sir! not I,"
To the stork said the kangaroo.

"No, not I," said the kangaroo,
"I have often tried, it is true;
But on earth I still stop,
For I've no wings to flop,
And when I endeavor to fly, I just hop,"
To the stork said the kangaroo.

THE SEASICK PASSENGER.

The Rev. Harold Woods was undoubtedly a very sick man. His patriarchal appearance and lovable deportment made him respected of all the passengers. Such as were not too seasick came often to his room to inquire after him. Several proffered their aid as nurses. None was more solicitious than Mr. Jenkins, the young college professor on a vacation. Jenkins installed himself as nurse to the sick man, who was too feeble to express any objections he may have felt.

Jenkins must have lately joined the faculty at Smithmead college, as several of the alumni on board did not remember him. But his glib tongue and easy manner soon allayed any doubts in that direction, and his kindness in sitting up with the Rev. Mr. Woods was generally a matter of flattering comment.

A disposition to carry various half-concealed packages into the sick man's room at night might have caused some curiosity had he been seen. And his clandestine visits to the room of a certain young widow, Mrs. Thorn, also supposed to be seasick, might have seemed no less bizarre than his nightly occupation of writing. Ever so many sheets of paper he covered, seeming to repeat the same characters often. A page covered with autographs of "Frank H. Thompson" would be finished to find Jenkins writing a repetition of "Robert H. Fay."

This writing was carried on only while the Rev. Mr. Woods slept. If he awoke, or a noise was heard in the stateroom, Jenkins would immediately be concerned in a novel. Jenkins would always mention at breakfast the pleasure the novel had given him the night before. So the days went by until the passage from San Francisco to Panama was almost done. The seasick passengers recovered, except Mrs. Thorn, who kept her stateroom incessantly. Jenkins's kindness to the minister was remembered by all with a glow of appreciation.

When the steamer was in sight of Panama the passengers were astounded to learn that the Rev. Harold Woods was none other than "Kid" Hull, the famous forger, and that Mr. Jenkins was Conklin, one of the Central Bureau detectives from San Francisco. Further, that Hull was, by the consent of the captain, under arrest. The Rev. Mr. Woods protested that greater outrage was never perpetrated. Conklin invited the captain to search the "Kid's room. The captain did so, and ordered the room to be locked. The Rev. Mr. Woods, alias "Kid" Hull, was placed in the brig till the local authorities could be informed. To inquiries Conklin responded that "If we had arrested this man in San Francisco before the ship sailed, others of the gang would have taken flight, thus spoiling the chief's plans."

The first person off the steamer was the Widow Thorn, whose anxiety to catch the night steamer for Guayaquil was evident. The first act of the widow was to send a cable message to San Francisco. Several hours later a cable message signed by the chief of the San Francisco detective force, requesting the superintendent of police at Panama to facilitate the return of Hull.

When the superintendent of police boarded the ship, in answer to the captain's request, he found Hull stoutly claiming the name of Harold Woods, with his profession as clergyman. His stateroom being searched, a quantity of paper with autographs of various people made his guilt too evident. Of course, the Rev. Mr. Woods disclaimed all knowledge of them, whereas the two police officials shrugged their shoulders, with a knowing smile at each other.

A ticket, from Panama to Guayaquil, issued to Anton Thomas, was found in the guilty man's valise. "He borrowed my ink to write that name on the ticket. That ticket was bought in San Francisco. See where the original is erased," said Detective Conklin "And, by the way, there is no extradition for forgery between the United States and Ecuador." The superintendent of police was charmed at the subtlety of Detective Conklin.

Several of the passengers lingered to protest against the detention of the Rev. Mr. Woods. Conklin retorted that "He claimed to be a preacher from Syracuse. Now, if you know any people from there, let them say whether I am mistaken." It occurred to the purser that Mrs. Thorn was from Syracuse. A passenger hastened to the other steamer to beg that Mrs. Thorn might assist in the release. Mrs. Thorn knew the preacher very well; "he was her cousin's pastor." Confronted by "Kid" Hull, she said at once: "I never saw you before. You are not Mr. Woods."

"With a Madam, you are insane," Hull asked the superintendent to cable to San Francisco for his description. The superintendent joined with Conklin voting it a clever piece of acting, and "Kid" Hull was locked up in the jail at Panama.

When alone with the superintendent, Detective Conklin asked so many questions relative to the climate at Guayaquil that the superintendent suggested that Conklin could go over and back before the steamer left for San Francisco. Capital idea. The ticket taken from Hull, which Hull swore was put in his valise, though issued to Anton Thomas, would carry Detective Conklin, and the superintendent at Panama would give Conklin a letter to his brother superintendent at Guayaquil. So Detective Conklin, from San Francisco, and the widow Thorn from Syracuse, supped together en route to Guayaquil that night.

It was very odd that the superintendent received the answer, "Hold Hull till detective comes," in response to his cable announcing to the San Francisco bureau the capture; stranger yet that Detective Conklin did not reach Panama from Guayaquil by return steamer.

Detective Delahanty of San Francisco, when confronted by the prisoner, remarked tersely: "The devil."

"No, my good man, I am Harold Woods, and the next mail will bring plenteous proof of it."

"This ain't Hull, at any rate," grumbled Delahanty. He then gave a description of Hull.

"Why, that was Detective Conklin," said the superintendent, relating to Delahanty the circumstances of the Rev. Mr. Wood's arrest.

"Well," said the detective, it's a good $100,000 where forgery can't be touched."

"Was there a woman in the case? A Mrs. Thorn, a beauty?"

"Yes."

"That's his wife."—Detroit Free Press.

THOUGHT ONE ENOUGH.—A Boston man traveling through the South was obliged to stop in a small town where there was but one hotel, at which the accommodations were hardly to be called elaborate.

When the colored waiter brought his dinner the Boston man found that he was to have roast beef, stewed tomatoes, corn, peas, potatoes and coffee, the vegetables served in the usual stone china canoes.

Presently he said to the waiter, "Dick, pass the spoons." The waiter rolled his eyes in genuine amazement.

"Spoons, sah! What do yo' want with the spoons? There's yo' spoon in yo' corn."—Argonaut.

GUESS SHE WASN'T MUCH AMERICAN.—An "American Woman" in the London Chronicle describes the average Englishman as "a superior being, of active brain, much travel, experience with women and a certain desire to please. American men are an eccentric growth, a hodge podge flung together in a galloping money grabbing civilization, not fully known to themselves." She adds, "In America we all like our fathers and brothers, but we haven't any great admiration for our husbands, although we may be fond of them in a patronizing way."

On the Beach.

I sit alone; in foam and spray
Wave after wave
Breaks on the rocks, which, stern and gray,
Shouldr the broken tide away,
Or murmers hoarse and strong through massy cleft and cave.

What heed I of the dusty land
And noisy town?
I see the mighty deep expand
From its white line of glimmering sand
To where the blue of heaven on blue waves shuts down!

In listless quietude of mind
I yield to all
The change of cloud and wave and wind;
And passive on the flood reclined,
I wander with the waves, and with them rise and fall.

But look, thou dreamer: Wave and shore
In shadow lie;
The night wind warns me back once more
To where, my native hilltops o'er,
Bends like an arch of fire the glowing sunset sky.

So then, beach, bluff and wave, farewell!
No token stone nor glittering shell
I bear with me,
But long and oft shall memory tell
Of this brief, thoughtful hour of musing by the sea.

—John Greenleaf Whittier

FARMER ELI'S VISIT TO THE SEA.

"It don't seem as if we'd really got round to it, does it, father?" asked Mrs. Pike.

The west was paling, and the August insects stirred in the air with their crooning chirp. Eli and his wife sat together on the washing bench outside the back door, waiting for the milk to cool before it should be strained. She was a large, comfortable woman, with an unlined face, and smooth, fine auburn hair; he was spare and somewhat bent, with curly iron-gray locks, growing thin, and crow's feet about his deep-set gray eyes.

"No; it don't seem as if 'twas goin' to happen," he owned. "It looked pretty dark to me all last week. It's a good deal of an undertakin', come to think it all over. I dunno's I care about goin'."

"Why, father? After you've thought about it so many years, an' Sereno's got the tents strapped up an' all! You must be crazy!"

"Well," said the farmer, gently, as he arose and went to carry the milk-pails into the pantry, calling coaxingly, as he did so, "Kitty! kitty! You had your milk. Don't you joggle, now!"

Mrs. Pike came ponderously to her feet, and followed, with the heavy, swaying motion of one grown fleshy and rheumatic. She was not in the least concerned about Eli's change of mood. He was a gentle soul, and she had always been able to guide him in the paths of her own choosing. Moreover, the present undertaking was one involving his own good fortune, and she meant to tolerate no foolish scruples which might interfere with its result. For Eli, though he had lived all his life within easy driving distance of the ocean, had never seen it, and ever since his boyhood he had cherished one darling plan—some day he would go to the shore and camp out there for a week. This, in his starved imagination, was like a dream of the Acropolis to an artist stricken blind, or as mountain outlines to the dweller in a lonely plain. But the years had flitted past, and the dream never seemed nearer completion. There was always planting, haying and harvesting to be considered; and, though he was fairly prosperous, excursions were foreign to his simple habit of life. But at last his wife had stepped into the van, and organized an expedition with all the valor of a Francis Drake.

"Now, don't you say one word, father," she had said. "We're going down to the beach, Sereno, an' Hattie, an' you an' me, an' we're goin' to camp out."

For days before the date of the excursion Eli had been solemn and tremulous, as with joy; but now on the eve of the great event, he shrank back from it, with an undefined notion that it was like death, and that he was not prepared. Next morning, however, when they all rose and took their early breakfast, preparatory to starting at 5, he showed no sign of indecision, and even went about his outdoor tasks with an alacrity calculated, as his wife approvingly remarked, to "for'ard the v'y'ge." He had at last begun to see his way clear, and he looked well satisfied when his daughter Hattie, and Sereno her husband, drove into the yard in a wagon cheerfully suggestive of a wandering life. The tents and a small hair trunk were stored in the back, and the horse's pail swung below.

"Well, father," called Hattie, her rosy face like a flower under the large shade hat she had trimmed for the occasion, "guess we're goin' to have a good day!"

He nodded from the window, where he was patiently holding his head high and undergoing strangulation, while his wife, breathing huskily with haste and importance, put on his stock.

At length the two teams were ready, and Eli mounted to his place, where he looked very slender beside his towering mate. The hired man stood leaning on the pump, chewing a bit of straw, and the cats rubbed against his legs, with tails like banners.

"Well, good-by, Luke," Mrs. Pike called over her shoulder; and Eli gave the man a solemn nod, gathered up the reins, and drove out of the yard. Just outside of the gate he pulled up.

"Whoa!" he called, and Luke lounged forward. "Don't you forget them cats! Get up, Doll!" and this time they were gone.

For the first 10 miles of the way, familiar in being the road to the market, Eli was placidly cheerful. The sense that he was going to do some strange deed, to step into an unknown country, dropped away from him, and he chatted, in his intermittent, serious fashion, of the crops and the lay of the land.

"Pretty bad job up along here, ain't it, father?" called Sereno, as they passed a sterile pasture, where two plodding men and a yoke of oxen were redeeming the soil from its rocky fetters.

"There's a good deal o' pasture in some places that ain't fit for nothin' but to hold the world together," returned Eli, and then he was silent, his eyes fixed on Doll's eloquent ears, his mouth working a little.

"We've prospered, ain't we, Maria?" he said, at last; and his wife, unconsciously followed his thoughts in the manner of those who have lived long together, stroked her black silk "visite" and answered, with a well-satisfied nod:—

"I guess we ain't got no cause to complain."

The roadside was parched under an August sun; tansy was dust covered, and ferns had grown ragged and gray. The jogging horses left behind their lazy feet a suffocating cloud.

"My land," cried Mrs. Pike, "if that ain't golden-rod. I do b'lieve it comes earlier every year, or else the seasons are changin'. See them elderberries! Ain't they purple! You just remember that bush, an' when we go back we'll fill some pails. I dunno when I've made elderberry wine."

Her husband, she was vaguely excited; she began to feel as if life would be all holidays. At noon they stopped under the shadow of an elm-tree which, from its footholds in a field, completely arched the road; and there they ate a lunch of pie and doughnuts, while the horses, freed from their headstalls, placidly munched a generous feed of oats, near.

At the lunch Eli ate sparingly, and with a preoccupied and solemn look.

"Land, father!" exclaimed his wife, "you ain't eat no more'n a bird!"

"I guess I'll go over to the well," said he, "an' get a drink o' water, I drink more'n I eat, if I ain't workin'." But when he came back, carefully bearing a tin pail brimming with cool, clear water, his face expressed disapprobation, and he smacked his lips scornfully.

"Terrible flat water!" he announced. "Tastes as if it had come out o' the cistern" But the others could find no fault with it, and Sereno drained the pail.

"Pretty good I call it," he said; and Mrs. Pike rejoined—

But Eli shook his head and ejaculated. "Brackish, brackish!" as he began to put the bits in Doll's patient mouth. He was thinking with a passion of loyalty of the clear, ice-cold water at home, which had never been shut out by a pump from the purifying airs of heaven, but lay where the splashing bucket and chain broke, every day, the image of moss and fern. His throat grew parched and dry with longing.

When they were within three miles of the sea it seemed to them that they could taste the saltness of the incoming breeze. The road was ankle deep in dust; the garden flowers were glaring in their brightness. It was a new world. And when at last they emerged from the marsh-bordered road upon a ridge of sand and turned a corner, Mrs. Pike faced her husband in triumph.

"There, father!" she cried. "There 'tis."

But Eli's eyes were fixed on the dashboard infront of him. He looked pale.

"Why, father," said she, impatiently, "ain't you goin' to look? It's the sea!"

"Yes, yes," said Eli, quietly; "bymeby. I'm going to put the horses up fust."

"Well, I never!" said Mrs. Pike, and as they drew up on the sandy tract where Sereno had previously arranged a place for their tents, she added, almost fretfully, turning to Hattie, "I dunno what's come over your father. There's the water and he won't even cast his eyes at it."

But Hattie understood her father, by some intuition of love, though not of likeness.

"Don't you bother him, ma," she said. "He'll make up his mind to it pretty soon. Here, le's lift out these little things while they're unharnessin, and then they can get at the tent.

Mrs. Pike's mind was diverted by the exigencies of labor, and she said no more: but after the horses had been put up at a neighboring house, and Sereno, red-faced with exertion, had superintended the tent-raising, Hattie slipped her arm through her father's and led him away. "Come, pa," she said, in a whisper; "le's you and me climb over on them rocks."

Eli went; and when they had picked their way over sand and pools to a headland where the water thundered below, and salt spray dashed up in mist to their feet, he turned and looked at the sea. He faced it as a soul might face Almighty Greatness, only to be striken blind thereafter; for his eyes filled painfully with slow, hot tears. Hattie did not look at him, but after a while she shouted in his ear, above the outcry of the surf,—

"Here, pa, take my handkerchief. I don't know how it is about you, but this spray gets in my eyes."

Eli took it obediently, but he did not speak; he only looked at the sea. The two sat there, chilled and quite content, until 6 o'clock, when Mrs. Pike came calling to them from the beach, with dramatic shouts, emphasized by the waving of her ample apron. "Supper's ready! Sereno's built a bonfire, and I've made some tea!"

Then they slowly made their way back to the tents and sat down to the evening meal. Sereno seemed content, and Mrs. Pike was bustling and triumphant.

"Well, father, what think?" she asked, smiling exuberantly as she passed him his mug of tea. "Does it come up to what you expected?"

Eli turned upon her mild, dazed eyes.

"I guess it does," he said gently.

That night they sat upon the shore while the moon rose and laid in the water her majestic pathway of light. Eli was the last to leave the rocks, and he lay down on his hard couch in the tent without speaking.

"I wouldn't say much to father," whispered Hattie to her mother, as they parted for the night. "Well, I s'pose he is some tired," said Mrs. Pike, acquiescing, after a brief look of surprise. "It's a good deal of a jaunt, but I dunno but I feel paid a'ready. Should you take out your hairpins, Hattie?"

She slept soundly and vocally, but her husband did not close his eyes. He looked though he could see nothing, through the opening in the tent, in the direction where lay the sea, solemnly clamorous, eternally responsive to some infinite whisper from without his world. The tension of the hour was almost more than he could bear; he longed for morning, in sharp suspense, with the faint hope that the light might bring relief. Just as the stars faded, and one luminous line penciled the east, he rose, smoothed his hair, and stepped softly out upon the beach. Here he saw two shadowy figures, Sereno and Hattie. She hurried forward to meet him.

"You goin' to see the sun rise, too, father?" she asked. "I made Sereno come. He's awful mad at bein' waked up." Eli grasped her arm.

"Hattie," he said, in a whisper, "don't you tell. I jest come out to see how 'twas here, before I go. I'm goin' home, I'm goin' now!"

"Why, father," said Hattie; but she peered more closely into his face, and her tone changed. "All right," she added. Sereno'll go and harness up."

"No; I'm goin' to walk."

"But, father—"

"I don't mean to break up your stayin' here, nor your mother's. Tell her how 'twas. I'm goin' to walk."

Hattie turned and took her father's hand. "I'll slip into the tent and put up something' for your breakfast and luncheon," she said.

So Eli yielded; but before his wife appeared he had turned his back on the sea, where the rose of dawn was fast unfolding. As he jogged homeward, the dusty roadsides bloomed with flowers of paradise, and the insects' dry chirp thrilled like the song of angels. He drove into the yard just at the turning of the day, when the fragrant smoke of many a crackling fire curls cheerily upward, in promise of the evening meal.

"What's busted?" asked Luke, swinging himself down from his load of fodder-corn, and beginning to unharness Doll.

"Oh, nothin'," said Eli, leaping from the wagon as if 20 years had been taken from his bones. "I guess I'm too old for such jaunts. I hope you didn't forgit them cats."

The Conqueror.

I saw an angel with majestic mien
And radiant brow, and smile divinely sweet;
Strong human passions writhed beneath his feet,
There too expired those coward faults which screen
Themselves behind inheritance, and lean
On dead men for their strength, and think it meet.
All, all lay prostrate, owning their defeat.
Then to the spirit with the eyes serene
I cried aloud, in wonder and in awe:
"O, mighty one, who art thou, that thy glance
Can circumvent nature? What thine occult law?
Art thou incarnate force—the over soul?
The angel answered, "I am self-control."

THE MYSTERIES OF A PACK OF CARDS.

A private soldier by the name of Richard Lee was taken before an English magistrate recently, for playing cards during divine service. It appears that a sergeant commanded the soldiers at the church, and when the parson had read the prayers, he took the text. Those who had a Bible took it out, but this soldier had neither Bible nor common prayer book, but pulling out a pack of cards he spread them before him. He just looked at one card and then at another. The sergeant of the company saw him and said, "Richard, put up the cards; this is no place for them."

"Never mind that," said Richard.

When the service was over the constable took Richard before the mayor.

"Well," said the mayor, "what have you brought the soldier here for?"

"For playing cards in church."

"Well, soldier, what have you to say for yourself?"

"Much sir, I hope."

"Very good, if not I will punish you more than man was ever punished."

"I have been," said the soldier, "about six weeks on the march. I have neither Bible nor common prayer book. I have nothing but a pack of cards, but I'll satisfy your worship of the purity of my intentions.' And, spreading the cards before the mayor he began with the ace: "When I see the ace it reminds me that there is but one God. When I see the deuce it reminds me of the Father and Son. When I see the tray, it reminds me of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. When I see the four spot it reminds me of the four evangelists that preached, Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. And when I meet the five it reminds me of the five wise virgins that trimmed their lamps—there were ten, five were wise, and five were foolish and were shut out. When I see the six, it reminds me that in six days the Lord made heaven and earth. When I see the seven, it reminds me that on the seventh day he rested from the great work he had created, and hallowed it. When I see the eight it reminds me of the eight righteous persons that were saved when God destroyed the world, viz: Noah and his wife, with three sons and their wives. When I see the nine, it reminds me of the nine lepers that were cleansed by our Saviour; there were nine out of ten who never returned thanks. When I see the ten, it reminds me of the ten commandments which God handed down to Moses on tables of stone. When I see the king, it reminds me of the King of Heaven, which is God Almighty. When I see the queen, it reminds me of the queen of Sheba, who visited Solomon, for she was as wise a woman as he was a man. She brought with her fifty boys and fifty girls, all dressed in boys' apparel, for King Solomon to tell which were boys and which were girls. King Solomon sent for water for them to wash; the girls washed to the elbows, and the boys to the wrists, so King Solomon told by that.

"When I count the suits in a pack, I find 365, as many days as there are in a year. When I count the number of cards in a pack, I find there are fifty-two, the number of weeks in a year, and I find four suits, the number of weeks in a month. I find there are twelve picture cards in a pack, representing the number of months in a year, and on counting the tricks I find thirteen, the number of weeks in a quarter. So you see, sir, a pack of cards serves for a Bible, almanac, and common prayer book."

"Well," said the mayor, "you have given a good description of all the cards but one."

"What is that?"

"The knave," aiad the the mayor.

"I will give your honor a description of that, too, if you will not be angry."

"I will not," said the mayor, "if you do not term me to be the knave."

"Well," said the soldier, "the greatest knave I know of is the constable that brought me here."

"I do not know," said the mayor, "if he is the greatest knave, but I know he is the greatest fool."

WELL TO REMEMBER.

What is good for one is not always good for another. This is illustrated in a short tale told some time ago about a French medical student. While in London on a visit the student lodged in the house with a man very sick with a fever, who was continually besieged by his nurse to drink very nauseating liquids which were luke-warm. The sick man found this almost impossible to do, until one day he whispered to his nurse:

"Bring me a salt herring and I will drink as much as you please."

The woman indulged him in his request; he ate the herring, drank the liquids, underwent the required perspiration and recovered.

The French student, thinking this very clever, inserted in his journal, "Salt herring cures an Englishman of fever."

On his return to France he prescribed the same remedy to his first patient with a fever. The patient died. On which he inserted in his journal, "N. B.—A salt herring cures an Englishman, but kills a Frenchman."—Harper's Round Table.

THERE WAS A MISTAKE IN THE TREE.

A rich man of this city gave a chestnut party. Chestnut parties are quite the rage just now. They are easily planned and carried out. About the only necessity is chestnuts. That's where the rich man stumbled. The chestnut supply at the point he had selected for the party was scarce. There was a splendid tree, but the crop was light. Wealth is the true father of expedients. The rich man bought a generous supply of chestnuts and sent them out to be carefully scattered beneath the tree. When the party arrived at the nutting ground, lo! the tree had been shaken and there on the ground lay the remarkably generous supply of nuts. The business of gathering them went merrily forward, when all of a sudden, one of the older members of the party picked up a fallen leaf and looked at it suspiciously. Then she glanced up at the tree above her.

"Isn't it strange?" she said.

"Isn't what strange?" said the rich man.

"That all these chestnuts should grow on an oak tree?"

And it was an oak, sure enough.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 11, 1896.

PALMER NEWS.

Next Week's Journal.

Next week's issue of the JOURNAL will be a Christmas number of eight pages. Its miscellaneous matter will be selected with special reference to this season, and besides a Christmas story, "Mrs. King's Christmas Present," will contain an original fairy story, written expressly for the JOURNAL by a little girl who read and liked the series of fairy stories recently closed. All the children will want to read it.

The centennial anniversary of Thomas Lodge of Masons will be fully reported, and the history of the lodge illustrated with 21 half-tones, including a portrait of Paul Revere and a reproduction of the charter of the lodge, which bears its signature.

Local matters in Palmer and the surrounding towns will be given full attention, and the JOURNAL of December 18th will be a valuable one to send to distant friends who were former residents in this vicinity.

Bad Freight Wreck on the New London Northern Road.

The "New York express freight," No. 15, which leaves here at 5 p. m. for New London, was wrecked at a point about a mile and a half from Eagleville at about 7 30 last Friday evening, and as a result of the disaster three of the train crew were killed. The dead are: Otis Hall, engineer, of Brattleboro; Benjamin Hall, firemen, brother of the engineer, also of Brattleboro; Warren Thomas, head brakeman, of Gouverneur, N. Y.

The train was late in leaving Palmer. When it arrived at Merrow it broke into two sections, Engineer Hall with the forward part running ahead of the rear section, which stopped near Mansfield. The forward part was probably running at the rate of twenty miles an hour, when near Eagleville the boiler of the engine exploded and caused the wreck. The force of the explosion was terrific, causing the engine to turn completely over. Cinders, pieces of the grate, the headlight and other parts of the engine were blown into the air and were found scattered in the fields a distance of 100 yards from the point where the explosion is thought to have taken place. Fifteen cars were piled together and were so badly smashed that they were rolled down the embankment and burned. The bodies of the dead men were found quite a distance from the engine. Engineer Hall's body was blown some 50 feet away, and his shoes were found 75 feet further away, having been blown from his feet. The track was also badly torn up, one steel rail being hurled against two telegraph poles and cutting them off clean. One car, which contained 20 head of cattle, was badly damaged but only two of the cattle were killed, the others escaping injury. What caused the explosion will probably never be known. The most likely theory is that a heavy pressure of steam was on, as the engineer wished to keep clear of the rear portion of the train which, for all he might have known, was fast overtaking him, and the stay bolts which hold the boiler plates together being weak, gave away. The engine, No. 155, has been in use 10 years, and was apparently in good condition. The bodies of the victims were examined by the coroner Saturday and sent to their homes in Vermont. Several trains were delayed a considerable length of time while the wrecked debris was being removed.

Masonic Centennial Next Week.

Thomas Lodge of Masons celebrates its centennial anniversary next Tuesday. Elaborate preparations are being made for this important occasion, and it will go down in the history of the lodge as a day long to be remembered. At 2.30 p. m. the organization of the lodge and the reception of the grand lodge will take place in the lodge room, and a procession will be formed to repair to the Congregational church, where the anniversary exercises will be held at 3, with the following programme:

Organ Prelude,	Mrs. W. H. Small
Mus c,	Temple Quartette
Prayer,
Address of Welcome,	Geo. H. Wilkins, W. M.
Response,	Edwin S. Holmes, M. W. G. M.
Historical Address,	O. P. Allen
Music,	Temple Quartette
Address,	Rev. Geo. C. Lorimer
Music,	Temple Quartette
Benediction.
Organ Postlude,	Mrs. W. H. Small

The public is invited to these exercises. At their close an informal reception will be held in Odd Fellows Hall, where at 6 30 a procession will be formed to repair to the opera house beneath, where a banquet will be served to which only Masons, their ladies and friends holding tickets will be admitted. After the banquet Judge Robinson will act as toastmaster. Music will be furnished by the Alpha Mandolin and Guitar Club. G. W. Armstrong of Boston will cater.

A Sunday Night Smashup.

Four Bondsville Poles, two men and two women, were taught a lesson in the art of driving Sunday evening which, although it resulted in no serious injury to the occupants of the team, gave them the pleasure of walking home and the privilege of setting a little bill for damages to the wagon. They had evidently started for home and mistaken Central for Thorndike street. When they arrived at the head of Central street and found they could go no further, they attempted to turn around in front of the residence of M. J Dil on. They turned too short, and soon wagon, Poles and horse were all mixed up in an unceremonious manner. With the help of several residents in that locality the wreck was cleared away and the Poles were found all entire and apparently unhurt. Meanwhile the fore wheels had become detached from the buggy, and the horse started on a lively clip down Central street toward Main. At the corner he fell, but was on his feet in an instant and started up Main street. He took to the sidewalk near the Edmund House, and did not leave it until he reached Thorndike street He was stopped after running up North Main a short distance, and was taken to a livery stable; the Poles walked home. The team belonged to Liveryman Whiting of Bondsville.

Ernest Marsh, clerk in Taylor's grocery store, has been unable to attend to his duties this week on account of illness.

A hearing on the search warrant recently served on Henry Leno of Holland was held Monday, and the liquors found were forfeited.

Clerk of Courts Fitch has been busy the past week making out the officers' fees for the past few months, which are to be paid soon.

The pulpit of the Universalist church will be occupied next Sunday morning by Rev. F. W. Betts of Syracuse, N. Y., a former pastor.

The regular monthly meeting of the selectmen was held in the library building Monday afternoon, at which the usual business was transacted.

Miss Linda Hawley Brigham went to Troy, N. Y., to-day to give her lecture, "A Year in Saxony," under the auspices of the Mount Holyoke Alumni Association.

The Sunday schools of the several Protestant churches of this village are practicing programmes for their Christmas concerts, to be given Sunday evening, December 20th.

Mrs. A. M. Smith has bought a narrow strip of land on the south side of her Thorndike street residence of Mrs. John Foster, to complete the construction of a driveway to her premises.

The Ladies' Social Union of the Universalist church held its annual festival and turkey supper Wednesday. A good number were present, and the usual excellent supper was served.

The third lecture in the course of the Ladies' Tuesday Club will be given at the home of Mrs. J. B. Shaw to-morrow. Mrs. Annie Russell Marble will speak on "Emerson and Carlyle."

A change of time went into effect on the New London Northern road Sunday, but with only one change at this station; the afternoon train for the south now leaves at 1.40 instead of 1 50.

W. W. Leach performed a marriage ceremony last Saturday evening which made happy the hearts of two Polish residents of Three Rivers, and made Mary Ellar the wife of Henry Wistubor.

Quite a number of people will attend Hanlon Brothers' "Superba" at the Court Square Theatre in Springfield this evening A special train will leave Palmer at 7.15, and return immediately after the show.

The Ladies' Society of the Congregational church held a social in the church parlors Wednesday evening. Supper was served by Mmes. G. E. Buck, James Loomis, Henry Loomis, Samuel Millen and H. B. May.

A freight locomotive off the track of the New London Northern road at Amherst Tuesday noon delayed the afternoon train south so that instead of leaving Palmer at 1.40 it was after 3.30 when it finally got away.

The pastor of the Congregational church will speak next Sunday morning on "What to do in the presence of the Kingdom of Heaven." In the evening he will preach a special sermon to moral men. Special music is expected.

E. D. Tufts, manager of the bicycle department of E. A. Buck's store, will leave there to-morrow night and will go on the road selling a patent mucilage bottle. He will return to Palmer in the spring and open a bicycle store.

George W. Ely was before the police court at Springfield Tuesday morning on a charge of cruelty to animals in neglecting to find shelter for his horse. A weak case was presented by the commonwealth, and Ely, without making any defense, was discharged.

O. W. Studley has sold his farm near Blanchardville, also his stock and tools, to Porter Plympton of Brimfield. The farm was formerly owned by the late Deacon Hiram Converse, and has been in the possession of the Converse family for nearly a century.

Intending purchasers of books for the holidays should send to Forbes & Wallace of Springfield for their new 176-page catalogue, which will be sent free on application. It contains nearly everything desirable in the book line, and the prices are within the reach of all.

Exceptions which were taken to the verdict rendered at the last trial of the cases of Deputy Sheriffs Studley and Northrop against A. F. Ballard of Hampden, to recover for services in the Hampden liquor raids, have been sustained and a new trial will be in order.

Misses Nettie and Susie Coleman and Fred Coleman were called to Holyoke Tuesday to attend the funeral of their cousin, Harry Hillman He had been ill but a brief time, a boil which appeared on his forehead affecting his brain and causing his death. Mr. Hillman was well known in Palmer.

At the annual meeting of Thomas Lodge of Masons Monday evening the following officers were elected: W. M., D. L. Bodfish; S. W., H. W. McGregory; J. W., C. N Shaw; treasurer, G. A. Rice; secretary, C. M Holt; trustee for three years, G. H Wilkins; representative to grand lodge, C. T. Brainerd.

The election of officers held at the meeting of Quaboag council of the Royal Arcanum Tuesday evening of last week has been declared illegal on account of a technicality. Special dispensation has been received from the grand lodge to hold another meeting this evening for the election of officers for the ensuing year.

Order No. 580 of the Postmaster General of the United States has been issued, requiring all holders of keys to lock boxes to bring them in within 30 days. All keys issued from the local office will be redeemed at the price paid at the time of taking--50 cents—and will be reissued at 20 cents each. At the expiration of 30 days redemption will cease.

The firemen held a meeting Monday evening, at which it was voted to give a concert and ball on the evening of January 22d. A committee consisting of G. A. Bills, Charles McManamy, T. J. Conroy, M. J. Dawson, Fred Thompson, W. J. Nolan, Frank Alridge and Frank Roche was appointed to have charge of the arrangements.

At the meeting of the Congregational church last evening a committee—Rev. F. E. Jenkins, O. P. Allen, D. L. Bodfish, Dr. G. H. Wilkins and J. B. Shaw—was appointed to arrange a plan for celebrating the semi-centennial of the organization of the church, which will occur next April. The committee will report at the meeting the the 24th.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Missionary Society of the Baptist church was held at the home of Mrs. Capen on Park street Wednesday evening. These officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, Mrs. A. E. Fitch; vice presidents, Mrs. G. M. Atkins and Mrs. L. G. Parkhurst; secretary, Mrs. Hattie Walker; treasurer, Mrs. L. E. Moulton.

Miss Abbie Wallace, for several years teacher in the seventh grade of the public schools in this village, has accepted the position of principal of the upper room in the Fairview school of Chicopee, and will commence her duties the first of January. Miss Wallace has had a successful experience as teacher here, and has made many friends who will regret her departure but at the same time rejoice that she has been called to a higher position, which she is in every way capable of filling.

A man claiming to be an employe of E. A. Webster, druggist, of Springfield, has been about town this week selling a "New Discovery" for renewing the hair, promising that Mr. Webster would refund the money if the preparation was not all that was claimed for it, and that he would return in three weeks to see how buyers liked it. His return is doubtful, however, as Mr. Webster has written one Palmer woman who became suspicious of the fellow, that he had no such man in his employ.

The question of who will take Rev. H. F. Moulton's place on the school committee is being discussed, and the name of Rev. C. R. Minard has been proposed, but as Mr. Minard is not yet a citizen he will hardly be in the race. The selection of a successor to Mr. Moulton—when he shall have resigned—lies with the school committee and selectmen, and as the annual town meeting is only about three months away, it would not be surprising if the vacancy was left unfilled until then, and the matter left to the voters.

C. F. Smith has nearly finished the inspection of the cattle of the town, and reports very few cases of tuberculosis. He has quarantined 16 in all, 11 of which were condemned; four of the condemned animals were killed and buried in town, but the other seven were shipped to Brighton on Wednesday, where they will be killed by the cattle commission. The meat is sold to fertilizer manufacturers, and the hides also bring a good price at the present state of the market, so that the commission realizes a small profit from the animals over the cost of shipment and killing.

The town of Warren was without its electric lights Sunday evening, though through no fault of the Central Massachusetts Electric Co. When it was found that the lights could not be turned on the wires were inspected from Warren to a point this side of West Warren, and found to be all right. It was then so late that the balance of the line could not be gone over that night, but the next day it was found that someone had amused themselves on Sunday afternoon by using the glass insulators on the poles near the "Pool" as a target for rifle shooting, and so true had been their aim that the wire had been shot in two.

There was a small—ridiculously small—attendance at the organ recital in the Congregational church Tuesday evening by Mrs. W. H Small, assisted by Mrs. Carrie E. Hancox, contralto, of Worcester. To say that every number on the programme was thoroughly enjoyed, expresses but a slight degree of the satisfaction felt by those who faced the inclement weather to attend. Mrs. Small's selections were unusually pleasing and well rendered, the last on the programme, "Offertoire de St. Cecelia," by Batiste, being particularly well received by the audience. Mrs. Hancox has a clear voice of great sweetness, and her selections were well chosen. She responded to two encores, and for one sang that dainty Scotch ballad, "We'd better bide a wee," in a manner which touched the hearts of all who heard it.

L. L. Merrick Post, G. A. R., at its meeting Wednesday evening elected the following officers: Commander, S. S. Nichols; senior vice commander, Frank Connor; junior vice commander, Samuel Brown; quartermaster, E. G. Hastings; surgeon, Dr. Holbrook; chaplain, H. E. W. Clark; officer of the day, H. E. Davis; adjutant, H. S. Hobson; officer of the guard, A. M. Thornhill. The installation of officers will be held January 6th. At the annual meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps last Friday evening these officers were elected: President, Mrs. Jennie Weld; senior vice, Mrs. Laura Davis; junior vice, Mrs. Harriet Dewey; treasurer, Mrs. Ellen M. Barnes; chaplain, Mrs. Alta Ramsden; conductor, Mrs. Augusta Thompson; guard, Mrs. Ferry; delegate to the state convention, Mrs. Belle Fish, alternate, Mrs. Lavinia E Carpenter.

THREE RIVERS.

Notice the chair in M. L. Johnson's window. It is to be given away New Year's Day. Every sale of 25 cents or more entitles the purchaser to a coupon.

There will be preaching in the Baptist church next Sunday at 10 45 a. m. by E. A. Thomas. Communion at 1 p. m. Union service at 7 p. m., sermon by Mr. Thomas.

BONDSVILLE.

Thomas Carmody has started a meat cart in the village.

Charles Whiteknact of Biddeford, Maine, visited friends here Sunday.

John Conway, engineer at the power house, is entertaining his visitors with a new graphaphone, purchased lately.

Peter Woods is home from Lowell on a vacation; he will not return until after the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Knowlton picked a dandelion blossom one day this week. This must nearly break the record for this section.

The second social dance of the season will be held in Liberty Hall next Thursday night. All attending will be assured of a good time.

Michael Sullivan has resumed his duties as clerk at the Union House. Mrs. Sullivan is very much improved, and is able to be up a little.

Once more the flag has been hoisted over the schoolhouse for the first time since last spring; owing to the refusal of the school committee to purchase a new rope.

Liveryman Shea is in hopes there will be some good sleighing this winter. He has purchased a number of new sleighs, and will be able to turn out out some very good teams. All that is lacking so far is the snow.

The overseers of the Boston Duck Company will give a coffee social in the vestry of the M. E. church to-night. Refreshments will be served, consisting of coffee, cocoa and cake, and will be served altogether by the men folks. An entertainment will also be provided by the men, who say they will give the ladies a good example in the art of entertaining. Among other things Mr. Conway will give selections from the graphaphone.

A party of Polanders hired a team of Whiting & Ramsden last Sunday to go to Palmer, and in trying to turn around there in too small a space a wheel broke down, throwing the occupants of the carriage out. The horse ran away, breaking the carriage badly, but was stopped before doing any other damage. The Polanders were considerably shaken up, but not severely injured. They walked home, and the next day Mr. Whiting went after the horse and the remains of the carriage.

House and Contents Burned.

The house belonging to John B. Shea, together with all the contents, was destroyed by fire Tuesday about one o'clock. Mr. Shea was away at work, and there was no one at home but Mrs. Shea and a sick child. The house was so far from neighbors that no help could be had, and none of the furniture was saved. The loss is very severe to Mr. Shea, who has met with several misfortunes lately.

Death of Lorenzo W. Bond.

Lorenzo Warren Bond, 76, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of this village, died at his home on Crawford street early Tuesday morning. He had been in poor health for the last few years, suffering very much with asthma and also being troubled with his heart. Mr. Bond came to this village when but a small boy, and has made his home here ever since. In his younger days he was a prominent contractor and builder, and also a millwright. The first house he built was the one now occupied by his son, R. L Bond, which he built when about 21 years old. Besides a wife he leaves two sons, Rufus L., of this village, a large lumber dealer and a member of the board of overseers of the poor, and Nathan W. of Thorndike, a grain dealer; also two daughters, Gertrude L., wife of Charles W. Darling of this place, and Ora W. wife, of Frank S. Mason of Palmer. The funeral was held yesterday in the M. E. church, of which the deceased was a leading member, being preceeded by prayer at the house. The services were conducted by Rev. R. E. Smith, with singing by the choir; the interment was in the Four Corners cemetery.

THORNDIKE.

The new iron bridge over the canal at the No. 2 mill is completed.

John Farrell has gone to Waterbury, Ct., to work at brass finishing.

Miss Nellie Flynn returned this week from her visit with friends in Hartford.

Daniel J. Lawler has gone into the meat business in the store owned by his father.

The United Workers of the Congregational church held a social at the parsonage

Daniel Sullivan of Boston has been the guest of Mrs. Daily of Main street during the week.

Howorth's Hibernica and Dublin Dan shows will appear next Monday evening at Union Hall.

There is some talk of a Ware clothing firm starting a branch in the vacant store in the Exchange block.

Mrs. John Molloy and daughter, Mrs. T. J. Clifford, were called to Clinton on Saturday by the illness of a relative.

on Tuesday evening. The time was spent in recitations, vocal and instrumental music, and all present enjoyed a pleasant evening. The committee of arrangements which will be in charge of the concert and ball to be given by the Columbian Band at Union Hall on New Year's night are: Thomas Hutchinson, John Keefe, John Donovan, D. Brosnan. The floor will be in charge of M. Daily, who will have for assistants George Hutchinson and John Keefe.

The entertainment given at Union Hall last evening for the benefit of St. Anne's church was not very well attended. The exhibition of fancy and trick bicycle riding by Master Albert Brunell, aged 8, of Worcester, was well given and much enjoyed. Miss Eva Brunell, aged 5, was not well and therefore rode only a few times around the hall, when she retired. They appear at Three Rivers this evening.

The announcement on Tuesday that Porter T. Jenks of Three Rivers, formerly of this village, had died, was a great surprise to his many friends here. Mr. Jenks was for some time employed as a second-hand in the yard of the Thorndike Company' and for his genial and friendly ways was well liked by all who had any dealings with him. Mrs. Jenks has the sympathy of many friends here in her deep sorrow.

The service of the "Forty hours devotion," which has been in progress at St. Mary's Catholic church during the past week, was attended by several hundred people. The exercise closed on Wednesday. Several clergymen from out of town were present on Tuesday afternoon and evening. Tuesday being the feast of the Immaculate Conception, masses were celebrated at 5 and 8 o'clock. Masses were also celebrated at the same hour on Wednesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Jason Miller have the sympathy of their many friends in the death of their son Stephen, five years old, a bright and well-liked lad, who died of bronchial trouble on Sunday evening. The funeral exercises were held on Wednesday afternoon at 1.30. Rev. G. M. Gerrish of the Congregational church officiated. A quartette consisting of Mrs. G. A. Murdock, Mrs. G. M Gerrish, M. W. McKenzie and B. F. Emory, sang. There were many floral offerings, among them being a pillow with the word "Stephen," from his teacher and Sunday school class; a large bouquet of pink and white carnations was sent by his teacher and schoolmates. The bearers were Nicola Guillow, Charles Bean, James Hutchinson, Matthew McKenzie.

Thorndike Young Man Meets With an Accident at Orange.

Fred Bishop, well known in town, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Bishop, who has been at work in a hardware store at Orange, is at the home of his parents as the result of an accident at the former place a few days ago. He was about to get into a delivery wagon when his foot caught in the wheel and he was badly injured about the knee.

Leg Broken By a Tree.

Andrew J. Young, who came to this town to live only a few months ago, and who lives with his family on Harvey avenue, met with a bad accident on Tuesday afternoon while chopping in the woods in the vicinity of Forest Lake. In falling a tree his foot was caught between the tree and a large stone, and the bone was broken just above the ankle. Drs. Holbrook of Palmer and Boulay of Three Rivers attended him.

Hurt by Jumping from a Train.

Jesse Tramble, who is employed at the Boston and Albany station, met with an accident on Monday noon which, although not serious, was the cause of his not being able to work for several days. He was riding on the rear car of the 12.40 train, and when in the vicinity of the baseball grounds jumped off, striking his hand against the frozen ground and inflicting an ugly wound on the wrist, besides injuring his knee.

A Drowning Narrowly Averted.

Willie Nephew, who lives with his parents on the Ware road, and who is employed in the mills here, had a close escape from being drowned on Sunday in the pond in the rear of A. H. Gates's house at Palmer Center. It is the same old story of going on the ice before it was safe. Nephew, with several companions, went skating and ventured too far; he broke through into the water, which is said in some places is over 30 feet deep. The young lad was burdened with heavy clothing, and only after great effort on the part of his companions was rescued. He than had to walk about a mile in wet clothing, but is apprently none the worse for his adventure.

BRIMFIELD.

Charles W. Stoughton of New York, who has been spending a week in town, gave by request an interesting talk upon University Settlement in New York, at the Wednesday evening service of the Second Congregational church.

A very fine musical and literary entertainment was given at the town hall last Saturday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Union. The entertainment was given by local talent with the exception of the cornet playing by Homer Loring of Newton. Mr. Loring's playing was a very enjoyable feature of the evening, and also awakened pleasant recollections of the musical enjoyment given to the people of Brimfield by his relatives in past years. Miss Andrews came from Worcester, where she is spending the winter, to assist. Miss Hathaway of Fiskdale and Miss Taylor of Wales, both of whom recited, are pupils in the Hitchcock Free High School. All who took part acquitted themselves with great credit.

Death of a former Resident.

Mrs. Sarah Homer Newhall, 92, widow of the late Albigence Newhall of this place, died at Cleveland, Ohio, last Friday and was buried here Sunday. Mrs. Newhall moved to Cleveland about ten years ago, where she lived with her daughter, Mrs. James Hunt. Mrs. Newhall was born in Brimfield August 9, 1804, and was the daughter of David Homer. For the last few years she has been blind, but retained her other faculties and kept up her interest in events to the last. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. James Hunt and Mrs. Fairbanks of Cleveland, and one son, William Newhall, of Boston.

BORN.

At Palmer, 2d, a daughter, Martha Frances, to Daniel and Martha O'Brien.

DIED.

At Bondsville, 8th, Lorenzo W. Bond, 76.
At Ware, 5th, Laura B., 13, only child of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Capron.

The subscribers having been appointed by the Probate Court for said county, commissioners to receive and examine all claims of creditors against the estate of said Trypheda A. Barlow, hereby give notice that six months from the fourth day of November, A. D. 1896, are allowed to creditors to present and prove their claims against said estate, and that they will meet to examine the claims of creditors at the office of Flynt B. and C. Co., in said Palmer, on the twelfth day of December, at two o'clock in the afternoon. CHARLES F. GROSVENOR, } Commissioners.
WILLIAM E. McDONALD, }

1896 CHRISTMAS. 1896

Our full line of Holiday Gifts is now on exhibition, and is more attractive than usual.

It seems as if everyone must find something to please in our large and varied stock.

Our aim has been to select gifts both ornamental and useful, that please the eye and suit the purse.

The latest things in Celluoid Novelties, frames and all kinds of Bric-a-brac, Dolls and Books, adorn our counters. Handkerchiefs, Silk and Linen, Mufflers and Gloves in great variety.

Come and see them.

Some Men Have No Pride,

And they will wear their old overcoat until it is threadbare, when for a minimum of Money they might get a maximum of value in one of our many styles of warm winter garments.

Our Ulsters are something to be proud of—so much value for so little money. You'll be surprised to see how good a coat we can give you. The prices run at $7, $10, $12, $15, higher if you want to, but there's no use in it—our $20 Ulster is good enough for a prince to wear.

Overcoats run from $5 to $22; the $10, $12, $15 kinds are the ones we sell most of, and when you consider what we are giving for the money its a wonder that any other dealer is selling any—don't see who can be buying them, judging from the number we get rid of. If you'll look at them you'll be among our list of patrons, we feel sure. There are no such overcoats offered anywhere else in this region.

Holiday Hints.

THIS is a puzzling time—a time that taxes the thoughts of all the people—for we are loth to imagine there's a man, woman or child in all this country round who has not some one to remember on Christmas Day. Let us try and help them out. In the first place we want to impress upon your minds that we are this year, of all years, headquarters for HOLIDAY GOODS. We cannot mention all we have suitable for presents. These, however, are suggestive.

Silver Mounted Scissors,	Silver Book Marks,
Silver Writing Sets,	Silver Pencils,
Silver Ink Stands,	Silver Cups,
Silver Manicure Sets,	Silver Tea Bells,
Souvenir Spoons,	Bag Tags,
Key Tags,	Key Chains,

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN SS. PROBATE COURT.
To the heirs at law, next of kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of William A. Gates, late of Monson, in said County, deceased:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for probate, by Ella M. Lamphear of said Monson, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her, the executrix therein named,

You are hereby cited to appear at a probate court to be held at Springfield, in said county of Hampden, on the sixth day of January, A. D., 1897, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Palmer JOURNAL, a newspaper published in Palmer, in said county, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, CHARLES L. LOSO, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this second day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-six.
3-36 SAMUEL B. SPOONER, Register.

The old way of delivering messages by post-boys compared with the modern telephone, illustrates the old tedious methods of "breaking" colds compared with their almost instantaneous cure by One Minute Cough Cure. LeGro & Lynde.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by George Brown to me, dated September 5d, 1892, and recorded in the Registry of Deeds for the County of Hampden, libro 435, folio 253, will be sold at public auction at or near the southeasterly corner of the premises, near the road hereinafter mentioned, on Monday the twenty-first day of December, 1896, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, for a breach of the conditions of said mortgage, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:—

A certain tract of land, situated in said Palmer and bounded northeasterly 76 rods by road from Palmer to Belchertown; southerly 165 rods by land formerly of J. D. Sawyer; westerly 91 rods by Swift river and land of D B. Wesson, and northwesterly by the Swift river 68 rods, containing about 49½ acres of land. Said premises contain a large quantity of wood and timber. $20 will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale.

Women's Relief Corps Officers.

The annual meeting of Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps was held Wednesday evening. There are now in regular standing 81 members, three being initiated at that meeting. The treasurer reported $108 in the general fund, and $30 in the relief fund. To the regret of all members the president, Mrs. Maria D. Rood, resigned on account of ill-health, although reelected by a unanimous vote. The following officers were chosen: President, Miss Lizzie Lull; senior vice president, Mrs. Clara V. Babbitt; junior vice president, Mrs. Ada M. Graves; chaplain, Mrs. Harriet Fenton: treasurer, Mrs. Lucy J. Aldrich; conductor, Mrs. Ella S. Howlett; guard, Miss Annie P. Seymour. These officers were appointed: Secretary, Mrs. Lillian L. Chapin, assistant conductor, Miss Etta Smith; assistant guard, Mrs. Clara Thompson. Mrs. Maria D. Rood was chosen delegate and Mrs. Carry L. B. Cross alternate to the annual department convention to be held in Worcester. Mrs. Abbie J. Lawton of Palmer has been invited to install the officers.

Monson lodge of Odd Fellows will elect officers Thursday evening, the 31st.

The Academy had but one session Wednesday, on account of the storm.

Rev. W. H. Marble attended the funeral of his uncle, William Marble, at Oxford, yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fanning of Newton Upper Falls were guests at A. M. Guilford's over Sunday.

Edward F. Morris will give a second talk in the Academy chapel this evening on his European trip.

The annual parish meeting of the Congregational church will be held Tuesday evening, January 5th.

The Dorcas society will have a Christmas sale next Wednesday at Mrs. R. P. Cushman's at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Sarah and Miss Mary Hawley of Saundersfield have been guests at G. L. Keeney's for several days.

"Editha's Burglar" was presented by the Junior Christian Endeavor Society at the Congregational church, Wednesday evening.

Mrs. George L. Fuller is ill, and Mr. Fuller, who has been able to be out after a long sickness, is again confined to the house.

Justin Carew, who has been at work for some time on the Warren and Wilbraham state roads, has returned home for the winter.

The first entertainment in the Academy course was given last Friday evening by the Unity Company of Boston, and was much enjoyed.

The Ladies' Circle will have a Christmas sale of aprons and useful articles in the Universalist church next Friday evening. An escalloped oyster supper will be served.

Marcus Keep post will elect offiers next Monday evening, a full attendance at the meeting is requested The annual inspection of the post took place Monday evening.

A. A. Gage camp, Sons of Veterans, was inspected by Inspecting Officer Chappell of Holyoke Tuesday evening. The election of officers will take place Tuesday evening, the 22d.

In accordance with the custom of previous years, the fall term of the Academy will close with public rhetoricals in the chapel at 8 o'clock Friday evening. The winter term will open Wednesday, the 31st.

Day Spring lodge of Masons elected these officers Tuesday evening: W. M., Ansel H. Shaw; S. W., Frank A. Bliss; J. W., J. Monroe Wright; treasurer, Charles F. Clough; secretary, Nelson A. Bugbee.

Miss Hattie Louise Jerome of Worcester is stopping at H. M. Barlow's. Miss Jerome is a story writer. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Barlow of Hardwick, formerly of Monson, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Barlow.

James C. Hale, in the employ of the Flynt Granite Company, has returned home for the winter after an absence of three months. He has been at work on the state highway being constructed at Wilbraham and Warren.

The friends of Mrs. W. A. Needham will be pleased to know that she is recovering from her illness at the Albany hospital, where she underwent an operation last week. She will probably be able to return home before Christmas

A pleasing entertainment was given for the benefit of the Monson orchestral club Tuesday evening, by S. Homer Eaton, impersonator, Miss Anna T. Murray, soprano, of the Springfield cathedral, Mr. and Mrs. Bently F. Rice, J. S. R. Coy, tenor and pianist, and Mrs. Bertha Noble, pianist.

The third quarterly conference of the Methodist church was held Saturday, Presiding Elder Thorndike being present. Routine business was transacted, and reports were given by the pastor, treasurer, Sunday school superintendent, and church repairs committee. Dr. Thorndike preached Sunday morning.

A minstrel show under the management of Henry F. Miller will be given by local talent some time in February. There will be six end men and a chorus of 35 or more. The first rehearsal was held last evening, and the next one will be Tuesday evening in Memorial Hall. On orchestra will be made up of members of the Monson orchestral club and Brown's orchestra.

A communication from Mrs. Welcome Converse, who is spending the winter in Brooklyn, has been received concerning a farewell reception given to Bishop J. C. Hartzell, D. D., and his wife on their departure for Africa. It is of local interest, as their son is the husband of a former Monson young lady, Miss Helen Thresher. Mrs. Converse mentions also having attended Dr. Storrs's reception. She was a pupil of Dr. Storrs when he taught in the Academy.

Henry S. Moores, a farmer living near the Hampden line, was stricken with paralysis last Saturday under unusual circumstances. He was driving a pair of horses which were drawing a large wagon, when a feeling of dizziness attacked him. He wound the reins about one of the wagon stakes and alighted from the wagon. The horses started for home, and when they reached home they were running. Mr. Moore's friends were naturally alarmed, and following the horses' tracks found Mr. Moores lying by the road partially paralyzed. He was removed to his home and Dr. Fuller summoned, and he has now recovered somewhat.

South Monson people are not pleased with the new time table of the New London Northern road, which does not allow the 2 p. m. train to stop at that station, and formal protest has been entered. More freight business is done at that station than at the Center station, and the people feel that on that account, if on no other, some consideration is due them. The train stops at State Line, but not at Orcutts; and a South Monson manufacturer who also has business interests at Orcutts and frequently has occasion to go there in the afternoon, thinks that to be driven from South Monson to the Center station and from Stafford Springs to Orcutts is rather an inconvenience.

There is talk of a special town meeting being called to consider matters pertaining to the high school pupils in the Academy. As there are more town pupils in the school than ever before, the appropriation for schools is running short. The committee does not wish to overrun the appropriation if it can be avoided. The old talk is revived of the town paying toward the expenses of the Academy and having no say in regard to the school. The trustees feel that the town derives as much benefit from the arrangement as the Academy does, as the tuition paid for the town scholars is but a small portion of the expense of supporting the institution.

LUDLOW.

The Ludlow Manufacturing Company is slowly starting up the departments which have been shut down, and are gradually taking back their help.

A. Wrightington, captain of the Harvard football team, will lecture on "American football up to date" in Hubbard hall tomorrow evening before the Ludlow Literary Society.

WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. C. R. Brewer is spending the winter in Suffield, Ct., with her sister, Mrs. Lindsey.

Hip Dislocated by a Fall.

Mrs. Ira G. Potter suffered a severe fall last Friday evening at her home, breaking her hip and dislocating her shoulder. She was alone and was starting to answer the door-bell when the accident occured. The family and doctor were summoned at once. Mrs. Potter is quite comfortable considering her age, which is 75 years.

WEST WARREN.

Miss Stella B. Watts has returned to her home in New London.

About twenty from here attended the concert at Warren Monday evening.

Mrs. A. C. Adams of Thorndike spent Tuesday with her son, Lyman Keith.

The Springfield District Epworth League convention will be held in the M. E. church January 1st.

Presiding Elder B. R. Thorndike will preach in the M. E. church next Sunday evening at 6 o'clock.

Rev. N. L Porter preached in Brookfield last Sunday for Mr. Chaffee, who was called away by the death of his father.

Miss Laura Thompson was given a surprise party Tuesday evening, the occasion being her 17th birthday. Her many friends presented her with a sterling silver novelty bracelet.

Oscar Keeney, a former resident of this town, died very suddenly at his home in Somers, Ct., November 29th, being sick only a few hours.

BELCHERTOWN.

The Belchertown creamery reports 18,011 pounds of butter for the month of November.

A party of 44 enjoyed an evening at progressive encher at the Park View Tuesday evening.

Mr. Guild, principal of the high school, has been engaged as chorister at the M. E church.

Rev. George Lock will give a lecture in the M. E church next Wednesday evening, giving an account of his travels in Scotland.

The selectmen viewed the boundary line between this town and Enfield Tuesday, in company with one of the selectmen of Enfield.

The body of Eugene Strong, 51, of Boston, was brought to this town Wednesday for burial. The funeral was held in the chapel, Rev. G. J. Newton officiating.

Guy C. Allen, cattle inspector, has nearly completed his examination of the large number of cattle in town, and reports the stock as remarkably free from tuberculosis.

A silver medal speaking contest under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E will be held in the Congregational church next Friday evening. Following are the names of the contestants and their selections: "The Polish boy," Miss Mary Kennedy of Enfield; "The old tin canteen," Herbert Glazier of Greenwich; "Faith, hope and love," Arthur A. Ward of Packardville; "The boys of America," Frank Bray of Granby; "College oil-cans," Miss Nettie Shaw of Belchertown. The judges will be Miss Bessie Hooker of Granby, Rev. Mr. Perry of Greenwich, and Rev. George Hubbard of Enfield.

Monday evening the following officers were elected by E J. Griggs Grand Army post: C. F. L. Plantiff; S. V. C., D. R. Barnes; J. V. C., L. W. Gleason; Q. M., F. W. Fellows; surgeon, E. F. Smith; chaplain, W. F. White; O. D., F. G. Shaw; O. G., H C. West. On the same night the members of the Woman's Relief Corps elected the following: President, Mrs. Sarah Dunbar; senior vice president, Mrs. Lyda Hoag; junior vice president, Mrs. Georgiana H Lowell; treasurer, Miss Lydia A. Barton; chaplain, Miss Katie Smith; conductor, Mrs. Jennie Draper; guard, Mrs. Mary Plantiff.

Still Thinks Its a Snake in His Stomach.

John H. Bardwell, who recently visited the Massachusetts General Hospital in search of relief from a stomach trouble, caused, as he supposed, by the presence of a live reptile drawn there while drinking from a small spring, was not satisfied with the verdict of heart trouble, and visited Springfield last week for medical advice, where he was told that heart trouble was not the cause of the unpleasant symptoms he experiences. Mr. Bardwell is firm in his original belief, and will undergo a course of medical treatment for relief.

Lost Voice Suddenly Regained.

P. T. Slauter, who several months ago suddenly lost his voice and has since been unable to speak above a whisper, was agreeably surprised the other day to find that it had returned as suddenly as it left him. He can now speak as well as ever.

WARREN.

Mrs. Julia Newton has returned from a visit to Boston.

Mrs. M. M. Richardson came home to attend the Universalist fair.

Mrs. J. W. Chadsey and Miss Chadsey are spending a few days in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. George Shumway have been spending a few days in New York.

Howorth's Hibernica Comedy company will be in the town hall to-morrow night.

Mrs. Homer Tidd has returned from the hospital in Boston, and is improving rapidly.

Mrs. Merriam and Miss Pepper of Springfield have been guests of Miss Laura Blair.

Clarence Sylvester has been spending a few days in Springfield, attending the state grange.

Mrs. Faulkner of Elm street had the misfortune to fall down stairs Saturday and break her collar bone.

The King's Daughters packed a Christmas box Wednesday to be forwarded to an Indian family in the West.

A large delegation from Warren attended the annual meeting of the Quaboag Historical Society at North Brookfield yesterday.

Invitations are out for the wedding of Miss Nellie M. Comins and Mr. Hobart K. Whitaker, at the Universalist church Thursday evening, December 24.

That the electric cars are a great convenience was shown by the large number of out-of-town people who have attended the entertainments at the town hall this week.

It is hoped that there will be a large audience at the town hall next Wednesday night to hear the address of Booker T. Washton. Mr. Washington has a national reputation as being one of the most brilliant men of his race, and Warren is to be congratulated that he has been secured for an evening The admission will be free, but there will be a collection for the cause to which he is devoting so much of his life's work.

The annual fair given by the ladies of the Universalist society Wednesday and Thursday evening was a great success. There was an attractive display of fancy articles and china, and an art gallery of paintings by Mr. Charles Stearns, an amateur artist of much ability. A bountiful feast was spread each evening, and the melodies of the "Alabama Black Diamonds" furnished much mirth as well as pleasure. The hall was tastefully decorated by the Borrisons.

Two children calling themselves Mary and Thomas Ferrity, 13 and 11, came into this village early Wednesday morning. They told several stories about riding in cars and stopping in sheds, and claimed to belong in Holyoke. They were taken in charge by the overseers of the poor, and word was sent to Holyoke and Boston, where it was learned that they had ran away from home in Arlington last Sunday. They were taken to Boston in the afternoon by Overseer of the Poor S. N. Cutler.

The fourth of the entertainments in the citizen's lecture course was given Monday evening by Prof. R. G. Hibbard, elocutionist, assisted by Miss Annie F. Libby, harpist, and Frank A. Kennedy, violinist, and it proved to be one of the most popular in the course. Prof. Hibbard is a thorough master of the art of elocution, and was especially pleasing on account of the simplicity and naturalness of his style. Miss Libby charmed all by the brilliancy of her execution and the exquisite sweetness of tones produced on her harp. Mr. Kennedy won much applause by his skillful handling of the bow; his selections were pleasing and exquisitely rendered. The audience showed its appreciation of the artists by repeated encores, which were very generously responded to.

WARE.

Mrs. Fred E. Zeissig is to go next week to Haverhill, to take charge of the residence of a wealthy shoe manufacturer during the absence of the family on a trip South

J. T. Casey's store on South street has been closed a few days on account of the foreclosure of a mortgage by Rev. Thomas O'Keefe of Monson. Mr. Casey is in hopes to arrange to start again soon.

Henry F Barnes has bought from the Savings Bank the boot shop of the late George Eddy. It is not definitely known what he will do with it, but he will probably sell or rent for some kind of a manufactory if he can, if not he will put it into dwelling houses, as the location is fine for residences.

The flower mission of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union sent flowers from early June every two weeks to Boston to be distributed to the poor and sick in the hospitals and elsewhere. There have been sent 292 bouquets, and the mission has also distributed many to cheer the homes of the sick in Ware.

Store Burglarized.

Byrns & Crowley's clothing store was entered early Monday morning by burglars, who took two new suits, including overcoats and hats, several boxes of underwear and gloves. The cash box was opened, but nothing found. The entrance was effected by prying up a rear window with a jimmy, which was left on the premises. It is estimated that the burglars carried away about $200 worth of goods.

Barn and Live Stock Burned.

The barn of Joshua T. Crowell, about two miles from Ware on the Palmer road, was entirely destroyed by fire on Sunday morning, together with eighteen head of cattle, one horse, two pigs, nearly forty tons of fodder, two sleighs, and 300 bushels of corn. The shed and henhouse were also burned, and only by hard work was the house saved. The fire was discovered about 8 o'clock. Mr. Crowell had started on his milk route and the hired man had gone home, so only Mrs. Crowell and the small children were on the premises. There were near neighbors, and with their assistance two young cattle were saved. It is not known how the fire started. The loss is estimated at about $2500, partially insured in the Davis agency.

CARD.—We wish to return our sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors who have so kindly assisted us in our recent bereavement.

MR. AND MRS. JASON W. MILLER.
Thorndike, Mass.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age, was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Dr. Thayer, of Boston, says Ayer's Hygienic Coffee is an admirable beverage, possessing none of the pernicious effects of coffee. Grocers sell it.

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men says is to one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhoea and dysentery. I always recommended it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it, Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

The Ideal Panacea.

James L. Franeis, Alderman, Chicago, says: "I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as an ideal panacea for coughs, colds and lung complaints, having used it in my family for the last five years, to the exclusion of physician's prescriptions or other preparations."

Rev. John Burgus, Keokuk, Iowa, writes: "I have been a minister of the Methodist church for 59 years or more, and have never found so beneficial, or that gave me such speedy relief as Dr. King's New Discovery." Try this ideal cough remedy now. Trial bottles free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

A SERIOUS SUBJECT.

That Will Well Repay Our Citizens to Carefully Consider.

Kidneys can't talk, but if you don't treat them rightly you will hear from them.

They have a language of their own, this is how they tell you?

When you work too hard, what follows? You are tired, aren't you?

It's just the same with the kidneys, they get tired, they have so much to do.

You stoop over at the same occupation.

You strain yourself lifting.

You walk too far, or ride too far.

You call this overexertion. You cannot sleep when night comes.

Your back aches. Your head aches, often you ache all over.

Oh, you say, it's because I'm tired.

Now this isn't right, It's because your kidneys are tired.

They can only do just so much, and the lifting, stooping, straining or exerting has retarded their action.

The heart has pushed the blood into them faster than they can filter it.

The filter is overtaxed and becomes clogged.

They cry for assistance in many aches that follow.

Nothing starts the kidneys working quicker than Doan's Kidney Pills.

It is useless to take them for any disorder of the stomach or derangement of the liver.

Indirectly they will help such troubles by throwing off some of the effete or waste matter of the body through the kidneys, but they won't cure liver complaint any more than they will cure consumption.

They are non-purgative, easy to take, convenient to carry; they produce no reaction; and can be given to the weakest child.

Doan's Kidney Pill for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name, DOAN'S, and take no other.

THE ROYAL ROAD.

Good Food is the Only Way.

It's a man's bad habits that hurt him more than overwork. The little habits of coffee and tobacco hurt worse than some of the big ones, because they are continued more steadily than the greater habits. Many a man is simply poisoned to death by the alkaloids of coffee and tobacco, and never will believe what is hurting him. Let him quit tobacco and use Postum Cereal, the food drink, in place of coffee, and very soon he finds that nature, the great restorer, is at work. No medicine is needed, simply quit doing those things which poison and waste the energy, and let nature build into body and brain from good food. Postum is made entirely of grains by the Postum Cereal Co., lim., of Battle Creek, Mich. and is nourishing and fattening. Use plain, common food and the food-drink (it looks like coffee but is not.) Health will come and be of much more solid character than when patched up with drugs.

Dr. H. P. Merriam, 2239 Michigan Ave., Chicago, says, "I have tried the Postum and am pleased with it."

"Just as good" as Postum Cereal are words used to defraud the public.

The Holiday Spirit

Is pervading the atmosphere, and before you are aware, unless you hurry, the best of the fine new slippers will be gone. : : : : :

If You Have Not Seen Them

Be sure and do so quickly, for in 1896, as in years gone by, we have the newest styles. :

G. L. FULLER, the MONSON SHOEIST.

FORBES & WALLACE.

Springfield, December, 1896.

TWO WEEKS TO CHRISTMAS.

Holiday buying has begun in earnest. Three-quarters of the gift things at Christmas are winter things; three-quarters of the buying will be of things of comfort and use. The store is filled with things that make admirable gifts---Dress patterns, Jackets and Wraps, Furs, Gloves, Shoes, Furniture, Boys' Clothing, Carpets, Rugs, Muslin Underwear, Heavy Underwear for men and women, Blankets, Down-filled Comfortables, Neckwear for men and women, Lamps, Table Cloths, Bric-a-Brac, Silverware, Dinner Sets---a thousand things that belong to every-day life and comfort. And little money never bought so much of any of all these things as just now.

Books Will Hold an Important Place, of Course.

And we have outdone our past. The tables and shelves are groaning under the weight of thousands of Books, and almost half the main floor of the Vernon street building is given up to them. There are books for everybody and everything. Pretty covered tales for wondering little tots, marvelous stories of adventure for roistering youngsters; books for old people; books for thoughtful readers and books for pleasure readers; books for scholars and books for philosophers---truly, books for everybody.

Our new book catalogue is ready. A one hundred and seventy-six page book of representative lists from about every branch of literature that we keep. And it gives our prices for books. So it is a catalogue that everybody ought to have. Easy to get it. You have only to send or ask.

= = THE TOY ROOM = =

= = = IS OPEN. = = =

And such a show as we have there! A wonderland for children. And a treat for fathers and mothers that missed a good share of the joy that belong to childhood when they were small.

Dolls, of course---and games---dolls and games by the thousands. You never saw such a collection before as we have ready here, perhaps.

The store comforts are important during the holiday time. You will want to go to and fro about the store without being hampered with heavy bundles, or parcels, or wraps. We have a place in the main store where they can be left under check, in perfect safety, without a cent to pay, or incurring any obligations of any sort.

Resting places are provided in waiting rooms and elsewhere. You find them easily. Use them freely. A little rest will facilitate shopping.

DON'T FORGET THESE THINGS.

Know the store as you never knew it before. Explore every corner of it. The most interesting spots for sightseers are in places a little out of the way.

Up stairs near the office there's a big room filled with Japanese Potteries, Ivories, Metals, and Curios, that it will do you good to see. The basement, too, is filled with things that make most acceptable Christmas gifts.

Ask questions. Everything can't be shown. Some of the finest things have to be put carefully out of the dust and handling. A question will often supply wants for you, and sales for us.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

is the standard family remedy of the world for colds, coughs and lung diseases. It is not a palliative, and is not therefore put up in small cheap bottles. It is put up in large bottles for the household. They cost more but cure more.

Fads come and go but no theory or fad can overthrow the fact, that the greatest cure for all colds, coughs and throat and lung diseases, is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

When Polly Played.

When Polly played for dancing, her slender fingers flew
Across the flashing ivory keys as if they winked at you.
The music bubbled under the magic of her hand,
As if the notes were mad to join the festive band.

When Polly struck the measure of two-step or of waltz,
The oldest there grew young again and laughed at Time's assaults;
While lovely Sweet and Twenty, and happy Sweet Sixteen,
Went floating light as thistle-down the merry staves between.

When Polly played the lancers, you should have seen us bow,
And wave the figures out and in. Would we were dancing now,
With Polly playing bravely, and all the old set there,
Till who'd believe 'twas midnight by the clock upon the stair?

Then Polly played as gayly as the youngest heart can feel,
And, lad and lass, we danced amain the blithe Virginia reel.
If Cupid sped his arrows, be sure his aim was true,
When Polly played for dancing, and the hours fairly flew.

Deafness cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THOUGHT ONE ENOUGH.—A Boston man traveling through the South was obliged to stop in a small town where there was but one hotel, at which the accommodations were hardly to be called elaborate.

When the colored waiter brought his dinner the Boston man found that he was to have roast beef, stewed tomatoes, corn, peas, potatoes and coffee, the vegetables served in the usual stone china canoes.

Presently he said to the waiter, "Dick, pass the 'spoons." The waiter rolled his eyes in genuine amazement.

"Spoons, sah! What do yo' want with the spoons? There's yo' spoon in yo' corn."—Argonaut.

The Field of the Cloth of Gold.

Do you ever remember the days gone by,
When the spring was young, and the lark soar'd high,
How we two wandered in days of old,
Into the fields of the cloth of gold.

Millions of buttercups under our feet,
Numberless birds on their wings so fleet,
And a whisper of joy, and of love untold,
As we entered the field of the cloth of gold.

No thought of a care or a sorrow had we,
No thought of the parting that was to be,
Of the falling leaf, and the year grown old,
As we walked in the field of the cloth of gold.

But the pain was there, and the sorrow, too,
And the fleecy clouds hid the dazzling blue,
For the river of change, with its margin bold,
Rolled unseen in the field of the cloth of gold.

But when buttercup time comes back to me,
And the buttercups' gold is on the lea,
I still see your eyes, as they looked of old,
When we walked in the field of the cloth of gold.

FATE OF WORLD'S FAIR BUILDINGS.

The World's Columbian Exposition Salvage company have completed their task of removing the buildings of the late world's fair at Chicago, says the Iron Age. It has stretched over a period of two and a half years, during which time an immense amount of labor has been done. A few buildings have been permitted to remain, but they stand only to serve special purposes, and are only faintly suggestive of the architectural glories which once graced Jackson park. At the north end of the park stands the art palace, now the Columbian museum, with its thousands of unique treasures. Over by the lake shore is the once beautiful German building in dilapidation; farther south is to be seen the sham convent of La Rabida. The Goddess of Liberty still occupies her lofty pedestal, with her cap gone and several of her fingers missing. The old whaler Progress still incumbers the lagoon, because nobody wants to buy it. The vessel was offered the other day for $30. Here the reminders of 1893 end. But what has become of all the rest of the structures that once filled the park? There are "bits" of the world's fair at the present time all over the world—in Europe, in Asia, in Africa, in the two Americas, in Australia.

The story of the principal buildings is soon told. In the main it may be told in one word—ashes. Everybody knows the fate of the cold storage building and later of the Peristyle, Music hall and Casino. Everybody, too, remembers that grand pyrotechnic display—the great fire of July 3, 1894—when the manufactures building, machinery hall, the agricultural building, the mines and mining building, the electrical building, the administration building, the terminal station, and a number of minor structures were consumed. Those fires left but one article of salvage—the steel. This material for the most part went to two places—the rolling mills of the Illinois steel company and the steel furnaces at Pittsburg.

Of the remaining buildings, one was removed to Springfield, Ill., two were taken to Kansas City, one was moved over in Stony Island avenue, Chicago, and still another was worked over into a flat building. These are the only structures that preserve anything like their integrity. The structural iron of the United States government building was sold to the Lane bridge works. The trusses from the boiler-house went to Muncie, Ind. The trusses of the annex to the Transportation building went to Milwaukee.

The New York building, one of the most costly of the state edifices, was almost a complete failure as salvage. The fine mural paintings by Millet were on the plaster and had to be sacrificed. The Iowa and Ohio buildings were annexed to other buildings, and were scarcely worth tearing down. The Texas building was another failure from the standpoint of the wreckers. Only part of the Illinois building, it will be remembered, was left by fire—the rest went up in smoke one Sunday afternoon. The Washington building, that excited such comment by its massive logs, was torn down and the timbers for the most part sawed up.

J. C. Rogers of Kansas City secured the Wisconsin state building and the Victoria building. In addition he bought portions of other structures. The Wisconsin building has been reconstructed at Grand avenue and Seventh street, Kansas City, where it has been opened as a "Gentleman's club." The building has been christened "The Wisconsin." He is now reconstructing and fitting up the Victoria building in Kansas City for a private residence. Among the equipments of this house will be the six oil paintings formerly in the dome of the United States government building. Mr. Myers bought the Pennsylvania building, had it torn down carefully, and used the material in the erection of a flat building at Emerald avenue and Forty-third street. The Rhode Island building was secured by Dr. Willoughby and moved to Stony Island avenue and Seventieth street.

Of the 20 buildings bought by the wrecking company the seven largest were burned, leaving only the steel as salvage. The other 13 did not have as much material together as one of those burned. The figures of the company show that the cost of labor in taking down these 13 and removing the debris of the other seven was $150,000. Over 500,000 square feet of glass was sold to cornice men and florists. The latter used it in building greenhouses and the former sold it in their trade. All the gutta percha pipe used at the world's fair was sold to the United States commission of fisheries at Gloucester, Mass., for $250. The underground pipe on the grounds went to the John Davis company, Chicago, and was sold to small towns.

The fisheries building had little salvage, but it was the one building in demand. Mr. Rogers started the ball rolling when he put in a bid for the glass. Then followed innumerable applications for frogs, lizards, fish and other ornaments from the columns. These little plaster ornaments were soon at a premium, and a few of them are now being held at a fairly good price. There are thousands of flag-poles all over the West that were in use in some capacity or other at the fair. Schools, convents and universities bought specimens of staff work, some but a few pieces, others large collections.

The fire of July 3, 1894, was especially disastrous to the art interests of the fair. All the figures from the main buildings were taken down, with the expectation that there would be a demand for them, and more money could be made from them than from the regular salvage. Most of the little angels from the woman's building, the symbolic figures, reliefs, and so forth, were put in the electrical building, where it was intended to exhibit them prior to putting them on sale. The fire came and swept them all away. President H. N. Higinbotham secured the four lions that kept guard at the base of the obelisk near the south lagoon. They now lord it over inoffensive ducks and chickens at Mr. Higinbotham's farm at Elgin.

The statue of Ben Franklin that stood in front of the electricity building, the work of Carl Rohl Smith, was bought by the university of Pennsylvania, and is now in Philadelphia. The statue of Columbus that stood before the administration building is now in the Field Columbian museum. The city of Denver bought the Indian on horseback, and cowboy, the two statues that excited such comment during the time the fair was being held. The park commissioners still own the group that stood about the main basin. One of the groups of the four races is in the museum of Jackson Park, the others were burned. Minerva and Julius Caesar stand near the museum building. The celebrated Golden Gateway is still intact. It is being held by a local dealer in statuary, and was recently offered to the city of Cleveland for $1200.

CURIOUS LOCAL EXPRESSIONS.—In North Carolina the expression "hit the grit" is used to signify "get off in a hurry."

"Hike out" is said in Colorado.

In Minnesota they change it to "pike out."

Texas, Colorado and California use "hit the road" for the same expression.

In New Hampshire and Vermont is heard "hyper," meaning the same thing.

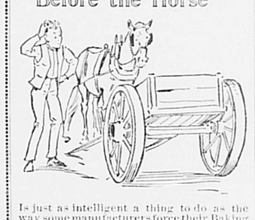
In Delaware "hike" is in common use, and Pennsylvania and Ohio have the same word.

In southern Michigan one says "hurry up," while in Marquette, Manistee and Champion, hurry back" is used in the same sense.

In California the word "pack" is used for "carry," the expression being derived from the pack mules used in mining.

In the South "tote" for "carry" is heard on all sides, having originated with the darkies.—New York Mail and Express.

"The Cart Before the Horse"



Is just as intelligent a thing to do as the way some manufacturers force their Baking Powders on the public. They don't know themselves what their goods will do. WE KNOW the merits of BOSS . . .

BAKING POWDER

It's what we have used for 32 years in our business, and is the secret of our success. 3,000,000 of our LUNCH MILK BISCUIT alone, sold last year, proves we have a meritorious article. The thousands who follow our example in their home cooking agree with us. It's not only "The kind Boss makes his Biscuits with," but the kind all should use.

Some Men Have No Pride,

And they will wear their old overcoat until it is threadbare, when for a minimum of Money they might get a maximum of value in one of our many styles of warm winter garments.

Our Ulsters are something to be proud of—so much value for so little money. You'll be surprised to see how good a coat we can give you. The prices run at $7, $10, $12, $15, higher if you want to, but there's no use in it—our $20 Ulster is good enough for a prince to wear.

Overcoats run from $5 to $22; the $10, $12, $15 kinds are the ones we sell most of, and when you consider what we are giving for the money its a wonder that any other dealer is selling any—don't see who can be buying them, judging from the number we get rid of. If you'll look at them you'll be among our list of patrons, we feel sure. There are no such overcoats offered anywhere else in this region.

Little Benny.

I had told him, Christmas morning,
As he sat upon my knee,
Holding fast his little stockings,
Stuffed as full as full could be,
And attentive, listening to me,
With a face demure and mild,
That old Santa Claus, who filled them,
Did not love a naughty child.

"But we'll be good,—won't we, moder?"
And from off my lap he slid,
Digging deep among the goodies
In his crimson stockings hid;
While I turned me to my table,
Where a tempting goblet stood,
Brimming high with dainty custard,
Sent me by a neighbor good.

But the kitten, there before me,
With his white paw, nothing loth,
Sat, by way of entertainment,
Slapping off the shining froth;
And in not the gentlest humor
At the loss of such a treat,
I confess, I rather rudely
Thrust him out into the street.

Then how Benny's blue eyes kindled!
Gathering up the precious store
He had busily been pouring
In his tiny pi afore,
With a generous look that shamed me,
Sprang he from the carpet bright,
Showing by his mein indignant,
All a baby's sense of right.

"Come back, Harney," called he loudly,
As he held his apron white;
"You shall have my candy wabbit!"
But the door was fastened tight;
So he stood, abashed and silent,
In the centre of the floor,
With defeated look alternate
Bent on me and on the door.

Then, as by some sudden impulse,
Quickly ran he to the fire,
And while eagerly his bright eyes
Watched the flames go high and higher,
In a brave, clear key, he shouted,
Like some lordly little elf:
"Santa Kaus, come down de chimney,— Make my moder 'have herself!"

"I will be a good girl, Benny,"
Said I, feeling the reproof;
And straightway recalled poor Harney,
Mewing on the gallery roof.
Soon the anger was forgotten,
Laughter chased away the frown,
And they gamboled 'neath the live-oaks
Till the dusky night came down.

In my dim, fire-lighted chamber,
Harney purred beneath my chair,
And my play-worn child beside me,
Knelt to say his evening prayer;
"God bless fader, God bless moder,
God bless sister"—then a pause,
And the sweet young lips devoutly
Murmured: "God bless Santa Kaus."

He is sleeping; brown and silken
Lie the lashes, long and meek,
Like caressing, clinging shadows,
On his plump and peachy cheek;
And I bend above him weeping
Thankful tears, O Undefiled!
For a woman's crown of glory,
For the blessing of a child.

MRS. KING'S CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

"There, I think Katie will like that," and Mrs. King held up the rag doll she had been dressing. "The turkey red dress will please her, and I'll make another dress, a white one. I wish I could have a china head," and she sighed a little as she regarded the staring eyes marked with ink upon the cotton face, and smoothed down the black yarn which did duty for hair.

"I wish Job was different," she said to herself as she rose and began putting away her work. "I feel it more as the children grow older. Job is an upright man, and means to be a good husband and father; he is so anxious to make and save money, that he will not spend, nor let me spend, a cent more than is strictly necessary. If he couldn't afford it, I would feel different. I've been his wife fourteen years and worked hard. Now with this great farm and all out of debt, it seems too bad that I can't have a half-dollar to buy my children Christmas gifts. Such good children, too! They begin to understand that mother isn't to blame. Ralph said, 'Never mind me, ma. When a boy is twelve he don't expect Christmas presents.' But he will be just as well pleased with the mittens I've knit for him, and the fringed wrists are pretty. As for Ruth, dear little woman, she will love the needle-book I have made because there is a bit of my mother's wedding dress in it. Well, well, I must get supper. That's one thing I have to be thankful for—Job is never stingy about the table. There is always plenty to cook."

So, resolutely trying to see the bright side of her dark lot, Mrs. King left the low-ceiled and plainly furnished sitting-room for the kitchen. Here all was scrupulously neat, but there was a noticeable lack of the modern helps that do so much to make the housekeeper's life a pleasant one.

Job King was not a bad man. Why, he was one of the trustees of the little church that stood down the road. But he was practical—"business-like," he called it. Luxuries, poetry, flowers, loving words—he classed them all together as "nonsense."

The short winter day was gone before the family gathered around the supper table.

"I tell you what, it is a cold night, and I'm hungry," said Mr. King, eyeing approvingly the nicely-browned roast spare-rib his wife placed before him. "I tell you, 'mother, your bread is prime."

He so seldom praised anything that Mrs. King was surprised. A flush dyed her sallow cheek, but she made no reply.

"Have some turnips, Ralph?" the father asked. "What's the matter with you, Ruth? You hain't eatin' any supper," and he looked sharply at the dimpled face of his ten-years-old daughter, who was as near like her mother as a bit of pink-and-white childish prettiness could be like a toil-worn woman.

"I was thinking about what Florence Chase told me at recess to-day," Ruth replied, taking up her three-tined fork and picking at the meat on her plate. "She said her pa had bought her ma a carpet-sweeper for Christmas. It cost three dollars. I wish I could buy you one, ma."

Mrs. King, remembering that the rag-carpets that covered her sitting-room and the two small sleeping-rooms that opened from it were all she possessed, remembering also how she had scrimped and saved to make those, sighed a little as she said:—

"It was very generous of you to think of it, dear."

"Ma, did you ever have a Christmas present?" demanded little Katie, scanning her mother's face with her large gray eyes—eyes that her father said were "regular King eyes."

"Why, yes, child. Don't you remember last year Ruth and you gave me a bouquet you made out of autumn leaves, and"—

"Oh! I don't mean that kind. I mean a really, truly Christmas present some one bought. Did you ever buy her one, pa?"

I will not attempt to explain it, but certainly that portion of Mr. King's face visible above his grizzled beard colored. He replied, gruffly—

"What do you s'pose I'd spend money foolish as that for?"

"Why, 'cause ma is your wife," Katie replied, promptly. "Some men love their wives; and even if they don't when they are wives, they do when they are sweethearts. Cousin Mary's beau bought her a lovely ring last Christmas. So I didn't know but when ma was a girl you bought her some nice thing."

There was an awkward pause. Job King hastily devoured the huge piece of apple pie on his plate, washed it down with a great gulp of tea, and went to the barn.

When he returned, the dishes were washed, his wife was darning stockings, and Ralph was busy over his lessons for the next day. From the bed room came the voices of two girls, for Ruth was at work upon a marvelous patchwork pincushion with which she intended to surprise her mother on Christmas Eve.

Mr. King took his weekly paper and sat down opposite his wife. Somehow it was not easy for the farmer to apply his mind to the editor's lucid statement of the tariff question. He had not forgotten the queer sensation Katie's words had given him. Suddenly the shrill childish voice again attracted his attention.

"Ma, why do we give folks we love presents on Christmas?"

Mr. King looked up with a start. Katie, a questioning look on her face, was leaning on the arm of her mother's wooden rocker.

Mrs. King laid down the stocking upon which she was at wook and lifted the little girl upon her lap.

"Because the dear Christ-child, whose birthday it is, was given to us upon that day," she said, gently.

"What made God give Him to us?" Katie continued. "The dear little Christ-child! I'd thought God would have wanted to keep Him."

Mrs. King, with a mother's loving tact, did not attempt just then to set her daughter's theological views right. She kissed the full scarlet lips, and said—

"It was because God loved us that He gave us this wonderous Gift."

"Then Christmas means love," Katie cried, eagerly. "Folks who love other folks give 'em Christmas presents. If they don't give things, they can't love;" and the child shook her head sagely.

"It is time you was in bed," Mr. King said, crossly. "So much chattering, I can't half read."

Job King did not sleep well that night. It might have been the roast pork; yet, as he turned restlessly on his pillow, he seemed to hear a voice say: "Some men love their wives."

Daylight and the usual round of duties did not drive away the feeling of unrest. Late in the afternoon, as he was returning from a distant wood-lot, he said to himself,—

"What a tarnal fool I am to let that little chatterbox of a Katie upset me so! If I haven't bought Ellen Christmas presents, why, she's always had enough to eat and to wear. Not that she's given to extravagance. Hello, Mr. Morley, is that you?"

"Yes, King," and Mr. Morley reined in his horse. "I was on my way to your house to pay your wife for that last butter she sent up. I thought she might want the money for Christmas. Here it is—five dollars. Just hand it to her with my compliments, and tell her the butter is fine," and he was gone.

Job watched him out of sight, then turned his attention to the glittering half-eagle in his hand.

"He thought she might want it for Christmas," he said, slowly. "Jest to think of Ellen's spendin' all that money that way! Of course it's mine, and I'll take care of it. But—Ellen is a good wife."

He did not mention his meeting with Mr. Morley to his wife. I am afraid I must admit that Mr. King was cross the remainder of that day. When night come again he tossed restlessly from side to side. At last, after listening to the old clock strike four, he muttered—

"I do love her, of course I do, 'cause she's my wife. And I am goin', yes I am, to town to-morrow and buy her a Christmas present If I kin git rid of this feelin' so mean I'll be content."

He lay deep in thought a moment. Then he whispered to himself: "I'll prove that I do love Ellen. I'll take that five dollars Morley seemed to think belonged to her, and I'll pay every cent of it for a Christmas present for her. I'll make up my mind what to git to-morrow, and now I'm goin' to sleep."

So, relieved of the unusual burden he had borne so long, Mr. King fell asleep.

Early the next morning Mr. King started for Ramsey. It was not a pleasant ride, for he could come to no decision regarding his purchase. You see, when a man waits until he is nearly fifty to buy his first Christmas present, it is a little difficult for him to adjust himself to the circumstances.

"I might buy dishes," he pondered. "I s'pose she needs 'em. But it seems real kinder mean to buy her a present that I'll have jest as much good of as her. I won't buy dishes. A dress? Well, now, I don't like that either. Plague on it! She earns her clothes, and a heap more of 'em than she gits, too. I s'pose she'd like a new rockin' chair," he went on, reining his team down to a walk, "but there 'tis agin. We'd all set in it. Now I want her to have something jest for herself. I can't seem to settle on anything. I guess I'll look around a leetle."

Like many another undecided holiday shopper, Mr. King found that looking around only increased his perplexity. At last he wandered into a dry goods store. In reply to the affable clerk he declared he "didn't want nothin' much."

Standing on the register, ostensibly to warm his feet, he watched the shoppers with something like awe. How well the most of them seemed to know what they wanted! How expertly they handled the fabrics and wisely they were able to talk about them!

Mr. King sighed. He must be ignorant; he had never felt so out of place as to-day.

After a half-hour's waiting he stepped up to the counter and timidly laid his hand upon a piece of scarlet cashmere that a customer had been examining.

"How much is it a yard, ma'am?" he asked the bright-faced girl who was folding and putting up the goods.

"That? Only fifty cents, and it is a yard wide. See, isn't it pretty?"

"Yes," Job admitted, his eyes brightening as the girl deftly threw the gay stuff over her arm. "How many yards would it take for a dress, if it hain't too much trouble for you to tell me?"

"Not the least trouble in the world," the girl said, sunnily. "But how old is the child for whom you wish to buy a dress?"

"Land! It hain't any child. It's Ellen, my wife. She is 'bout your size, only thinner."

The girl hesitated a moment, than said gently: "Eight yards would be plenty. But don't you think your wife would like something graver in color—black or navy blue? We have a piece just like this in navy."

There was a dull pain at Job King's heart. Yes, it was true, what this girl had so delicately hinted. Ellen was old and faded-looking. And she had been such a pretty, rosy-cheeked girl. Fourteen years was not so long a time.

"I guess I won't take it," and, turning, he left the store.

As he walked down the street his eyes were arrested by a display in a window. There were toilet, perfume and manicure cases, gift-books, handkerchief and glove boxes, besides countless other things of which Job did not know the name.

"I want to see some of them grimcracks in the winder," he said to the dapper clerk, who, after inspecting his customer's shabby coat, proceeded to show him the cheapest and poorest of the articles.

"They don't cost enough," Job said, bluntly. "What's that over in the corner, that pink thing?"

"That costs enough, I reckon," and the clerk lifted it up carefully. "That's five dollars, but it's a beauty."

It was a manicure case. The box was covered with rose-pink plush and lined with snowy satin.

"You see, the fittings are '—the clerk began, but Mr. King interrupted him:—

"What's it for, anyhow?"

"Why, it's a manicure set. To care for one's hands, you know," and with a scornful smile he explained the use of the various articles.

Job seemed to see before him the toil-hardened hand of his wife. Yet he silenced his inward protest against the incongruity of the gift by muttering—

"But she can look at it, and it will be too fine for any of the rest of us to use. It will be all hern;" and throwing down the half-eagle Mr. Morley had paid him, he said: "I'll take it. Do it up careful."

While his order was being obeyed he suddenly picked up the gold-piece, saying—

"I'll keep this. Here's a bill instead."

Mrs. King was paring apples by the side of the kitchen stove when she heard her husband's step.

"Why, Job, what have you there?" she asked, as he laid an armful of bundles on the table.

There was a moment's silence. Then Mr. King said meekly—

"To-night is Christmas Eve, Ellen."

"Yes, but"—Mrs. King stopped. Her heart was beating violently. What did it mean?

"You see," Job went on, apologetically. "I thought seein' as I was over to Ramsey, I might as well git the children a few things. You know Ralph has wanted a pair of skates so bad, and there's a doll for Katie. And I thought buyin' a work-basket and all it's fixin's for Ruth would make her want to sew. Then I got some candy and oranges, and two cans of oysters and some celery and a couple of quarts of cranberries. And, Ellen,"—

"What?" Mrs. King asked, in a dazed voice.

"I—I"—and he stopped to fumble with a string. "Here's a Christmas present for you—the first one I ever bought you."

"O Job! O Job!" A flood of tears choked other words

"Be keerful, Ellen! Tears might spot it. Don't cry! Hain't you glad?"

"Glad! Oh, you are the best man on earth! I never saw anything half so pretty. Why, here's a five-dollar gold-piece in it!" A dull red stained the man's face.

"That hain't a present, Ellen. Morley sent you that to pay for the butter. I've—I've 'bout concluded part of the butter money ought to be yourn."

"O Job, what has changed you so?"

Mr. King wiped his eyes on a red cotton handkerchief before he replied:—

"I guess it was your talkin' to Katie 'bout the Christ-child done it. Howsomever, I've turned over a new leaf. It's Christmas Eve, Ellen, and I'm goin' to kiss you."—Zion's Herald.

DIAMOND EARRINGS IN IOWA.—A nearby exchange tells of a man who mortgaged his farm to buy his wife diamond earrings. The wife took in washing to pay the interest on the mortgage, but on the first job lost one of the "sparks" in the suds, whereupon she tried to hang herself in the barn, but the rope broke and she fell on a Jersey cow worth $150 and broke its back. Her husband then undertook to shoot the cow to put it out of misery, but the gun burst and destroyed both his eyes, and the wife then ran away with a lightning-rod peddler. The mortgage is still on deck and fair to live to a ripe old age.—Fort Dodge (Ia.) Post.

NO WONDER.—"Well," said the elderly boarder, as he unfolded his newspaper, "I wonder what is the sensation of the day?" "As I have no data at hand," Asbury Peppers hastened to say, "I am unable to state, but I can confidently assert that the sensation of the weak is that tired feeling." The rest of the boarders experienced it.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 18, 1896.

To-day's Palmer Journal.

The paper which the JOURNAL gives its readers to-day is one of unusual interest and value. A large amount of space is devoted to the centennial of Thomas lodge of Masons, but every line of it will be found interesting reading. The historical address of O. P. Allen, which is given in full, tells the story of the lodge's life and trials, and recalls something of the men who watched over its interests through the years of darkness. The address of Rev. Dr. Lorimer, also given in full, is commended to every reader—it ought to make better men and women of us all.

Especially interesting will be the half-tone portraits in connection with the account. In addition to the officers of the present year and views of the lodge room, there is a reproduction of the old charter, in which the signature of Paul Revere can be easily discerned with the naked eye, and with the aid of a reading glass nearly every word of the document can be made out. The original is stained and yellow, and it was exceedingly difficult to get a photograph sufficiently sharp and distinct to make a good plate for the printer, but that Mr. B. Woodhead succeeded in his endeavor the reproduction on another page will show. The portrait of the Past Masters of the lodge will be of interest, as the line is complete, made so at no little trouble; one photograph, that of Elias Turner, the only one in existence, was procured only by sending a special messenger to Worcester. The portrait of Paul Revere is taken from a painting by a celebrated French artist, and is considered a faithful likeness.

An example of what can be done, if necessity requires, in a country newspaper office in one short week, with only the regular force of employes, is shown in the eight pages which the JOURNAL gives its readers to-day. To double the size of an issue,—every line of which is set in the home office without the employment of any other than the regular working force,—is a task which in itself is one of no mean proportions. But when the fact, that in addition a good share of the time of both men and presses must be spent on the rush of job printing incidental to the holiday times, is taken into account, the situation can hardly be realized by one unfamiliar with such matters. The JOURNAL feels that it has good reason to be proud of its edition to-day.

THE vacancy on the board of interstate commerce commissioners caused by the resignation of W. G. Veazey has been filled by the appointment of Charles A. Prouty of Vermont.

THOMAS lodge of Masons is to be congratulated on the successful celebration of its centennial. The record of the order in the town has been an enviable one, and the members have a right to feel proud of the organization.

REALLY, the town of Palmer ought to have a by-law compelling the removal of snow from the sidewalks within a reasonable time after a storm, and then see that it is enforced. There are sidewalks in this village from which no attempt whatever has been made to remove Wednesday's snow, and probably the same will result after each succeeding storm, the work being left to Nature and spring, the walks in the meantime being a menace to the life and limb of all who are compelled to use them.

ALTHOUGH the writers of a hundred years ago had no steel pens, and were compelled to put their ink on paper by means of a split quill, they managed to turn out some pretty good specimens of penmanship, as the work on the charter of Thomas lodge of Masons, a fac-simile of which is given on another page, will show. Every stroke of the work on it was done with a pen of the style in use 100 years ago, ornamentation and all, while the legibility and evenness of the text would put to shame seven out of every eight persons of the present day who knows how to write.

IN THE resignation of Rev. W. H. Hart from the school committee the town loses the services of an official who has served it long, faithfully and well. He has been no merely ornamental member of the board, but has given largely of his time and thought to the betterment of the schools, and many of the reforms and improvements which have been inaugurated during the past few years have been proposed by him, or if by others, have received his hearty commendation. It will be difficult, if not impossible, to fill the vacancy with one who will give the town an equal service.

THE new immigration restriction bill, which passed the House at the last session and has now passed the Senate, will no doubt be approved by the president. Instead of allowing all persons not belonging to the criminal or mentally deficient class an entrance into this country, all over 16 years of age, with a few exceptions, will be debarred unless they can read and write the language of their native country, or some other. This test is expected to rid the country of a particularly undesirable class of immigrants, which have heretofore been coming to our shores in large numbers.

IF THE decision of Judge Adams in the United States circuit court at St. Louis stands, holders of accident insurance policies are quite likely to find "wearing tight shoes" among the list of things which they may not engage in if they wish to keep their policy in force. A holder of an accident policy in a Western company bought a new pair of shoes which proved tight and caused an abrasion of the skin of one of his toes; blood poisoning set in and he died from the effects. His widow sued the insurance company for the amount of the policy, and the judge has given her a verdict, holding that death occurred by "external, violent and accidental means," within the meaning of such words on the policy held by the insured.

REPORTS from Cuba last Saturday announced that Maceo, the Cuban leader, had been killed by the Spanish troops, the account stating that he had been invited to a council of war, and he and his staff shot down when they appeared at the appointed place. Such a proceeding is so at variance with all the customs of civilized warfare, and the story of the assassination—for it could be called by no other name under the circumstances—was one of such horribleness that from one end of the United States to the other arose a protest in tones and volume not to be mistaken. Massmeetings of indignation were held all over the country, and from every state came promises of means and men to assist Cuba. At New York on Monday evening a Cuban League was formed, with such men as Col. Ethan Allen, Charles A. Dana, Roswell P. Flower, Thomas A. James, Chauncey M. Depew, Theodore Roosevelt, Thomas F. Gilroy, John Jacob Astor, Gen. Daniel Butterfield, Frederick D Grant and Walter Logan among the officers, the object of the league being the complete independence of Cuba. So strong has been the feeling that Gen. Weyler, commander of the Spanish forces in Cuba, bloody old butcher though he is, has denied all responsibility in the matter, sending out a statement that the affair was planned and carried out without his knowledge. News from Cuba is decidedly unreliable, however, it being almost impossible to get authentic reports, and no one knew whether to believe the statement of Maceo's death or not. This morning announcement is made that he is not dead, but that with 5000 men he has had a battle with the Spanish troops since his reported decease. One thing is certain, if Maceo has met his death in the manner reported, it will have accomplished more toward the freedom of Cuba than months of fighting. The civilized world will hardly remain inactive in the case. President Cleveland might not wish to take decided action so near the close of his term of office, but it is doubtful if Congress could be held in check. The voice of the entire people of the country will be heard in protest, and if the story is true the United States will be quite likely to interfere in behalf of the island.

SCHOOL MATTERS.

Rev. W. H. Hart Resigns from the Committee.

At the monthly meeting of the school committee on Monday evening Rev. W. H. Hart tendered his resignation as a member of that committee in the following letter:

To the School Committee.

GENTLEMEN:—After nearly six years' service on the school board, I feel that I have earned the right to an honorable discharge. It is with real regret that I have decided no longer to be officially connected with you in a work in which I have ever taken and shall ever take a deep interest—the betterment of the schools. In withdrawing from a position marked by so many pleasant associations, I wish to thank you all for your uniform courtesy and kindness. By accepting my resignation, which is hereby respectfully tendered, you will be but adding one more to the many obligations under which you have placed me. With sincere respect and esteem,

WM. H. HART.

December 14th.

The resignation was accepted, and the following letter to Father Hart was signed by the remaining members of the board:

PALMER, MASS., DEC. 14, 1896.

Rev. W. H. Hart.

DEAR SIR:—It is with sincere regret that we have received your letter of the 11th inst., severing your connection with the School Committee. Palmer can ill afford to lose so thoughtful and progressive an official, and we so genial and helpful an associate. In all your six years' service you have had but one aim, the greatest good to all the schools, and your thought, your voice and your vote have always been directed to this end. Only those conversant with the schools when you began your service, and familiar with them now, can appreciate fully all of value that you have suggested in these years, and heartily aided in all ways for their completion.

We hope rest will give renewed health, and that then you may be found again a member of the School Board.

With great respect for you personally, and for your work as one of us in the past, we are,

Very truly yours,
WM. A. BRECKENRIDGE,
C. H. HOBBS,
F. A. RUGGLES,
LEWIS R. HOLDEN.

Father Hart resigns because he feels that he cannot at present spare the amount of time and thought which the work of the committee demands. He has always been a working member of the board, giving much time and thought to the affairs of the schools, and feels that now he would like to be freed from the worries which must come to one who takes so active a part in the affairs of the committee.

The resignation of Rev. H. F. Moulton as a member of the board was received and accepted, and it was voted to leave the matter of filling the two vacancies upon the table until the next meeting.

The Sunday Schools' Christmas.

The Christmas concert of the Congregational Sunday school, which was to have been given Sunday evening, has been postponed one week. Next Thursday a supper will be given to the Sunday school and home department in the church parlors at 5 30 p. m. At 7 o'clock the children will present a Christmas cantata, entitled 'Santa in a Plight," to which the adults are invited.

The Universalist Sunday school will also give its concert on the evening of Sunday, the 27th. A children's party, in place of the Christmas tree, will be given Thursday from 3 to 8 p. m. A supper will be served to the children at 6 o'clock.

At the Baptist church a Christmas concert, entitled "Hugg's Christmas Greeting," under the direction of Mrs. Moulton and Mrs. Leach, will be given by the children at 7 o'clock next Sunday evening. The public is cordially invited.

Illegal Liquor Sellers Settle.

For some time rumors have been afloat that the recently-convicted liquor sellers would attempt to settle their cases, and not allow them to come before the superior court, and the first in this line was adjusted today. Charles Jones, who was fined an aggregate of $550, withdrew his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty on all counts. The former sentence was then withdrawn and a new one of $50 imposed in the nuisance case, which was paid, the other cases being continued for sentence without date, which means that if Jones keeps out of the business they will not be brought up.

Henry Leno and Lillian McGuirke of Holland also withdrew their pleas and appeals and pleaded guilty, and were fined an aggregate of $150, which they paid.

All the schools of the town closed this afternoon for the Christmas vacation of one week.

Miss Beecher of Springfield is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Marshall Shaw, on Park street.

Mrs. F. F. Marcy, who has been quite ill at her home on King street, is now rapidly recovering.

D. W. Foskit has an advertisement in another column which will be of interest to horse owners.

Mrs. Fitch is very ill at her home on Central street, being confined to the bed with rheumatism.

Ruth, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Buffington of Converse avenue, is seriously ill with pneumonia.

The pastor of the Congregational church will give his annual message at the morning service next Sunday.

The King's Daughters met at the home of Mrs. C. W. Robinson on the corner of Pearl and Park streets this afternoon.

C. A. Brown, who for the past month has been confined to the house by rheumatism, has recovered sufficiently to be out.

The Ladies' Society of the Congregational church have shipped a barrel of clothing, etc., to Talladega College this week.

All the stores in town will remain open all evenings until after the holidays, to accommodate the Christmas shoppers.

Palmer Lodge of Odd Fellows received an official visit from the officers of the Grand Lodge of the state Wednesday evening.

Miss Linda Hawley Brigham will give a parlor reading at the home of Mrs. Charles Gleason in Rockbottom on Christmas evening.

The ladies of the Baptist church served a baked bean supper in the church vestry Wednesday evening, which was well attended.

As usual, C. W. Johnson was the first out with a sleigh, he taking advantage of Wednesday's snow to get out on runners soon after noon.

W. F. Millard has moved from the tenement of S. S. Taft on Pine street into the tenement of Mrs. Mary Thompson on the same street.

The King's Daughters have sent a barrel of clothing and other aticles to the state headquarters in Boston this week, for the poor of that city.

Winter Brothers have moved their broom business from Munger's block on South Main street to the block of Hubbard Lawrence on Pleasant street.

Rev. H. F. Moulton, who recently accepted a call to Biddeford, Me., was given a reception by his parishioners at that place on Monday evening, in the church.

At Monday's session of the superior court, in the case of Thomas S. Mills against Mrs. E. P. Prew, both of this town, in action of contract, a verdict was rendered for the defendant.

F. D. Barton found a child's pocketbook containing a small amount of money, on Wednesday, which he will be glad to give to the child who can prove a right to the property.

The Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church will hold a meeting in the parlors of the church this evening at 7.30 for the election of officers for the ensuing year.

Thomas lodge of Masons is contemplating the printing of a souvenir of its centennial anniversary, which shall contain the addresses given on Tuesday, and other matter incidental to the occasion.

The townspeople were greatly pleased with the address of Dr. Lorimer on Tuesday afternoon at the Masonic celebration, and an attempt is being made to have him give a lecture here at an early date.

Postmaster Royce requests all holders of keys to lock boxes to bring them in for redemption before the holidays, as at that time work will be rushing at the office, and he will not have time to attend to the matter.

Dr. G. H. Wilkins has been appointed by the Massachusetts Grand Lodge of Masons, District Deputy Grand Master for this district, comprising the towns of Palmer, Monson, Warren, Ware, Belchertown, Enfield and Barre.

Business at the district court this week has been of the dullest kind, not a case having come up to break the monotony. Not a single case of drunk has been up the past month. This is one of the beneficial effects of no-license.

Rev. Omer G. Petrie of Canton will occupy the pulpit at the Universalist church Sunday morning. Rev. Mr. Petrie preached here several weeks ago, and was well liked by the parishioners, and in all probability a call will be extended to him.

The exceptions in the case of O. W. Studley and H. A. Northrop against A. F. Ballard of Hampden have been allowed, not sustained, as reported in last week's JOURNAL. The cases will now go to the supreme court, which will sustain or overrule them.

J. B. Lynde is fitting the suite of rooms recently occupied by the Palmer Republican Club, in his block on Main street, for a tenement. A large bay-window is being built upon the east side of the building, and the tenement will be modern and convenient in every respect.

M. J. Kinnevan, formerly of Palmer, who has been the agent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of New York at Maynard, has been promoted to the position of assistant superintendent, with headquarters at Fall River, and commenced his new duties on Monday of this week.

Two of the underwriter's chemical fire extinguishers have been placed in the town almshouse, each having an extinguishing capacity of thirty pails of water. This is a good investment, as in case of fire the blaze can be extinguished in a moment, thus saving much damage, both from fire and water.

Robert L. Wilcox, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Wilcox of Tenneyville, died at his home this morning of rheumatism of the heart, after an illness of a week. He was a bright, lovable boy of great promise, and a member of the Baptist Sunday school. His parents have the sympathy of the whole community in their bereavement.

A. E. Fitch has tenderd his resignation as manager of the opera house, to the trustees, to take effort the 1st of January. The amount of time it necessarily takes to attend to the management Mr. Fitch does not think he can spare from his other duties. It is not known who will succeed Mr. Fitch.

In accordance with a custom which has prevailed for some time past, the New London Northern division of the Central Vermont railroad will sell tickets at reduced rates for the holidays. The Christmas tickets will be good going December 24th and 25th; the New Year's tickets will be good going December 31st and January 1st, and all will be good for the return trip until January 4th, inclusive.

The Flynt Building and Construction Company has recently received the contract for two large jobs. One is a $25,000 job including the erection of three wooden buildings for J. L. Prescott & Co., manufacturers of enameline stove polish at Passaic, N. J. The other is a $27,000 job, the construction of a large brick addition for the George F. Blake Manufacturing Company of East Cambridge.

At the annual meeting of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company, held Monday afternoon, the following officers were elected: President, C. E. Fish; vice president, Rufus Flynt; clerk, W. W. Leach; treasurer, C. B. Fiske; directors, C. B. Fiske, C. A. Grannis of Waterbury, Ct., Rufus Flynt, Edward Fairbanks and Wilson H. Fairbanks of Warren, G. G. Blakeslee of Waterbury, and George C. Flynt of Monson.

The lecture given by Mrs. Annie Russell Marble under the auspices of the Tuesday Club at the home of Mrs. J. B. Shaw Saturday afternoon was very interesting, portraying the lives and works of Carlyle and Emerson in a pleasing manner. The last lecture in the course will be given January 9th, instead of the 4th, as printed upon the ticket, at 3 p. m. at the home of Mrs. W. E. Stone. Miss Linda Hawley Brigham will speak on "Colonial Days."

At the meeting of Quaboag council, Royal Arcanum, last Friday evening, the following officers were elected: Regent, E. A. Maxwell; P. R., Walter L. Shaw; O., John H. Shaw; secretary, Frank A. Royce; treasurer, H. N. Sedgwick; collector, C. E. Fish; guide, C. E. Fish; warden, G. F. Sedgwick; sentry, L. G. Parkhurst. It is expected that D. D. G. R. George Parker will install the newly-elected officers at the meeting of the council January 5, 1897.

The Men's Sunday Evening Club of the Congregational church will give a special "Forefather's Service" Sunday evening. A large chorus of voices and an orchestra of nine pieces will render appropriate music. The following will be the order of exercises:

Voluntary.
Hymn.
Reading of the Scripture, Dr. G. H. Wilkins

Postlude.

Minnie, 25, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs Edward Welch, died at her home on Water street Monday afternoon of consumption after an illness of over a year. During her illness she was a patient sufferer, and was ever thoughtful of those who ministered to her. She will be greatly missed by a wide circle of friends. Besides a father and mother, she leaves two brothers and three sisters. The funeral was held Wednesday morning at 9 30 from her late home, with a requiem high mass at St. Thomas's church, of which she was a member. There were many handsome floral tributes, among them a handsome cresent from the employes and firm of Holden and Fuller, bunch of 25 white carnations, and 25 pink roses. The bearers were D. E. Doyle, J. W. McGrath, J. L. Sullivan, M. J. Monnihan, C. H. Burns and D. F. Cotter of Ansonia, Ct. Burial was in the Catholic cemetery at Thorndike.

The music at St. Thomas's Catholic church on Christmas day will be of an unusual order. At the 10.30 a. m. mass the following will be the programme:

Kyrie.	Wels
Gloria.	Wels
Credo.	Wels
Sanctus.	Wels
Agnus Dei	Wels
Adeste Fidelis.	Novello

At vespers at 7.30 in the evening the following will be rendered:

Domine.	Selle
Dixit Dominus.	Selle
Confitebor.	Fiske
Beatus Vir.	Selle
Laudate Pueri.	Selle
Laudate Dominu.	Selle
Magnificat.	Selle
Alma.	Novello
O Salutaris.	Verdi
Tantum Ergo.	Rossi

The choir will be under the direction of Mr. Craig of Springfield.

For a Quickening of Christian Work.

The following letter from the pastors of the various Protestant churches of the town is being sent out to the church members:

The Pastors of the Protestant Churches to the Christian People of Palmer send Greetings:

DEAR BRETHERN: We feel that the time has come for the churches of Palmer to unite in an earnest persistent effort to win men to Christ. We believe that God will bless such an effort and crown it with success.

There is imperatives need for a deeper spiritual life in our churches, that the many attendants at our services who are not disciples of Christ and those who hold themselves aloof from Christian influences may be led to accept Christ as their Savior and Master. Our town needs to be a safer place for young men. The moral atmosphere needs to be purified. In short, we need a deep spiritual work thoughout the town; a work of soul-saving, character transformation, and general moral and spiritual uplifting.

After careful and prayerful consideration we are led to make the following suggestions;

1. That each church hold at least one meeting before the close of this month in which this matter shall be discussed; and that in it we unite in prayer for the power of the Holy Spirit in all the churches of Palmer.

2. That each Christian in our several churches make a thorough consecration of himself to God, that he may be ready for any work which Providence may assign him.

3 That in the near future each of our Sunday Schools devote at last a part of one session to special prayer and effort for the conversion of its members.

4. That during the Week of Prayer we seek especially for the quickening of all our church-members, and for a thorough preparation for evangelistic work.

5 That following the Week of Prayer we make a united effort to bring the Gospel in saving power to all the unsaved in our town; and that by delegations and visitations from church to church we encourage one another and strengthen the faith of all.

Setting aside all minor questions, let us unite in prayer and effort to bring the salvation of God to this, our beloved town.

Wishing you grace, mercy and peace, we are,

Yours in the ministry and hope of the Gospel,

REV. F. E. JENKINS,
REV G. S. BUTLER,
REV. C. R. MINARD,
REV. G. M. GERRISH,
REV. R. E. SMITH,
MR E. A. THOMAS.

Palmer, Mass, Dec. 15th, 1896.

THREE RIVERS.

Elton Tricket is quite sick with the measles.

Miss Blanche Upham has been quite sick with the measles, but is now much better.

Frank Ruggles, who formerly resided here, is spending a few days with Charles Ruggles.

Miss Fanny Needham of Lowell returned home last Monday after spending two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Fish.

There will be a Christmas tree at the Baptist church next Thursday evening, and one at the Union church Friday evening.

W. B. Provo, who has been living in one of Mr. Cheney's tenements, has moved to the one vacated by A. W. Warriner some time ago.

J. W. Cheney has vacated the Company's tenement, where he has lived for the last 9 or 10 years, and has moved into one of his own on High street. J. H. Trickett has moved to the one vacated by Mr. Cheney.

There will be preaching in the Baptist church next Sunday a. m. by E. A. Thomas—a Christmas sermon; subject "Christ in the home." At 7 p. m. there will be a union service in the same church, with preaching by Rev. G. S. Butler.

The Union church Sunday school held its annual meeting Tuesday evening and elected these officers for the coming year: Superintendent, J. H. Trickett; assistant, F. A. Upham. The rest of the officers will be appointed by the superintendent later.

THORNDIKE.

Mr. B. J. Sullivan is clerking at W. J. McCormick's during the holidays.

Daniel Sullivan of Boston, who has been visiting friends here for the past week, returned home on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett E. Duncan of Melrose are visiting friends in town, and will remain until after Christmas.

D. F. Sullivan has resumed work in the office of the Thorndike Co. after a week's illness.

Mrs. E R. Chabboth was called to Springfield on Saturday by the illness of her brother.

John F. Loftus has been confined to his home for the past week with another attack of illness.

A snow shoe club is soon to be formed in town by several of the young Canadian residents.

Rehearsals for the operetta to be given after Lent will commence about the first week in January.

Fred Bishop has so far recovered from his injuries so as to be able to be about with the assistance of crutches.

Josiah Gates, an old and well-known citizen of the town, is ill at his home on Commercial street with the grippe.

A very interesting Christmas programme was given by the pupils in the grammar school building this afternoon.

Miss Katie Johnson and Mrs C. M. Higgins of Connecticut are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Allson for a few days.

M. G. Roche and M. F. Kelliher of Boston, and J. F. Roche of Holy Cross, Worcester, are expected home for the Christmas holidays.

Miss Nellie Murphy of Enfield is visiting friends in town. Miss Murphy is contemplating going into business here again in the millinery and dress making line.

Miss Katie Riley and Miss Mary Shea, both formerly of this place, now of South Boston, have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Dufresne during the past week.

Howorth's Hibernica was greeted with a fine house, as usual, on Monday evening. The show has not lost any of its attractions, and has many new novelties, among them being the "Pickerts," who are very clever in their work.

Morse & McIntire's minstrels are rehearsing for the performance which will be given at an early date. The company is composed of well-known local talent, and bids fair to out-rival the well-known Primrose & West minstrels in many respects.

That Christmas is fast approaching can be believed by a glance at the many store windows in town, all of which are filled with their respective lines of goods, including many handsome as well as useful Christmas gifts. The merchants report thus far a heavy holiday trade.

On account of a demand of the foreign patrons of the post office, Postmaster Luman has written to the department at Washington asking that this office be made an international money order office, and hopes to hear favorably in a few days. This, if granted, would be a great accommodation to those who have money to send across the waters.

The following concert programme will be given by Bryant's Operatic Orchestra on New Year's night in connection with the Columbian Band's ball:

March, "Phonograph," Voelker
Overture Medley, "A Jolly Night," Beyer

BONDSVILLE.

Mrs. Joslyn visited friends in Holyoke this week.

The W. C. T. U. met with Mrs. E. E. Ryther Thursday afternoon.

Rev. Michael Griffin of Springfield visited his parents here early this week.

Daniel Breen of Springfield visited his mother, Mrs. Patrick Breen, Sunday.

Scott Merrifield of Springfield spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. L. W. Merrifield.

John B. Shea, whose house was burned last week, is living with his father, Michael Shea.

Mrs. Hall of Lowell is visiting her son, W. E. Hall, superintendent for the Boston Duck Co.

A social dance will be held in Liberty Hall to-night, instead of Thursday night, as was at first reported.

Samuel Millen, who formerly had charge of the Bondsville bleachery, now has charge of the Brookdale bleachery.

William Donovan is home from Indian Orchard, owing to the sudden shut-down of the shop where he was employed.

Rev. S. Lacinski of Webster, a Polish priest, held special services in St. Bartholomew's church Monday and Tuesday.

Mrs. Golden and daughter of West Ware visited Mrs. Golden's daughter, Mrs. Edwin Sharratt, a few days the last week.

George Farr, who is employed by the Chapman Valve Co. of Indian Orchard, spent Sunday and Monday at his home here.

Rev. R. E. Bisbee of Chicopee preached two sermons in the Methodist church Sunday, exchanging pulpits with Rev. R. E. Smith.

The Sunday school of the Methodist church will hold an entertainment and Christmas tree in the church vestry Christmas Eve.

George W. Canterbury is drawing plans for the Boston Duck Company's new tenement house. The underpinning is being laid this week.

A party went to Springfield last Saturday night to attend the performance of Hanlon's "Superba" at Court Square Theater, returning by electrics to Ludlow and driving from there home.

An effort is being made to have the Boston and Albany railroad hold the late Saturday night train Dec. 26th to allow people an opportunity to attend "Shore Acres" at the Court Square Theatre, Springfield.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Talmadge of Amherst will be sorry to learn of the death of their infant daughter, Margery J., at Amherst last Saturday. The funeral was held at Amherst Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Charles E Shumway has received word of the death of her sister, Ruth, wife of Thomas E. Gibney, at her home in Fall River. She died very suddenly Tuesday night. The funeral was held at Fall River to-day.

Joseph Fenton, who has been employed in the finishing department of the Bondsville bleachery for several years, has resigned his position and has gone to Rockaway, N. J., where he will take a position with the bleachery there.

A party of Frenchmen from Three Rivers, who drove up last Saturday afternoon for liquid refreshments, met with bad luck. Through careless driving they broke the wheel of the buggy and had to secure another one to return home in.

Henry Coyle, an employe in the weave room of the Boston Duck Company, and Mrs. Ellany McKinstry of Worcester, were married at Worcester. After a brief wedding trip they returned here, and will make their home in the Lander's block.

R. L. Bond has commenced work on the foundation for a house on the Shea lot on Pine avenue. When finished the tenement will be occupied by Frank Lamb. Mr. Bond has also greatly improved the tenements he purchased of Mrs Squiers with new paint, clapboards, and a new underpinning.

All the schools of the village closed this afternoon for the Christmas vacation. Appropriate programmes were held in the different schools, such as recitations, songs and Christmas exercises. The scholars in the grammar school were treated to a pleasant party Wednesday evening by the teacher, Miss Cleveland.

Between $2 and $3 in silver was picked up near the Boston and Albany depot last Saturday morning, and from the amount of blood scattered around the ground it was evident that some one had been indulging in a "scrap" the night before. Drunken rows have been quite common occurences in the vicinity of the two saloons for the past two or three weeks, more so than usual, and it is very unpleasant to people living in the neighborhood, but so long as it does not trouble the selectmen of Belchertown probably nothing will be done to stop it.

All the stores are prepared for the holiday trade, and are doing a very good business, although it is a little early yet for any rush. Charles L. Holden has probably the largest stock of Christmas goods. The front of his store is filled with such goods as toys of all kinds, toilet articles, fancy stationery, crockery, albums, picture books and toys in great variety. O. A. Parent has quite a large display of toys, toilet articles, vases, work boxes, etc. Charles Russell and Miss Mary Twiss have each a good line of articles suitable for the children. William Sherry at the Domestic Bakery has an assortment of candy for Christmas, such as fancy hearts, baskets, ribbon candy, etc; he will make up a choice lot of confectionery and pastry next week for the Christmas trade.

The social and entertainment given by the overseers of the Boston Duck Company in the Methodist church vestry last Friday evening was very largely attended, and everyone enjoyed a pleasant evening. Refreshments were served, consisting of coffee, cocoa and cake in great variety. The serving was done by the gentlemen, who also made the coffee and cocoa, and many ladies were heard to say that the drinks were splendid. It was said that the gentlemen did not make all the cake themselves, but it was all very nice. The entertainment consisted mostly of selections from the graphaphone by Mr. Conway, which pleased the audience very much There was also singing by Messrs. Shaw and Van Tassell. The gentlemen cleared about $23, which will go to the church.

Wants $5000 for a Leg.

Phileos Beauregard, through his attorney, James B. Carroll of Springfield, has brought suit against the Boston Duck Company for $5000. Beauregard was employed on the elevator in the mill, and had his leg crushed by getting it between the elevator and the floor; his leg was amputated below the knee, and he was removed to the Springfield hospital, where he has quickly recovered, and it is expected that he will be home soon.

Workman's Hand Hurt.

James Griffin, a workman in the yard of the Boston Duck Company, met with a misfortune last week. He was helping to move some machinery into the new bleachery, and fell from the elevator to the floor below, a distance of about four feet. A bar of iron falling at the time struck him on the hand, breaking one of his fingers. Dr. Smith dressed the injury, and he is now doing as well as could be expected, but will be unable to resume work for some time to come.

A CENTURY OF MASONRY.

The Centennial Celebration of Thomas Lodge, F. and A. M.

FULL ACCOUNT OF A MOST INTERESTING DAY'S DOINGS.

Fac-simile of the Lodge's Charter, Showing Paul Revere's Signature---Portraits of Paul Revere, and Isaiah Thomas, for Whom the Lodge Was Named---Portraits of all the Past Masters---Officers of 1896---Views of Lodge Rooms, Etc.

Thomas Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons celebrated its centennial anniversary Tuesday afternoon and evening.

The 100th anniversary in the life of any person or organization is always worthy of celebration, and to the members of Thomas Lodge its centennial held more of interest than is usual in such occasions. In the first place, the lodge's charter bears upon its face the signature of that glorious hero of Revolutionary times—Paul Revere. There are only a few charters in Massachusetts bearing his name, and the 100th anniversary of a lodge possessing such an one is no every-day occurrence. There may be other centennials, but there can be no other name on the charters comparing with that of Paul Revere. Then there have been troublous times for the lodge in the past, when the spirit of anti-Masonry was rife throughout this section, and for a time the lodge gave up its charter and its members fraternized in the closest of seclusion, if at all, not knowing if they would ever be allowed to meet unmolested again or not. Light dawned at last, however, the precious charter was returned from the Grand Lodge, and once more the brethren convened with no one to say them nay. But all this is told in full in the excellent historical address of O. P. Allen.

For more than a year the officers and members of Thomas Lodge have worked and planned for the celebration, and a kind Providence, which has seemingly watched over the affairs of the order since the days of darkness disappeared, gave all that could have been desired in the way of weather. And that not the slightest hitch or jar occurred in any part of the programme to mar the joyousness of the occasion, speaks well for the care and elaborateness with which the details were planned.

The one hundred years which, in the ceaseless course of Time, have rolled by since the charter was first granted and Thomas Lodge began its existence, has been a period of growth and prosperity, and under the wise leadership of men of ability and influence, the lodge has attained a high position in Masonic circles. The officers of the Grand Lodge and prominent members of the craft from all parts of the country deemed it an honor to be present, thus adding dignity and weight to the occasion. The original charter, bearing the historic name of Paul Revere, penned by the very hands that guided his steed on that memorable midnight ride to Concord and Lexington, which has been made immortal by Longfellow, was brought forth from its retreat in the vault of the Palmer Savings Bank, and viewed with much curiosity.

The most enjoyable portion of the day's exercises for outsiders, at least,—and we feel sure that the Masonic brethren do not deem it to be the least,—was the address of Dr. George C. Lorimer. The eloquent preacher was heard in one of his best efforts upon a pet theme, and held the large audience attentive and interested from first to last. The address will be found upon another page, and while it will prove interesting reading, it will lack the fire and enthusiasm of the speaker, a thing which cold type unfortunately cannot give.

STORY OF THE DAY'S DOINGS.

The officers of the Grand Lodge arrived on the 1 p. m. train, and were met at the station by J. B. Shaw and Dr. William Holbrook of the reception committee, who escorted them to the Converse House, where lunch was served. After lunch the brethren repaired to the Masonic building on Central street, where the Grand Lodge was organized in one of the ante-rooms.

At 2.30 Thomas Lodge was organized with nearly 200 in attendaace, and a committee consisting of H. E W. Clark, Dr. William Holbrook and William Merriam was appointed to present the Grand Lodge. Before this was done however, Brother C. E. Fish arose and in a well-chosen speech presented the Master of the Lodge, Dr. G. H. Wilkins, who is about to retire, with a handsome gold Past Master's jewel, and at the same time one to C. T. Brainerd, the present Past Master. Mr. Fish said:

Most Worshipful Master:—If you will pardon the interruption, I will take but a moment of time. Thomas Lodge is justly proud of its record of one hundred years of life, which to-day we celebrate; and Sir, no year in its history has been more prosperous and profitable than the past year. And Sir, feeling that you, in no small measure, by your earnest and faithful work and kindly spirit, have contributed to this success, we desire in a slight measure to show our appreciation of this service, and it is with great pleasure that I present you, in behalf of the brethren of Thomas Lodge, this Past Master's jewel.

My Brother, we are not unmindful that the way has been made easier and the work lighter by the faithful and efficient work of your predecessor in office, and it is with great pleasure that I present to Worshipful Brother Charles T. Brainerd this Past Master's jewel.

My Brothers, we trust these may ever prove a source of pleasure and pride to you, not because of their intrinsic value, but because they come to you freighted with the sweetest, holiest and tenderest gift God ever gave to man, Brotherly Love.

After the reception of the Grand Lodge a procession was formed and marched through Central, Main and Church streets to the Congregationai church, where the exercises of the afternoon were to take place. Space in the body of the church had been reserved for the brethren, and the remainder of the room was crowded with townspeople and visitors.

After the organ prelude by Mrs. Small, music by the Temple Quartet of Springfield, and prayer by Rev. F. W. Betts of Syracuse, N. Y., formerly of Palmer, Dr. G. H. Wilkins gave the Address of Welcome.

Most Worshipful Grand Master, Officers of the Grand Lodge, Masonic Brethren, and Friends: The occasion which calls us together to-day is one of no ordinary moment. One hundred years have passed since the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, that noble hero, Paul Revere, whose name adds luster to the history of our fraternity in America, placed his signature upon this charter, and Thomas Lodge began its existence. This parchment bears another signature no less dear to every member of Thomas Lodge; it is that of him for whom the Lodge was named, then Senior Grand Warden, and later Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, a man of unusual attainments and noble character, Isaiah Thomas. This charter, therefore, bearing these two names that connect us so intimately with the past, is doubly precious as we close the record of a hundred years and stand at the open portal of another century.

In God's time a thousand years are as one day, and one day as a thousand years, but measured by our standards a century is a period which marks the development of tremendous forces and the achievement of momentous results. In the history of the development and their successful contest at the beginning of life's struggle, bringing paternal satisfaction and exceeding joy, so the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts meets her children on these centennial occasions with great pleasure, and her heart is happy with a feeling of paternal satisfaction and pride.

The birth of Thomas Lodge one hundred years ago; the perpetuation of that sterling Mason and zealous editor, Isaiah Thomas; the life this Lodge has led, overcast sometimes by clouds of discouragement and doubt, but through faith in the coming light and hope in the dawning of a new day has survived the clouds and enjoyed years of sunshine and peace; all these constitute sources of gratitude and joy to the Grand Lodge.

This day marks an epoch in the life of this Lodge of which every member should feel proud. One hundred years of an honorable career, one hundred years in which the beneficent influence of this Lodge has been felt in this community, are completed.

The Masonic Lodge is an association of men banded together for the noble purpose of helping one another, and helping the community in which they live. Association is one of the greatest of social forces. Many associations are formed which exist but a short time. The only societies which actually exist are those based on religion, and no association can live except through religious sentiment.

The principal reason that the Masonic fraternity has existed through so many centuries is because of its religious foundation. The sentiments expressed and taught in the lodge room quiet the rebellions of mind and greeds of all kind. Each brother returns to his home from a Masonic meeting, where noble and generous sentiments have been proclaimed, with thoughts uplifted and with higher aspirations. No man can receive the Masonic degree, if he be studious and observing, without being conscious of a new sense. He sees human relations, obligations and duties in a new light. "Old things are passed away," and he realizes that he has become a helper in promulgating those virtues that make for the good of the human soul and mankind. The power of Freemasonry is a moral power Masonry moves in the forefront in the battle of good against ill, of truth against error. Masonry bears aloft throughout Christendom the banners of truth, equality, liberty, progress, religion, and calls men and nations to the attainment of that high personal and national perfection possible by the pursuit of Christian truth.

Brethren, our work will soon be done The gavel, square, level and plumb will soon drop from our strengthless hands; our places in the earthly Lodge will be vacant forever. May those who come after us, who take our places and bear onward the ark of the covenant in Thomas Lodge, be true exemplars of the saving tenets of our Order, and display in all their lives the elevating and soul-satisfying principles of our beloved fraternity.

I receive from your hands this original charter of Thomas Lodge; it is a precious parchment, and worthy of the most scrupulous care. Its value and interest does not consist alone in its language, form or style, or that it is the authority by which this lodge for 100 years has continued its existence; its great interest is because of the autographs it bears. This sheet, a century ago, lay under the hands of brethren stalwart in patriotism and Masonic zeal—Paul Revere, Samuel Dunn, Isaiah Thomas, Joseph Laughton, Daniel Oliver. Their eyes, long since closed in death, scanned these lines; their hands, now crumbled to dust, penned these immortal names They have passed away, but this parchment remains; treasure it with constant care. Increasing years increases its value. Transmit it, unimpared, to your successor, and imitate the loyalty of our brethren whose names are affixed to this charter.

The benediction of this Grand Lodge abides with you. May the future be resplendent with Masonic virtue, the years full of peace, and the coming century be one of continued prosperity in Thomas Lodge.

Following this there was music by the Temple Quartet, the historical address of O. P. Allen, more music, and the address by Dr. Geo. C. Lorimer of Boston. These addresses will be found in full on the following pages of this sheet. Music by the quartette, the benediction by Brother Betts, and the organ postlude concluded the exercises at the church, when the procession was reformed and returned to the lodge room.

Adjournment was then made to Odd Fellows' hall, where an informal reception was held. At 6.30 the procession was formed and the line of march taken up to the opera house below, where the banquet was served. The room was handsomely decorated by Buchholz of Springfield, pink being the prevailing color. The front of the gallery was festooned with pink bunting, draped with lace, and Masonic emblems and the national colors were hung at regular intervals from the ceiling. Seven long tables occupied the floor of the house, with as many more on the stage, the Grand Lodge occupying the one at the front, facing the assemblage below. G. W. Armstrong of Boston was the caterer, and served the following menu:

Roast Turkey. Sugar Cured Ham.
Boiled Tongue.
Rolls. Escalloped Oysters.
Roman Punch.
Chicken Salad. Sherbet.
Ices—Vanilla and Strawberry.
Assorted Cake, Fruit.
Tea. Coffee. Milk.

At each plate was a handsome embossed souvenir menu, tied with a heavy silk cord, prepared expressly for the occasion, the most elaborate and expensive thing of the kind ever seen in the place. About 425 sat down to the tables, many ladies being in the assemblage.

After the substantial part of the evening's feast had been given due attention, Dr. Wilkins arose and in a few well-chosen words presented the toastmaster of the evening, Judge George Robinson of Palmer.

The first speaker was Most Worshipful Grand Master Edwin B. Holmes of Boston, who responded to the toast, "The Most Worshipful Grand Lodge of Masons in Massachusetts." The centennial celebration of any organization, he said, was a matter of great interest to that body and also to the community in which it was located. Revere signed about twenty-five more charters than any other Grand Master; there was great activity in Masonry one hundred years ago. Nearly all of the leaders in the Revolutionary War were Masons, among them Washington and Lafayette, many receiving their degrees in army lodges. He cautioned the brethren not to forget the future in looking over the past, and to so cherish the lessons of the past as to win greater laurels in the future. The Masonic order is one of the oldest orders in existence, and is constantly growing in favor. Men find in the lodge room that welcome so eagerly sought for—that which springs from the heart. The order teaches us to live and act for others, and produces better citizens, husbands, fathers, and friends.

Right Worshipful Serana D. Nickerson, of Boston, Grand Secretary, responded to the toast, "The Event We Celebrate," and recalled pleasant associations of a quarter of a century ago with the toastmaster in the service of the fraternity. It was not difficult to understand why so many lodges were chartered under Revere; the order was just getting on its feet again after the Revolutionary War, and with the return of the soldiers from the field they brought with them a profound reverence for the order and its members with whom they had been associated, and with whom they had risked their lives and fortunes for right and justice. Masonry in America dated from 1733, the year after Washington was born, and the speaker considered it a fortunate coincidence that both arrived about the same time. But for the Masonic fraternity we should probably not have had independence in this country; the Masonic fraternity always advocated liberty and law.

Rev. Dr. Lorimer spoke on "The Cardinal Virtues of Free Masonry: Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence and Justice." After announcing that for various reasons he had only temperance left to speak upon, he stated that temperance applied to everything in this world of ours. The world is beautiful and ours for enjoyment, if we use it as we should. The first temperance society was organized inside a Masonic lodge in Italy in 1736, in order to purge the fraternity from the evils of strong drink. The order has had a reputation for conviviality, and not without reason; but all that is changed now; and the custom of Masonic lodges of those times was only the custom of the whole community—everybody drank, even the deacons and ministers. But there are other kinds of temperance—the word has reference to the whole compass of life, everything which relates to keeping the appetites and the desires of life within bounds. Masonry kept within bounds the men on both sides during and after the late war. Spain is not a Masonic country; Cuba is not a Masonic country; had they been so no such act would have been possible as has been reported from Cuba within the last few days. Countries which are Masonic are treacherous, not to be relied upon, and breathe the damnable spirit of the Inquisition. One of the Mason's first duties was to be master of himself and his destinies.

Hon. Charles L. Gardner of Palmer responded to the toast "Woman." The speaker said he could realize something of the blessing Thomas Lodge had been to this community in the promotion of brotherhood, respectability and true manhood. He had always wondered why women had never been admitted to the order; he could never quite understand why it should not be adorned by the admission of ladies and refined by their presence. He cordially approved and wholly appreciated the sentiment to which he was asked to respond, and could heartily say, "Our wives and sweethearts, God bless them."

"The Rock of Freemasonry" was responded to by Rev. F. W. Betts of Syracuse, N. Y. Institutions, like men, sometimes travel far and die across the world from where they are born. He would look upon Christianity to-day and as it was nearly nineteen hundred years ago; he would look back to the time of the foundation of the Masonic order and to those who gave it birth, and pictured the little group of craftsmen after the day's work was done, banding together that none should rob them of their rights. The world has always had its nobility—the warrior, the statesman; the world has not yet learned that all honest toil is service for humanity, and the only crown of honor for man that he shall perform some task by which he shall earn at least as much as he consumes. Masonry is the foundation on which the human heart, love, honesty, and purity are built, and shall stand as long as humanity exists.

The toast, "The Tenets of Freemasonry: Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth," was responded to by W. H. Small. The majority of the tenets of the order are in print for all to read. Brotherly love, faith and hope, the elements of wisdom, have come down through the ages filtered through the great minds of centuries. God's hand is plainly indicated in the workings of Masonry. Brotherly love, morality, truth, friendship, and character building go on in no other place as behind the doors of the Masonic Lodge.

Rev. G. M. Gerrish responded to the toast, "Faith, Hope and Charity," which he likened to a three-fold cord not easily broken. Faith in the maker of the universe, who laid the foundation thereof; hope in the immortality of the soul, that we may some day live in a better and fairer clime; charity in the application of the Golden Rule. If we are ever tempted to cut this cord, we shall be plunged in darkness and perpetual sorrow. So long as there is a God in whom we put our trust, as long as man is a rational being, so long will there be a field for the operation of faith, hope and charity.

"The Town of Palmer" was responded to by H. B. Knox of Prov-

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 18, 1896.

THE HISTORICAL ADDRESS BY O. P. ALLEN.

It is fitting that organizations as well as communities should have recurrent periods set apart for honoring the times and the men which combined to make up their historic past. Such recognitions add a halo to the names of those who have spent their lives in serving, and dignify those who observe them. Imbued with this reverent spirit of retrospection, we seem to be standing today upon a commanding height, peering through the mists which stretch across an extended vista, searching for objects which may revive the memories of a hundred years.

In the olden lands, where the deeds of milleniums are woven into the warp and woof of their history, a century seems as yesterday; but in this new world of ours we talk of such a period as a wondrous while, and reverently listen as its tales are retold.

To-day we meet to celebrate the centennial birthday of Thomas Lodge, to inquire about our ancient craftsman, and learn something of their lives and acts; in doing this we also celebrate, in a wider sense, an added milestone in the progress of the larger institution, universal Freemasonry. That we may more fully enter into the spirit of this occasion, let us inquire for a moment, something about Masonic history.

Outside the first and paramount position which the Church must ever occupy in our thought, Freemasonry stands as the noblest order ever instituted. It had its inception in the needs of humanity, and sprang into being at the very dawn of history, becoming a mighty civilizing force in Egypt and Phoenicia, taking refuge at first in the mysteries of the Isian and Donysian rites, then was broadened and elevated by the magic touch of Solomon; then ages later was transported to Rome, whence its influence spread throughout Europe, where it was fostered and honored by princes, kings and emperors.

misunderstood and misrepresented by its enemies. But to-day it is honored and patronized by hosts of men who occupy the highest positions in Church and State, who have found in its principles a grand factor for the benefit of mankind. And yet our order does not proselyte, it does not seek to enlarge its numbers by urging men to come into its fold. All who come must do so of their own accord, incited by the influence which its members sustain in the community.

It has no written creed, but the essence of its principles is embodied in the sublime idea of the "Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man;" true to this noble sentiment, its deeds of charity are not blazoned before the world, but find a grateful echo in the appointed, and by these presents do constitute and appoint them, the said Samuel Guthrie, David Young, Peter Walbridge, Hezekiah Fiske, Ephraim Allen, Elisha Woodward, Amasa Stowell, John Moore, David Peck, Zebediah Butler, Jesse Converse and Isaiah Blood, Jun., a regular lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, under the title and designation of Thomas Lodge, hereby giving and granting unto them and their successors, full power and authority to convene as Masons within the town of Monson, in the County of Hampden, and Commonwealth aforesaid, to receive and enter apprentices, pass fellowcrafts, and raise Master Masons upon the payment of such moderate compensations for the same as may be determined by the said lodge; also to make choice of a master, warden, and other office bearers, annually or otherwise, as they shall see cause; to receive and collect funds for the relief of poor and distressed brethren, their widows or children, and in general to transact all matters relating to Masonry which may to them appear to be for the good of the craft, according to the ancient usages and customs of Masons. And we do hereby require the said constituted brethren to attend the Grand Lodge at their quarterly communications, and other meetings by their Master and Wardens, or by proxies, regularly appointed, also to keep a fair and regular record of all their proceedings, and to lay them before the Grand Lodge when required. And we do enjoin upon our brethren

Master of Arts by Dartmouth College in 1814, and that of Doctor of Laws by Alleghany College in 1818. He was a member of many societies, and the founder of the American Antiquarium Society of Worcester, to which he gave over $40,000; many other societies and individuals besides his own family were the recipients of his liberal bequests.

He was for many years a member of the Grand Lodge of Masons, and for some time its Grand Master. He gracefully acknowledged the honor conferred upon him by our Lodge in selecting his name for its designation by the gift of a valued set of jewels for the officers, which are still in use. He also many years afterwards bequeathed Thomas Lodge the sum of one hundred Lodge had been in the habit of taking notes from initiates for fees, but voted to dispense with the practice after this date, and accept cash payments only.

Years of prosperity followed, and many members were added to the ranks. In 1819 four notable clergymen were made Masons in our Lodge whose names will ever reflect honor upon it: Rev. Dr. Alfred Ely and Rev. Dr. Simeon Colton of Monson, Rev. Benjamin Hill and Rev. Dr. Hosea Ballou of Stafford. Dr. Colton was a native of Longmeadow, a graduate of Yale in 1806, settled over the church in Palmer in 1811, dismissed in 1821, after which he was for some years the principal of Monson Academy, a teacher in North Carolina, and later president of Clinton College, Mississippi.

virtue, to lead us to the practice of uprightness and benevolence in our intercourse with others, and to cultivate the friendly, social, and brotherly affections among ourselves. They have a further tendency, to awaken us to serious and solemn reflections on our mortality, and accountability to our great Master in Heaven, and to bring us to worship, adore and serve Him." Truly this is an inspiring tribute to the underlying principles of our order.

In 1828 the Lodge purchased books for a library to be used by the members, and two years later voted to dispense with the use of ardent spirits in the Lodge meetings, both of which actions tend to show that Thomas Lodge was not a laggard in the march of progress.

Lodge to close its doors and disband the craftsmen till more propitious times should come.

On the 14th day of January, Anno Lucis 5835, thirty members of Thomas Lodge gathered for the last time, as it seemed to them. The salable effects had been disposed of for cash. It was voted to give the Bible and cushion to Rev. Dr. Ely, and that the jewels should remain in the custody of the officers who were last elected to wear them. By a careful canvas, it was found that the Lodge had lost by death, dismissals and lapses on account of unpaid dues, two hundred and twenty of its members, so that but thirty remained. The balance of cash in the treasury, amounting to $227.55, was divided into thirty shares, it remained till 1873. Entering upon its new life the Lodge started with seven active members, and at the close of 1857, or fifteen months, had made twenty-one Masons, of whom only four remain present members; J. S. Loomis is the senior living member, followed by C. H. Murdock, Judge George Robinson and Dr. William Holbrook; the others have gone to their rest, or have been dismissed to other lodges.

When the war of the Rebellion broke out, our Lodge was not lacking in patriotism; our brother J. S. Loomis was active as a town officer, securing recruits for the army; C. H. Murdock volunteered for the war; brother Robinson remained at home, but has long had useful and honorable service in Masonic work, in which he still continues; our veteran Dr. Holbrook was one of the earliest in town to offer his service to his country, accepting a position as assistant in the 10th. Mass. Regiment; as a tribute of appreciation with which he was held by the Lodge, a contribution from its funds and from the members was given him towards buying the noble black steed which bore him through the war and came back with him in safety. We can also point with pride to the gallant war record of twenty-seven other members of our Lodge who obeyed the call of duty and patriotism in the hour of need, some of whom have been called from labor to rest. Surely this is an array of men and of members of which no lodge need be ashamed.

Of those who were made Masons in 1858, Bro. F. J. Wassum is the only remaining member.

Having need of better accommodations, this Lodge secured commodious rooms in the new Commercial Block in 1873, which were occupied till Sept. 21, 1885, when it removed into the elegant rooms fitted up in Wales Hall, where it remained till August, 1890, when, owing to changes made in the block, a smaller hall in the same block was occupied till December, 1893. In the latter year the Masonic Hall Association was incorporated, embracing the three Masonic bodies in Palmer, by whom the Hitchcock Block was purchased on hearts of needy brothers, with often no other record save that written by angel pen.

Its members were men of proud renown, the architects and builders of the wondrous temples of Egypt and Tyre, whose Titanic ruins still attest the skill and ingenuity of the ancient craftsmen. They too, were the constructors of the sacred Judean temple of Jehovah, the pride of Israel, the wonder of the world, the despair of the archeologist, whose polished walls arose from foundation to keystone without the sound of hammer, or extra touch of chisel, so perfect was the system under which the ancient masons performed their work. In after times, when Rome rose to imperial power, they crowned her seven hills with palaces whose splendor dazzled the eyes of all beholders, and when the pagan days were fulfilled, they erected the cathedrals of Europe for the worship of God, many of which still remain to excite our wonder and admiration.

The mysteries of the ancient peoples have faded from the minds of men, but evolved from them, purified and enriched by the Divine Word, moulded and fitted to meet the needs of modern thought, Freemasonry has come to bless the world. It has served to unite diverse orders of men, to break down barriers which have long divided, and caused men to meet on the level where all other measures have failed. May it ever continue in the future as in the past, a mighty factor for good.

From this brief digression let us turn our thoughts to the more limited matters of our lodge. The records do not disclose the circumstances which led up to the formation of Thomas Lodge, at a time when there were but 20 lodges in the state, and but four recently estab-

of the said lodge, that they may be punctual in the quarterly payments of such sums as may be assessed for the support of the Grand Lodge. That they behave themselves respectfully and obediently to their superiors in office, and in all other respects conduct themselves as good Masons, and we do hereby declare the precedence of the said lodge in the Grand Lodge and elsewhere to commence from the date of these presents.

In testimony whereof, we, the Grand Master and Grand Wardens, by virtue of the power and authority to us committed, have hereunto set our hands, and caused the seal of the Grand Lodge to be affixed at Boston, this December, the thirteenth day, Anno Domini, MDCCLXXXVI, and of Masonary, 5786.

In the original of this priceless document our lodge is proud to possess the autograph of Paul Revere, the fearless patriot, the bare mention of whose name calls back the dramatic opening scene of the Revolution, when dollars, which amount was paid to its treasurer, Amos Norcross, who went to Worcester for the purpose of receiving it, April 17, 1832.

Dr. Thomas died April 4, 1831, full of years and honors, leaving a name long to be remembered.

With its charter granted Dec. 13, 1796, and a nucleus of twelve members, Thomas Lodge began its work. It was provided with a convenient home in the upper rooms of the new tavern, erected in the beginning of its charter year in Monson by William Norcross, and now known as the Century Hotel. The hall was dedicated Dec. 30, 1800, and was occupied for Masonic purposes till the closing of the lodge in 1835. For some unknown reason the records of the lodge do not begin till Feb. 13, 1799, some two years after the lodge was chartered; but from the fact that we find scattered

The degree of D. D. was conferred upon him in 1846. He died at Ashborough, N. C., Dec., 1868. He was a man of much enterprise and of scholarly attainments.

Dr. Colton often officiated as chaplain of the Lodge, and took much interest in the work. Rev. Benjamin Hill was at one time the Methodist pastor at Wilbraham; further than this I have been unable to learn of him.

The Rev. Dr. Hosea Ballou 2d was born in Halifax, Vt., Oct. 18, 1796; died at Somerville, Mass., May 27, 1861. He was a grand nephew of the elder Hosea Ballou, and like his namesake, a well-known Universalist clergyman. He entered the ministry at a very early age, and was the first settled pastor over the first Universalist Society at Stafford, Ct. It was during his pastorate there that he was initiated into our Lodge. In later years he became but rather a leader in vital matters of reform. Some incidents peculiar to the times may be noted in passing. It was the early practice of Thomas Lodge to hold its meetings from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m.; this was a necessity from the fact that members came from long distances in the surrounding towns, as there was no other lodge in the vicinity for many years.

From the early records we gather facts which impress us with the idea that extreme care was exercised when new names were proposed, that no unworthy person might gain membership; this wise precaution doubtless gained an enviable prestige for the Lodge.

For many years it was the practice for visiting brethren to pay the sum of twenty-five cents for each visit, thus allowing them to bear some of the burdens, while they received the benefit of the meetings.

and given to each of the members to be used as a small fund for charity by them. The parting words of regret and sadness were spoken by the Worshipful Master J. L. Reynolds, and then it was voted "that this Lodge be closed."

The years of waiting went by slowly, but that they might keep alive the words and lessons of the past, the faithful Master and Senior Warden occasionally met in a retired place and recited to each other the work of the Lodge, hoping some time the long-vacant chairs might receive them again; at length their patient faithfulness was rewarded.

Moved by the spirit of returning prosperity and the clearing of the once lowering skies, a few members of Thomas Lodge petitioned for the restoration of the ancient charter, and that the reorganized Lodge be located in Palmer. In response to this petition the Grand Lodge issued this order:

Central street, and a second story added, containing a commodious hall, now the permanent home of Thomas Lodge and the other Masonic bodies of the town. The hall was dedicated with imposing ceremonies by members of the Grand Lodge of Mass., Dec. 5, 1893.

Thomas Lodge has always maintained an enviable position among its sister Lodges, and being the senior in Hampden and Hampshire Counties, its favor and council has often been sought on the formation of new lodges. During its existence of one hundred years it has had a total membership of nearly six hundred. Its present membership is about one hundred and fifty. Death has decimated its ranks, and removals have been numerous. Many of the leading men of Eastern Hampden have lent their names and influence to its councils. Ministers of various de-

For more than forty centuries Masonry was operative in its work, when there came a time for its fuller and wider development, to meet the growing needs of the progressive peoples. The principles and symbols of ancient Masonry served as the basis for the modern structure of Freemasonry. Whatever was crude and objectionable in the older system was eliminated, and the door of the lodge was opened to proper men of all professions, and Masonry became speculative in form and spirit. In the words of a noted writer, "It is therefore the scientific application, and the religious consecration of the rules and principles, the technical language and the implements and materials of operative Masonry, to the worship of God as the grand architect of the universe, and to the purification of the heart and the inculcation of the dogmas of a religious philosophy." This is modern Freemasonry, and is of universal application. It teaches reverence for the Master builder of the universe, and for His revealed will, loyalty to the government under whose protection it exists. It nourishes no bigotry, harbors no schisms, asks no man at the threshold of the order what his creed or politics, whether he be prince or peasant, but rather if he be a true man, moral in action, loyal in purpose, one who seeks the good of others, and will be ever ready to do his part to honor the order into which he seeks to enter.

Governed by these principles the order has flourished and planted its lodges in all lands where civilization and Christianity rules; but its path has not always been strewn with flowers; it has had to meet opposition, and sometimes persecution, because it has been lished west of Worcester. We have no knowledge where our charter members were made Masons, but probably in the eastern part of the state. We know from other documents recently brought to light, that Free Masons had resided in Palmer as early as 1774, at least the two William Scotts, father and son, belonged to the order and doubtless received their degrees in Boston while the son was pursuing his studies at Harvard, and when the second Scott tavern was built in 1774 at Shearer's Corner in Palmer the third story of the new house was devoted to the purposes of a Masonic hall, where members of the craft held meetings for mutual benefit. As this was but 40 years after the establishing of Freemasonry in America, and the Scotts were men of education and wide influence, this hall doubtless furnished the nucleus of the order in Western Massachusetts, and may have paved the way for the foundation of our lodge.

In 1796 twelve Freemasons of Monson and vicinity petitioned the Grand Lodge of the State of Massachusetts for the establishment of a lodge of Freemasons in that town. The result of this petition was the granting of the following

CHARTER.

To all the fraternity to whom these presents shall come, the Grand Lodge of the most ancient and Honorable Society of Free and Accepted Masons, for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, send greeting: Whereas, a petition has been presented to us by Samuel Guthrie, David Young, Peter Walbridge, Hezekiah Fiske, Ephriam Allen, Elisha Woodward, Amasa Stowell, John Moore, David Peck, Zebediah Butler, Jesse Converse and Isaiah Blood, Jun., all Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons, praying that they, with such others as shall hereafter join them, may be erected and constituted a regular lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, which petition, appearing to us tending to the advancement of Masonary and the good of the craft: Know ye therefore, that we, the Grand Lodge aforesaid, reposing special trust and confidence in the prudence and fidelity of our beloved brethren above-named, have constituted and

And a word that shall echo for evermore!
For, borne on the night wind of the past,
Through all our history, to the last,
In the hour of darkness, and peril, and need,
The people will waken and listen to hear
The hurrying hoofbeats of that steed,
And the midnight message of Paul Revere."

Our charter also bears the autograph of another patriot, Isaiah Thomas, for whom our lodge is named, and that we may more fully appreciate the noble namesake of our lodge, a brief sketch of his life is introduced at this point.

Isaiah Thomas was born in Boston, Jan. 19, 1749. He came from a long line of reputable English ancestry, but owing to reverses his father, Moses Thomas, lost his property, and dying, left his family in poverty. Young Thomas was bound out as an apprentice to a printer in Boston, at the age of six years. Thrown thus early upon his own resources, he became self-reliant; deprived of the benefit of school education, he taught himself, and became, by severe application, a fluent speaker and a lucid writer. He overcame many obstacles where others would have faltered, and was crowned with a success of which any man might be proud. He founded the Massachusetts Spy in Boston in 1771, now the oldest paper in the state, and when the time arrived for the public mind to be aroused against the encroachments of the crown, his paper glowed with patriotic appeals. He shrank not from duty when the hour of trial came, but with gun in hand took his place in the ranks on the streets of Lexington, and when the memorable conflict was over, he moved his printing press to Worcester, where he built up a great business as a printer and publisher. At one time he was the foremost publisher in the county, and his name became a noted one. His acquirements were such that he was accorded the degree of through the records some fifty-five names of members added prior to the above date, we are led to conclude that much work was done of which we have no account. This view is strengthened by the fact that we find in a statement from the Grand Lodge Sep. 1800, that 79 brothers had been initiated from Mar. 7, 1797, to Sep. 1800, and as there were 108 members in the Lodge at that time, it would seem 29 of them had either been members at the commencement or had become such by affiliation.

It seems then, that the Lodge commenced active work Mar. 7, 1797, but left no record of its doings for nearly two years. Dr. Samuel Guthrie was the first Master of our Lodge, and retained the position till 1802. Prior to 1802 the the first president of Tufts College, his profound scholarship well fitting him for that honorable position, which he filled with distinction.

Rev. Dr. Alfred Ely, a native of West Springfield, graduated from New Jersey College in 1804; was settled over the Congregational church in Monson Dec. 17, 1806, which pastorate he filled till his death, July 6, 1866, a long period of sixty years. Dr. Ely was a man of marked ability and broad views, and left a deep and lasting impression of his personality upon the memories of the people among whom he labored so long. He was an enthusiastic workman in Thomas Lodge, serving as its chaplain for years; was often invited to give dissertions on the subject of Freemasonry in his own and other lodges, which were highly appreciated by the brethren. By the courtesy of Bro. Reynolds of Monson I have had the pleasure of reading one of these printed discourses given before Mount Vernon Lodge in Belchertown seventy-six years ago. It is a gem, every line of which sparkles with the light received from the absolute source. I quote a paragraph, touching the influence of Freemasonry, in which the Dr. says, "Our forms, our emblems, our lectures, unite in their tendency to improve the mind, to discipline it to justness of thought and of reasoning, to strengthen the mental powers, and to render us more capable of acting well our part in society; and what is of more importance, to form our conduct by the rules of

There was a large membership in Brimfield, and at one time there existed a strong feeling in favor of removing the Lodge there, but wiser councils prevailed and Monson continued to be the home of the Lodge till the disbanding of its members.

For thirty-nine years our Lodge had prospered; two hundred and fifty names had been added to its list of members, many of whom were the leading men of Monson, Palmer, Brimfield and other towns, gathered from the varied walks of life; but in the midst of its useful labors there came a time of adversity; some indiscretions of certain members of the fraternity in New York had been magnified, misrepresented, and construed to suit the purposes of designing political leaders, whereby the public mind was incited against the order in a remarkable degree, so that households were often divided and communities rent in twain, over the burning question; even many churches sought to discipline members because of their affiliation with Masonry; as an instance of which it is said the deacons of Dr. Ely's church urged him to publicly denounce the order and its principles. The Doctor remained steadfast in his position, and said he firmly believed in the order and never would condemn it, but at the same time, if it was causing any brother to offend, he would so conform to the desires of his people as to refrain from attendance upon the meetings of the Lodge. He remained true to this declaration of principle through all the battle which raged for twenty years, and lived to see the complete triumph of Freemasonry over all its enemies. In the midst of the strife, and in view of all the circumstances, it seemed wise on the part of Thomas

IN GRAND LODGE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON: Sept. 10, A. L. 5856.

Ordered that the Charter of the late Thomas Lodge of Monson, be and the same is hereby restored to the following petitioners, former members of said Lodge, with permission to remove and hereafter hold the same in the town of Palmer, viz: Brothers Elias Turner, J. L. Reynolds, S. F. Newton, Jacob Thomps n, J. R. Flynt, A. Ely, J. Nichols, D. R. Hannum, Otis Bradford and Joel Tucker, and the foregoing petitioners, their associates and successors, are hereby invested with the rank and all the powers and privileges, originally conferred by the within charter.

Winslow Lewis, Grand Master.

Attest, Chas. G. Moore, Secretary.

Armed with the restored charter, J. L. Reynolds, W. M., Elias Turner, S. W., Jacob Thompson, J. W., and Joseph Nichols, Treasurer, members of Thomas Lodge, and a few visiting brethren met in Palmer Oct. 11, 1856, to reorganize the Lodge which had been dormant for twenty-one years. On resuming the long-vacant chair in the east, the W. M., J. L. Reynolds, said, "There was great cause for congratulation after being buried, as its enemies supposed, for so many years, and now bursting into life with the wrecks of its honor and fame around it, but at the same time with a sure and certain hope of a more glorious exemplication of its work." Surely the words of Brother Reynolds were more than a hope, they were prophetic, and have had a rich fulfillment, as we to-day can testify.

On that eventful eleventh day of October the chairs in the East and West were filled again with their former occupants, thus linking with grateful remembrances, the closing of the old and the opening of the reorganized Lodge.

Thirty-four of the former members were made honorary members of the reorganized Lodge, yet only J. L. Reynolds and Elias Turner became active members. The new home of the Lodge was established in the upper story of the McGilvray block, where nominations, lawyers, physicians, merchants, mechanics, farmers, have been arrayed in its ranks and sustained it by their influence. It needs but the careful perusal of its eight volumes of records to convince anyone of the high moral standard of its councils, which disclose the fact that a few, lacking the moral strength of their brothers, have required and received the needed reprimand, and in very few cases the severe discipline of expulsion. This speaks well for the Lodge, not that a few members needed to be cast out, but that the councils of the Lodge were governed by right views of living; for it goes without saying that when associations of men become so lost to moral sense that they have no power to check evil, or desire to enforce discipline, it is full time for them to separate. But as an offset to this, our records reveal many touching deeds of charity to needy brothers or their widows, of which the world knows not; and words of sympathy in the hour of affliction, of encouragement in the hour of trial.

Thomas Lodge has been happy in its selection of Worshipful Masters, chosen for their personal worth and business capacity; one evidence of which is found in the fact that the Lodge has had but twenty-three Masters during one hundred years; of these Joseph L. Reynolds presided in the east for thirteen years; J. B. Shaw, eight years; Dr. Samuel Guthrie and Judge Robinson six years each; Dr. E. Whitaker, Joel Norcross and G. B. Kenerson, five years each; A. Haskell, Timothy Packard, S. H. Hellyar, W. A. Weld, C. T. Brainerd, three years each; Stephen Pynchon, Dr. Samuel Willard, George Bliss, Col. E. Turner, S. G. Shaw, A. Pinney, two years each; O. Blashfield,

Marshall Fox, Dr. J. K. Warren, G. O. Henry, and Dr. G. H. Wilkins, our present Worshipful Master, one year each.

It is doubtful if a more representative list of men can be found in Western Massachusetts who have presided over any association in consecutive order for a century.

A brief sketch of the Worshipful Masters of Thomas Lodge who have been called from earthly labors, may be of interest in this connection. Dr. Samuel Guthrie, the first Master, served from 1797 to 1802; he headed the petition for the establishment of Thomas Lodge. He was a practicing physician in Brimfield, and died there in 1809, when the Lodge voted to attend the funeral in a body.

Captain Ozim Blashfield was elected in 1802 and held office for one term. He was also of Brimfield. He had been a captain in the Continental Army. He was born in 1757 and died in 1808.

Dr. Ede Whitaker was elected in 1803 and served five terms. He came from Stafford to Monson in 1790, where he practiced his profession till about 1840.

Stephen Pynchon of Brimfield was elected in 1806 and served two terms. He was a graduate of Yale in 1789; a lawyer by profession; town clerk of Brimfield from 1797 to 1823; town treasurer from 1803 to 1810; selectman from 1805 to 1821; postmaster 1806; representative 1805 to 1823. For many years one of the leading men of his town.

Joel Norcross was elected in 1808 and served five terms, at different times. He was a leading merchant and manufacturer of Monson, and a man of affairs, concerned in founding important manufacturing interests, one of the founders of Monson Academy, a real estate owner, and identified in the growth of the town. He was a member of the Congregational church. He was born Aug. 6, 1776, and died in Monson.

Dr. Samuel Willard was elected in 1810 and served two terms. He was the son of Rev. John Willard of Stafford. He built a part of the Stafford Springs House in 1802, and retained a large interest in the plant till 1815.

Dea. Abraham Haskell was elected in 1814 and served three terms. He was one of the selectmen of Monson in 1817, and represented the town in the Legislature in 1821; was a deacon of the Congregational church. In his old age he went West, where he died.

Hon. George Bliss was elected in 1816 and served two terms. He commenced the practice of law in 1816; he afterwards moved to Springfield, where he became a leading member of the bar; he was speaker of the House and later president of the Massachusetts State Senate.

Timothy Packard was elected in 1823 and served three years. He was a leading merchant of Monson for many years, and was honored with several town offices.

Hon. Joseph L. Reynolds was elected the first time in 1826 and presided in the east for thirteen terms, which included office in the old and the reorganized Lodge, and virtually during the interregnum of twenty-one years. He was an officer of commanding presence and dignity, and served the Lodge with honor and ability during the most trying period of its existence. He was closely identified with the manufacturing interests of Monson, where he built up a large and successful business. Besides, he was a man of affairs, appreciating which he was elected in 1854 to represent Hampden County in the state Senate, where he served with honor. He was for many years a member of the Congregational church at Monson. He was born in North Kingston, R. I., Dec. 31, 1796, and died in Monson June 9, 1885.

Col. Elias Turner was elected in 1856 and served two years. He was a long-time resident of Palmer. He gained his military title serving in the state militia. He held the office of selectman, school committee, etc., in Palmer, where he died May 4, 1875, at the age of eighty. He had the honor of holding office in the ancient and reorganized Thomas Lodge.

Sylvanus G. Shaw was elected in 1860 and served two years. He was a native of Brimfield, but went to Hartford soon after attaining his majority and learned the trade of a mason, and where he erected many notable buildings on Main street. He came to Palmer in 1845 and engaged in farming and later in trade. He represented the town in the Legislature in 1857. He he died 1864 at the age of 58.

Marshall Fox was elected in 1863 and served one term. He was a long-time respected business man of Palmer, in which town he died Oct. 17, 1884, aged 69.

George O. Henry was elected in 1886 and served one year. He was a native of Palmer. When the war broke out he enlisted in Co. C, 36th Regt. Mass. Volunteers, and gave honorable service to his country. He was Master of Day Spring Lodge, Monson, and the first Master of Anchor of Hope Lodge of Wales. He spent his later years in Palmer, where he died March 9, 1892, aged 52.

Of the Past Masters of Thomas Lodge who are still with us, I may be pardoned if I do not speak individually, save to say they are all representative men, whose relation to our Lodge we are proud to acknowledge and of whose varied lives and honorable service in town, and state and lodge, the future historian will have ample material for eulogies when the next Centennial shall be observed.

But not alone are the Worshipful Masters of Thomas Lodge worthy of mention, for however well qualified they may have been to preside in the east, the complete success of their service must always have largely depended upon the support they have received from the chairs in the west and south, and from those who sat on the right and left, as well as from the subordinate officers. How well and ably this support has been rendered, let the long and honorable record of Thomas Lodge answer. The list of the minor officers of our Lodge is a long and honored one, embracing many of the staunchest members of the community, for whose service our Lodge is grateful, and whose names will ever find an honored niche in its annals.

And thus, as we turn the concluding page of the first Centurial volume of our records, we are reminded that we are standing on the dividing line of two centuries, and glancing backwards we count scores, many times told, of our elder brothers who have gone to rest; not alone the simple monument tells its silent story of them, their names survive in our annals, their noble deeds in our memories. Silent are the voices of those who bore the name of Guthrie, of Ely, of Colton, of Ballou, of Norcross and of Reynolds, and a host of others in the past, but the good influences of their lives remain to pilot us out of the old into newer fields of effort. Let us trust that the coming century shall furnish us with as noble leaders as did the past, and that the prosperity of Thomas Lodge shall increase in the ratio of its added years. Let us also trust that our Lodge, though venerable with age, may never allow the moss of inaction to gather upon its walls, but that its sacred halls, hallowed by the rich associations of the past, shall continue to echo to the voices of busy craftsmen, and that its members, having done faithful service in the quarries of earth, may find a welcome entrance at last into the heavenly temple not made with hands.

A Testimonial.—Gentleman: I write to express my gratitude to you. To having taken to riding one of your new model bicycles, I attribute the fact that I am alive and well to-day. Previous to purchasing my wheel I was devoted to the piano, having an especial penchant for grand opera. I now learn that the neighbors were about to kill me, when I was happily preserved as I have said. Thanking you, gentleman, from the bottom of my heart, I remain yours, etc.,
Sweet Sixteen.

Adam's Social Advantages.—"Say what you will about Father Adams, he was a stickler for social usages."

"In what way?"

"You never saw him sitting on the front porch in his shirt sleeves."

"That's so, and I'm told by one of his relatives that he never wore a spike-tail coat before 6 o'clock."

"Nor afterward—happy old barbarian."—Cleveland Leader.

The New Test Of Greatness.—"Say, Mamie," said Maud, "was Julius Caesar what you would call a really great man?"

"Of course. How can you ask such a question?"

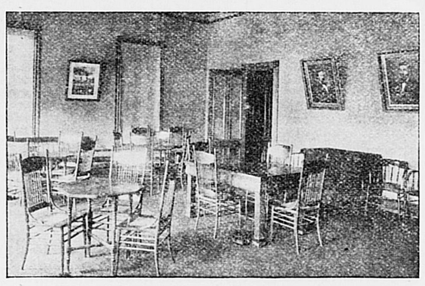
"Well, I never heard him called the Napoleon of anything."—Washington Star.

Yeast—"Is your wife liberal-minded?" Crimsonbeak—"I guess so; she seems to give me a good deal of it"—Yonkers Statesman.

DR. LORIMER'S ADDRESS.

Most Worshipful Grand Master, Worshipful Master, Craftsmen and Friends: The conspicuous and commanding position of Freemasonry on the close of this century is one of the most distinguishing glories of our republic. Nor could it have been anticipated a hundred years ago. In 1730, when the Duke of Norfolk appointed Brother Cox the Provincial Grand Master, with his location in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York, the numbers of the order were exceedingly small. In the year 1800 we had on the continent of North America some 11 Grand Lodges—16,000 Master Masons; but to-day we have over 57 Grand Lodges and upwards of 750,000 to 800,000, and perhaps even more, craftsmen; in other words, we are bordering on a million of able-bodied men who have been taught to stand erect and true, to meet our obligations in the fear of God and for the advantage of mankind.

Well, therefore, is it for us, at such a time as this, to pause and without obtruding our views upon others, seek once more to form some conception of the genius and spirit of our order. Especially important is it for us to do this, because, while the days of persecution have largely passed away, the crimes of misapprehension have not ceased. Every now and then, we are startled by finding some caricature put forth in the name of the holy man of Galilee, as giving an accurate portraiture of that fraternity to which some of the most honorable men and the most devout in all history have belonged. I admit that when I have sometimes scanned such a description, I have been very much like the old woman who went to sleep, and when she awoke she found that her skirts had been cut, and she hardly knew whether it was herself or not, but thought when she returned home the little dog would be able to tell whether it was his mistress come home or some other woman. A man once went to an eminent painter, and said to the painter, "I understand you have recently produced the portrait of Moses and a picture of Elias," and the painter acknowledged the fact. "Well," said the young man, "I would like you to paint my father. He is recently deceased." "Certainly," said the gentleman, "I would very gladly take your order;" and so the man was moving out of the room, but the painter called to him and said, "Couldn't you give me some idea about your father; a photograph, for instance, something to help me?" And the young man, looking indignantly at the painter, said, "Didn't you paint Moses and Elias?" "Yes." "But you had no portrait of Moses, no photograph of Elias, had you? "No, I did not." "Well," said the young man, "I have no photograph of my father, but if you have painted Moses and Elias, you can surely paint my father." Three months afterward he returned, and the picture was unveiled, and looking upon it he said, "Is that my father? Well, he is very much changed; really, I never would have known him." So, when I have read some of the descriptions of the ancient order of Freemasons, I have had to say, with the young man, "Is that my father? Really, he is very much changed; I never would have known him."

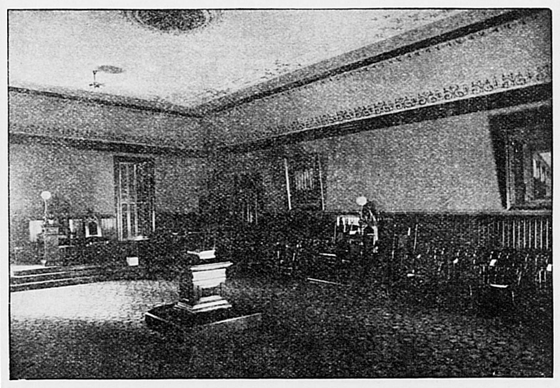


RECEPTION ROOM, THOMAS LODGE.

OFFICERS OF THOMAS LODGE FOR 1896

C. B. Fiske, James Knox, D. L. Bodfish, Rev. H. F. Moulton, W. H. Brainerd, H. W. McGregory, Dr. G. H. Wilkins, W. E. Stone, C. E. Fish, C. T. Brainerd, J. A. Hawkes, C. W. Johnson, G. H. Magrath.

I shall not talk to you to-day about the antiquity of our institution; indeed, I am so far modern myself that I am not quite interested in that question. Of course, there is a mythical element connected with all venerable institutions. How far we are enshrouded in myth I leave experts to decide. All I know is that we are old enough to know what we are doing, and the order has been long enough in the world either to be entitled to the respect of men or to their condemnation. The order has been here long enough for the world as a whole to form some opinion of it. I am sure, judging from the growth of the order and from the eminent men who have belonged to its membership and who still belong, that it has vindicated its right to be. A friend crossing with me on the Atlantic once, was speaking about ships. He is a witty lawyer of Boston, by the name of Elder, and he said, "Once there came a great vessel from the East Indies up the Boston harbor; she came along with full head of sail, then reefed her sails and paused for the tide; and as she lay there, there came a little boat that sailed under her stern, and the skipper dropped the sail for a moment or two and began to overhaul the big ship. 'What ship, ahoy?' he called. 'The Twin Brothers'. 'And where are you from?' 'I am from India'. 'How long have you been out.' 'One hundred and thirty days.' 'And what have you on board?' And the man answered back and told him about the spices and all the other precious things. But the skipper was a little fatigued, and so he leaned over the side and said, 'Ship ahoy! Where do you hail from?' 'From Gloucester.' 'How long have you been out?' 'About all night.' 'All night! And what have you on board?' And the man answered. 'Nothing but myself.' And sometimes, when this great, old venerable bark of ours, having stormed through many seas, getting near to port, overhauled by some little body of people just come into existence, who are very anxious to make out something terrible and dangerous about us, it is not unnatural if we shall learn over the taffrail of our ship just a little mite wearied, and say, "Who are you?" "Well, we have just come from a little town." "How long have you been out?" "A short time." "And what have you on board?" "Nothing but myself."



LODGE ROOM OF THOMAS LODGE.

But I desire, turning my back on all these things, to try and take a view this afternoon of our order, its character, its genius. You know in sacred writ this world of ours and this star-decked dome somehow come before us as a mighty temple, a structure, and one resting upon pillars. Hence it is said that wisdom hath builded a house and hath fashioned her seven pillars; and by and by there is another reference to the pillars, and this a most singular conception, as though God were the infinite Atlas. He is represented as bearing the universe, pillars and all. Because the Bible teaches in its own wonderful imagery that whatever secondary causes may exist, God is the source of all life, of all activity, a soul of all souls, the source of everything that we see or hear or feel. You cannot read your Bibles without receiving the impression that, back of everything is the one supreme being that we worship as Jehovah. Now this idea of pillars occurs in some of the other creeds and faiths. Among the Hindoo illuminati, we have three pillars brought out. There is Brahma in the east, who represents wisdom; there is Vishnu in the west, who represents strength; there is Siva in the south, that represents beauty. And in the Egyptian mysteries, the same idea, under a little different form, comes to us, for there is the memorable Triad, and we are told that there are three sides—the wisdom, and then the power, and then the base of all, the goodness.

So, when we enter into a lodge and begin to study something of the order, we find that there are three pillars, and these three pillars constitute the support of the lodge. But bear in mind that the lodge is related to two things—to the temple of King Solomon, and to the universe at large. The operative Masonry gave place to the speculative Masonry, but the speculative Masonry keeps always before it the temple at Jerusalem and the grander temple of the universe. Thus all your emblems and all your symbols are related either to the builders' craft or to nature; so that as you look, all these objects are made tributary to your moral and your spiritual advancement. Now as the lodge is supported by three pillars—wisdom, strength and beauty, so the universe is supported on three pillars, wisdom, strength and beauty. According to our ritual, the Worshipful Master in the East represents the wisdom that is necessary for the governance of his lodge. The Senior Deacon in the West represents the strength that is required in strengthening the craft in all of the performance of its duties; and in the South, that luminous and that charming region, the Junior Warden stands, denoting the beauty which is the crowning glory of our institutions. Now these three supports find a reproduction throughout the entire membership of the Lodge: for if we imagine that any lodge or, the institution of Freemasonry as a whole, depends, for its well being upon its officers, we are very mistaken. O brethren, brethren of the order, there is such a thing as solidarity; there is such a thing as cofaternity; there is the interblending and interplay of human life and human energy. There is in it that which teaches us that if the hand suffers, all the body is full of pain; if the eye is blind, the body itself is full of darkness; so that I dare insist that they who thought on our ritual and gave it to us, meant to teach that these officers of ours should represent to us the great conditions on which Masonry rests and which must be fulfilled in the rank and file of its membership. The wisdom of Masonry is seen in the great teaching, in its great belief in the supremacy of the spiritual and the moral; for the order is not an order believing in atheism or annihilation. It recognizes God as father of all. It looks forward into the future life. It assumes that virtue is the one thing preëminent in the world's history around which the world's battles have been fought, and towards which the world is struggling onward, if possible to realize and to attain thereunto. We have, in our order, no disposition towards materialism. We do not teach that the brain secretes thought, as the liver secretes bile. We do not believe that man is simply a dust heap, and that there is an empty chair above all and a socket without an eye governing this fair universe. We hold that the Father is above us all, and that His love for us flows out unto his creatures; and we insist that the spiritual in society constitutes its real glory, and the moral worth of man the real foundation upon which anything really desirable must be founded, if it shall exist at all.

There are two qualities very prominent with us,—the qualities of justice and of charity. These are moral qualities, and these moral qualities are essential to the life of the community. There are a great many people who do not understand that the moral life of the world is really the only life that is worth living. Sometimes people ask me, as they have asked others, "Is life worth living?" My answer is, "It just depends upon the kind of life you are living. If you are living the animalistic; if you are seeking pleasure in the senses; if you are catering to your appetites,—then you are narrowing your vision; you are deadening your nerve centres; you are diminishing the number of your days; you are dwarfing your intellect; you are prostrating your abilities; and such a life as yours is not worth living." The life of the man who sees nothing in this universe more than a beast sees, and who looks upon all things around him as the ox looks upon the grass upon which it will feed, that man's life is not worth being called life at all. What is it that imparts any significance to us when we are traveling? What is it that charms nature's scenery? Either the thought of God, who is the impersonation of all that is right, or the thought of man in his struggles for life. We go to Lexington or Concord,—ordinary places, but they witnessed extraordinary deeds, and we associate the deeds with the places and so are thrilled with joy and light. We cross the Alps, where moved Napoleon with his army that decided the destinies of nations; or we enter Switzerland and tread the fields of Sempach or Morgarten, where liberty fought its earlier battles and won its earlier victories. We think only of these snow-clad heights as they have been made glorious by the lives and deeds of man. So the moral and the spiritual makes this world what it is to us, and makes life grand and glorious.

We, as Masons, if we have been correctly reared, believe first in justice, and secondly in benevolence. "Oh," some of you will answer, "No; I was at least impressed with the idea that charity was first and justice second." You know that that is the current doctrine of the world. It is so easy to give alms with one hand, while you rob the widow and the orphan with the other! It is so easy for men to find a salve to their conscience, when they have cheated their brother over a game of cards, by taking the money and sending half a dozen Christmas dinners to the poor and wretched! Hence the doctrine I hold to be Christian and Mason, justice first, charity afterwards. Pay your debts before you give me any money for my church or for missions. "Why!" you will say, "That is changing; that is revolutionary!" Well, what is the use of having a talker from Boston, unless he is revolutionary? That is where revolutions are born.

You say my justice is not as beautiful as charity! Of course, I know that. I know how you paint it. You paint Charity with a long white gown on and a beautiful golden zone about her waist, with a beautiful tiara on her head and drooping wings, and you say, "What a beautiful thing Charity is." And when you paint Justice you put her on a bicycle wheel, with a blindfolding handkerchief over her eyes, and a pair of grocery scales in her hand, with a sword that would not cut a pound of butter, and you call that Justice; and very naturally we turn away from Justice, and we say, "I would much rather follow that beautiful young woman with the white gown and beautiful gold zone about her waist." That just shows the trend of the human mind. I admire charity. God forbid that any word of mine should be construed into anything like a reflection on the holy offices of charity; but I still believe that the foundation of this universe is everlasting righteousness, and that is justice. You may say, "Why, don't Charity feed the hungry?" That is true, but if you would pay your laboring people enough to live upon, there would not be so many hungry people. "But," do you say, "Doesn't Charity clothe the naked?" Yes; but if you didn't take children and put them to work before they had any business to go to work; and if you didn't hire young women and pay them three dollars or three dollars and a half a week and expect them to be respectable; if

We have just passed through a struggle in the United States; we have been voting for gold. Now, I believe in gold. I only wish I had some. I never see it; it always somehow gets away from me. The nearest I ever come to it is when I see these eminent men with their gold jewels. But I believe in gold. Of course I do—we all do—but in the Golden Era of the world for which the poets have sighed. But do you ask me, "What will bring that Golden Era—a gold basis?" Not at all. The Golden Era will never come in when you have injustice between man and man. Ay, and as our worthy brother, Robert Burns, used to sing:

Then let us pray that come it may,
As come it will for a' that;
That sense and worth, o'er a' the earth,
May bear the gree, and a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
It's coming yet, for a' that,
That man to man, the warld o'er,
Shall brothers be for a' that.

And then a man, when he joins the Lodge, will realize the impropriety of giving his note, and will always want to pay in solid cash; and justice will reign and justice will make society decent and worth living in.

Now, the strength of Masonry is seen in two things,—in its secrecy and in its silence. The wisdom of it, as I have pointed out, is seen in its belief in the supremacy of the moral and the spiritual; but now its strength is seen in its secrecy and in its silence. You know the old philosopher, Pythagoras (he was one of our brethren), used to lecture in a double way; he used to have a sheet that he put up before his eyes, and then lectured behind the sheet to a certain number of brethren, and they were called the esoteric; and then there were some other brethren on the other side of the sheet, who could not see the lecturer but could hear his voice, and they were called the exoteric. Those who had the deeper and profounder lessons were called the esoteric; those who were beyond and who only received the general impressions were called the exoteric; and it was always regarded as fitting that there should be these two classes. Now, we believe in the same thing. We are not a secret society at all; we are only a society with secrets, and the difference is very marked. A secret society is one that covers up its tracks, that does not let its doings be known,—a kind of "Ku-Klux" or "White Cap" sort of institution. But we are not of that kind. If a man comes along and asks me about Masonry, I am always willing to give him all the information in my power. Really, there are very few things that are secret in our institution. I would almos just as soon, especially as there are a number of ladies present, give the whole thing away; because the secret of Masonry is not so much in the "grip," or in a sign, or in a word, any more than a soldier, when he is passing up and down at night and has the watchword, must give the password before anyone can cross the lines. That is a secondary matter. The real secret of Masonry lies in a kind of uncommunicable, indescribable spirit that takes hold of a man as soon as he opens his mind to let the light in, and influences and governs him from that time onward; and that cannot be told, because there is no speech to tell it. But when you come to the ordinary matters, people even publish books to tell the secrets of Masonry. I have read some of them, and they are very interesting reading, but somehow they do not get at the merit of the thing. There is something nobody can describe, which you and I know, and the exoteric band cannot know until they are esoteric. There is an impression that a secret society is contrary to the best interests of a nation. Now, that depends upon the nature of the society. We all have our secrets. That young man over yonder is blushing by that young lady; he has a secret, only he is giving it away very rapidly; and the young lady over there has a secret, which she doesn't mean to give away, because she is now upon her guard and she has set the tile upon her lips, insisting that eavesdroopers should not be allowed to pass. But we all have our secrets. Is there a business man, in company with his friends or his partners, who hasn't? They are not plotting mischief against the community, but they do not think it necessary to publish their balance sheet and send it out every day. In our families we have our secrets; so in our cabinet; so in government; so in the councils of churches; they all have meetings where they talk together about things that do not belong in general to the public.

Now, it is so with us. If we were plotting to undermine the government; if we were trying to defraud some people out of their right of suffrage; if we were seeking to break down the influence of a part of our people,—we would indeed be worthy of condemnation. My honest feeling, however, is that we are not a secret society, but only a society with secrets, and that adds to our strength. There is something in reserve. There is something in not simply opening your bosom and wearing your heart upon your sleeve; there are times when man ought to hold himself in check; there are moments when silence becomes, indeed, precious and gracious, and silence is one of the special virtues that we inculcate. Thomas Carlyle says, "O man, go to your room some day and sit down and just cease talking and think; and out come from your room again and your ideas will be clearer and stronger." I have always admired the statue of the lioness with the tongue torn out, representing the woman who would not betray her lord and husband to his enemies. It is a great thing to know how to be silent. Silence is a great blessing. It teaches us that this world is not run by noise. You must be silent if you would hear the greatest things. You must be silent if you would hear many of the sweetest voices. You will never hear the murmur of the waves if you are right in a city on the shore of the ocean, with all the roar of traffic going on; let the traffic cease, and the lullaby of the sea will hush you to your slumber. You will never hear a lark or a nightingale sing, if you insist on playing a brass band loudly and fiercely. There must be some pause and some moment of stillness. The poet has written:

"In silence mighty things are wrought—
Silently builded, thought on thought,
Truth's temple greets the sky;
And like a citadel with towers,
The soul with her subservient powers
Is strengthened silently.

Soundless as chariots on the snow,
The saplings of the forest grow
To trees of mighty girth;
Each nightly star in silence burns,
And every day in silence towers
The axle of the earth."

Ah brethren, brethren, in this world of rush and noise, in the clatter and Babel of human speech, it is well for us, for a little while to be still.

I was impressed the other night, on going into a lodge in Boston where the third degree was being conferred, to see bank upon bank of men—strong, brilliant men; men capable of instructing their fellows—sitting with their hands folded, as I sat with mine, absolutely silent. Not a word was spoken to interrupt the mystery and solemnity of the scene. We try to cultivate silence so that we can be trusted in an hour of need; for the day comes in every life when a soul is needed on which we can lean, and unto which we can whisper, with safety, our sorrow and perhaps our shame. Therefore, the strength of Masonry lies in its secrecy and silence.

Then, to close, you find that the beauty of Masonry lies in its genial qualities, its loving traits, its tenderness, and its sympathy. You know there is beauty in everything, beauty in the universe. Have you ever stopped to think that this universe of ours might have been deprived of a great many things that are charming? A great many birds need not have sung; a great many flowers need not have bloomed; the sun need not have shone so brightly; but God crowned the work of strength and wisdom with the crown of beauty, so that we are all the time filled with joy and peace as we journey through this world. Oh, what a blessing it is to have an eye for beauty! I have stood on Mt. Blanc; I have visited the braes and glens of my own dear native land; I have sat down by the streams and rested in the heather, and have come away just filled with the beauty that God had lavishly bestowed. If you go to a well-ordered lodge, you take your tessellated border, your Jacob's ladder, the songs and the symbols all around you, and their relations either to the temple or nature bring back the beautiful.

The beauties I especially refer to are beauties of character. You know there are people who imagine that, if they are only square and hard and exact in their dealings, there is no necessity for their being beautiful in their character. They are like men that would cut all the trees perfectly square, and have no foliage and no freshness and luxuriance. There are some men with no heart for poetry or art. I am very sorry for a man when I find him in a picture gallery, hurrying through, only trying to do it and get through as quickly as possible. I have the deepest sympathy for the unfortunates who come into the world with only half equipment. But you are taught differently; you are taught to crown your life with beauty, to have your days filled with gladness and cheerfulness. Your way ought to be bright; you ought to be happy; you ought to make the most of your life. A man who is a Mason, who goes to his lodge and goes through all there is there and thinks of the beauty there ought to be in his character, and when he goes home, is rough or cross, I say that man ought to be expelled from the lodge, without the benefit of the clergy. Ah, friends, the beauty of character is what I admire.

"I have fallen into the hands of thieves," says Jeremy Taylor; "but they cannot take the sun and the flowers and the stars. I have seen much go from me, but I rejoice and say, Thanks be to God; the thieves cannot take the sun from above me, nor the divine sun within me, nor the light that falls upon my faith, to make the way of my feet beautiful."

Now, these are the three pillars of Masnary on which the institution rests, and there comes simply this question: Has the United States any reason to fear, or any reason to look askance, upon that order thus founded,—an order resting in wisdom, in strength, and in beauty, and to which the labors and thought of some of her noblest men have been given? Far from it. We are not politicians, as Masons; we are not partisans; we are not Republicans; we are not Democrats; we are not denominationalists of any name; but we do love God as our Father, and we love our country, and we have stood by her and mean to stand by her to the end. Over and above the Masonic Temple, there is one flag dear to us that floats—the Stars and Stripes---and the Mason never means to erase the one or obliterate the other, but means, God helping him, through weal or woe, in peace or war, to bear loyal allegiance to the symbol of all that is true and noble and good; and if that country should ever call upon us, especially in the interests of humanity, not for the extension of territory, not for an aggressive war, not for the accumulation of gold in our coffers, but that we might bring deliverance to the suffering in Armenia, that we might unloose the shackles and bid Cuba be free forever, there is not a man among us young enough and strong enough, and even those of us who are old and striken in years, remembering our altar and our Lodge, our pledge to human brotherhood, our fealty to our flag, but would gladly bear our part, even unto the death.

A CENTURY OF MASONRY.

idence, R. I., formerly of Palmer. A residence of nine years in Palmer had greatly endeared the town and its people to the speaker. It had been settled by the best stock of the north of Ireland—the Scotch Presbyterians. These people, who had fought the stern battle for freedom, were the founders of Palmer, and such have not ceased to exist in the town. It had been richly blessed, and its sons and daughters ought to love it. Not the least of the influences which had moulded it had been those emanating from Thomas Lodge.

Brother Boyden of Bridgewater, whose lodge—another Revere lodge—celebrates its centennial next June, was the next speaker. Of the signers of the Declaration of Independence all but six were Masons; of those who gave us the constitution all but seven were Masons. But little is known outside of the order of its work; it is the silent word, the touch of the arm when needed, which makes Masonry what it is.

The last speaker was Dr. G. H. Wilkins, the retiring Master of Thomas Lodge, who spoke on "Thomas Lodge to its Guests." In behalf of the Lodge he expressed his appreciation of the presence of its guests, and assured any Master Mason who at any time might be in Palmer, that the latch-string of Thomas Lodge would always be out; that was the message of Thomas Lodge to its guests.

McClure's Magazine

For 1897.

SEVEN GREAT SERIALS.

A New Life of Grant by Hamlin Garland. The first authoritative and adequate Life of Grant ever published. (Begins in December.)
Rudyard Kipling's first American serial, "Captains Courageous." (Begun in November.)
Robert Louis Stevenson's "St. Ives." The only novel of Stevenson's still unpublished. (Begins in May.)
Chas. A. Dana. "Recollections of Wartime." Mr Dana was for three of the most critical years of the Civil War practically a member of Lincoln's cabinet, and is probably better fitted than any other man living to give an authoritative history of this period from his recollections and correspondence.
Portraits of Great Americans. Many of them unpublished. In connection with this series of portraits it is intended to publish special biographical studies under the general title of MAKERS OF THE UNION from Washington to Lincoln.
Pictures of Palestine. Specially taken under the editor's direction.
Stories of Adventure. A serial by CONAN DOYLE, in which he will use his extraordinary talent for mystery and ingenuity which have, in the "Sherlock Holmes" stories, given him a place beside Poe and Gaboriau.

TEN FAMOUS WRITERS.

Ian Maclaren. All the fiction that he will write during the coming year, with the exception of two contributions to another publication which were engaged from him long ago, will appear in MCCLURE'S MAGAZINE.
Joel Chandler Harris. A series of new animal stories in the same field as the "Brer Rabbit" and the "Little Tribbleringer" stories.
Rudyard Kipling. Besides "Captains Courageous," Kipling will contribute to MCCLURE'S all of the short stories he will write during the coming year.
Octave Thanet is preparing for the MAGAZINE a series of short stories in which the same characters will appear, although each will be complete in itself.

Anthony Hope — Bret Harte — Robert Barr
Frank R. Stockton — Stanley Weyman — Clark Russell

will all have stories in MCCLURE'S for the coming year.

These are only a small fraction of the great and important feature of MCCLURE'S MAGAZINE for 1897, the subscription price of which is only

One Dollar a Year.

The new volume begins with November. Subscriptions should start with this number.

Our Economy
Sale

Of ready-for-wear clothing begins to-day. We've been on the lookout for bargains in high class clothes for men and boys—manufacturers have been anxious to dispose of the surplus of heavy stocks—and the opportunity we sought came to us last week. The clothes are here now; listen to the story of the prices.

Such Ulsters

as we can sell you for $6 are rare in retailing history. Splendid garments at this price, well made and trimmed.

The Kersey Overcoats we can sell at $7.50 ought to bring $10.

Splendid cloth from New York mill, made and trimmed right. Ulsters at $7.50 in Frieze.

The $10 kind. Worombo Beavers, O'Brien Brothers' Irish Frieze and Chinchillas in fine Overcoats and Ulsters at $10.

Made with fine body linings and iron-wear sleeve lining. Ought to be $15. The maker stands the difference.

At $14, the finest Royal Kersey Overcoats of the year.

Plain or lap seams, clay weave or satin body linings. The Irish Frieze and Chinchilla Ulsters at this price are all wool, made extra long, deep collars, good warm practical linings.

More Overcoats.

We supplement the new purchase by adding a number of odd sizes from lines already here—all new goods and made for the season's trade. Lines will run out you know, and odd sizes must be sold at some price.

So we've taken the $18 Overcoats, odd sizes, and put them over on the $15 tables, along with a few $20 odd sizes. A few blue and black Kerseys, that were $25 and $28 are on the $20 table; odd sized men have the best of it here.

And the Boys===

They're in the new purchase too. We got hold of three lots of boys' short pant suits—manufacturers samples—made to sell for $3 and $3.50, we sell for $2. Another lot of fine Fancy Cassimeres, $4 kinds are going at $2.50. Another lot of Fine Cassimeres and Cheviots, to be sold at $5, our price is $3. Bring the boys in. And boys' ulsters too. For boys from 8 to 18 years, dark brown Chinchillas, Canada Grays and smooth Cassimeres, warm and heavy with deep collars and extra length, at just half price---$3 and $4.

We're not given to boasting—the clothes we sell do most of our talking for us, but these goods we have here now are really worth talking out loud about. Every piece of cold weather clothing here is a genuine bargain, and our guarantee of "Your money back if you want it" makes buying as safe and sure as it can be made. We will have extra clerks here to wait on you—we will make buying as easy as the prices. Open evenings now until Christmas.

Our Furnishing Department is made attractive with X-mas goods—for men's goods come to a man's store.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 18, 1896.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Mr. and Mrs. James Pendergast have a daughter.

Mrs. Lucinda H. White is ill with asthmatic bronchitis.

Artist Peterson has just completed a fine portrait of E. F. Morris.

The little son of William Holloway of Pease avenue has scarlet fever.

Miss Gertrude B. Gage is home from Wellesley College for the holidays.

William A. Needham spent Sunday with Mrs. Needham at the Albany hospital.

W. Cavanaugh, who has been ill with the grippe since Thanksgiving, is out again.

R. M. Reynolds has purchased two new horses, one a pacer with a record in the 'teens.

The subject of Rev. Harry Blackford's sermon Sunday will be, "The indignation of Judas."

Mr. Fozzy of Brockton, formerly of Monson, has been visiting relatives here for several days.

Miss Mary Peck, who was confined to the house the first of the week with the grippe, is out again.

Lyman C. Flynt lost his valuable pet dog, "Nero," Monday, death being caused by heart disease.

Prof. Penny of New York has been the guest of J. H. Heimann at the Century Hotel this week.

Principal Arthur N. Burke of the Academy spent Monday in Worcester, visiting the high school of that city.

Rev. W. H. Marble will take for his subject Sunday at the Methodist church, "The wise mens' visit to Christ."

Miss Minnie H. Webster visited friends in Springfield and Easthampton Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

W. H. Pease has purchased all the old windows of the M. E. church, and expects to erect an extensive greenhouse.

The Ladies' Circle of the Universalist church held a sale of aprons and useful articles this evening in the church.

Christmas Sunday will be observed the 27th at the Congregational church. There will be a Christmas tree Christmas Eve.

The Universalist Sunday school will have a Christmas tree on Christmas night, and will have a Christmas concert one week from Sunday night.

Emanuel Fozzy of Brockton visited friends in town the first of the week. Mr. Fozzy and his two brothers went to Brockton several years ago.

The scholars in the various schools were given Christmas remembrances by the teachers this afternoon. The schools closed to-day for one week.

At the annual meeting of the Central Mass. Electric Co., held at Palmer on Monday of this week, Dr. G. E. Fuller and G. C. Flynt of this town were re-elected directors.

Miss Alice Morris, who has been spending the past year and a half teaching in Denver, Col., is expected home this week. Her many friends will be glad to see her back again.

The subject of Rev. F. S. Hatch's sermon at the Congregational church Sunday will be; "Preparation for the advent of our Lord along lines of national achievement and failure."

Many will regret to learn that Prof. Tufts and family are to leave for their Chicago home the first week in January. They have a host of friends in town who wish them happiness.

Many in town have received invitations to attend the reception given by Mrs. Horatio Lyon and Miss Caroline Reed at the Massasoit House, Springfield, Dec. 30, and doubtless will attend.

The stores have this week put on their holiday attire. Although the displays are pretty, they are small as compared with those of former years, due to the hard times. The trade, so far, has been light.

Fox hunters in town are arranging for a grand hunt, to take place at an early date. Killing of foxes should be encouraged. There are some towns at the present day that offer a good sum for all foxes killed.

Notwithstanding the severe weather of Wednesday, many attended the sale of fancy articles of the Dorcas Society, held at the residence of Rufus P. Cushman, and the society netted a good sum to continue their work.

Rev. Julius Ward, an editor of the Boston Herald, formerly a trustee of the Academy and president of the alumni association, has been pronounced insane, and was taken to the Worcester Hospital last week. His friends entertain no hope of his recovery.

The Universalist Visitor made its first appearance to-day. It is a neat little sheet, issued by the Universalist young people in the interests of their church. Rev. Harry Blackford is the editor, W. L. Ricketts the business manager, and G. H. Seymour the subscription agent.

The committee appointed by the Relief Corps to ascertain the number of war veterans residing in Monson, reported the number as 75, the oldest being 76 and the youngest 47. The average age of the total number is 57. Forty-eight of the number are members of Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., 36 of them being under 60 years.

Group 6 of the Epworth League will hold a convention at West Warren Jan. 1, at which Miss Mabelle L. Watson will read a paper, "What can the second vice president do to make the department of mercy and help more successful?" Rev. W. H. Marble's paper will be "Social Christianity in the Epworth League."

The Methodist church repairs are moving slowly. The King's Daughters section of the memorial window, which was returned to the maker on account of a mistake in an emblem, is now in position. The carpenters have this week been at work on the altar in the auditorium. The building is furnished with electricity by the Central Massachusetts Company, and the fixtures in the auditorium are much admired.

The friends of Mrs. C. R. Buffington are congratulating her on her narrow escape yesterday morning. While preparing breakfast over the stove the sleeve of her flannelette wrapper caught fire, the flames spreading very quickly. Mr. Buffington soon extinguished it, however, but not until the nap of the flannelette had been burned off almost the entire surface of the garment. Mrs. Buffington was not burned at all.

The cemetery commissioners are making many improvements at No 1 cemetery. The grounds about the house are finely graded, and the handsome granite wall and steps are admired by all. Carpenters are now at work remodeling the house; a piazza is being put on in front, and new windows and blinds are also to be put in; the old sheds in the rear have been taken down, and in the spring the commissioners are to paint the entire building.

Past Master Dr. George E. Fuller installed the following officers of Day Spring Masonic lodge Monday evening: W. M., Ansel H. Shaw; S. W., Frank A. Bills; J. W., Monroe Wright; treasurer, Charles L. Clough; secretary, Nelson A. Bugbee; S. D., Henry Wentworth; J. D., Alfred W. Dana; S. S., Richard Thierfelt; J. S., Charles A. Wellman; marshall, Orvillus P. Holdridge; chaplain, A. Haskell White; tyler, Fred J. Flynt.

Herbert Warner and little son, while driving northward Saturday morning, had a narrow escape from being thrown into the river from the Reynolds bridge. As the horse neared the bridge he became frightened at the water and plunged about until he got into the part of the bridge divided off for foot passengers. He was quieted, however, before doing any further damage than breaking several of the iron pickets from the bridge fence.

The annual meeting of the Sunday school board of the Methodist church was held Sunday, Rev. W. H. Marble presiding. It was voted that $30 should be taken from the treasury for church repairs, leaving $29. There are 15 classes and 180 scholars in the school. There have been 18 conversions during the year, and 18 members have joined the church on probation. There are 580 books in the library. It was voted to have a Christmas tree and exercises on Christmas night, and this committee will have the affair in charge; Frank M. King, Miss Alice M. King, Mrs. W. S. Mason, Mrs. H. E. Bugbee, and E. J. Osborne. The following officers were elected; Superintendent, F. M. King; assistant superintendent, C. A. Bradway; secretary and treasurer, Myron Wright; librarian, W. C. Nelson; chorister, E. J. Osborne; organist, Miss Jennie M. Day.

Marcus Keep post, G. A. R., held its annual meeting Monday evening. These officers were chosen: Commander, John C. Aldrich; senior vice commander, George A. Harvey; junior vice commander, Henry O. Nelson; chaplain, Henry E. Bugbee; surgeon, Dr. George E. Fuller; officer of the day, George W. Seymour; officers of the guard, Samuel S. Mason; quartermaster, William J. Ricketts; adjutant, George H. Foskit; delegate to the convention in Worcester, W. J. Ricketts; alternate, G. H. Foskit; auditing committee, G. A. Harvey, G. H. Foskit, G. W. Seymour; relief committee, G. H. Foskit, W. J. Ricketts, G. A. Harvey, G. W. Seymour; entertainment and conference committee, H. E. Bugbee, W. J. Ricketts, L. W. Rood, G. H. Foskit, G. W. Seymour; visiting committee to A. A. Gage camp, Sons of veterans, J. C. Alrich, G. A. Harvey, G. W. Seymour.

The Academy closes to-night, and public rhetoricals will be held in the chapel, beginning at 8 o'clock. The winter term will begin one week from next Wednesday. The programme for the rhetoricals:

Piano Solo, "Oberon," Myra L. Brown
Recitation, "Down to Sleep," Laura A. Squier

Cattle Inspector Eager has made his annual inspection and finds very little tuberculosis in this section.

Gilbert Roth had to take a long walk Wednesday, his horse going home and leaving him in the village.

A Bold Swindler.

Eye doctors and spectacle sellers should give this town a wide berth just now. This week one called on an elderly lady and showed her a pair of gold-bowed glasses which were quite satisfactory. Just as she was trying them on, the "doctor" suddenly discovered a cataract on one of her eyes, which he insisted he could remove in a moment and save total blindness. After considerable persuasion he was allowed to lift the eyelid, and immediately showed her something in his hand he said was the cataract. As he showed it he said, "It would cost you $60 to have that done in a hospital," but he would give her the pair of glasses and the operation for $25, to which she reluctantly consented and went and brought three ten-dollar bills, which he took and said, "I can't change it; can't you give me a five-dollar bill instead of the ten?" She went and brought a five and handed him, which he took. She then asked for one of the tens, but he replied, "You took one of them when you went for the five." She went to look for it, but when she returned the "doctor" had left, taking the $35 with him. He left town in a hurry. The woman notified her son, who would no doubt have put a cataract on the "doctor's" eye had he overtaken him. It is reported that the lady now has a shotgun ready for any glasses peddler who may come. Quite an inoffensive German eye doctor came along a day or two later, and hearing of the incident diligently inquired for the house, saying, "I won't go there for $50; she may shoot."

BRIMFIELD.

Miss Whitehouse has been visiting friends in Newton the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Earle will spend the Christmas holidays in Boston.

John T. Ryan of Boston spent Sunday at the home of Charles S. Tarbell.

Two children of Joseph Leno in the Dunhamtown district are ill with diphtheria.

Lincoln F. Peirce of Tufts College will be in town next week for the holiday recess.

Mrs. Will A. Janes will spend the Christmas holidays in Worcester and in Concord, N. H.

The sidewalk between the post office and store has been repaired, and the improvement is greatly appreciated.

William Stoughton, who has been visiting his aunt, Mrs. Samuel Brown, returned to his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., last Saturday.

Dr. John L. Bacon, Jr., of the Homœpathic Medical College, Philadelphia, will spend the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Bacon.

There will be a lecture next Friday evening in the town hall under the auspices of the senior class of the Hitchcock Free High School. The lecture will be given by Prof. Charles E. Fay of Tufts College, and his subject will be, "The story that charmed our ancestors."

A pleasant sociable was held at the home of Mrs. Chamberlain last Friday evening. The special feature of the evening was the opening of "birthday bags" which had been distributed several months ago by the the Ladies' Union. About $20 was realized in this manner.

Louis Brown of Boston, formerly of this town, was a guest at the home of his brother, Oscar Brown, Sunday. Mr. Brown has been employed in the Massachusetts General Hospital for several years, and has lately received the appointment to a responsible position in the new laboratory recently established in connection with the hospital.

An important and much-needed work in the direction of village improvement was accomplished by some public-spirited citizens last week in repairing the sidewalk between the postoffice and store. The walk had been neglected for a long time, and the water settled in it badly, causing much inconvenience and complaints. Finally some well-known citizens determined to remedy the matter by their own labor, if there was no other way. They were joined by other leading men, and the company, by means of a day's hard labor digging, drawing sand and shoveling, constructed a well-raised, thoroughly-built sidewalk, where it will be most appreciated by the public. The example of these men should be followed by others in other parts of the village.

WARE.

George Healey is contemplating starting a bakery near East street.

W. S. Hyde, president of the Ware National Bank, has been confined to the house a week with the grippe.

There seems to be considerable religious interest at the East Congregational church. A large audience was present to listen to the earnest address of Rev. A. B. Bassett on the excuses and so-called reasons people give for not becoming Christians.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age, was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future" 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

BOSTON WEEKLY JOURNAL.

The Coming Year Will be an Unusually Interesting One.

To many New England homes the regular visit of the Boston Weekly Journal is particularly welcome. The daily issue of the Boston Journal stands at the head of the daily papers published in that city, and the same is true of the weekly edition. The paper is specially adapted to the wants of New England homes, and contains the vital features of the news of each week, in addition to a number of special features which are attractive and interesting. If you cannot take the Boston Daily Journal, be sure that you have the Boston Weekly Journal in addition to your own local paper.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rivers Junction she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption, and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware Drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

Dr. G. Howard Jones, of Boston, says that Ayer's Hygienic Coffee will fill a long felt want to persons who cannot use coffee on account of the effect it produces on the liver. Principal grocers sell it.

Try Grain-O! Try Grain-O!

Ask your grocer to-day to show you a package of GRAIN-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it like it. GRAIN-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha or Java, but it is made from pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. ¼ the price of coffee. 15 and 25 cents per package. Sold by all grocers.

There is a Class of People

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cts. and 25 cts. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

Such a bewildering assortment of useful Christmas gifts as is shown at Broadhurst Bros. Shoe Store, Springfield, is deserving of the great throng of patrons as seen there each day, making their selections of different sorts of slippers displayed along their shelves and piled high on their tables, so plainly marked with a price so low that you'll surely and quickly pull your purses and make your purchase.

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men says is to one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhoea and dysentery. I always recommended it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it, Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat.' Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

REACHES THE HUB.

The Little Conqueror Comes to Boston. People Are Becoming Enthusiastic.

(From the Boston Globe.)

When the welfare of the public is at stake our citizens are interested. The little conqueror has come and conquered. Boston has proven no exception to the rule; everything is swept before the onward march. Enthusiastic people are talking about their experience. Many a reader of this knows where the photographic studio of Mr. C. H. Foster is, at 28 Hanover street, and no doubt a number know Mr. Foster personally—a Bostonian for 35 years, and a man whose statement should satisfy the skeptic. This is how he speaks of his case. To our representative he said: "About 15 years ago I was a very sick woman with diabetes. That is what the doctors called it. They told me I would not live for many years, and advised salt water air at the seashore as the only thing that could be done for me. This appeared to help me, but for the last ten years I have suffered excessively from most distressing pains across my kidneys, which were constantly there, until I began to take DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS, and they have relieved my suffering to the extent I hardly expected would ever be my lot. I had backache so bad at times it required almost superhuman energy to keep up. There was a dull, heavy, indescribable sensation in my head. My appetite was irregular, utterly failing me at times. My work taxed me and made my backache worse. Then I read about Doan's Kidney Pills. I was suffering greatly at the time, and decided to try them. I got a box at Knight's pharmacy, 97 Court street, and commenced taking them. After the first few days I knew they were doing me good, and as I continued the backache disappeared and rapidly improved. The backache left me, and I no longer experience former suffering. My head is clear, and I feel brighter. The urine used to contain a heavy sediment. Doan's Kidney Pills have restored it to a normal condition. I feel to-day a hundred per cent better than in years. I regard my case as being really wonderful, and if my recommendation of Doan's Kidney Pills will induce sufferers from kidney disorders to try them I gladly authorize you to use it."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box, or sent by mail on receipt of price. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

The Same... Old Sarsaparilla.

That's Ayer's. The same old sarsaparilla as it was made and sold by Dr. J. C. Ayer 50 years ago. In the laboratory it is different. There modern appliances lend speed to skill and experience. But the sarsaparilla is the same old sarsaparilla that made the record—50 years of cures. Why don't we better it? Well, we're much in the condition of the Bishop and the raspberry: "Doubtless," he said, "God might have made a better berry. But doubtless, also, He never did." Why don't we better the sarsaparilla? We can't. We are using the same old plant that cured the Indians and the Spaniards. It has not been bettered. And since we make sarsaparilla compound out of sarsaparilla plant, we see no way of improvement. Of course, if we were making some secret chemical compound we might.... But we're not. We're making the same old sarsaparilla to cure the same old diseases. You can tell it's the same old sarsaparilla because it works the same old cures. It's the sovereign blood purifier, and—it's Ayers.

Glad Tidings.

The air is full of Christmas cheer,
It is the glad time of the year;
The very snowflakes as they fall
Bring tender messages to all,
And every twinkling star on high,
Looks down with joy from out the sky.

Hearts throb with glad tumultuous beat,
Friends pause to utter greetings, mete
To give each other at this time;
The bells peal out their sweetest chime,
And with their glad melodious ring
So near the tender Christ child bring..

"Good will to men!" the angels sang,
And all the earth with music rang.
"And peace, deep peace," on bended knee
The shepherds heard; "peace unto thee,"
And all the heart of listening night
Throbbed with that peace, that deep delight.

The echoes of the angels' song,
Still sound Judea's plains along;
They softly steal into our hearts,
And all our soul with music starts,
Sweet Bethlehem's tale, the gladdest lay
That tongue could sing, is fresh to-day.

"Good tidings!" Unto us is born
A Saviour,—oh, thou glorious morn
That gave him to the needy earth.
Oh, precious gift, oh, wondrous birth,
Our whole united soul doth bring
All adoration to our King.

Ring out ye bells your richest peal
Till earth in holy joy shall kneel,
Ring welcome to each wandering one,
For Christ is born, Jehovah's son;
Ye sons of earth no longer fear,
The pitying, saving Christ is here.

—Grace Elizabeth Cobb.

Written for the PALMER JOURNAL.

FANNY'S VISIT TO FAIRYLAND.

It was a stormy day in August, so Fanny could not go out doors to play, and she was reading a fairy story that was in a book her mother had given her last Christmas.

After she had been reading awhile she looked up at her mother and said, "Mamma, are there any realy, truly fairies?"

She was a pretty child, about seven years old, with long curly hair.

"Certainly not, my child! What put the notion into your head to ask me that question?" said Mrs. Brown.

"Well, Mamma, I was reading a story about fairies, how they would take the good children to fairyland, to see their queen. Often they would give them whatever they wished for, no matter what it was."

Her brother, a boy of about eighteen, who had happened to hear part of the conversation, looked up with a smile on his face and said, "What! talking about fairies, girlie? I didn't think you would read that trash, and I thought you had more sense than to believe in it."

"Mamma, is this thrash? Harry says that it is; but I will not believe it until you say so."

"My dear child, it is not trash any more than his books are. But it is time for you to stop reading now, because supper is almost ready, and you can set the dishes on the table, if you want to, while I am getting the food ready. Harry, you had better go and chop some wood and put it on the fire, so as to get ready for papa, when he comes home."

So off Fanny ran to set the table for supper, and soon after supper she went to bed; but she could not help thinking of the fairies and what she had read about them.

I wish I could see what the fairies look like," she thought to herself. After she had got into bed her head had hardly touched the pillow before she fell asleep.

It was about midnight when she woke up with a start, and wondered what was the matter. She did not have long to wonder however, because she heard a whir of wings that she thought sounded as if a bird was in the room. After the sound had ceased, she could dimly see the figure of a funny little fellow, about as big as her thumb, sitting on the window sill.

Fanny could hardly believe her eyes and ears when she heard a very squeaky voice saying, "You see we have given you your wish, to see what we look like." And sure enough, it was a real fairy.

Fanny did not know what to say, and she was still more surprised when Tip, for that was the fairy's name said, "To-morrow, after breakfast, while the dew is still on the grass, ask your mother if you can get some berries for dinner. I will meet you in the pasture under the big apple tree, and take you to fairyland; but do not tell anyone."

Fanny was just going to speak when, with a whir of the wings, he had gone out of the open window. So Fanny went to sleep again, and slept until she heard her mother's voice saying, "Fanny, Fanny, breakfast is ready; hurry up and come down."

When Fanny had eaten her breakfast she said to her mother: "Mamma, may I go out and get some berries for dinner?"

"Yes, I would be glad to have you; but wear your rubbers and do not stay long."

"No, mamma." And off ran Fanny, singing as she went.

Soon she reached the pasture and began looking around for her little friend, but she did not see him until a voice close by her ear, that made her jump, said: "Oh! here you are at last. I have been waiting for you half an hour," and there was Tip sitting on a blade of grass.

He was indeed a funny looking fellow, and his voice sounded very funny as he told her to fill her basket first, and then he would take her to see the queen.

As she picked the berries, he told her all about Fairyland. "But," said he, "you cannot see the other fairies until you have gone through the crystal fountain of understanding, as we call it."

Fanny was so anxious to see the little folks that she picked the berries very fast, and soon had her basket full.

"Now I am ready," she said; and off they went to the forest.

By and by they came to a gate made of pink roses; as they came nearer the gate opened, and right before them was the crystal fountain. After Fanny had passed through it she could see figures flitting about everywhere.

They had gone only a little way when they came to a green velvet throne, and Tip told Fanny that this was the queen's throne. She saw before her a dazzling little creature with a star on her forehead. As Fanny looked she saw that the queen had on a beautiful dress made from spiders' webs.

She was looking in wonderment upon the lovely little creature, when she heard a sweet voice, that sounded like a chime of silver bells, saying: "You may ask for three things, whatever you want, and they shall be granted."

"Gracious queen, I only ask to grow up a good woman, to have a good education, and to have health."

"As you have wished for the best things, you shall have them, and many more," said the queen.

The queen was to give a ball that day, so she invited Fanny to stay to it. While she was waiting she heard a rustle as of many birds flying through the air, and in came about two thousand fairies, until the forest seemed alive with little folks.

Some were dressed to represent flowers, and some birds, and as they passed the throne they knelt down and kissed the hand of their queen.

Just then Fanny woke up, for her trip to Fairyland had been all a dream. But she got her three wishes, after all, for she did in reality grow up to be a true, unselfish, Christian woman.

Deafness cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

GUESS SHE WASN'T MUCH AMERICAN.—An "American Woman" in the London Chronicle describes the average Englishman as "a superior being, of active brain, much travel, experience with women and a certain desire to please. American men are an eccentric growth, a hodge podge flung together in a galloping money grabbing civilization, not fully known to themselves." SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

A Red-Letter Year for 1897.

THE ENTIRE NOVELTY of many of the plans for 1897 is noticeable. For instance, the series devoted to

"LONDON AS SEEN BY CHARLES DANA GIBSON." Mr. Gibson has not before appeared as a writer. He visited London last summer for SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, for the purpose of depicting with pen and pencil those scenes and types which the huge metropolis presents in endless variety.

Of like novelty is the first considerable

NOVEL BY RICHARD HARDING DAVIS, "Soldiers of Fortune." The hero is one of the most vigorous men that Mr. Davis has drawn. Illustrated by C. D. Gibson.

"THE CONDUCT OF GREAT BUSINESS," A beautifully illustrated series of articles of which the following are already completed
"The Great Department Store."
"The Management of a Great Hotel."
"The Working of the Bank"
"A Great Manufactory."

"UNDERGRADUATE LIFE IN AMERICAN COLLEGES." A series of articles touching upon the life of our older universities as represented by the doings of the students themselves.

Judge Henry E. Howland writes on "Undergraduate Life at Yale."

Mr. James Alexander on "Princeton," and Robert Grant and Edward S. Martin on "Harvard."

"JAPAN AND CHINA SINCE THE WAR" will be a most interesting group of articles richly illustrated.

"THE UNQUIET SEX." Under the title of "The Unquiet Sex," Mrs. Helen Watterson Moody will write a series of articles:—"Woman and Reforms," "The College-Bred Woman," "Woman's Clubs," and "The Case of Maria" (a paper on domestic service).

W. D. HOWELLS'S "STORY OF A PLAY." In this Mr. Howells gives us the best novel he has ever produced in his delightful vein of light comedy.

GEORGE W. CABLE. In addition to the fiction enumerated there will be a series of four short stories by George W. Cable, the only ones he has written for many years.

HOW TO TRAVEL WISELY with a minimum of wear and tear must be regarded as an art little understood. MR. LEWIS MORRIS IDDINGS, in two articles, will offer a variety of useful suggestions and data on "OCEAN AND LAND TRAVEL." This will be happily rounded out by an article from MR. RICHARD HARDING DAVIS on "TRAVELERS ONE MEETS: Their Ways and Methods." The illustrations by American and foreign artists will be highly pertinent.

It is impossible in a small space to even mention the many attractive features for 1897. A beautiful illustrated booklet has been prepared, which will be sent, postage paid, on request.

A Bachelor's Ballad of Christmas Eve.

She stood beneath the mistletoe;
I see her as she looked that night—
(Tho' it was twenty years ago),
She was a fair and goodly sight;
About her forehead, broad and low,
Her thick curls clustered soft and bright.
She smiled on me: ah! tale of woe—
I did not kiss her when I might.

'Tis so, and "pity 'tis 'tis so,"
In shame and grief these words I write.
And yet I was no fool, I trow—
Not if my memory serves me right.
From many a lip where nectars flow
My own had drunk in deep delight;
What could have ailed me, anyhow—
I did not kiss her when I might.

I know not, yet this truth I know—
I loved her with my full heart's might.
I loved her, while I let her go
Unkissed upon that Christmas night—
There shot a sudden angry glow
From her sweet eyes—oh luckless weight!
That glance hurt harder than a blow,
I did not kiss her when I might.

I called next day, she was like snow,
And struck my ardent hopes with blight.
Between us chasms seemed to grow—
I cursed myself, I cursed my plight.
She shortly married my worst foe,
And that is why I sit to-night
Alone beneath the mistletoe;
I did not kiss her when I might.

ENVOI.

Prince, as you westward journeying go,
Look well to it, when lips invite,
And never moan, like me, in woe,
"I did not kiss her when I might."

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in Christmans Truth.

A FRIENDLY WARNING.

"Look yuh, sonny," said Uncle Eben; "'pears ter me laik yoh wus actin' mighty big feelin' dese days."

Pickaninny Jim looked abashed, but answered:

"I's gettin' 'long purty good in school, I is, an' reckons dat ef I uses big language onct in er while, it's case I knows de meanin' of it."

"Da's puffickly prepuh. Mek de bes' use yoh kin o' yoh opporchunities. But doan git ter s'sposin' dat case yoh got 'em dis hull yearf was made for yoh benefit; case ef yoh does, yoh's gwineter git yohse'f laughed at, same ez de flea did when de ahk don lan'd on Mount Ararat."

"Wus de flea 'long wif de res' oh 'em?"

"To be sho. When de ahk wus er buildin' de flea come 'long, an' lookin' 'roun,' says, 'what's dis foh? De hippepotamus he 'splained hit ter 'im, an' de flea says, 'I wonduh is my name down on de passenger lis'.' De hippepotamus he says, 'I d'no. I's 'fraid you's so small day done forgot yoh. But yoh kin climb on my back an' go 'long wif me, case nobody won't notice yer.' So de flea he got on bo'd de ahk, an' mighty thankful, too, not ter be lef' out in de wet. BEECHER'S RING.

Many persons in and out of Boston know well the little shop under the Museum familiarly known as Remick's. It has been the haunt in past years of many a prominent man and woman, and the owner has been consulted by a little army of notorieties regarding rare and costly gems. Some 20 years ago Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, whose fondness for gems was almost a passion, and who never visited Boston without stepping into this little shop, found here an uncommonly beautiful aquamarine ring, which he bought and wore for some time. During the visit of Miss Ellen Terry to this country the actress lunched with Mr. and Mrs. Beecher. In the course of her stay with them she caught sight of this ring on Mr. Beecher's hand and asked to examine it. When it was handed to her and she had displayed great enthusiasm over it, she kissed it passionately several times. "Why do you do that?" inquired Mr. Beecher. "Simply because I love these gems so," was the reply. "Well, if you care so much for the ring as that," said Mr. Beecher, "please keep the ring and wear it for my sake." Last spring while Miss Terry was in Boston she hunted up this little shop and passed some time in looking at the gems and taking with Mr. Remick about them. At length he asked her what had become of the ring that Mr. Beecher gave her. "I wore it for years," she answered. "After his death I became more attached to it than ever. But on the day that Queen Victoria knighted Henry Irving I took the ring from my finger and gave it to him in honor of the occasion. Sir Henry now wears Mr. Beecher's ring and will wear it as long as he lives."—Boston Letter.

NOTES FOR COOKS ON SEASONING.

When using vanilla for flavoring—especially for angel's food—add a half teaspoon of peach; it is very fine.

When making corn bisque, use cayenne with a little sugar for seasoning.

A good mixed seasoning to have on hand for almost everything is four tablespoons of salt, one tablespoon of mustard, one fourth teaspoon black pepper, a pinch of cayenne.

A dash of black pepper greatly improves vanilla ice cream.

Place on the top of fish when baking thin slices of salt pork; it will baste the fish, and the seasoning is fine.

Bean soup is much improved by adding a little mace just before serving.

Soup stock is better seasoning by sticking whole cloves and other spices into the meat while boiling instead of using powdered spices.

Sliced onion fried in butter or in butter and flour, and rubbed through a sieve and put into soups just before serving, gives a fine flavor and good color.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal billious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malaria poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Drug store.

DON'TS FOR SHOES.

1. Don't ever wear a shoe that will not allow the great toe to lie in a straight line.
2. Never wear a shoe with a sole narrower than the outline of the foot traced with a pencil close under the rounding edge.
3. Never wear a shoe that pinches the heel.
4. Never wear a shoe or boot so large in the heel that the feet is not kept in place.
5. Never wear a shoe or boot tight anywhere.
6. Never wear a shoe or boot that has depression in any part of the sole to drop any joint or bearing below the level plane.
7. Never wear a shoe with a sole turning up very much at the toes, as this causes the cords of the upper part of the foot to contract.
8. Never wear a shoe that presses up into the hollow of the foot.
9. Never have the top of the boots tight, as it interferes with the action of the calf muscles, makes one walk badly, and spoils the shape of the ankle.
10. Never come from high heels to low heels at one jump.
11. Never wear one pair of shoes all the time, unless obliged to do so. Two pairs of boots worn a day at a time alternately give more service and are much more healthful.
12. Never wear leather sole linings to stand upon; white cotton drilling or linen is much better and more healthful.
13. Never wear a short stocking, or one which, after being washed, is not at least one-half inch longer than the foot. Bear in mind that stockings shrink; be sure that they will allow your toes to spread out at the extreme ends, as this keeps the joints in place and makes a strong and attractive foot. As to shape of stockings, the single digital or "one-toe stocking," is the best.
14. Never think that the feet will grow large from wearing proper shoes; pinching and distorting make them grow not only large but unsightly. A proper natural use of all the muscles makes them compact and attractive.

One Christmas Eve.

Tis Christmas Eve, and the snow is falling
In fairy flakes to the frozen ground—
Like spirit voices the bells are calling,
A world of joy in their mellow sound.
Down in the heart of the busy city,
By the feeble light of one taper dim,
A voice to awaken the sigh of pity
Is faintly singing a Christmas hymn.

No Christmas log on the hearth is burning,
Though winds blow chill and the hour is late—
But young eyes watch, with a wistful yearning,
A few red sparks in a narrow grate!
Through a mullioned window the moonlight stealing,
A halo sheds round one broken chair—
Where two young forms like cherubs kneeling,
Are softly lisping their evening prayer.

The mother sings while her babe is sleeping,
Although the chamber is bare and cold;
Above her treasure a fond watch keeping,
As "Mary" watched in the days of old.
She knows not why, but her heart rejoices,
Her life's dull burden has grown so light,
And, oh, she hears in her children's voices
A ring of comfort and hope to-night.

"Poor mother's eyes have grown dim with sorrow,
Thou sweet child Jesus," the children pray;
"The widow's home will be sad to-morrow—
Oh, send 'good tidings' for Christmas Day."
Ah, now the mother is sadly weeping,
But God hath answered the simple prayer,
For someone covered with snow is leaping
In eager haste up the creaking stair.

"Alas!" she sighs, while her tears are flowing,
"Can the dead return to this heart of mine?"
(On the narrow threshold a face is glowing,
Two brave blue eyes through the shadows shine.)
"For evermore must my life be lonely,
Since he is lost whom I loved the best!"
The stranger pauses one moment only—
Then folds her close to his throbbing breast.

In loving accents her name is spoken,
In silent rapture she clasps his neck;
"Dear heart!" he whispers, "your last love token Hath saved your Jack from a cruel wreck!"
He draws from his bosom with deep emotion,
One silken lock of a baby's hair;
In calm and storm, on the briny ocean,
By day and night hath it nestled there.

The light of joy in their sweet eyes gleaming,
In childish wonder the children stand—
Through the mullioned window the moonlight beaming,
Bathes in soft glory that happy band!
And now the father, each child care-sing,
The wondrous tale of God's mercy tells;
And, while they listen, His loving blessing
Is wafted on the Christmas bells.

A CHRISTMAS TRAGEDY.

BY C. F. COLLINS.

The festive season was drawing near, and all was bustle and preparation in the cantonments, each company trying to outdo the other in the splendor of their decorations. All were determined on giving Father Christmas a hearty welcome; still there were many of us not yet settled down to all the vicissitudes of soldiering who could not help remembering the Christmas days of the past, when in our distant homes, surrounded by kindred and friends, we listened again to the story of the babe in the stable at Bethlehem, born into the world to bring glory to God in the highest, and peace on earth to men of good will who could forget the fun and frolic around the blazing Yule log, the bright and happy faces of the children reflected in the old and world-beaten, for all was joy on Christmas Day.

Nor could I help thinking of the dear old slopes of Mangerton, which at this season would have on its virgin mantle of snow, with the yew, the red-berry holly, and laurel bushes adding color to the scene, the ivy-covered ruins of Muckross Abbey keeping sentinel over our departed kin, where centuries before on Christmas Eve the pious monks pealed forth the joyous notes of the "Gloria in excelsis Dei." What a contrast was my present situation here in the far, far East, on the coral sands of India, with the mercury at a hundred and ten; the palm, the citron, and the orange, taking the place of the holly, laurel, and yew, a cooling punkah far more comfortable than a blazing fire.

It was my first year in India, where as one of Her Majesty's defenders, I was stationed with the Royal Fusiliers at Cannamore, on the Malabar coast, and on Christmas Eve my thoughts were not of the happiest, as I slowly paced my beat in front of the main guard-room. The dismal howl of the jackals prowling in the hills near by, the monotonous tones of the tom-tom in the neighboring temple, the Hindoo maiden chanting her evening hymn to some one of her numerous divinities made me realize that I was indeed in the land of Pagodas and Heathenism.

"A penny for your thoughts, old man," said my friend, Owen Mallon, as he slapped me on the back. "But then I need not ask; I know well what they are, but, my dear fellow, there is no good in dreaming of the past, we must live in the present and make it as pleasant as possible, for it is not always that a soldier has a chance. Now, my object in coming over to see you was to extend an invitation on the part of the Jolly Six that you form one of our party to-morrow night in the Cave of Neptune, where we are going to right royally celebrate Christmas. Meet us to-morrow evening at the beach after gun-fire, and I venture to promise you as jolly a night as ever you had on your native sod. You see it has always been the custom of the Jolly Six on Christmas Eve to leave the ordinary Tommy Atkins to his beer and music hall ditties, and in some secluded spot have a love-feast to be remembered for the year."

The Jolly Six was a social club composed of men of different companies, and in the way of goodfellowship comprised the cream of the regiment, so I gladly accepted the invitation and looked forward with anticipations of pleasure to the following evening

The sun was slowly sinking like a ball of fire behind the sea, the bugles sounded the retreat, and presently the sunset gun was fired. There being scarcely any twilight in India, it was dark by the time I reached the seashore, where I found my comrades awaiting me. We got into the boat and shoved off to the Cave of Neptune, which was situated in a large rock about five hundred yards from the shore.

I was surprised when I entered the cave to find that in a few days the men had transformed the place into a veritable fairy bower, lighted with hundreds of Chinese lanterns, which shed their soft light on a wealth of palms, ferns, and all the beautiful flowers of the East. In the center was a large table loaded with good cheer, and around it were soon seated half a dozen young men who never heard of dyspepsia and were qualified to do justice to every viand on the board. The native waiters glided around in their silent way, changing dishes, whilst volleys of wit and humor were fired across the table.

It was indeed an enjoyable feast, and by the time the toastmaster rose everybody was in the best of humor with himself and the world in general. The first toast, "Those at home," was drunk with a will, and was responded to by Jerry Noon's singing, "O Where is My Wandering Boy To-night?" From singing we fell into a reminiscent strain, and stories both serious and comic were exchanged.

Tom Jones soon monopolized this line of entertainment, and regaled us with incidents of the late Afghan war, in which he himself was generally the hero. He "Fought all his battles o'er again,

And thrice he slew the slain."

Now Tom was not noted for his veracity, and had the bad luck to be hit in the back by a spent bullet whilst retreating from the village of Decoga, which was the only engagement he ever saw. Tom was a right good fellow, and a comrade true as steel, and I shall always regret that his feelings should have been hurt by Mallon jokingly asking him where he was wounded. That was Tom's sore point, and he immediately challenged Mallon to have it out under prize ring rules, but of course we could not think of winding up our night's enjoyment with a pugilistic encounter. We talked them out of it, and as the night was very warm we compromised on a swimming match between Mallon and Jones. The course was marked out from Neptune's Cave to another rock, about a hundred yards and back, and as the night was very dark we placed several lanterns on the other rock, which enabled us to see the swimmers all the way.

There could not be any doubt as to who would be the winner, as Mallon was the best swimmer in the regiment, but before they started I gave Owen the tip that in order to satisfy poor Tom's wounded feelings he should allow him to win.

All was ready, and I gave the word. Off they dashed, Tom leading in the first few strokes, and widening the distance as he went along. They had not gone far when Mellon's black dog bounded in after them. We shouted words of encouragement to Tom as he ploughed his way through the water and rapidly neared the turning point, and a lusty cheer went up from the company as he reached the rock. But scarcely had our voices died out when he was seen to almost bound out of the water, cling to the rock and let forth a most agonizing scream.

"A cramp! the boat! quick!" And in a shorter time than you would conceive, we were pulling to the rescue of our dear comrade, who continued to scream in a most heartrending manner. I stood in the boat, holding the tiller, and as we drew nearer the terrible truth flashed upon us: Tom was struggling with a shark, which held him by the leg.

But hurrah! the dog was to the rescue! and a few seconds later we saw Tom creeping up the rock, but Mallon's black dog, "Paddy," with a parting yelp, disappeared beneath the waters of the Arabian.

When we arrived at the rock the sight which met our eyes was terrible. Tom's right leg was almost severed from his body, the flesh torn in a frightful manner, and he had several large wounds on the upper part of the body where he had breasted the jagged rock.

We did our best to stop the flow of blood, and tenderly laying his unconscious body in the boat we rowed with all our might to the hospital pier. The doctors were hastily summoned, but all to no use. Poor Tom had fought his last battle and told his last story. He remained unconscious about an hour, while I watched by his bedside. When he awoke to a realization of his condition he put out his hand and placed it in mine. I administered a little brandy, which seemed to revive him.

"Don't think," said he, "that I am afraid to die. Not a bit. My time was up, and what more can a man want than to be buried with military honors, regretted by his comrades and with a full knowledge that he has done his duty." His voice became fainter, and I saw he was failing fast. Another spoonful of brandy, and he rallied. "Don't forget my mother; send her everything I possess. That's all, though there is one other thing I would like, that is, for the band to play 'Poor Old Jeff,' coming home from the funeral. God have mercy on me," and his spirit was wafted to those shores where pack drill is unknown.

Next morning the gun carriage bearing the remains of our comrade wound its way to the little cemetery on the hill, his coffin covered with the Union Jack, on which were placed his helmet and side arms; with muffled drums and arms reversed we followed to the solemn notes of the dead march. We laid him away like the good old soldier that he was, and marching home with fixed bayonets the band struck up "Poor Old Jeff."

Fourteen years with all their joys and sorrows have gone by since then; still on the anniversary I never forget that jolly night in Neptune's Cave and its tragic ending, and unconsciously I find myself humming,

"For poor Old Jeff is gone to rest,"

so that the memory of Tom Jones is ever kept green in my soul.

HE DID NOT KNOW THE ROPES.

General Morgan of Illinois, says a "war story" in the Round Table, was one of those men so slouchy in his appearance that a stranger would never have picked him for an officer of high rank. One day a raw recruit of his brigade who had lost some books asked a veteran where he might be likely to find them. The veteran said the only thief in the brigade was Jim Morgan, who occupied a tent near the blue flag. The recruit hastened to Morgan's tent, shoved his head in through the flaps, and asked:

"Does Jim Morgan live here?"

"My name is James Morgan," answered the general.

"Then I want you to hand over those books you stole from me!"

"I have none of your books, my dear man."

"That's a lie," said the soldier. "The boys say you are the only thief in camp. Turn out them books, or I'll grind your carcass into apple-sass!"

General Morgan appreciated the joke, and laughed heartily, but when the recruit began pulling off his coat to make good his threats, the officer informed him of his relations to the brigade.

"Waal, blast me if I'd take you for a brigadier!" said the man. "Excuse me, General, but I don't thoroughly know the ropes yet."

PAPA KNEW WHAT TO SAY.

There was silence for a moment.

Presently she spoke, and the tone of voice she elected to use was tremulous and pleading.

"Nick, dearest, do—do you ever drink?"

Reluctantly he admitted that there were occasions when he glanced carelessly upon the wine while it was red?

"Ah, dearest," she continued, with anxiety depicted on her lovely face, "what do you suppose papa would say if he should discover that his only daughter's future husband drank?"

"He discovered it yesterday afternoon," replied Nick, with the same old reluctance.

"Oh! And what did he say?" she asked, breathlessly.

"He said," made answer the many young fellow—"he said, 'Nick, my boy, mine's the same, with a dash of bitters!'"

Then there was silence for a moment—perhaps two or three moments.—Baltimore News.

"Of course," the King of Dahomey was at pains to further explain, "the Amazons are peculiar. Yes, the other day they stopped fighting right in the midst of a battle because they had read somewhere that long engagements are no longer the rule."—Pearson's Weekly.

One Small Boy's Christmas.

The small boy looked at the Christmas tree,
And, straining his eager eyes to see,
Says he:
"Now I wonder just what they have got for me.

By Gee!
There's a bully old pair of nickel skates
The size of which clearly indicates
That they're meant for a boy about my size—
If I get them I'll draw a prize.

"Then over there is a dandy drum,
Which I'm rather led to believe will come
My way, and a printing press and type I see
Which would be just about the thing for me.

"That clipper sled looks mighty fine,
And I shouldn't wonder if that were mine,
And I'm rather inclined to think, from the looks
Of things, that I'll get that box of books.

"And the shot-gun up there behind the tree
I'm mighty sure is designed for me,
And the camera and the baseball bat
Are coming to me, I'll bet my hat."

BUT,

The camera went to another boy
And loaded him up with peaceful joy,
While the case of type and the printing press
Filled his cousin Tom with happiness;
And the nickelled skates, his brother Jim
Remarked, with a grin, belonged to him,
And the dandy drum and the clipper sled
Were both designed for his Cousin Ned,
But when the small boy sadly saw
The shot-gun go, he dropped his jaw,
And doleful indeed, became his looks
When he lost his grip on the box of books,
While the thing that simply knocked him flat
Was the fact that he missed the base-ball bat.

AND

All that gladdened the small boys life
Was a candy-bag and a new jack-knife.

ENVOY:

To the boys who have read this jingle through:
Let's hope that this small boy wasn't you.

STORY OF THE GOLD LOUIS.

When Lucien de Hem saw his last bank note raked in by the croupier and rose from the foulet table where he had just lost the remains of his little fortune he felt as if the earth was spinning and as if he could not hold himself up.

Completely upset, he threw himself down upon the leather-covered settee which extended around the room. For a few moments he looked vaguely around the gambling-room in which he had wasted the best years of his life, realized that he was hopelessly ruined, remembered that a commodore held a pistol with which his father, Gen de Hem, then only a captain, had used so well at the attack on Zaatcha; then overcome by fatigue he fell into a deep sleep.

When he awoke he judged, after glancing at the clock, that he had slept scarcely half an hour, and he felt an imperious desire to breathe fresh night air. The hand of the clock showed that it was a quarter to twelve.

Rising and stretching out his arms, Lucien suddenly remembered that it was Christmas eve, and as if in irony his memory carried him back to the days of his childhood and he saw himself putting his shoes by the fireplace before going to bed.

Just at this moment, old Dronski, a devotee of the gambling table—came up to Lucien mumbling something behind his dirty gray beard.

"Lend me five francs, sir. I have not stirred from here for two days, and in that two days the '17' has not come up. Laugh or not, as you please; but I would give my hand if to-night at midnight that number does not win."

Lucien de Hem shrugged his shoulders; he did not have enough in his pockets to make the contribution which the inmates of the place styled "the Polander's hundred sons." He went into the cloak-room, put on his wraps and desended the staircase with feverish agility. During the four hours that Lucien had been in the place it had snowed steadily and the streets were white. The ruined gambler shivered under his furs and rested by a pittable spectacle.

On a stone bench covered with snow, which according to the ancient custom, stood before the opening of a hotel, a little girl six or seven years old, scarcely covered by a ragged black dress, was sitting. She had fallen asleep in spite of the bitter cold in an attitude of fatigue and abandonment, and her poor little head and delicate shoulders were bent in an angle in the wall and rested against the icy stone. One of the sabots the child wore had slipped off from her foot and was lying in front of her.

With a mechanical gesture Lucien de Hem put his hand into his pocket; then he remembered that a moment before he had not been able to find a single piece to give the errand boy at the club.

Urged by an instinctive feeling of pity, however, he went up to the child, and was about to take her in his arms, perhaps, and carry her to a place of shelter for the night, when, in the sabot lying in the snow he saw something glittering. It was a gold louis!

A benevolent person, a woman, doubtless, passing by had seen the shoe lying before the sleeping child on this Christmas Eve, and recalling the touching legend, had given munificently so that the abandoned child might still believe in the gifts made by the infant Jesus, and in spite of her misfortune have some confidence and hope in the goodness of Providence.

A louis! that meant several days of ease and rest for the beggar. Lucien was about to waken her and tell her about it when he heard close to his ear as in a dream, a voice—the voice of the Polander—murmuring these words:—

"I have not stirred from here for two days, and for two days the 'seventeen' has not come up. I would give my hand if to-night at midnight that number does not win."

Then this young man of 23, who had never done a dishonorable act, conceived a horrible thought. By a quick glance he assured himself that he was alone in the deserted street, then bending his knees and reaching cautiously forward he stole the gold louis from out of the fallen sabot. Running back as fast as he could to the gambling-house he re-entered, bounded up the staircase, thrust open the door of the accursed place, entered just as the clock was sounding the first stroke of midnight, put the gold louis on the green cloth and exclaimed, "All on the seventeen!"

"Seventeen won. With a single stroke Lucien pushed the 36 louis on the red. The red won. He left the 72 louis on the same color. The red won again.

He made the double stakes twice, three times, always with the same success. He had now before him a pile of gold and bills. He had won back the paltry amount, his last resource, that he had lost in the beginning of the game. Now, risking two or three hundred louis at once, favored by fantastic fate, he was about to win back the partimony he had squandered in such a few years. He played desperately, like a drunken man, like a mad man, and he won. He cast his louis on the table recklessly with a certainty and disdain.

But in his heart was a burning pain; he was haunted by thoughts of the beggar child sleeping in the snow, of the child he had robbed.

"She was still in the same place. Of course she was. In a few moments, yes, as soon as 1 o'clock strikes, I swear it. I will go out from here, I will take her sleeping in my arms, I will carry her home. I will put her in my own warm bed. And I will adopt her and love her as my own daughter, and I will take care of her always, always."

But the clock struck 1, quarter past, three-quarters past—and Lucien was still sitting at the infernal table. Finally a minute before the proprietor arose brusquely and said in a loud voice. "The bank is closed, gentlemen Enough for to-day."

Lucien bounded to his feet. Roughly repulsing the gamblers who crowded about him and regarded him with envious admiration, he hurried away and ran toward the stone bench. From a distance he saw the child under the gaslight.

"Thank God!" he cried. "She is still there."

He went up to her and took her hand.

"Oh! how cold she is. Poor little thing!"

He took her in his arms and raised her up. The child's head fell backward and she did not awaken.

"How soundly one sleeps at her age."

He pressed her against his chest to warm her, and seized with a vague anxiety he was about to kiss her on her eyes to awaken her. Then he saw with terror that they were half open and that they were set and glassy. A horrible suspicion crossed his brain; he put his mouth close to the child's; no breath came out.

While Lucien was winning a fortune with the gold louis stolen from the child, she had died, died from cold.

Choking with anguish, Lucien tried to cry out, and in the effort he aroused from his nightmare and found himself lying on the settee in the club room, where he had dropped asleep shortly before midnight, and where the porter, the last to leave in the morning, had left him undisturbed, out of sympathy for his misfortune.

The December morn shone through the frosty panes. Lucien went out, pawned his watch, took a bath, ate his breakfast, then went to the recruiting office, where he enlisted as a private in the First regiment of African chasseurs.

To-day Lucien de Hem is a lieutenant; he has only his salary to live upon, but it is sufficient, as he is prudent and never touches a card. It seems that he even saves something. A few days ago a comrade who followed him a distance in the steep streets of La Kasbah saw him give alms to a little Spanish girl sleeping in a doorway, and had the indiscretion to see just how much he had given to poverty. He was much surprised at the poor lieutenant's generosity.

Lucien de Hem had placed a gold louis in the girl's hand.—Translated from the French of Francis Coppee.

DISCIPLINE OF THE WOOD PILE.

Every humane male man who possesses even a lingering taint of temper should keep an ax and a wood pile somewhere handy, that he may rush out and work off his wrath when it waxes fierce. There is nothing in this vain old world that will send a man back to his appointed work with a more wilted collar and a truer comprehension of himself than thirty minutes' wrestling with a full-flavored ax. He can use it so fiercely in the wood that all the fury of his nature, all the hate that he feels for his enemy, he can infuse into the ax handle, and how the chips will fly! Not very artistically, probably, but they will fly.

And presently it begins to dawn upon the man that he is feeling more calm. Evidently he is experiencing a change of heart. He does not hate his enemy at all. He changes his stroke and begins to chop on the system of Italian penmanship—the up strokes heavy and the down ones light. He rather loves his enemy now.

At last he puts all his failing strength in one terrific blow. He misses his tip with an ax and smites the chopping-block with the handle. A tingle, as though he had swallowed an alarm clock, goes from elbow to hip and back again, the ax drops from his powerless hands, and a weak, limp, nerveless, perspiring, trembling, gasping thing, he staggers to the house, lies down on the first thing that looks like a lounge, and is ready to die. There isn't a fear or a fault in his heart. Death has no terrors, and life has no temptations for him. He has chopped out all his baser nature, and he is just as ethereal and spiritual as he can be on this side of Jordan. It is a great medicine.—Burdette.

WELL-BRED CHILDREN.

An American woman, in her travels abroad last season, spent a fortnight at a hotel in Brussels, where the rooms open upon a gallery surrounding the inner court of the building. There were a number of English families boarding there at the same time, and their children played constantly on this gallery. Our countrywoman noticed several things about their playing which seemed to her distinctive. One was the way in which the nurses or governesses took part in their romps, entering spiritedly into every game, managing and directing just enough to keep things going pleasantly, while still heartily participating. An American care-taker of children thinks she has done her whole duty if she seats herself on a park bench by the side of another care-taker and gossips continuously, while their little charges pick up such amusement as they may. A second characteristic of the English children's play was its tempered hilarity: They laughed merrily and called, but they did not scream, and well—did not, in fact, once raise their voices to the screeching point, and though they ran occasionally back and forth in front of her windows, there was never a glance in or a noisy halt before them. "Children in hotels, as a rule," says this woman, have been my dread and dislike, but these children, who carried their breeding into their play, never annoyed me at all, and showed me once more that it is not the thing which is done, but the way it is done, that produces the effect."—Utica Herald.

"HYMN 99."

Three little tots were playing in a back yard on the west side the other day, when one of them happened to find the mortal remains of a deceased butterfly, which had succumbed to the recent cold snap. After a brief council over the discovery, one of the little ones ran away and returned with an empty match box. In the meantime the other two had scooped out a very respectable miniature grave in one corner of the yard.

These preliminaries being gone through with and the butterfly duly laid out in the match box, with one little fellow at the head, and other two, each carrying one side of the pasteboard coffin, followed, the funeral procession started around the yard. Every tiny face was drawn down long and sober, and slow and solemn was the march to the grave. When the pasteboard box was lowered into the earth by means of a thread the little group spoke in subdued whispers. When this was over all stood around the grave with bowed, uncovered heads, while the one who had led the procession stretched out his arms and moved his lips silently. Then raising his head he said:

"Let us sing hymn 99."

Then the mother who was watching from a window heard the three little voices solemnly chant, "Then Tell Her That You Saw Me."—*Chic

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 25, 1896.

ALL lovers of rigid application of justice will rejoice over the refusal of Gov. Morton of New York to extend clemency to John Y. McKane, a request to that effect having been made on Monday.

FUTURE would-be jokes about the excess of women over men in Massachusetts will fall flat, for a time at least, when it is known that the last census report gives 688,000 unmarried females and 699,000 unmarried males.

SHOULD the incoming national administration be in favor of the annexation of Hawaii, as some seem to think, it is likely to find that island of two minds, as a strong anti-annexation party is said to be forming there, with a platform which contemplates full support of the republic of Hawaii, but war upon annexation. One reason given is the fear of being overrun with the American tramp.

IT IS reported that the Sultan has granted amnesty to 2000 Armenians convicted of crimes against the government, or persons or property, and commuted the death sentence passed on 90 others. As the Sultan's "amnesty" has usually gone into effect just after the execution of the sentence, it remains to be seen how much his heart has really been touched in this particular instance.

DANIEL F. ROURKE, custodian of the federal building at Worcester, a well-known Democratic worker, has been discharged from his position for violation of the civil-service rules in soliciting campaign funds during the recent national election. Circulars were sent through the mails to the post office employes soliciting funds for campaign expenses, and directing their payment to Rourke.

IT WILL be well for us to bear in mind at this season that there are all about us others less fortunate than ourselves, and that a very little may be made to work wonders in the way of making others happy. And our own Christmas will be the more joyous for the knowledge that we have added to the pleasure of someone to whom otherwise the day would have possessed nothing out of the ordinary.

THE town of Enfield, Ct., has been having an unpleasant experience with an incendiary, extending over a period of nearly four months with few or no indications as to the identity of the firebug. On Monday afternoon Harlowe Abbe, 81 years old, whose son's house was the first in the series of fires, was arrested for the crime, which detectives are now trying to fasten on him. He has heretofore borne a good reputation, and the community is nearly a unit in believing him innocent.

THE extent to which the lack of faith in financial matters extended during the recent political campaign has just come to light in New York. The residents of the Italian quarter heard that the election of Bryan would result in their receiving only 50 cents in return for each of their hard-earned dollars deposited in the savings bank, and there was a rush to get their money out before election, some even exchanging the American money for Italian bills and gold. Then the naturalized members of the colony naturally voted for McKinley, and after he was safely elected the money went back into the banks again.

CHICAGO is in the midst of a more or less extensive financial panic, the result of several bank failures. The National Bank of Illinois, one of the oldest and best known banking institutions in the city, did not open its doors Monday morning, and other banks and concerns went down in the ruins. Tuesday the Bank of Minnesota at St. Paul closed up, and runs on the remaining banks of Chicago started in. They were taken care of, however, and no serious results followed. One or two other banks in other sections suspended Wednesday, but the situation is much quieter than it gave promise of being the first of the week.

HARDLY had McKinley been declared elected as president, before the quidnuncs began the gratuitous work of forming his cabinet for him. About every prominent politician in the country has been named by some paper or person for nearly every place available, but the Ohioan seems to have preserved his record for Sphinxity, and but little authentic information has been gleaned. It seems to be pretty generally conceded, however, that Senator Allison of Iowa will be secretary of state, Representative Dingley of Maine secretary of the treasury, Cornelius N. Bliss of New York secretary of the navy, and Henry C. Paine of Wisconsin postmaster general.

IF THE decision of Justice Russell of the New York supreme court holds, the martial status of a number of New York people will be such as to cause them no little concern. A woman who was married in New York went to North Dakota and secured a divorce after the 90-days residence required, marrying again there. On her return to New York her husband sued for a divorce on statutory grounds, and in granting it Judge Russell announced that the policy established by the state of New York cannot be set aside by any other state, and that a person who obtains a divorce in Dakota after a residence of 90 days simply to obtain the right to such divorce there, is still legally married as far as the law of New York is concerned, and cannot remarry in New York or live remarried in New York without committing adultery.

THE United States Senate committee on foreign relations gave the country a surprise party last Friday, when it voted almost unanimously to report, on Saturday morning, the Cameron resolution acknowledging the independence of Cuba. Secretary Olney had been in conference with the committee endeavoring to prevent hasty action, but his arguments were without avail. On Saturday he gave the committee a surprise party by announcing that Congress had no jurisdiction in the matter; it could give advice, but that only the president had the right to recognize the independence of foreign countries, and that the passage of a resolution over his veto by a two-thirds vote would have no effect on his action. There is of course a difference of opinion regarding the ground taken by Secretary Olney. Senator Vest has introduced a resolution which declares the power in such cases to be vested with the president and Congress. This will be debated, of course, and will take time, the resolution of the committee on foreign affairs meantime being allowed a breathing spell, which will be well. While the Cubans have maintained a plucky fight, they have hardly arrived at a point where they can be said to have gained freedom for the island, and unless a war with Spain is desired, the United States should not just yet go to the length suggested. The Spanish people are feeling extremely bitter toward this country, and if the recognition of Cuban independence were to be declared now, the Spanish government would almost certainly be compelled to declare war with the United States, so strong is the popular feeling.

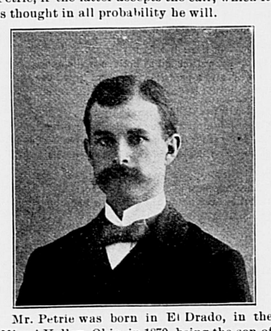
The town of Uxbridge was visited by a most disastrous fire Sunday morning, which destroyed four large business blocks. Assistance from Worcester was all that saved any of the business portion. The loss is $100,000, with insurance of only $60,000.

PALMER NEWS.

UNIVERSALISTS CALL A PASTOR.

A Unanimous Call Extended to Rev. O. G. Petrie of Canton.

The parishioners of St. Paul's Universalist church held a meeting last Tuesday evening to call a pastor to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Rev. H. F. Moulton, and it was unanimously voted to extend a call to Rev. Omer G. Petrie of Canton. Rev. Mr. Petrie has preached two sermons as a candidate, which impressed the church people that he was the right man for the position. He is also well known by some of the parishioners, and has also been highly recommended by several Universalist pastors. A committee consisting of O. M. Graves, Mrs. Charles Keith and Mrs. John Helliwell was appointed to arrange for the installation of Rev. Mr. Petrie, it the latter accepts the call, which it is thought in all probability he will.



Mr. Petrie was born in El Drado, in the Miami Valley, Ohio, in 1870, being the son of a farmer. After graduating from the high school in his native town, he taught school for two years. He became a member of the Universalist church in his native town at the age of 16, under the ministry of Rev. J. H. Blackford, father of Rev. Harry Blackford, now pastor of the Universalist church in Monson. Mr. Petrie was a student in Tufts Divinity School 1890-'94, graduating with honors. He was chosen chapel orator by the class of '94, his oration being on "The Man Himself," a plea for the free and perfect development of the individual by education, secular and religious, asserting him to be the true spring of culture and progress. Mr. Petrie preached in Abington, Mass., during the summer of 1891, and in East Eddington, Maine, during the summers of 1892-'93. He was called to Canton in December, 1893, while a student at Tufts, and has been reasonably successful in his pastorate there. He has been a regular contributor to Onward, the official journal of the Y. P. C. U., since 1892, and was associated with Rev. G. W. Grose as its editor in 1894. He was vice president of the Y. P. C. U. of Massachusetts during 1895-'96, successfully assisting President Bissell in the conduct of rallies throughout the state, and in September of this year was elected president of the organization at its annual convention in Haverhill.

Opera House Mortgage to be Foreclosed.

The announcement of the foreclosure of the mortgage held on the Odd Fellows' opera house property by the Palmer Savings Bank, which appears in another column, will be much of a surprise to many, who will wonder why such action, if it was to come at all, should take place so soon after the construction of the building. The matter will be regretted by all citizens interested in the welfare of the order and the maintenance of the opera house, and all will hope that the affair will be adjusted soon, as possibly it may be.

The building cost the Odd Fellows about $19,000, with the contents, and on this the savings bank made a loan of $12,500, with personal security in addition to the mortgage on the property. It considers the loan perfectly good, but there have been internal dissensions in the order for some time, and the interest payments have fallen about twelve months in arrears, besides which the taxes for 1896 have not been paid yet. It is understood that these matters have been blocked by the antagonism of the minority, and in order to protect itself and best serve the interests of the order, the bank has taken this action after consultation with a portion of the trustees and officers of the lodge. The annual meeting of the lodge will be held January 6th, and it is not unlikely that a new list of officers will be elected and the matter satisfactorily adjusted before the time advertised for the sale, January 18th.

Next Sunday at the Churches.

UNIVERSALIST.

Prof. W. S. Woodbridge of Tufts College will preach in the Universalist church next Sunday morning. The choir will render the following Christmas music:

Organ Voluntary.
Anthem. "Blessed is He That Cometh." Danks
Duet for soprano and alto
Anthem. "Behold, I Bring You Glad Tidings." Danks
Solo for soprano.
Christmas Carol. "Hark! What Mean Those Holy Voices?" Barrett
Solos for alto and soprano.
Anthem. "The Angel's Message." Herbert
Solo for tenor.
Organ Postlude.

In the evening the Sunday school will give a concert entitled "Love's Token," at 5 p. m.

CONGREGATIONAL.

There will be a special Christmas service Sunday morning, when the pastor will preach on "What will you do with Christ?" The choir will render the following programme, assisted by outside singers:

"Jerusalem." Macy
"These were shepherds." Buck
"Hosanna to the Son of David." Halton
"We Have Seen His Star in the East." Caleb Simper

In the evening there will be a Sunday school concert, entitled "The Messiah."

Christmas Celebrations of the Sunday Schools.

The joyous Christmas time is with us once again. All the Sunday schools of the Protestant churches held exercises of some kind last evening in celebration of this happy day. At the Congregational church a supper was served at 5 30 to the members of the school and the home department, which in a great measure added to the real joy of the younger members. At 7 p. m. a cantata, entitled, "Santa in a Plight," was well rendered by the following cast of characters:

Santa Claus,	John Milligan
Capt. of the Brownies,	Louis Pope
Fairy Queen,	Marion Loomis
Old Mother Goose,	Theresa Newman

At the Universalist church a children's party was given from 3 until 8 p. m., and a supper was served to the children at 6 o'clock.

A Christmas tree was held at the Baptist church at 7 30, and the children were made happy by the generosity of Santa. An enjoyable Christmas concert was given by the Sunday school last Sunday evening.

Conductor Tryon's Leg Broken.

Freight Conductor C. P. Tryon of the Ware River road was seriously injured by a fall at Ware Tuesday. While switching in the freight yard he was thrown from a flat car and fell, breaking his left leg just above the ankle. Both bones protruded through the flesh, and the wound bled freely. He was removed to the house of Daniel Moran, where he was attended by Dr. Miner. He was brought to Palmer on the noon train and taken to his home on Pearl street. Dr. Hendee was called and the bone set. It is a bad break, being a compound fracture, and Mr. Tryon will be confined to the house some time by this unfortunate accident.

R. A. McQuaid of Chatham, N. Y., was in town this week.

Miss Plumley of Pittsfield is the guest of Mrs. Jesse Rogers.

Mrs. D. F. Holden of Hardwick, Vt., is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. H. P. Marcy has returned from a visit with friends in Stafford, Ct.

Misses Mamie Roche and May Wilder spent Sunday with friends in Warren.

Mrs J. W. Bray and children of Florence are guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Bray.

L. H. Gager and family are spending the Christmas holidays in Providence, R. I.

O'Hooligan's Wedding was played to a small audience at the opera house last evening.

The Ladies' Tuesday Social Club will meet next Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. E P. Ball.

Miss Ida Smith returned from Worcester yesterday, where she has been studying painting.

Manager Fitch has booked Ullie Akerstrom for the evenings of November 8th, 9th and 10th, 1897.

The young people have been enjoying good skating for a few days, until the snow of Wednesday.

Miss Mabel Burke of Norwich, Ct., is spending the holidays with her cousin, Mrs. C. D. Holbrook.

The warden at the town farm has recently killed 10 hogs raised on the farm, which dressed 4004 pounds.

The annual rental of pews in the Congregational church will be held next Monday evening at 7 o'clock.

The weather of yesterday morning was the coldest of the season thus far, the mercury dropping to zero.

C. A. Atwood, clerk at the New London Northern freight house, is unable to attend to his duties because of illness.

Mrs. A. W. Thayer of East Blackstone, recently of Palmer, is spending the Christmas holidays with Mrs. L. E. Chandler.

Several repairs have recently been made at Grosvenor's shoddy mill. The water wheel has been reset, and a new gate rigging put in.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church society will be held next Thursday evening, in place of the regular prayer meeting.

Daniel Collity, the mail-carrier, is confined to his house with throat trouble. Eugene Marcy is filling his position during his illness.

Mrs. L. E. Chandler entertained the members of the Ladies' Tuesday Club Tuesday afternoon in honor of her guest, Mrs. A. W. Thayer.

C. L. Holden of Bondsville is to build a new store, 45 by 75 feet, and in another column asks for bids for putting in the foundation.

The annual meeting of the incorporators of the Palmer Savings Bank will be held in the banking rooms on Monday, January 11, 1897, at 2 p. m.

The livery stable of Oscar Marcy on Walnut street is being treated to a new coat of paint externally. J. A. Breckenridge is doing the work.

The annual meeting of the Baptist church will be held on next Monday evening, January 4th. The officers for the coming year will be elected by Australian ballot.

Depositors in the Palmer Savings Bank are reminded that money must be deposited on or before next Friday in order to commence drawing interest before April.

All the trains from the south on the Central Vermont railroad were delayed about one hour Wednesday on account of the heavy fall of snow in Connecticut.

Another snow storm Wednesday added about six inches to the slight fall of a few days before, and made excellent sleighing, the ground being in the finest of condition.

A public installation of the newly-elected officers of Thomas Lodge of Masons will be held Monday evening at 7 30. Past Master Judge George Robinson will be the installing officer.

The following have been drawn as jurors for the December sitting of the superior court: Criminal term, J. K. Knox and Patrick Crowley; civil term, Nelson Whiton and Charles McManamy.

A large album, holding four cabinet pictures on a page and intended to contain portraits of every member of the order, is being prepared for Thomas lodge of Masons, to be placed in its lodge rooms.

The woodwork about the fireplace in the tenement of J. M. Converse on Thorndike street, occupied A. B. Cowan, caught fire Monday morning, but was extinguished before any serious damage resulted.

A special train will be run to Willimantic next Friday evening to the performance of Rice's greatest of all comic operas, "Little Christopher," with 70 people in the cast, its own orchestra and scenery. Reserved seats will be $1.

The funeral of Robert L Wilcox, who died last Friday morning, was held at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Wilcox, at Tenneyville, Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Rev. C. R. Minard of the Baptist church officiated. The burial took place in Monson.

Hampden Chapter of Royal Arch Masons held its annual meeting Monday evening and elected the following officers: H. P., C. T. Brainerd; K, Dr. G. H. Wilkins; S., Frank Bills; secretary, C. F. Grosvenor; treasurer. F. A. Royce. The remaining officers will be appointed by the H. P. at a subsequent meeting.

The grand jury made the following report on cases from the local court, at Springfield, Wednesday afternoon: No bills found, Michael Wewenski of Palmer, attempt to obstruct railroad train; cases continued, A. B. Richardson of Palmer, attempt to obtain money under false pretense; John Coles and Thomas Moran, both of Palmer, perjury.

Home for the Christmas vacation: Miss Bessie Royce from Tilton Seminary; Miss Bertha Royce from Dean Academy; Miss Ola Northrop from Mt. Holyoke; Miss Clara Smith from Wesleyan; Miss Bertha Hastings from Smith College; Miss Lula Dillon from Bridgewater Normal School; Harry Sisk from Tufts Medical School; Miss Addie Rogers from Albany.

Two dogs, evidently with a grudge against each other, proceeded to settle their difference on Main street Wednesday morning. One seized the other by the throat and shook him up in a lively manner, while another large canine stood by and looked on, seemingly acting as referee. The fight was sharp and exciting while it lasted, but spectators interfered during the first round before the referee had time to declare the winner.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church elected the following officers at its meeting last Sunday evening: President, F. B. Pope; vice president, Miss Mabel Sedgwick; recording secretary, Miss Effie Shaw; treasurer, Albert Shaw; chairman of lookout committee, Miss Julia Allen; chairman of prayer meeting committee, Mrs. W. H. Higgins. It was voted to hold the prayer meetings at 6 p. m. instead of 6.15 p. m., as formerly.

Edwin Chapin, baggage-master on Conductor Camp's train, has resigned his position after a continuous service of 43 years in the employ of the Boston and Albany railroad. Mr. Chapin was for 25 years a brakeman on the road, and when Conductor Camp's train was put on he was given the position of baggage-master, which he has held ever since. He is now 71 years of age, and thinks he is entitled to a well-earned rest. Mr. Chapin owns a small farm in Ludlow, where he will probably spend the remainder of his days.

A hotel beat came to grief Monday morning. Michael Martin Healey of Boston arrived in town Sunday evening, and after looking up the different hotels decided to put up at Hotel D'Allen. He was accommodated and given the best the hotel afforded. In the morning he tried to skip his board bill, but Lanlord Allen was not to be bluffed, and in default of the stone-cracking called upon the court to settle the matter. The Judge thought it a serious offence, and gave him the privilege of spending the next six months in the house of correction at Springfield.

Thomas Lodge of Masons has engaged Rev. Geo. C. Lorimer, D. D., of Boston, who gave the address at the centennial celebration last week, to lecture on the evening of January 11, in the opera house. His subject will be, "Changes and chances, or tides in the affairs of men." Seats will be 50 and 35 cents, and will go on sale at Allen's drug store next Monday morning; out-of-town persons who wish tickets can be accommodated by sending their orders by mail, which will be filled in the order of their receipt. A special train will be run from Monson before, and return to that town after the lecture. There is little doubt but that the speaker will be greeted by a large audience.

Boston would not be Boston if her residents did not, one and all, assert a slightly better acquaintance with the King's English than the vast herd of common mortals who have not had the benefit of the Hub's culture, and who fail to absorb it by contact. A young woman,—who, by the way, spends much of her time in the best society in New York, and had just returned from a summer at Saratoga,—happened to be in Boston not long ago and dropped into one of the swell cafes for lunch. "You may bring me some stewed oysters," she said to the young woman who came to take her order. The waiter regarded her with a pitying glance for a moment, and then said, in a tone which implied much, "You mean an oyster stew."

He was a hobo, not more than 20, but withal a genuine and unadulterated knight of the turf, but he had his preferences and knew what he did and did not want. He walked past the JOURNAL office a few days ago, before the snow came, and was evidently hunting for "snipes." For the benefit of the uninitiated, a "snipe is a partly-smoked cigar which has been discarded by the smoker. With head bent over his eyes closely scanned the gutter as he went along, and he found several, of varying sizes, color, and stages of antiquity, among them one which had been only slightly acquainted with the original owner and still retained the greater part of its original entirety. None seemed to suit him, however, for one after the other were discarded after a casual examination, and he was fast passing beyond the limits of the possible profitable hunting-ground, when of a sudden he stopped, glanced again at something which he had nearly passed, and retraced his steps to a "find" only about an inch in length, but it was evidently just suited to his wants, for with a satisfied look and head upright he continued his way with quickened pace, the "snipe" securely in his pocket.

Church Anniversaries.

Editor of The Journal:—A brief item in a recent number of the JOURNAL led me to look up my private record, touching the organization of the Second Congregational church in Palmer. I copy it as made for my own use at the time:

April 1st, 1847. The Second Congregational church in Palmer was organized—consisting of 54 members—all from the First church.

April 25. The First and Second churches united together for the last time at their old house of worship, in celebrating the Lord's supper.

April 30. The 2d society was organized.

May 2d. Public worship commenced at Thorndike and at the Depot, by the First and Second churches respectively. The division so long anticipated is now fully accomplished. The old temple is deserted and new ones are soon to be erected. May the spiritual temple be re-built and greatly replenished. Much is it needed. Fervently should it be desired and sought.

Peaceably and harmoniously was the division brought about. And it is hardly to be wondered at that the seceding portion has outgrown the mother church, in view of the task left behind for the bereaved mother to perform—plucking up the old and riven tree and transplanting it in a new place, among many of other church affiliations. More than half of the original strength of the church went with the fifty-four to a more promising field than was left for the residue. The Blanchards, Kings, Brainerds, Knoxs, Converses, Deweys and others;—it was a little hard for the young pastor, who knew and loved them all, to bid them God-speed in their departure, and take up the work of removal and rejuvenation of the old tree in a new soil and a more limited field of operation. However, there was no other way, and the work was, in due time, accomplished.

It would give me much pleasure, not unmingled with sadness, to be present on the coming anniversary and recount some of the scenes through which we passed a half century ago. Yet there would be very few of the fifty-four there to enjoy the occasion with us. We might, indeed, imagine them present, in the lofty spirit of Tenneyson's "In Memoriam:"—

Nor count me all to blame if I
Conjecture of another guest,
Perchance, perchance among the rest,
And though in silence, wishing joy.

I shall be present in thought and spirit on the first of April next, if life and health are spared till then. Yours Truly,

M. K. CROSS.

Waterloo, Iowa, December, 1896.

THREE RIVERS.

Edith Avery is quite sick with the measles.

Mrs. Nutting is spending Christmas with her sister, Mrs. S. B. Barnes.

Miss Fanny Barnes, who is teaching school in Chester, is expected home to spend Christmas.

N. E. Squier has accepted a position as bookkeeper in the Palmer Mill weaving room in place of James Cole.

Mrs. F. R. Burlingame of Springfield, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. N. K. Story, returned home last Saturday.

S. P. Gokey has resigned his position in the mill, and has accepted a position as overseer of weaving in a mill at White Rock, R. I. His family will move in a few days. Mr. Gokey has worked here 24 years and has made many friends. The family will be missed in the place very much.

THORNDIKE.

Isaac Gerald, Jr., of Providence, R. I., is visiting in town.

James McFarlane, Jr., of Westboro, is home for Christmas.

A Polish dance will be held this evening in the Exchange building.

Miss Nellie Leary of Springfield is visiting her parents here for a few days.

Mrs. William Carroll is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCarthy.

The benefit dance for Patrick Riley, Jr., will take place in about three weeks.

P. H. Fleming has been employed in Clark & Hastings's market during the past week.

Josiah Gates, who has been ill with the grippe, is recovering, and will soon be out again.

Daniel, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Sullivan of Church street, is ill with diphtheria.

Fred O. Carter, who is employed in the market of Clark & Hastings, is confined to his home by illness.

Louis Farvo and Henry Chenevert have recently purchased two handsome new parlor organs for their homes.

A large number from this village attended the party given on Saturday evening at William Smith's at Palmer Center.

Frankie Longtine, who has been confined to his home on Church street for a few weeks with a sore leg, is somewhat improving.

The cold weather during the past week has made good skating on the river, and many of the young people have been enjoying it.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Hartnett of Wallingford, Ct., and Miss Maggie Hartnett of Springfield are spending Christmas here as the guests of Mrs. William Hartnett.

A feature of the Morse & McIntire local minstrel show will be the first part, in which will be heard the singing of their Hindoo Quartette, imported for the occasion.

Arrangements are now complete for the dance to be given at Union Hall New Year's night by the Columbian band. The committee have spared neither time nor money to make it a success, and all who attend are assured a pleasant time.

BONDSVILLE.

Miss Alice Bond visited her uncle, T. D. Potter, at Springfield, this week.

George Hillman of Northampton visited friends here last Saturday and Sunday.

The Valentines are giving entertainments and selling medicines in Liberty Hall this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John McKelligott of High street are rejoicing over the advent of a son, born last Friday.

The boards of stewards and trustees of the Methodist church held a meeting in the vestry Tuesday night.

Mrs. Robert Van Tassell and daughter are spending the Christmas holidays with Mrs. Van Tassell's sister at Boston.

O. A. Parent has purchased a graphaphone, which he has placed in his store and will entertain his callers with some of the latest songs and musical selections of the day.

Leon E. Ryther, Henry Sharratt and Freeman Smith are home from the Maine State College for quite a long vacation. They will not return until about February first.

"Ed" Mann, the brakeman on the local freight whose hand was injured while coupling cars in the yard here some time ago, resumed his place as rear brakeman this week.

C. L. Holden has leased a piece of land of the Boston Duck Company on Main street and will build a new store 45 by 75 feet on same, moving his stock from the store he now occupies to the new store.

The Sunday school of the Methodist church held a Christmas tree and entertainment in the vestry last night. Three trees were provided, and an excellent entertainment was given by the children.

Lizzie, the two-years-old daughter of August Martin, has been very sick with diphtheretic sore throat, and it was feared she might have diphtheria, but fortunately the danger was averted, and she is improving as fast as could be expected.

The effort to have the Boston and Albany railroad run a special train from Springfield to-morrow night after the performance of "Shore Acres" has been given up, as the railroad would not run the train without a large guarantee.

The contribution boxes which have so long done good service in the Methodist church have been discarded and a set of the latest style collection plates have taken their place. The new plates were used in the service Sunday for the first time.

Miss Elizabeth Clifford and Miss Etta Warner of Westfield Normal, Maurice Landers of Amherst Agricultural, Miss Ora Parent of Smith College and Miss Margaret Landers of Northampton are home for the Christmas holidays.

A pair of horses belonging to Thomas J. Moriarty, who resides near Beaver Lake, created a little excitement last Friday by running away. They started from T. D. Potter & Co's. lumber yard and ran up Main street, but were stopped before reaching Clark & Hastings's market. No damage was done.

The steady cold weather of last week and the first part of this week made splendid skating on the reservoir and Lily pond, which was greatly enjoyed by the young people. The snow storm of Wednesday spoiled a great deal of the sport, but a little sweeping and scraping will provide skating for Christmas.

It is said that parties have been looking at the lot owned by Mrs. Whitney, opposite the hotel, with the intention of buying and building on it. For several years the baseball club has had the use of the grounds, and the loss of the lot would be severely felt by the club and those who are interested in the game.

At a meeting of the Sunday school board of the M. E. church on Sunday, the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: Superintendent, E. E. Ryther; assistant, Richard Russell; secretary, Garvin Bruce; treasurer, Alice Merrifield; pianist, Alice Armstrong; assistant, Lulu Moulton; librarian, Thomas Russell.

Several Bondsville people will spend their Christmas out of town, among whom are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Russell, who will visit Prof. and Mrs. J. B. Paige at Amherst, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Johnson will visit Mrs. Johnson's parents at Chelsea, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hall, George H. Jacobs and Mr. Evans will visit friends in Lowell.

The schools of the village closed last Friday for the Christmas vacation. Interesting exercises were held in the different schools, such as singing, recitations and drills. Christmas trees were held in some of the schools, and the scholars made happy by various gifts. The teachers are all spending the vacation at their different homes.

One of the Boston Duck Company's watchmen tells a very exciting story of an adventure he had in the mill one night last week. He says that as he was going his rounds in the basement of the new mill he saw three men standing in one corner of the room near an open window. He started toward them and they tried to escape through the window. Two of them got outside all right, but he caught the third one and held on to him. The other two, seeing their comrade caught, returned to the room and seized the watchman, tearing his clothes and handling him very severely; they also threatened to throw him into the canal near by, but finally released him and made their escape. The watchman was so badly frightened that he has not returned to his work since that night, and it is reported he was confined to his bed several days.

Death of Mrs. E. B. Gates.

Sophia W. Gates, 76, wife of Ephraim B Gates, a prosperous and well-known farmer who lives east of the village about a mile and a half, died at her home Monday night, the result of a shock she experienced Saturday. Mrs. Gates was born in the town of Palmer, being the daughter of the late Noah Stimpson, and had lived in the town her entire life. The funeral was held at the home of the deceased yesterday, the remains being interred in the Four Corners cemetery. Mr Gates feels the loss of his wife very keenly, as he is quite old and in feeble health.

Death of an Old Irish Resident.

Maurice Cavanaugh, an old Irish resident, died very suddenly at his home back of the mill Monday morning. Although about 80 years old, Mr. Cavanaugh had not been sick any, though growing weak as the result of old age. Monday morning he was around as usual, and even walked down to the lower village to have a saw filed. After returning home he was at work sawing wood when he was taken suddenly with a shock, and died almost instantly. He leaves a wife and several sons and daughters. One of his sons, Thomas, is an engineer on the Massachusetts Central railroad, and was with his engine stationed upon the large bridge just above his father's house. He saw his father sawing wood and saw him fall down when he was taken ill, and as quick as possible sidetracked his train and ran to his home, but his father was dead when he arrived. He was obliged to continue with his train to Oakdale and return, but was relieved upon his arrival here. The funeral was held Wednesday morning in St. Bartholomew's church, Rev. B. McKeany conducted the services.

Some Men Have No Pride,

And they will wear their old overcoat until it is threadbare, when for a minimum of Money they might get a maximum of value in one of our many styles of warm winter garments.

Our Ulsters are something to be proud of—so much value for so little money. You'll be surprised to see how good a coat we can give you. The prices run at $7, $10, $12, $15, higher if you want to, but there's no use in it—our $20 Ulster is good enough for a prince to wear.

Overcoats run from $5 to $22; the $10, $12, $15 kinds are the ones we sell most of, and when you consider what we are giving for the money its a wonder that any other dealer is selling any—don't see who can be buying them, judging from the number we get rid of. If you'll look at them you'll be among our list of patrons, we feel sure. There are no such overcoats offered anywhere else in this region.

BUILDING RECORD FOR 1896.

What Has Been Done in This Line During the Past Year.

Although not so many buildings have been erected this year as last, the carpenters have by no means been idle. While no public buildings grace the record, the improvements upon the Methodist church change every part of the structure. Cathedral windows, two of them being memorial, have taken the place of the plain glass. The auditorium, vestibule, hall and north vestry have handsomely decorated metal ceilings. The side walls of the entire building, except the kitchen, have been retinted, and electricity lights the whole. The auditorium will, when completed, have new pews, carpets, pulpit altar and choir gallery; a toilet room has been added. The estimated cost of the repairs is $2500. The public library has also undergone interior improvements, including new reading tables, at a cost of $325. The work was done by Contractor J. N. Graves. No. 8 schoolhouse has been made comfortable by the addition of double windows, sheathing of two rooms, weather strips and two furnaces, and single desks have taken the place of the double ones in two rooms. Slight repairs have been made at Memorial Hall and at the town farm. At the business places, Heimann & Lichten and the W. N. Flynt Granite Co. have done the most in the way of construction and repairs. The former firm has, at a cost of $7500, built a brick boiler house, huge chimney, put in two new boilers and changed the arrangements of some of the rooms of the main building. The brick work was done by Joseph Jones of Palmer, and the carpentering by J. N. Graves. The Flynt company put in an electric stone crusher at the trap rock quarry in the early summer. Later the small steam crusher was removed to a point near and connected with the power. The building of the sheds and elevator was done by F. F. Maguire at a cost of $400. Mr. Maguire also built a horse shed for the company at the quarry for $700, and did other repairing amounting to $200. R. M. & T. Reynolds have recently put in a new boiler at the dye house, enlarging the building to accommodate it. Squier & Co. have caused their spur track to be lengthened about 125 feet. A new Robinson grinding mill has been put in and their storage capacity has been increased by the laying of a floor in the basement of the grain mill. The entire cost has been between $700 and $800. These buildings were begun last year but were not completed until this year: The Century Hotel, renovated, newly fitted for electricity, refurnished and altered somewhat; George H. Norcross's house on North Main street; Alfred N. Gaouette's studio and dwelling; George C. Flynt's home on High street, large reception hall added, also a fine porch. These dwellings have been erected or extensively altered: Annas A. Babbitt, 8-room house, conveniently arranged and pleasantly located on Gates street, J. N. Graves, builder. Mrs. Charles H. Allen has a double house on King avenue, also a barn, built by Mr. Graves. The Misses Lizzie and Ella Williams enlarged their Main street house to accommodate their millinery business, and added electricity; also altered the barn on the premises into a dwelling, Mr. Graves doing the work. William H. Gifford has improved his Flynt avenue house by the addition of a triplet dormer window, window seats and library, J. N. Graves, contractor. J. Fosket is now building an eight-room house, corner of Belmont avenue and North Main street. George Aldrich and Mr. Fosket have built seven-room cottages on Belmont avenue this summer. Mrs. Katherine Murphy has a seven-room house on Pearl street, James Pendergast has added two rooms and a bay window to his Pearl street house. Charles McKernan has a nine-room, two-tenement house near Pearl street, cost $1350. Henry Lynch has built an eight-room house at South Monson at a cost of $2000. John Keefe has added a $250 piazza to his South Monson house. R. M. & T. Reynolds have made quite extensive repairs on their double house, corner of South Main street and Hampden avenue. James B. Tupper has a new house on Wales street. It has nine rooms and cost $1500. Dr. G. E. Fuller built a large piazza on his Green street house. Mrs M. J. Bradway is raising the L of her house, making two rooms and putting on a piazza, $400. A. H. Danforth has fitted up an office in his yard at a cost of $400. E. J. Hynes has made interior repairs upon his Washington street house, costing $300. John Grady has improved his house by the addition of two rooms and a piazza at a cost of $500. F. F. Maguire has erected two houses for himself, one at a cost of $300 and the other $1000. He has also built a house for William Underwood on Park avenue, costing $1500; is building one for Edward Cantwell on State street, for $1500. Edward Dalton has remodeled a barn into a dwelling, corner of Margaret and High streets, six rooms. The work was done by Edward Graves of Palmer and Fred Webber. J. N. Graves built a playhouse for Charles Merrick's children, a hen house for A. D. Ellis, and did minor repairing at the town farm, for S. F. Cushman & Sons, D. W. Ellis & Sons, Miss Esther R. Holmes, H. N. Butler and others, and estimates his year's work to be $7875. Mr. Maguire has done repairing for L. G. Cushman, Mrs W. N. Flynt, Flynt's store, Edward Dalton, Palmer fair grounds, M. F. Moore's house, Brown Wagon Co of Palmer, J. H. Martin, William Granfield, James Hale, Mrs. Maney, amounting to $300. He has also built a woodshed for E. J. Foskit. Mark Noble has erected a block on Main street containing two stores and two large tenements. The stores are occupied by E. H. Brown & Son, grocers, and Miss K. M. Coyle, milliner. F. F. Maguire has built a farm for William Sullivan, at a cost of $600.

The stone work in town has been done partly by the Monson Granite Company and partly by the W. N. Flynt Granite Company, in the way of cellars, cemetery curbings, etc. The Monson company has set a number of monuments, and has shipped cut granite for the high school building at New Britain, Ct., also for a building at Middletown, Ct. The winter's contracts now on hand are six monuments, cemetery curbings, and 120 granite posts.

House Burned, Woman Hurt.

Fire destroyed the dwelling house of Mrs. Eliza Maxwell on the road to Palmer on Tuesday evening of last week. The fire is supposed to have caught from a defective flue in the ell part of the house, the roof of which fell in before the inmates were aroused. During the excitement Mrs. Maxwell, who is 85 years of age, fell, breaking her shoulder and badly bruising her body. She was removed to the house of Henry M. Green and attended by Dr. Dana of North Wilbraham and Hannum of Ludlow. The house and its contents were insured.

A Christmas tree, with entertainment by the Sunday school, was held in the Methodist church last evening. Christmas exercises were also held in the chapel at Dwight's, and in the Congregational church.

The following is the report of the creamery for the month of November: 118 000 spaces of cream; 18,314 pounds of butter; receipts for butter, $4101 22; paid patrons per space, .029; 6 44 spaces make one pound of butter.

John H. Bardwell, who for some time has been suffering from a stomach trouble, caused he thinks by swallowing a living reptile, went to Boston Monday in company with Dr. C. B. King, and will undergo a surgical operation.

The contest for the much-sought office of postmaster is still going on, and the number of aspirants is steadily increasing. J. R. Gould, one of the leading candidates, announces that if the position is given to him he will erect a new building next to his block for the post office. G. H. B. Greene is the latest to enter the contest.

A silver medal speaking contest was held in the Congregational church, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor society, last Friday evening. Four towns were represented, Enfield, Granby, Greenwich and Belchertown. Miss Nettie Shaw of Belchertown was the winner. She spoke the selection, "College Oil Cans." Frank Bray of Granby received special mention. The judges were Miss Bessie Hooker of Granby, Rev. G. J. Newton of Belchertown and Frank Hall of Greenwich.

BRIMFIELD.

E. S. Nichols, who was born in Brimfield in 1818, but moved to Xenia, O., when a lad, died at that place on the evening of the 13th.

A good-sized and attentive audience, composed of pupils of the Hithchcock Free High School and townspeople listened to "The Story That Charmed our Ancestors," as given by Professor Charles E. Fay of Tufts College, last Friday evening. The speaker gave a vivid and comprehensive presentation of the story of the Nib-lungenlied, illustrated by original translations of passages from the poem. The interest and impressiveness of the story were increased by lantern-slide reproduction of the artist Schnorr's remarkable paintings in New Palace at Munich, which illustrate scenes in the poem. Professor Fay's presentation of the Nibelungenlied is probably the only representation of its kind of a national epic. The pupils of the school and their friends are indebted to the senior class for securing Professor Fay. The last part of the evening was occupied by a musical programme, consisting of a piano solo and banjo solo by Mr. Hall, and songs by Miss Hathaway and by Mrs. Kyle.

Death of a Former Resident.

The burial of Mrs. William M. Ducker of New York, whose death occured suddenly from heart failure the 16th inst., took place at Brimfield Sunday afternoon. Private funeral services were held at Mrs. Ducker's old home, the Wyles homestead, now the home of her sister, Mrs. John Converse. Rev. W. K. Peirce and Rev. James Tufts of Monson officiated. There was a profusion of unusually choice flowers.

Delia Pickett Wyles was born in Brimfield, January 31, 1856. She was the second daughter of the late William H. Wyles, and granddaughter of Hon. John Wyles, a leading citizen of Brimfield, and a man of influence throughout this section. She was married June 17, 1880, to William M. Ducker. Mrs. Ducker had been in Brimfield only for short intervals since her marriage; but as Gypsy Wyles, the name by which she was always known in her girlhood, she is affectionately remembered by the people of her native town. She possessed a vivacious disposition, and was unusually warm-hearted and sensitive to the sufferings of others. Her acts of kindness and her devoted attention to the sick and aged are especially recalled. Besides Mrs. Converse, there are two sisters living, Mrs. Frederick McNally of Chicago and Mrs. Walter Lowe of Cleveland, O.

WARREN.

Remember the New Year's Ball of the Columbian Band at Thorndike, Friday evening, Jan. 1. Good music, good prompting, a good time for all.

Mrs. Shepard Blair entertained a family gathering on Christmas day.

Mrs. Emma Guilbert and Miss Louise are spending the Christmas vacation in Holyoke.

Mr. and Mrs. Powers spent Christmas in Springfield, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barnes.

Miss Alice Manley and Augustus Kelly were in town last Sabbath, the guests of Miss Nina Gould.

Miss Etta Sylvester and Miss Emma Blodgett are home from Springfield for a week's vacation.

The World's Fair troupe of glass blowers will occupy the town hall next week. The troupe comes under the auspices of Court Warren, F. of A.

The funeral service of Wilbur Wilder was held at his late home Monday afternoon. A floral offering was presented by the Congregational church and Sunday school in recognition of Mr. Wilder's long and faithful service as organ blower.

Christmas parties of the various Sunday schools were as follows: Yesterday afternoon the primary department of the Congregational Sunday school was entertained. In the evening the intermediate department held its festivities, each child bringing a gift to be sent to Boston, as well as receiving of Santa Claus's bounty. To-night the Universalist Sunday school has a supper and tree in Brigham's Hall, and the Methodists have their celebration at their church.

Knowles Council, Royal Arcanum, elected the following officers at its annual meeting Tuesday evening: Regent, Frank S. Lyman; vice regent, Fred L. Albee; orator, James Riddle; secretary, W. Cary Gage; treasurer, George F. Tarbell; chaplain, Edward L. Foskit; collector, James N. F. Quinlan; guide, John Skipper; warden, Orin Bosquet; sentry, Walter H. Whipple; past regent, Edward D. Hathaway. The officers will be installed Monday evening, January 4, by District Deputy George L. Parker of Florence. This council will be visited by the grand officers January 18.

We live in a country of which the principal scourge is stomach-trouble.

It is more wide-spread than any other disease, and, very nearly, more dangerous.

One thing that makes it so dangerous is that it is so little understood.

If it were better understood, it would be more feared, more easily cured, less universal than it is now.

So, those who wish to be cured, take Shaker Digestive Cordial, because it goes to the root of the trouble as no other medicine does. The pure, harmless, curative herbs and plants, of which it is composed, are what render it so certain and, at the same time, so gentle a cure.

It helps and strengthens the stomach, purifies and tones up the system.

Sold by druggists, price 10 cents to $1.00 per bottle.

The Comins—Whitaker Wedding.

As a prelude to the Christmas bells the wedding bells rang out their merry chime yesterday afternoon for the nuptials of Miss Nellie Maria Comins and Mr. Herbert Karl Whitaker. The ceremony was performed by Rev. O. I. Darling of North Adams, at the Universalist church at 3 o'clock, the regular service, with ring, being used.

At the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march the bridal party appeared. The melody in F was played during the ceremony, and the bridal party went out to the inspired straing of Mendlesshon's wedding march.

The bride was charmingly attired in a traveling gown of brown broadcloth and fur. The church was beautifully decorated with green, a screen of laurel and holly back of the chancel being particularly effective. The ushers were Mr. Chester Porter of Danvers, Rev. John Walker of Harvard University, Mr. George Crosby of Warren, members of the Theta Delta Chi, the groom's college fraternity, and Mr. Charles E. Comins of Warren, brother of the bride.

WILBRAHAM.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitaker will be "at home" at the Brooks House, Brattleboro, after January 11th.

The fall term of Wesleyan Academy closed Wednesday, and the winter term will begin January 6.

Miss Florence Cushman, who for some time has been connected with the Boston Globe, is the guest of Miss Elizabeth McGuire.

The juvenile classes of the Methodist Sunday school held a Christmas frolic at the home of Mrs. Vinton Thursday from 2 to 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Barlow Morris of Wallace, N. S., and Miss Bessie Nichols of Boston University, will spend Christmas with their father, Rev. Fayette Nichols.

Mr. Whitaker is a graduate of Amherst College, and is principal of the high school at Brattleboro, Vt. Miss Comins is a graduate of Smith College, and has been teaching in Chelsea.

A very pleasing organ recital preceded the ceremony, given by Miss Thayer of Amherst, a friend of the bride, who rendered very effectively the "Grand Chorus" by Salome, and the "Pilgrim Chorus" by Wagner.

An informal reception was given to the out-of-town guests at the bride's home on Crescent street, from 4 to 5. A beautiful collection of gifts, including much fine bric-a-brac, testified to the love and esteem of a wide circle of friends.

The infant classes of the Wilbraham Methodist church were entertained yesterday afternoon in the church parlors by their teachers. In the evening the women of the Sunday school gave a supper to the members of the school, followed by a social.

At the annual meeting of the first Congregational church, F. E. Clark was elected clerk and treasurer, and Lurin J. Potter chorister. Mrs. C. L. Hubbard and Miss Carrie Moody were elected church committee in addition to the pastor and deacons.

CARD.—To all our dear friends who have expressed their sympathy, given flower tokens, offered prayers, rendered services in any way, or offered the same during our recent affliction, in the sickness and death of our dear little Robbie: May each be assured that every act of sympathy is fully appreciated by the recipients.

MR. AND MRS. LOWELL WILCOX.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age, was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by LeGro & Lynde. Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Public Notice.

We, druggists, are hereby authorized to refund the money, on a 50c. bottle Dr. Ball's Cough and Lung Syrup HUSTENA, if it does not cure your cough and prove the best medicine ever used for severe Coughs, Lung troubles and Asthma. Also a 25c bottle. LeGro & Lynde, O. P. Allen, Palmer; W. E. Stone, No. Wilbraham; A. W. Peirson, Brimfield; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. M. Royce, Wales; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; C. H. Murdock, Paige & Mason, Three Rivers; C. L. Holden, Bondsville; Charles H. Snow, Belchertown; Gurney & Spaulding, Wilbraham.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rivers Junction she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption, and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

Respect the Stomach.

Few people do have proper respect for the stomach. If a thing "tastes good" and is not so hot or so cold as to be painful to the mouth or throat, it is swallowed by too many people regardless of consequences.

Do not give the stomach food that will irritate it or retard it in the performance of its natural functions, or it will retaliate in a way that is decidedly unpleasant. A headache, a "lump" or "heavy feeling" in the stomach, and irritations of the skin, are mostly symptoms of disordered digestion resulting from unwholesome food.

Alum baking powders are responsible for the larger part of the unwholesome food, for it is a fact well recognized by physicians that alum renders food indigestible and unwholesome.

The danger to health from this cause is so imminent that it behooves every one to adopt precautionary measures to keep alum baking powders, which are now so numerous, from the kitchen stores. It will be found that those powders sold at a lower price than Royal are almost invarably made from alum, and therefore of inferior quality and dangerous to health.

The safer way is to look for the well-known red-and-yellow label of the Royal Baking Powder. That is certain to cover a powder free from alum. The Royal is made of cream of tartar, a pure, wholesome fruit acid derived from grapes. It is renowned for adding anti-dyspeptic qualities to the food, as well as for making finer and better food.

A SERIOUS SUBJECT.

That Will Well Repay Our Citizens to Carefully Consider.

Kidneys can't talk, but if you don't treat them rightly you will hear from them.

They have a language of their own, this is how they tell you?

When you work too hard, what follows? You are tired, aren't you?

It's just the same with the kidneys, they get tired, they have so much to do.

You stoop over at the same occupation.

You strain yourself lifting.

You walk too far, or ride too far.

You call this overexertion. You cannot sleep when night comes.

Your back aches. Your head aches, often you ache all over.

Oh, you say, it's because I'm tired.

Now this isn't right, It's because your kidneys are tired.

They can only do just so much, and the lifting, stooping, straining or exerting has retarded their action.

The heart has pushed the blood into them faster than they can filter it.

The filter is overtaxed and becomes clogged.

They cry for assistance in many aches that follow.

Nothing starts the kidneys working quicker than Doan's Kidney Pills.

It is useless to take them for any disorder of the stomach or derangement of the liver.

Indirectly they will help such troubles by throwing off some of the effete or waste matter of the body through the kidneys, but they won't cure liver complaint any more than they will cure consumption.

They are non-purgative, easy to take, convenient to carry; they produce no reaction; and can be given to the weakest child.

Doan's Kidney Pill for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name, DOAN'S, and take no other.

Once tried, always used: Ayer's Hygienic Coffee. Grocers sell it.

Try Grain-O! Try Grain-O!

Ask your grocer to-day to show you a package of GRAIN-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it like it. GRAIN-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha or Java, but it is made from pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. ¼ the price of coffee. 15 and 25 cents per package. Sold by all grocers.

There is a Class of People

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cts. and 25 cts. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men says is to one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhoea and dysentery. I always recommended it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it, Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat.' Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

Fifty Years Ago.

Grandfather's hat! And within it you see,
Grandfather's favorite cough remedy.
Whether 'twas Asthma, Bronchitis or Croup,
Or baby at night waked the house with a whoop,
With Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Gran'ther was sure
That no cold or cough would e'er fail of a cure.
In hats the styles change, but the records will show
Coughs are cured as they were 50 years ago.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

has no equal as a remedy for coughs, colds, and lung diseases. Where other soothing elixirs palliate, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral heals. It is not a cheap cough syrup, which soothes but does not strengthen; it is a physician's cough remedy, and it cures. It is put up in large bottles, only, for household use. It was awarded the medal at the World's Fair of ninety-three. It has a record of

Been thirty year sence the fightin'—though it don't seem long as that Sence I follered "Stonewall" Jackson, with nary a shoe or hat,
Through the valleys o' Virginny an' ev'rywher' else he went—
Thirty year sence I got back home to the burnt-out settlement.

But the world, it's been a-movin', for I am a-gettin' gray,
An' still, somehow, when I look around I feel it slippin' away;
The roses come in the springtime—the frost is shore in the fall,
But still it seems to an old man's dreams like thar warn't no war at all.

A change has come to the country; the fields whar I use' to plow
Is payed with stone, an' the steeples is risin' above 'em now;
The woods whar I went a huntin' is roarin' with noisy crowds,
An' the lakes whar I done my fishin' is gone clean up in the clouds.

Oh, the country, it's a-movin', an' 'pears to be movin' right;
Thar's a brighter sun in the daytime, an' lots more stars by night;
The people's a-comin' closer, an' I'arnin' the Golden Rule—
Lots o' the women votin' an' the niggers goin' to school.

Whenever I git to thinkin'—as I do think—o' the war,
A-tryin' constant to figger out the things we was fightin' for,
I kinder decide it was Providence a-workin' its wisest ends—
Purifyin' through fire an' makin' us better friends.

I think we're a-doin' better than we done 'fore the trouble come;
Got use' to the Stars and Stripes once more an' done beat sense in the drum;
I've danced to "Yankee Doodle" on the mountain an' the plain,
An' I've heerd 'em cheerin' "Dixie" from Texas clean to Maine!

Old things is changed in a twinklin'—its hard to onravel how,
But North and South, under one old flag, they're "Marchin' through Georgy" now;
An' I'm glad I lived to see it, an' spite o' my years I'm bound
If I don't jest feel, from head to heel, like shakin' hands all round!

Deafness cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedfes. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

QUAKER MARRIAGE CEREMONY.

A young man and woman in Worcester, belonging to the Society of Friends, who have certified their intention of marriage at the City Hall, says the Gazette, are having to undergo the regular form which the society imposes by waiting for the approval of the monthly meeting before they can be married. The first stage in the proceedings is for them both to appear at the monthly meeting of the society, which is the only time that any business is done, and make known their intentions. They both stand up before the meeting, and the man says: "With Divine permission and the Friends approbation, I declare my intention to take this woman (and he calls her name) to be my wife," and then they sit down. But the sanction for the marriage requires more than this formality. It is never granted unless both parties are Friends, and so if one of the young people is out of the fold they have to be married without the approval of the society.

When the approval is secured the couple marry themselves. The ceremony is appointed by the society to take place at some regular meeting, or else at one specially appointed. In the latter case it may be at a house, where anyone of the society has the right to be present. But the most interesting ceremony is that which takes place in a regular assembly of the society, at the meetinghouse. Anyone who has been to a Quaker service knows the fashion of the meetinghouse, with its high seats in front, facing the rest of the meeting. The elders usually sit there, but when a couple of young people are going to get married they have to occupy this conspicuous place, and have to stand up bravely, without a minister or elder, and marry themselves.

An old Quaker minister who said he had seen six couples stand up in this way before the congregation was asked why the young people had to do it alone and he said it was a matter that did not concern an intermediate person, but rested between themselves and God Then he described how the young man would stand up in that high-perched place in the meeting-house alone with his bride, and taking her hand, say: In the presence of God and this assembly, I take thee, A. B., to be my wife, promising to be unto thee an affectionate and loving husband until the hand of the Lord by death shall separate us." The bride then speaks in a similar fashion.

At the end of this ceremony a minister prays or speaks, and then, when there is a pause and the spirit moves no one else, the meeting is adjourned. At the close of the meeting the marriage certificate, which is made of parchment, is brought forward and any one can sign it. A special law sanctions this marriage ceremony. This document, which amounts to the legal sanction of the marriage, is greatly prized among the descendants of the Friends, so much so that the children have often similar marriage certificates made for themselves, though they may have been married outside of the society.

THUMB MARKS NOW THE THING.

Thomas Jefferson, a son of Joseph Jefferson, the distinguished comedian, arrived in Baltimore yesterday from Washington with a singular interesting autograph book. It is not that the book is so unique for the famous names it includes in its pages, but that it contains the thumb-marks of several persons prominent in the political and dramatic histories of the country President and Mrs. Cleveland's thumb-prints appear in the book and are striking examples of the singular difference that exists between thumbs, for it has been proved by scientists so interested that there are no two thumbs in the world possessed of similar marks. In the president's print the lines of the thumb are bold, positive and lengthy. It is near the first joint of the member that the circular lines begin to appear. In Mrs. Cleveland's print the lines also appear firm and bold, but the circular lines are much higher up toward the tip.

Francis Wilson shows his print in the book. According to an expert in such matters the lines indicate a nature truly humorous. There is nothing exactly positive about them, though nothing indicating weakness is revealed. But the lines are far from regular and such as is naturally looked for in a person who constantly developes a versatile wit and droll conception of the incidents of life.

Daniel Lamont, secretary of war, has impressed his thumb upon one page of the book, and his print is strong and full of character. It typifies candor, well mixed with deliberation and discretion and a jovial appreciation of the good things of this world.

In the play of "Pudd'nhead Wilson" a murderer is detected by his thumb-print, upon which means of positive indentification the hero of the piece is an enthusiast. This has been suggested by a scientist as the best and most certain way of indentifying criminals and upheld as far more simple and direct than the Bertillion system now in general use through the country. Constant experiment has demonstrated that the marks on the thumb never change from infancy to old age. These marks are impossible of imitation, because they are too complicated in design, and it is impossible to destroy the marks on the thumb except by amputation. The use of the thumb-print in connection with signatures is already being advocated in eastern states.—Baltimore Sun.

She—Jack, dear, please run up and get my goats. They're on the table. He—Your what, Ermyntrude? She—They're too old to be called kids any longer. (Sotto voice) If that doesn't make him get me some new ones, I don't know what will.—Washington Capital.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal billious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malaria poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1 00 per bottle of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Drug store.

FORTUNES IN THE SEA.

One of the most extraordinary instances of a fortune found in the sea concerned the wreck at the Spanish treasurer ship Alfonzo XII, Grand Canary. A single diver recovered Spanish coin of the estimated value of $100,000. The depths from which this specie was recovered was twenty-six and two-thirds fathoms, or 160 feet.

One of the most difficult operations ever performed by a diver was the recovering of the treasure sunk in Malabar off Galle. On this occasion the large iron plates, half an inch thick, had to be cut away from the mail-room, and then the diver had to work through nine feet of sand. The whole of the specie on board this vessel—upwards of $1,500,000—was saved as much as $80,000 having been got out in one day.

It is an interesting fact that from time to time expeditions have been fitted out and companies formed with the sole intention of searching for buried treasure beneath the sea. Again and again have expeditions left New York and San Francisco in the certainty of recovering tons of bullion, sunk off the Brazilian coast or lying undisturbed in the mud of the Rio de la Plata.

At the end of 1885 the large steamer Indus, belonging to the P. and O. company, sank off Trincomalee, having on board a very valuable East Indian cargo, together with a large amount of specie. This was another case of fortune found in the sea, for a very large amount of treasure was recovered.

Harper's Weekly
IN 1897

WITH the end of 1896 HARPER'S WEEKLY will have lived forty years. In that time it has participated with all the zeal and power at its command in the great political events of the most interesting and important period in the history of the country, and it has spread before its readers the accomplishments of science, arts, and letters for the instruction of the human mind and the amelioration of human conditions and of manners.

What the WEEKLY has been in its spirit and purpose, as these have been manifested principally in its editorial pages, it will continue to be.

It is impossible to announce with precision all that the WEEKLY will contain during the year 1897. It were as easy to announce what is about to happen in the world, what triumphs for good government are to be won, what advances of the people are to be made, what is to be the outcome of the continuous struggle between the spirits of war and peace, what is to happen in the far East, what is to be the state of Europe twelve months hence, what new marvels of science are to be revealed, or what are to be the achievements of arts and letters, for the WEEKLY is to be a pictorial record of all this.

Cartoons will continue to be a feature

Serial Stories. A New England story by Miss MARY E WILKINS, will begin in January. A tale of a Greek uprising against the Turks, by MR. E. F. BENSON, the author of "Dodo," will follow. A sequel to "The House-Boat on the Styx," by MR. JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, illustrated by MR. PETER NEWELL.

More Short Stories will appear in the WEEKLY than it has been possible to publish during 1896.

Departments: Mr. W D HOWELL'S "Life and Letters" have been among the most charming features of periodical literature; MR E. S MARTIN, and others will contribute observations of what is going on in "This Busy World;" "Amateur Sport" will remain the most important department of its kind in the country.

The WEEKLY will continue to present to its readers the world's news most interesting to Americans, to make important advances in both the literary and artistic features, and to retain for itself the leading place in the illustrated journalism of the world.

Midnight Mass For The Dying Year.

Yes, the Year is growing old,
And his eye is pale and bleared!
Death, with frosty hand and cold,
Plucks the old man by the beard,
Sorely—sorely!

The leaves are falling, falling,
Solemnly and slow;
Caw! caw! the rooks are calling,
It is a sound of woe,
A sound of woe!

Through woods and mountain passes
The winds, like anthems, roll;
They are chanting solemn masses,
Singing: "Pray for this poor soul,
Pray—pray!"

And the hooded clouds, like friars,
Tell their beads in drops of rain,
And patter their doleful prayers!—
But their prayers are all in vain,
All in vain!

There he stands in the foul weather,
The foolish, fond, Old Year,
Crowned with wild flowers and with heather
Like weak, despised Lear,
A king—a king!

Then comes the summer-like day,
Bids the old man rejoice!
His joy! his last! Oh, the old man gray,
Loveth that ever-soft voice,
Gentle and low.

To the crimson woods he saith—
To the voice gentle and low
Of the soft air like a daughter's breath—
"Pray do not mock me so!
Do not laugh at me!"

And now the sweet day is dead;
Cold in his arms it lies;
No stain from its breath is spread
Over the glassy skies,
No mist or stain!

Then, too, the Old Year dieth,
And the forests utter a moan,
Like the voice of one who crieth
In the wilderness alone,
"Vex not his ghost!"

Then comes, with an awful roar,
Gathering and sounding on,
The storm wind from Labrador,
The wind Euroclydon,
The storm-wind!

Howl! howl! and from the forest
Sweep the red leaves away!
Would the sins that thou abhorrest,
O Soul! could thus decay,
And be swept away!

For there shall come a mightier blast,
There shall be a darker day;
And the stars, from heaven down-cast,
Like red leaves be swept away!
Kyrie, eleyson!
Christe, eleyson.

A GIRL OF INSIGHT.

What is the matter with you?"

"Nothing."

"Did you have a good time in town?"

"No-o; beastly hole, bores one to death."

"But there is such a lot going on now. Did you not go to any theatres?"

"Yes, to every one, music halls, too; saw everything there was to be seen. I suppose I did enjoy myself, but I have forgotten it."

The girl looked at the man steadily for a moment; but he walked moodily on, unconscious of her gaze.

"Were there any nice people staying at the same place?" she asked unconcernedly, but still watching him.

"No-o; at least, I hardly spoke to any of them."

"Who were those people you wrote about? Those people you were with so much?"

"Oh, they are Irish."

Dead silence. The man and the girl sauntered along the beach, each intent on his and her own thoughts.

"What charming people the Irish are, as a rule," said the girl at length.

"Yes, awfully jolly," enthusiastically.

"Were these?"

"Oh, yes; they weren't bad."

"How many were there, and of what sort and condition? Do rouse yourself a little, and try to be a trifle more entertaining."

The man pulled himself together and made an effort. "What shall I tell you? About the Irish people I met? Well, there was a father, also a mother—awfully fine old lady she was—and a daughter."

"Was the daughter pretty? Irish girls are lovely, as a rule, I think. Their eyes are so beautiful. Had this girl beautiful eyes?"

"Ye-es, I suppose so."

"Was she a nice girl, clever, and so on? Tell me all about her."

'Oh, there is nothing to tell." The man grew restive under the questioning; then he tried to turn the conversation. The girl sauntered on more slowly. She was a little paler than she had been, but a slightly mocking smile played around the corners of her mouth.

"How pretty those brown sails look out there," she said, presently, pointing to a little fleet of fishing boats far out on the glittering sea. "Mark, I should so like to go out sailing."

"Would you?" he rejoined, indifferently.

"Yes; let us go and have a nice long day. I will get some provisions, while you get the boat. Shall you go?"

"I should like it if you would." With a little more alacrity he moved off, while the girl wended her way up the cliff path to the house perched on the top

"Poor boy!" she said, softly. "To be slangy, he is hard hit, or thinks he is, which amounts to the same. I am afraid he is very impressionable."

Out at sea there was a soft breeze blowing, a little breeze that made the hot sun bearable, and put new life and spirits into the two in the boat; there was something so exhilarating, so free, so invigorating, in the very feeling of flying along over the smooth, sparkling waters. Care seemed to be left behind, where it would not overtake them; anger, jealousy, mortification, seemed all too petty and mean to live in this great open stretch of sea and sky.

"Shall we have lunch now?" The girl was leaning back in a perfect nest of cushions, looking unspeakably comfortable, and very pretty; her pink sunshade gave a delicate flush to her cheeks, which were otherwise pale. Her dainty pink gown made a bright spot in the boat, and formed a relief to the monotony of brilliant blue around them. The breeze flapped the wide brim of her hat, and blew her soft hair in curls about her forehead. The man looked around from the sail ropes he had been intent on, and an involuntary gleam of admiration shone from his eyes.

"You look so comfy it is a pity you should move," he said, in a less melodramatic manner than he had hitherto spoken. "I will unpack the things, and hand you all you want."

"My dear boy, I could not possibly eat in this position, and loth as I am to disturb myself, my spirit longeth for sustenance. I am going to sit in the bottom of the boat," she said; "will you arrange some cushions at my back for me?"

Easily and deftly, and with the air in which the proprietor and protector were curiously mixed, he arranged her nest. There was something strangely fascinating in taking care of this graceful maiden. The girl seemed to divine his feelings, for she colored a little, and roused herself so as to dispense with his attentions. When all was ready he sat down close to her and arranged his own meal. And all the time the boat sped lightly along before the breeze, and the water rippled and splashed round the boat.

"This is awfully fine," said the man leaning back, with his hands clasped behind his head, and looking first at the girl, than at the sky, and then back at the girl again. "This is splendid; I could go on sailing away forever. One seems to leave all worries behind, and forget all disagreeables."

The girl did not speak for a moment; she was looking at the brown sails of the boats they were passing.

"I do not know that I should care for it for the rest of my existence," she said at length. "You are a very agreeable companion, Mark; at least you can be," with a little raising of her eyebrows; "but I think it would be very stupid to pass one's whole life with one friend."

"With one what?"

"Friend," answered the girl, calmly unfurling her sunshade, and settling more comfortably into her cushions.

The man stared at her for a few seconds, then he followed her gaze at the brown sails, and for a moment they appeared to find something of surpassing interest in them.

"I think it would be very jolly to bring out Mina Armstrong one day, and her brother, don't you?" asked the girl.

"Ye-es, perhaps they would like it," indifferently.

"Oh, Jack Armstrong told me yesterday that he is devoted to sailing. He wanted me to go with him—them to-day, but I said you were coming and you would think it odd if you found no one at home."

"You were very kind," he answered a little sulky. "I am sorry to have kept you at home."

"Oh, it does not matter, I can go another day; I wanted to see you, you know."

"Thanks, but why not go in his boat to-morrow instead of having him here? You would enjoy it more, probably."

"I don't know that I should," musingly. "Besides, I want you to know Mina, she is such a dear little soul, and so pretty. I am sure you will quite fall in love with her."

She looked at her companion for the first time, then quickly lowered her sunshade, for the dignified amazement of his expression was too much for her gravity. For minutes silence resigned in the boat. The man was wondering if it could really be possible that the girl regarded him simply as one of her many friends, and was quite indifferent as to whether he cared more for another girl or not. It really seemed so, but it was almost incomprehensible. In an instant it all flashed across him; she was infatuated by this newcomer, this other friend, who wanted to take her out sailing; and she wanted to pack him, Mark, off with the sister.

It had never occurred to him that other men might admire Ruth so much as to wish to take her from him. He looked at her in his endeavors to fathom it all, he looked at her and then he no longer wondered; she was really very pretty; when he looked at her she was leaning on the side of the boat, her head resting on her arm. It seemed to him there was a sadness about her attitude and expression, a sweet, pathetic air that made his heart beat faster with a great desire to comfort her.

Perhaps her thoughts were with that other fellow! While he was trying to discover why he so disliked that other fellow, Ruth gave a little sigh, and the sadness vanished from her face. "How perfectly idyllic this is," she said. "What a comfort it is to be able to sit silent when one feels inclined, and not feel one is playing the bore. It is a sign of true friendship, Mark. I could not do so with anyone but you, but you understand." She looked at him with a sweet, grave smile. "We ought to be good friends after knowing each other all these years, oughtn't we?"

Mark nodded. "'Friend' always seems to me such an inadequate, cold word," he said. "Friends and acquaintances are the same to me."

"Oh no, oh no," she cried. "Acquaintances mean so little; they are nothing. I have so many, but of friends so few. You are one of my chiefest, and——"

"I always thought we were more than friends," he said.

"You silly boy, how could we be!" she replied, with a little laugh, but the laugh did not ring true.

"Well, you know what the old folks——"

"Mark, do you know that it is nearly four o'clock, and that I promised to be at the Armstrong's at half-past four? We must really go in now."

The man got up rather unwillingly; he was uneasy somehow about Ruth; she seemed to have raised a barrier between them, a something that made him feel that she was less than he had chosen to consider her.

Later that day it occurred to him that he had not thought of the Irish girl for several hours. He did not think of her until the moon rose, and he went out on the headland, and sat alone with his pipe, and he longed to make her aware of the fact.

* * * * * *

"Ruth, do you feel inclined to come for a stroll?" The girl was sitting in a large basket chair in the garden on the cliff top; in her hand she held a magazine, but she was not reading it, she was looking out over the sea, thinking, thinking of something which called up a little smile to her lips.

She looked so sweet, and fresh, and cool, her soft white gown showing up her pretty sunburnt cheeks and the glorious color of her hair. Mark approached her with his request almost diffidentially. During the last week or two he had found that she did not jump at his suggestions with her old alacrity; in fact, it had taken him all his time and all his tact to secure her company at all, and so occupied had he been that he had no time to think at all of the Irish girl; at least, he had only found time of an evening over his pipe, and two of those evenings he had spent in thinking of Ruth. He was quite unhappy in those days, for, as is usual in this life, he had not appreciated the good things life held for him until he felt he was likely to lose them.

To-day, however, Ruth willingly consented to accompany him. "Let us go on the heather," she said, "and you must talk to me, for I am feeling fearfully lazy."

So they strolled along the narrow road inland, until they came to the moor, where great springy beds of purple and white heather stretched away for miles, and the low hedges were draped with festoons of honeysuckle and "old man's beard." Close to one of these hedges they found a seat or at least Ruth found a seat. Mark did not want one; he lay on the "earthly paradise," she exclaimed, as she leant back against a soft cushion of sweet-scented thyme. "If I was suspicious, I should say it was too good to last."

"I think it is," said Mark, rather mournfully. "We seldom have a walk or anything else together now, Ruth."

"No?" She was not prepared for this sudden attack and grew confused. The man noticed it, and determined to make the most of it. 'Ruth, dear, you have changed lately. We are not such good friends as we used to be. Why is it? Tell me."

He looked up at her, and from his lowly position could see every change in her face.

"Don't be silly," she said, strenuously averting his eyes. She stopped and gathered a handful of heather, which she promptly destroyed and scattered in little showers over her white gown. In a moment she recovered and became herself again. "Get into a more comfortable position, she said smiling down at him, "and talk to me. I must be amused." So the man with a sigh lay down on his heather couch and began to talk. In those days he did anything the girl told him, and everything he could think of to please her. Presently he began to talk of his late visit to London, that visit on the subject of which he had been so silent.

"And those Irish people," said the girl, unconcernedly, idly sticking pieces of heather in his curls, while she looked keenly down on his face. The top of his head was toward her, his eye were fixed on the blue sea, where it appeared far away in the distance, so that he did not see her. "Why do you not ask them down here? You were so much with them and liked them so, I am sure you would be glad to have them."

No answer. The girl stuck another piece of heather in his hair then took it all out again. "I am sure I should have liked to meet them. I think I should have liked the girl awfully."

"I know you would not."

"Why? I think we should get on beautifully together."

"I am sure you would not. She is not your style."

"What style is she?"

"Oh I don't know. She is an awful flirt, and not good form at all."

"Oh!" A silence ensued for about five minutes, then the man rolled over, and planting his elbows in the heather looked up determinedly in his companion's face. An inkling of the truth had reached his brain.

"Ruth, I must know. It is only fair that you should tell me why you have changed so to me." Dead silence. The girl looked away and made no attempt to reply. "Won't you tell me?" he said wistfully; "you are making me very miserable, dear." His voice was sad and pleading; it touched the girl in spite of herself.

"I am? Oh, Mark." The tears almost came into her eyes, but she smiled instead. "How can I make you unhappy?"

"Because I love you, Ruth, and I cannot bear this something that has risen between us; it drives me mad. Ruth, my dear little girl, don't you know how I love you, and that I want you to be something very, very much nearer than a friend?"

The smile died away from her face, she grew very pale, and her fingers trembled a little as she played with the heather, but she spoke calmly, almost coldly.

"I did not know it was me you loved," she said.

"I have never loved anyone else, not with a real love such as I have for you. I may have admired others, yes, and perhaps thought myself in love with them for a time; but that is all so different, you know it is."

"Yes, I think I know," she said; "but it might happen again."

"I do not think it would," he said, seriously. "I never knew until I came back this time, and—and began to feel that I might lose you, how much I loved you, dear."

He wondered why she smiled so oddly. "You must have seen it, Ruth?"

"But, Mark, how about that other girl, that Irish girl? Aren't you—don't you—care for her?"

"Pooh!" said the man with unfeigned scorn. Care for her? I never did. One may flirt with a girl like that, but as to loving her, or—or marrying her, well, I pity the poor fool who does. She flirts abominably."

Then the girl smiled again, a triumphant little smile, quite unintelligible to the man. She knew that her treatment had been successful, the cure was complete.

"Why do you smile?" asked the man, perplexed.

"Because—oh—because I am so happy."

"Happy! Do you mean that?" catching one of her hands and kissing it passionately. "Then it is to be—may I tell the old folks it has come about as they wished? Look at me, child, and tell me you really mean it, that you do care."

Still she looked away, intent on tearing up the unfortunate heather by her side. The man watched her in his variable mood.

"You do not care," he said at last, when the silence had become unbearable. "You do not care, and you cannot make yourself." There was a great sadness in his voice; his face seemed to have aged and grown haggard. He turned over, and propped himself on one elbow, with his face well away from hers. "Don't try, dear," he went on; but the words came haltingly. "Don't try; either you do or you do not, and I would not have—"

Something was laid on his bowed head; it was Ruth's little hand. "Mark," she said, softly.

"What is it, Ruth?"

"Look up, I want to tell you something."

He obeyed her, and turned a very miserable pair of eyes toward her. "Never mind," he said bravely; "I know you can't care—" He stopped, something in her face making him forget what he was saying.

Her eyes were bright and shining. A delicate flush crept up over her cheeks. "You are making a mistake. I do care very, very much," she said earnestly. "It is all right now," and leaning towards him she took his face between her two hands and kissed him gently on the forehead.

"You dear little soul," he cried, astonished at this unusual little outburst on her part. But she had buried her face in her hands to hide the crimson that dyed her sweet face; and a pair of very rosy ears was all that her lover could get a glimpse of.—Mabel Quiller Couch, in "The Gentlewoman."

A SERMON ON HELL, AND ITS RESPONSE.

Rev. Simon J. McPherson yesterday morning preached on "Hell" in the Second Presbyterian church. His sermon made a deep impression on the congregation. At the conclusion of the discourse the pastor usually announces the hymn to be sung as a response. The organist had not known the subject of the sermon when he selected the response, and thought no more about it after he had compiled his list of hymns. The pastor fumbled with the list, coughed and looked a trifle embarrassed. The organist began to play the air pianissimo, and a broad grin spread over every face. Dr. McPherson looked appealingly upward to the organist and then turned over the leaves of the hymn-book with desperate eagarness. Mr. McCarrell left his pipes and hurried down to the pastor.

"We must change that response," whispered the pastor.

"Why?" asked the organist, innocently. "I have been preaching on 'Hell,'" said Dr. McPherson, "and the response you have chosen is 'What Must It Be To Be There?' We cannot have that."

Even the solemn organist grinned as he climbed to the organ and started up "Art Thou Weary?"—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Old Year's Blessing.

I am fading from you,
But one draweth near
Called the Angel Guardian
Of the coming year.
If my gifts and graces
Coldly you forget,
Let the New Year's Angel
Bless and crown them yet.
For we work together,
He and I are one;
Let him end and perfect
All I leave undone.
I brought good desires,
Though as yet but seeds—
Let the New Year make them
Blossom into deeds.

HOW IT FEELS TO DIE OF POISON.

After destroying all marks on his clothing which could in any way lead to his identity, a well-dressed man, about thirty years of age, committed suicide at the Kimball hotel in Chicago, recently, by taking laudanum. He described the effects of the drug in writing until his hand could no longer hold the pencil. In his efforts to destroy all clews which might lead to identification the suicide forgot two articles which indicate that he was an easterner. A small mirror found in the hand of the dead man bore the stamp of a firm in Rochester, N. Y., and the memorandum book in which he described the manner of his death, contained the trade mark of A. W. McCloy & Co., 449 Wood street, Pittsburg, Pa. The trade marks on the clothing were removed.

He engaged a room as E. L. Bryan, although the police thinks this is not his name. Before taking the drug he wrote a letter to the hotel proprietor and one to the press, in which he gave no excuse for the act further than that his life had been a failure. As much of the description of the effects of the drugs as could deciphered is as follows:—

To M. D.—Took laudanum—After five minutes feel little or no pain. Heart action now pronounced. A slight pain in stomach. (Note) My stomach is very weak, having suffered for years from acute dyspepsia.

Ten minutes—Condition about the same. Pulse rapid and pains in wrists and slight pain in region of heart. Hand trembles. A feeling of dullness with more pain in all parts of the heart. (Note) Will keep up this description of effects as long as possible. Hope it will be of use to medical science. Eyes show change. A feeling of drowsiness coming on. Sort of a feeling of intoxication accompanied by slight fever.

Twenty minutes—Pain increasing. A slight perspiration starting. Am getting sleepy. Have a sort of numb feeling and no pain.

The last few sentences were scarcely legible, so unsteady had the writer's hand become, and although he attempted to write a few more lines, the words could not be made out. The clothing of the suicide is of good material, and the police think that he may be well connected. No money was found.

A WINDOW BOX.

A window box should be started in the fall, but it is never too late if the earth and plants can be found. It should not be more than eight or ten inches wide, not over six deep. It may be as long as the window is wide, though two boxes of half the length, which can be more easily moved and turned, would be better. They may be made of pine and painted any color desired, and though it is not necessary, a lining of tin or zinc, which any tinsmith can make, is a great improvement. Put a layer of broken pots in the bottom, say an inch or so deep, for drainage. Then fill the box to within an inch of the top with good garden soil, made fine by passing it through the coal sieve. It should be mixed with about one third of its own bulk of sand or fine coal ashes to keep it friable.

For good solid worth there is nothing better to plant in the window box than the old-fashioned geraniums. They will bloom and bloom, and keep up an appearance of cheerfulness and courage under the most wintry skies, provided you start with good, strongly rooted young plants. It is an excellent plan to keep them in their pots, which should be sunk in the soil of the box to their rims. This prevents the roots from roving about and keeps them better to the business of producing blossoms.

Periwinkle and the green and red varieties of wandering Jew should not be forgotten, for they trail over the sides of the box and soon disguise its bareness by their luxuriant growth.

A STORY OF MILLAIS.

The story of the late Sir John Millais which follows is told by a correspondent of the London Chronicle in the painter's own words:—

"I found myself seated one evening at a rather grand dinner next to a very pretty, rushing girl to whom I had not been introduced. She fired into the conversation directly she had finished her soup, and as it was May, began with the inevitable question. 'I suppose you've been to the academy?' I replied that I had. 'And did you notice the Millais? Didn't you think they were awful daubs? I can't imagine how such things ever get hung!—' She was going on gaily in the same strain, while I sat silent, when suddenly the amused smiles of those round her, and the significant hush, brought her to a sudden stop. She colored rather painfully, and whispered to me in a frightened voice, 'For heaven's sake, what have I done? Have I said anything dreadful? Do tell me.' 'Not now,' I replied; 'eat your dinner in peace, and I'll tell you by and by.' She did so, rather miserably, vainly trying to extract from me at intervals what the matter was, and when dessert came, I filled up her glass with champagne and told her to gulp it down very quickly when I counted three. She obeyed without protest, and I took the opportunity when she couldn't speak to say, 'Well, I am Millais. But let's be friends!'"

THE MILK BATH.

"Wonders succeed wonders," said my friend, the beauty specialist, when I dropped in to ask her about her newest triumphs. So writes the Globe Democrat's correspondent. "And the latest is the most wonderful of all. It comes well nigh being a marvel. Yet, when I come to think it over, I believe it to be as old as beauty itself.

"I refer," said she, lifting a glass of creamy, opaque substance to the light, "to the milk bath." The substance you see in the goblet is the greatest beautifier known. Yet we had to wait for French specialists to tell us so.

"Beauties from Paris brought it over here. They bathed in milk secretly, letting others wonder how they managed to obtain that soft, elastic flesh and that pliant skin, pink like the cheek of an infant. Then Anna Held came over and bathed in milk publicly, letting all her friends into the secret of her prettiness. Now they are building bath houses for milk baths, and every woman in Gotham is rubbing herself with milk if she cannot obtain the twenty gallon necessary for a deep bath swim in the lacteal fluid.

LIQUOR CASES IN COURT.

The Appealed Cases Tried in the Superior Court at Springfield.

The trial of the large grist of liquor cases brought by the town prosecuting committee before the district court recently, resulting in convictions, was begun in the superior court at Springfield Wednesday morning. The case of John B. Dawson and John P. Manning, charged with keeping a common nusiance, was first taken up. At the opening of the case several jurors were challenged by both the commonwealth and the defense, and the trial finally proceeded with but 10 jurors. All the witnesses for the commonwealth had testified in the district court in this town, and gave the same testimony as then. Rev. Mr. Jenkins and Mr. Gager told of their visits to the pool room and the frequent trips of Daniel Matteson from the pool room to his house on Foundry street, where a search was made and about 12 gallons of whisky secured. Mr. Jenkins testified to making a raid on the morning of May 30th and finding four glasses, in two of which there was an odor of liquor. Rev. C. R. Minard and E. E. Hobson testified that they saw Dawson rush up from the pool room and empty the contents of a pitcher into the street, also to seeing Manning come out with a bottle and throw it against the underpinning of Marcy's livery stable. Lyman C. Snow corroborated this testimony. F. B. Pope testified to having seen the same and to having gone to the spot where the bottle struck the wall and seeing a wet spot upon the wall; the odor of liquor also prevailed about the grass where the bottle was lying. A. C. Hapgood of Brimfield, Louis Hubert, Henry Borgson of Palmer, E. F. Knight of Randolph and Humphrey Sullivan of Holliston testified to having purchased whisky of both Dawson and Manning. The bottle was taken from their hip pockets; sometimes Matteson or Rooney would produce a bottle and give it to either Dawson or Manning. They had also seen a number of men drinking in the place. From the evidence submitted it was evident that considerable intoxicating liquor was sold.

For the defense, Dawson denied ever having sold any liquor in the place since the first of May. He admitted having thrown something from a pitcher on the morning of May 30th, but said it was birch beer which he was taking to some girls in the hotel above. He was standing, he said, with the pitcher in his hand watching the parade go by when he saw Mr. Jenkins enter the pool room. He followed him and when he found he had a warrant to search the place he immediately came out and threw the contents of the pitcher into the street. In answer to District Attorney Gardner he could not explain his reasons for doing this beyond saying that he supposed he was "rattled." Manning also denied ever having sold any liquor to the witness. He admitted having thrown the bottle, which they used to keep the window open from the bottom; no liquor had been in it so far as he knew, but he was afraid Mr. Jenkins or some of his assistants would find it and claim to detect the odor of liquor in it, and thus suspicion might rest upon them; this was why he threw the bottle away. He was shown a book which he said was his property, and also acknowledged the handwriting to be his. He was asked to explain an entry of $150 paid sometime in July to a wholesale liquor firm in Springfield. He could not explain this, although he admitted having made it. Rooney testified that he spent the greater part of the day in the pool room. He was allowed cigars and soda without paying for them because he was out of work. Many men who were well-known drinkers in town came in with great regularity and called for soda, and he supposed they obtained it. He was not in the employ of the defendants, and had never had any liquor in the place nor seen any sold. Lawyer T. W. Kenefick appeared for the defense, and made an able plea in behalf of his clients. District Attorney Gardner put up a strong argument for the commonwealth, showing the weakness of the explanations of the defense in regard to the pitcher and the bottle in his sarcastic manner. Judge Maynard charged the jury with perfect fairness to both sides, and clearly defined to them the law in regard to keeping a common nusiance. The jury went out about noon and returned at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, reporting that they were unable to agree. The foreman stated that the disagreement was if a sale had not been proved and liquor was not found on the premises, whether or not a conviction should be brought. The judge again charged them in a rather stern and forcible manner, telling them that the evidence was very plain, and that an agreement one way or the other ought to be reached quickly and without difficulty.

After remaining out until about noon today they reported that they were unable to come to any agreement, whereupon they were given a severe talking to by the judge and discharged in disgrace. A portion of Judge Maynard's remarks were, in substance: "The outcome of this case is a scandal and a disgrace to the cause of justice in the commonwealth. The case of the government was as strong a case as was ever presented, and there is no good reason for not coming to an agreement. The jury must have been governed by prejudice or a lack of intelligence. The case was fairly tried and fairly argued. The testimony of the witnesses on the side of the government was of a kind to be believed; the testimony of the defense was too weak to be believed, and the weakest ever introduced in this court. One of the defendants had paid $150 for liquor at one time last summer, but could not account for it in any way. If in a case like this a conviction cannot be secured, there is no use in holding court."

Congregational Church Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting and roll call of the Congregational church was held in the vestry last evening. A supper was served at 6, after which the roll call and business meeting was held in the audience room. A good number responded to the calling of the roll, and encouraging reports were made by the different societies connected with the church. The disbursements of the year have been $759, and there is a balance of $25 in the treasury. These officers were elected: Clerk, O. P. Allen; deacon for four years, C. W. Bennett; treasurer, D. L. Bodfish; auditor, Dr. G. H. Wilkins; advisory committee, Dr. G. H. Wilkins, D. L. Bodfish, Mrs. S. C. Hunt, Mrs. W. H. Hitchcock, Miss Carrie Roper; executive committee, H. P. Holden, H. G. Loomis, J. B. Shaw; superintendent of Sunday school, L. H. Gager; assistant, J. C. Wing; superintendent of primary department, Mrs. J. B. Shaw; home department, Mrs. G. H. Hastings; secretary and treasurer, F. B. Pope; librarian, Miss Julia Allen; committee to welcome strangers, C. W. Bennett, G. H. Hastings; D. L. Bodfish; to visit strangers and the sick, Mrs. J. C. Wing, Mrs. J. A. Palmer, Mrs. J. B. Shaw, Mrs. W. H. Hitchcock, Mrs. Harvey Carey, Mrs. William Oare, Mrs. S. J. Ramsden, Miss Carrie Roper; ushers, L. E. Chandler, G. H. Bray, E. E. Hobson, J. Harold Shaw. It was voted to celebrate the semi-centennial of the church April 1st, and W. A. Breckenridge, J. B. Shaw, G. H. Hastings, C. W. Bennett and L. H. Gager were appointed a committee to make all arrangements.

To-day was the Feast of the Circumcision at the Catholic church, and masses were celebrated at 5.30 and 7.30 a. m.

THE YEAR'S BUILDING RECORD.

Not as Good as Might be, but Still Something Done.

Palmer's building record for the year 1896 is below that of former years, although considerable building has been going on. Real estate has been given quite a boom in this village and in Three Rivers by auction sales. No industries have been brought to town, and one which has grown to large proportions has been allowed to leave on account of being unable to secure the necessary capital. Hard times and the general business depression of the past year have tended to discourage building or any other financial undertaking. Rufus Flynt has built a large addition to his house on Central street, completely remodeling it and making it one of the finest residences in this section. The cost was about $6000. Wallace Chilson has built a modern and convenient house on Knox street at a cost of $4200; Byram Woodhead a house on Squier street at a cost of $2500; C. E. Fuller a new barn on South Main street for $700; George A. Rice an addition to his residence on Pleasant street, $650; Harvey Chapman, addition to his residence on Pine street, $1800; Mrs. R. L. Goddard, barn on Squier street, $600; Lyman C. Snow an addition to his residence, $400; Oliver LaSalle has erected a residence at the head of Central street at a cost of $2000; A. E. Fitch has built an addition to his residence on Central street and also a small barn; Mrs. Julia Henry has built a summer cottage at Forest Lake; the Smith Grocery Company has built a small addition to its store on Main street, and J. P. Lynde has made repairs on his block and converted several rooms into a tenement. Repairs amounting to several hundred dollars have been made on the Universalist church.

At Thorndike the town has built a new schoolhouse at a cost of $14,000, and has also expended $1000 on the other schoolhouses of the town. The Thorndike Company has made some repairs and converted a schoolhouse purchased from the town into a tenement house, at a cost of several thousand dollars. R. L. Bond has converted another unused schoolhouse in Thorndike into a business block at a cost of $3000. J. O. Hamilton has built a house on his farm at Forest Lake for $4500. At Three Rivers C. W. Johnson is building an addition to his block occupied by Shaw Brothers, and some repairs have been made on the Union church. At Bondsville a great many important changes have been made by the Boston Duck Company. Much new and improved machinery has been purchased, a large addition to the bleachery made, and an electric power plant put in. An addition has also been made to the tenement of E. G. Childs, the whole amounting to about $10,000.

The builders are already preparing for next year's trade. T. D. Potter & Co. of Bondsville built the foundations for two new houses, and C. L. Holden is also to build a large store. Preparations for building on the lots bought at the recent auctions in Three Rivers and this village are being made.

The most noteworthy item of construction in Eastern Hampden is the new state hospital across the river in Monson. The primary school which occupied the same site as this new institution, was sold at auction and taken down. Under the personal direction of Supt. Dr. Owen Copp three brick buildings have been erected, which will be ready for occupancy by next fall; an administration building and two cottages, and several outbuildings. The cottages are for the use of patients, and stand one at each end of the administration building. They are alike, one for men and the other for women. They are two-story buildings of rectangular shape, about 125 by 50 feet; an L about 30 feet square has been built on each end of the cottages. The floors are divided into two wards each, making four wards in a building. Each ward is divided into day and night quarters, the night quarters being on the south side and the day quarters are on the east side. There are dining rooms on the north side and private rooms, bath and toilet rooms in the Ls. Each cottage will accommodate 100 patients. The administration building is rectangular in form, three stories high, about 50 by 60 feet. On the first floor will be the offices, medical library, dispensary laboratory and reception room. On the second floor are the living apartments of the superintendent and family, and on the third floor those of the other officials of the institution. All the buildings are heated by steam and lighted by electricity. Hascal Dodge of Springfield has done the work. The aggregate cost has been $100,000.

Death of Ethan Warriner, a Former Resident of Palmer.

Ethan Warriner, 70, a former well-known resident of this town, died at Providence, R. I., Monday. Mr. Warriner was born in Wilbraham and later moved to this town. He was a contractor and builder by trade, and had charge of putting up some of the mill buildings at Thorndike, the construction of the new dye house at Bondsville after the fire a number of years ago, and the erection of many other buildings in this vicinity. He was a foreman for the Flynt Building and Construction Company for 14 years, and until recently was with Cummings Brothers of Ware. He leaves a daughter, Miss Ida E. Warriner of Indian Orchard, a brother, John Warriner of Indian Orchard, and two sisters, Mrs. Harriet A. Benjamin of Springfield and Miss Fidelia M. Warriner of Indian Orchard. Mr. Warriner was a member of Thomas Lodge of Masons. His body was brought to this village for burial Wednesday on the 10.30 a. m. express from Worcester. A delegation of Thomas Lodge met the body at the station and escorted it to the Congregational church, where the services were held, Rev. W. T. Hutchins of Indian Orchard officiating. Interment was in the cemetery on Thorndike street.

Baptist Church Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting, supper and roll call of the Baptist church was held in the church vestry Monday evening, about 40 sitting down to supper. Responses in person were made by 49 members at the roll call, 18 others answering by letter or through friends. The following officers were elected, an Australian ballot having been prepared on which the nominations, made a week before, were printed: Clerk and treasurer, C. B. Fiske; collector, A. E. Fitch; deacon, C. E. A. Peck; executive committee, G. W. Camp, C. E. Fuller, Cambridge Moulton, E. B. Taylor; prudential committee, G. W. Camp, Mrs. F. W. Dimock, Mrs. J. C. Rich, Mrs. W. J. Smith; baptismal committee, A. E. Fitch, L. G. Parkhurst, Mrs. C. Moulton, Mrs. L. G. Parkhurst, Mrs. O. D. Wells; visitation committee, E. B. Taylor, Mrs. G. M. Atkins, Mrs. F. W. Dimock, Mrs. C. E. Fuller, Mrs. C. Moulton; auditing committee, A. E. Fitch, F. W. Washburn; soliciting committee, Mrs. G. M. Atkins, Mrs. L. Dimock, D. G. Buskey; welcoming committee, G. H. Justin, C. E. A. Peck; ushers, Cambridge Moulton, L. G. Parkhurst, F. W. Washburn, J. Arthur Wells.

Noon Trains Between Boston and New York to be Put on Again.

A change of time will go into effect on the Boston and Albany road next Monday, when the noon trains between Boston and New York, which were withdrawn at the instance of the New Haven road a few weeks ago, will be restored. The train from Boston will reach Palmer at 2 p. m., and will stop at that station; the train from New York will reach Palmer at 3.49, and will also stop. The trains now reaching Palmer at 1 p. m. from the east and at 2.39 from the west will be withdrawn. Camp's train, which now leaves at 12.24 p. m. for Springfield, will leave at 1.30. This service will be nearer what Palmer people have wanted than anything they have had for a long time. There has been a demand for a train west later than 1.17 in the afternoon, but before the 5.20, and the 2 o'clock will fill the want very well.

Masonic Public Installation.

The lodge room of Thomas lodge of Masons was well filled Monday evening at the public installation of officers, many ladies being in attendance. Past Master George Robinson installed the elective officers, and Dr. G. H. Wilkins, the retiring master, installed the appointed officers, the following being the list: W. M., D. L. Bodfish; S. W., H. W. McGregory; J. W., C. N. Shaw; treasurer, G. A. Rice; secretary, C. M. Holt; chaplain, George Robinson; marshall, C. E Fish; S. D., Byram Woodhead; J. D., E. C. Sexton; S. S., M. M. Thomas; J. S., H. K. Ferrell; I. S., M. D. Paige; organist, C. B. Fiske; tyler, James Knox. Musical selections were rendered during the evening by Albert Shaw on the flute, Miss Carrie Fish and H. W. Holbrook on the banjo. After the installation refreshments were served, followed later by dancing on the part of the young people.

Olin F. and Miss Ora Parent gave a farewell party to their friends Wednesday night. A very pleasant evening was spent by all. Olin Parent will start next week for Grand Ligue, Quebec, where he will study French and music, and hopes to regain his health, which has been poorly for some time; Miss Parent will return to Smith College at the coming term.

Two Polish butchers from Thorndike had a lesson in driving last Saturday. They were driving down Slattery's hill at a rapid gait and tried to turn the corner without slowing up, but did not succeed. The meat cart went over and the horse also, and the two men were thrown from the cart, one of them receiving a slight cut on the head. The wagon and horse were righted and did not seem to be injured any, and the men continued their peddling.

Christmas passed very quietly in Bondsville. No services were held in the Methodist church, but the Sunday school held a Christmas tree and entertainment in the vestry Christmas Eve, that was very largely attended and greatly enjoyed, especially by the children. An excellent programme was rendered by the school, and showed the result of hard practicing for several days. Three trees were well laden with presents, which made the children happy. Christmas services were held in both the Catholic churches. A good many out-of-town people spent Christmas with friends here.

Sudden Death of a Young Girl.

Another very sudden death occurred in this village this week; Alice Lacrosse, 14, a daughter of James Lacrosse, died very suddenly Wednesday noon at the home of her sister, Mrs. Alphonse Beauregard. The young girl was a pupil in the grammar school, and attended school Monday as usual; Tuesday she did not feel very well and not go to school. She seemed to have a cold, but did not appear to be very sick. Wednesday morning she was about the same, but about noon was taken suddenly very ill, and though the doctor was sent for at once the girl was dead before he arrived. She had always seemed very strong and healthy, and her sudden death is a severe shock to her relatives and schoolmates, among whom she was very popular, and was called a very bright scholar. Besides a father she leaves several brothers and sisters; her mother died several years ago. The funeral services will be held Saturday morning, and the burial will be in Three Rivers cemetery.

There will no doubt be a large attendance at the concert and ball to be given this evening at the Union Hall by the Columbian Band. Excellent music will be in attendance, and everything done to make a most enjoyable affair.

Christmas was celebrated in the churches of the village in the usual manner. The attendance at both services in the Catholic church was large. The Christmas exercises at the Congregational church consisted of singing, speaking, and a Christmas tree.

At a recent meeting of the Congregational church these officers were chosen: Parish committee, C H. Hobbs, H. E. W. Clark and B. F. Clark; treasurer, H. E. W. Clark; clerk, C. F. Smith; collector, C. A. Tabor; committee on music, Mrs. G. M. Gerrish and E. B. Williams.

The finest string of pickerel shown in Thorndike for a long time was caught on Wednesday at Brown's Pond by Henry Fortune, J. F. Luman and A. Fountain. They were on exhibition on Wednesday evening and were admired by a large number, the total weight being 30 pounds, six of the fish weighing over 15 pounds.

The Post Office Can Issue International Money Orders.

Many patrons of the Thorndike post office will be greatly pleased over the change which will go into effect next Monday, when the office will become an international money order one, which means that it can issue money orders payable in all foreign countries in which the United States has exchanges. There have been many calls for such orders, but Postmaster Luman was unable to issue them, and it is through his efforts that the change has been brought about.

ALTHOUGH President-elect McKinley has not yet fully made up his cabinet, it is pretty certain that the following will be members of his official family when it is finally announced:

Secretary of state—John Sherman of Ohio.
Secretary of the treasury—Nelson Dingley of Maine.
Secretary of war—W. R. Merriam of Minnesota.
Secretary of the navy—Cornelius N. Bliss of New York.
Attorney-general—Nathan Goff of West Virginia.
Postmaster-general—Henry C. Payne of Wisconsin.
Secretary of agriculture—Judge Waymiere of California.

KENTUCKY'S Christmas week record was one which would almost shame the Sultan of Turkey or bring a blush to Weyler's cheek in Cuba—six lynchings in as many days. Considering the enlightment of the two localities, the Turk appears very much of a saint. It is gratifying to know however, that Judge Owens of the circuit court at Owensboro, has ordered the grand jury to lay aside all other business until it has indicted those concerned in the last event, the lynching of a negro last Saturday morning.

THE Boston correspondent of the Springfield Republican professes to know that John L. Bates, after being elected speaker of the House, will inaugurate a new departure in the appointment of the committees of the Legislature, considering the public good first, and letting his friends take what places are left. This is simply a reversal of the way things are usually done, but a change which the public at large will be sure to welcome and approve.

Now comes the report from Cuba that Maceo is still alive; he was severely wounded, and the report of his death was spread in order that his friends might remove him to a place of safety without molestation. All danger from his wounds is now over, and his restoration to the cause of Cuba's freedom only a matter of time.

ANOTHER GIFT TO THE TOWN.

A Memorial Stone Arch Entrance for the No. 1 Cemetery.

It will please Monson people to learn that she is again to be made the recipient of a handsome gift, a memorial arch soon to be erected at the North Main street entrance of No. 1 cemetery.

Dating from the time the cemetery commissioners commenced improvements on the Main street side of the property, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Page of Philadelphia have been interested in every move made to beautify the cemetery and its approaches, it being their desire to permanently beautify this most sacred spot as a memorial to Mrs Page's mother, Mrs. N. M. Field. The handsome wall, steps and gateway just completed were all done under the direction of Mr. Page, as many of our readers know. The delay in changing the width of the road prevented the completion of the wall, and some were afraid the action of the selectmen would result in changing Mr. and Mrs. Page's views as to the completion of the work of improvement. Fortunately, however, this was not the case. They were glad of the delay, in that it gave them more time to study the surroundings and determine upon a most suitable structure for an archway. After careful study Mr. Page had a rough sketch outlined, embracing desirable features of many similar entrances, and from which Mr. J. C. Parsons, with the W. N. Flynt Granite Company, produced the accepted design, the contract for the erection of which has been awarded the company. The entire structure will be built of granite, thus insuring a permanent monument. A bronze tablet with appropriate inscription will be placed at the base of a large turret.

This gift seems most fitting, and, placed as it is on our main street and drive, will be a great ornament to the town. Within a very short distance stands the beautiful soldiers' monument, presented to the town by Mrs. Field's father, C. W. Holmes, and the Academy, in which Mrs. Field's brother, C. W. Holmes, Jr., was so deeply interested, and in the interest of which he spared neither time nor money to put it upon its present excellent footing. Within a stone's throw of the soldiers' monument and the Academy is the Congregational church and its beautiful grounds, so dear to Mrs. Field and Mr. Holmes.

Congregational Church Annual Meeting.

The annual church meeting and roll call was held last evening in the parlors of the Congregational church, beginning at 5 o'clock. After social greetings supper was served, and the meeting was called to order by the pastor, Rev. F. S. Hatch, who offered prayer. After this came the report of the clerk and the roll call. There are at present 228 members. During the year four have been added by profession of faith, two by letter; four have been dismissed and one has died. Following this report was that of the treasurer. The total number of benevolent collections for the year has been 34, and the sum of $803 61 has been raised. Special donations have amounted to $28. The Sunday school "penny" collections were $77.42. From various other sources the sum of $35 96 has been added to the treasury, and has been disbursed for charitable and benevolent objects. The Sunday school superintendent reported the membership to be 271, with an average attendance of 140, and a membership of 64 in the home department. The librarian's report was brief. The circulation for the year has been 1305 The pastor's report was then received. He spoke of the year's work, criticizing the failures, and expressing gratitude to all who had given aid and sympathy. These officers were elected: Superintendent of the Sunday school, E F. Morris; assistant, C. C. Keep; superintendent of primary department, Mrs. F. D. Rogers; treasurer, E. F. Morris; librarian, Mrs. R. H. Cushman; auditor, Prof. A. A. Burke; secretary, L. C Flynt; church committee, Rev. James Tufts, E. M. Walker, J. W. Hall, F. E. Morris, Mrs. W. N. Flynt, Miss Mabelle Anderson, also the deacons, church clerk, and president of the Christian Endeavor society. The meeting adjourned for two weeks, when committees will be chosen.

Bible Instruction Class Closed.

Prof. Tufts closed his course of instruction in the Congregational Sunday school last Sunday. This course has consisted of a series of ten lectures on the development of religion, to a class numbering over one hundred, the average attendence of which was about seventy. Professor Tufts began by speaking of the universality of the religious element in human nature, and of the conceptions of the Deity held by the most primitive people. After comparing these with one another he took up the religion of the early Hebrews, showing how they copied in many things,—like the cherishing of household gods, the offering of sacrifice, rite of circumcision, the accounts of creation, etc.,—from the other Semitic nations with which they associated. Then how these Polytheistic elements were gradually discarded and they came to recognize Jehovah as the only god. Then how their conception of Jehovah developed with their growing civilization and how, under the adverse circumstances the great prophets arose, men whose enlarged conception of god and whose abounding faith gave such character to the religion of Israel as lifted it above all other religions and furnished the bases of the conceptions of Jesus and the New Testament. Prof. Tufts treated the whole subject in his own reverential, scholarly way, and the interest of all who heard him increased to the last. As one elderly person, who has been a life-long student of the Scriptures, remarked, "He has made our old Bible seem like a new book," or as Matthew Arnold would say, he has shown "the sweet reasonableness" of the gospel. Prof. Tufts takes with him to his work in Chicago the very best wishes of a host of Eastern friends.

MONSON, MASS.

Christmas at the Churches.

Christmas was observed at the various churches appropriately. Christmas Sunday at the Methodist church came the 20th, and on Christmas night there was a tree and entertainment. At the Congregational church the tree was on Christmas Eve, and last Sunday was set apart as Christmas Sunday. The music, always fine, was exceptionally so at the morning service. There was a concert in the evening. On Christmas night the Sunday school of the Universalist church had a tree, and Sunday the services related to Christmas-tide. The concert in the evening was enjoyable. At St. Patrick's church there were three masses on Christmas morning, and vespers in the evening. The churches were all prettily decorated with Christmas greens.

Narrow Escape From Burning.

Mrs. Asher Green, an elderly lady living near the Wales line, met with what might have been a fatal accident last week, but for the presence of her husband and the hired man. Mrs. Green lifted the stove cover and a spark from the wood fire flew out and ignited the nap of her flannelette wrapper. The blaze spread quickly over the entire surface of the dress, and also to Mrs. Green's neck and hair. Her screams brought the men to the room, and they wrapped her in rugs, putting out the fire. This is the second accident of the kind to happen in town within a few days, and ladies will be some what cautious about fire when wearing new flannelette.

A child of Moses Lewis has scarlet fever.

The school committee will hold a meeting this evening.

Miss Margery Clifford of Easthampton is the guest of Miss Carrie L. Chapin.

There will be a preaching service in the Methodist church Sunday evening.

Miss Sophia Wilson and Frank Shugrue of Springfield are guests at Arthur F. Johnson's.

George Starks of Dallas, Texas, spent Christmas with his cousin, Mrs. C. G. Thompson.

The annual parish meeting of the Congregational church will be held next Tuesday evening.

District Deputy M. M. Thomas of Thorndike paid a visit to Monson lodge of Odd Fellows last evening.

There will be a teachers' meeting at the school committee's room in Memorial Hall to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

Rev. N. L. Porter of West Warren has been secured by Marcus Keep post to deliver the Memorial Day address.

C. G. Thompson has received a box of oranges from his brother in Los Angeles, Cal., who owns an orange grove.

John Curley is now running a carriage to and from the railroad station for the accommodation of the traveling public.

The proprietor of the stage line will run a 'bus to Palmer next Wednesday evening, to the entertainment at the opera house.

Miss Edith Dimock of Palmer Town spent Christmas with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Festus Cooley, in Colton Hollow.

The selectmen will be in session Monday afternoon for the approving and paying of bills and the transaction of town business.

Leonard A. Prouty and Horace W. Christy of Dartmouth College, members of the class of '96, Monson Academy, have been in town this week.

A merry party danced the old year out and the new year in at Memorial Hall last night. Brown's orchestra furnished music, and Pendergast catered.

Mrs. Howe Grant, who returned last Thursday from the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital in Boston, is improving, and her speedy recovery is expected.

A small house owned by the W. N. Flynt Granite Company was burned Christmas night. The house was occupied by Mr. Sargent. Loss $400; no insurance.

Dr. H. A. Merchant and Dr. Stone of the Albany Medical College, and Dr. H. W. Shaw of the Philadelphia Dental College, are at their respective homes for the holidays.

It is expected that Marcus Keep post, Marcus Keep Woman's Relief corps, and A. A. Gage camp, Sons of Veterans, will hold a joint installation of officers Monday evening, January 18.

Rev. Harry Blackford will take for his subject at the Universalist church Sunday morning, "Consider Christ." The subject of the Y. P. C. U. meeting Sunday evening will be "Onward and upward."

The Misses Williams were given a surprise party Monday evening by about 20 members of the Epworth League, and were presented a Bible. Refreshments were served, and the evening was pleasantly passed.

Monson lodge of Odd Fellows elected these officers last evening: N. G., C. H. Wright; V. G., C. F. Aldrich; secretary, John Cross; permanent secretary, F. A. Bills; treasurer, A. A. Babbitt; trustee for three years, Harrison Howe.

An old English custom was observed by people of that nation just after midnight of Christmas. A party went from house to house softly singing Christmas carols, until the people were awakened. Then wishing them "A merry Christmas," invited them to join the party.

Prof. C. C. Sterns of Hartford will speak before the Monson Historical Society this evening at 8 o'clock in the selectmen's room, Memorial Hall. His subject will be, "Early American People." The regular quarterly meeting of the society will be held next Wednesday evening.

Last night there was a watch service at the Methodist church. Rev. N. L. Porter of West Warren preached the sermon, which was followed by a class and prayer meeting, a Bible reading on "Man's weakness and God's strength," a consecration service, and New Year's greetings.

"Subscriber," who sent to the JOURNAL office a communication headed "Give credit where credit is due," is reminded that no name accompanied the article, and that the editor cannot use such, or any other items, without knowing who sends them. The name of the sender need not be made public, but must be known to the editor.

Lawyer Henry A. King and wife of Springfield, well known to Monson readers, attended the inauguration of Gov. Black at Albany to-day. Mrs. King received with Mrs. Black. It is hinted that Mr. King may return to Troy, as Gov. Black is after just such men for office, and Mr. King was Gov. Black's most intimate friend; they started together at Troy some twelve years ago, both poor lawyers, and both have been most prosperous.

It is expected that the Methodist church repairs will be completed this week, and that the auditorium will be reopened Sunday, Jan. 10, with three preaching services. Dr. Frederick Wood, a former pastor, now of the Saratoga street church, East Boston, Rev. W. R. Newhall, principal of Wilbraham Academy, and Presiding Elder Thorndike occupying the pulpit. The local clergyman will be invited to participate in these services, and there will be special music.

Mrs. W. N. Flynt gives her annual New Year's party to her Sunday school class this evening. This class is the oldest in the history of the church. Mrs. Flynt's brother, George M. Converse, taught it some thirty-five years ago; upon his leaving town C. W. Holmes took it in charge until he became superintendent of the Sunday school in 1884, when Mrs. Flynt became the teacher, and inaugurated the custom of the New Year's tea she has given every year. There are two scholars now attending who joined at the beginning.

Someone is likely to get into serious trouble on account of sending obscure letters to a Monson family, and friends of the family. The first letters were received several weeks ago, being thrown into the dooryards and placed under the door mats during the night. Later they were sent by mail, and still later the former method was returned to. The letters are to all appearance written with an attempt to disguise the handwriting. Although the matter has not been placed in the hands of the police, a suspicious person is being closely watched by Postmaster Herlihy and by those who have received the letters. It is not probable that the guilty person realizes what the consequences of conviction of such an offence would doubtless be.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

The many friends of Rev. Henry B. Mason, who is still in the Massachusetts General Hospital, sent him a check for $85 as a Christmas present, which with $15 from the "Cent a Day Club" made the total $100.

LUDLOW.

The house owned by William Blackmer was burned early Saturday morning, with the most of its contents, very little being saved. The family was asleep when the fire broke out, and barely escaped from the burning building.

WEST WARREN.

Misses Alice and Cora Gilbert spent Christmas in Millbury.

Mrs. Rufus Baker had a slight shock of paralysis Sunday morning.

Joseph B. Laird and William Smith are cutting ice on the No. 4 pond.

The themometer registered 16° below zero Monday morning at the post office.

The ladies of the M. E. church netted $25 from their supper Christmas eve.

Mr. Leon and Lula Doane of Springfield spent Christmas with their aunt, Mrs. Joseph Merritt.

Next week will be observed as the week of prayer in the M. E. church, services being held each evening.

Miss Mabel Couch gave a molasses candy and popcorn party to a dozen of her friends on Wednesday evening.

William Hamel will have a cheap sale of ready-made clothing and dry goods in the Allen building on High street, begining Jan. 1.

WILBRAHAM.

News has been received of the death of Rev. Franklin Fisk, for many years a resident of Wilbraham, but who has resided at Natick since the death of his wife three years ago.

A purse was hung on the Christmas tree for Mr. and Mrs. Luther J. Potter as a token of appreciation of their services as choristers in the First Congregational church and Sunday school.

Mrs. Almeda Potter, 77, wife of Ira G. Potter, died at her home yesterday. Several weeks ago Mrs. Potter fell, breaking her hip and dislocating her shoulder, and the effects of this fall were instrumental in hastening her death. She leaves, besides her husband, a daughter, Mrs. Chancey Peck, and a son, Lorin Potter, both of Wilbraham. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

At a meeting of the Grange held Wednesday, the following officers were elected: Master, E. C. Clark; O., W. T. Eaton; L., Mrs. E C. Clark; S., M. S. Blodgett; A S, Charles Merrick; chaplain, H H. Burbank; treasurer, F. E. Clark; secretary, Mrs. W. L. Phelps; G. K., Bert Soule; P., Miss Mary Beebe; F., Mrs. L. J. Potter; C., Mrs. William Butler; L. A. S., Miss F. Green; chorister, L J. Potter; executive committee for three years, C. P. Bolles. The officers will be installed January 13.

BELCHERTOWN.

Clarence E. Scott has been appointed tax collector.

Franklyn Clark, 79, died at Dwights Saturday night. The body was taken to South Hadley for burial.

Mr. Flandreau, living with George Guest in the east part of the town, was severely hurt on Monday by a fall from a staging.

The people of the Congregational church presented G. L. King, their choir leader, with a purse of $24 on Christmas day as a token of their appreciation of his services.

Death of Deputy Sheriff William Burnett.

William Burnett died at his home last Friday afternoon of heart trouble, at the age of 68. He had been a sufferer for a long time, and from the first knew that he could not recover, but during the past summer his health improved so as to allow him to walk short distances, ride, and with assistance to attend to his duties as tax collector, assessor, and other positions which he has occupied for years. For the last few weeks, however, he suffered intensely.

Mr Burnett was a son of the late Enoch Burnett of Belchertown, one brother and three sisters of the family surviving, Mrs Daniel Rice of Agawam, P. W. Burnett of Sacramento, Cal., Rodney of Rockport, Mo., and Enoch of Springfield. He leaves a widow, one daughter and two sons, Mrs. Clarence Scott, W. O. and F. E. Burnett. Mr. Burnett was for some years employed in the carriage business, and later with Frank Cook was one of the proprietors of the Belcher House, now the Park View. He has served the town as tax collector, assessor and constable, and for a number of years held the appointment of deputy sheriff.

BRIMFIELD.

The Avon Society met last evening with Mrs. Horatio Converse.

The young men will give a dance in the town hall this evening.

The mercury registered 20° below zero in some places on Monday morning.

F. Lincoln Peirce is home from Tufts College for a vacation of two weeks.

Miss Marion Weld, who teaches in Winthrop, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Clifton Gould.

Mrs. Chamberlain has gone to Brookline to remain several weeks with her niece, Mrs. Cheeney.

John H. Noyes, formerly of Brimfield, who travels for Warner & Co. of New York, is spending two weeks in town.

Fred Parker has sold his place to James Noyes and will move with his family to Warren, where he has bought the restaurant recently owned by the late Mr. Joyce.

The pulpit of the First Congregational church was occupied Sunday morning by G. A. Furness of the lay college at Revere, owing to the illness of Rev. Mr. Kyle. Mr. Furness spent the Christmas vacation with friends in town.

The winter term af the Hitchcock Free High School opened last Tuesday. Principal Earle and Mrs Earle spent last week in Boston Mr. Hall went to his home in Nashua, N. H., and Miss Dugan to her home in Montague, for the vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Sherman celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriage Tuesday evening, about 50 friends being present from Sturbridge, Charlton and Warren. The gifts included a large amount of tinware, besides silverware and crockery.

Store Burned.

An alarm of fire was sounded at 4 o'clock this morning for a blaze in the building occupied by H. L Converse as a store. Nothing could be done to save the property, and the building was entirely consumed. Mrs. Rebecca C. Agard occupied one end as a tenement, and most of her household goods were removed. The property is known as the "J. T. Brown place," and was owned by J. F. Converse.

A stomachful of undigested food is about as unhealthy a mass as one can well imagine.

What can be done with it?

There it stays. It won't digest. It churns up, ferments and decays; becomes poisonous (as all putrid matter does) and causes great pain and deep-seated disorders.

In order to change all this take Shaker Digestive Cordial.

It stops fermentation and decay at once, so that no more poisons are created.

It clears the stomach of poisons already there. It helps it to turn the food that remains into healthful nourishment. It strengthens the stomach for the next meal.

Here is the whole philosophy and cure of indigestion in a few words. And what's more, it's all true. Try it.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is for sale by druggists, price 10 cents to $1 00 a bottle.

WARREN.

The Misses Reynolds of Brockton are guests of Mrs. George Shumway this week.

The King's Daughters held their annual meeting with Mrs F. W. Kimball this afternoon.

Rev. W. B. Forbush and wife are "at home" at the parsonage from 3 to 6 and 7 to 10 this afternoon and evening.

Quite a party attended the leap-year dance at Spencer Tuesday night, returning by special car at 4 a. m. Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitaker were in town Wednesday and Thursday. They will spend Sunday at Mr. Whitaker's home, returning to Warren, where they will remain until Wednesday.

The prospect of the combination of the Knowles pump works and the Blake Manufacturing Company under one plant at East Cambridge is one which will be a hard blow to Warren. Not only will it mat rially affect all commercial interests of the town, but it will remove from our midst a large number of our best and most public-spirited citizens, whom we can ill afford to lose

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Fairbank entertained the Farmer's Club at their home on Main street Wednesday. The far-famed hospitality of the host and hostess brought together a company of members and invited guests numbering nearly two hundred, cheer and the genial flow of spirits and good which make these gatherings attractive combined to make this meeting a delightfully social one. A bounteous repast was served at one o'clock, and speeches and discussions filled the rest of the day.

The Congregational church held its annual meeting Tuesday evening. Supper was served from 6 to 7, the regular business session commencing at 7 30 with a roll-call of the membership, to which about 150 responded, besides several by letter. The following list of officers was elected: Clerk, George Tarbell; deacon, F. E Gleason; members of prudential committee, Mrs. F E Gleason, Miss Edith Chadsey, J. T. Leonard Reports of the benevolences of the church and of its various organizations were read.

Might Have Been a Bad Fire.

The inside of a room in the house of L. M. Woodworth, and the furniture in it were badly scorched by a slight blaze Monday morning about 8 o'clock, the fire being occasioned by the igniting of the drip of a kerosene heater. Fortunately the flames were soon smothered, and the stove thrown out of the window before the fire department responded to the alarm.

Electric Car Accident.

A two-horse sled driven by H. Lesperance of East Brookfield was struck by the electric car due about 7.30 Sunday evening near the house of Oscar Rice on East Main street. The driver escaped with a few cuts and the horses with little injury, though the sled was badly damaged The driver was drunk, and was arrested and fined $5, but no clear explanation seems to be given why the motorman allowed his car to strike the sled.

Leg Crushed by the Cars.

A man giving the name of Edward Conway, his residence as Malden and his age 33, was seriously hurt by a freight train about 4 o'clock Monday afternoon in the station yard. With several companions he attempted to board the train, but slipped and fell under, the wheels passing over his left leg near the knee, and his right foot. He was attended by Drs. Dalton and Deland, and taken to Worcester city hospital on the 5 12 train, as it was thought amputation of the left leg would be necessary. His companions disappeared without waiting to see how badly he was hurt.

Blacksmith Shop and Barn Burned.

An early fire Saturday morning destroyed the blacksmith shop on River street, the barn adjoining, belonging to Timothy Donahue, and one end of the old skating rink. The building was occupied by Charles H. Rand as a blacksmith shop on the first floor, and the second floor E L. Foskit occupied as a carpenter's shop. This building was owned by Wilson H. Fairbanks and was fully insured.

The loss to Timothy Donahue on barn and contents was $250. The old skating rink, the property of L. M. Woodworth, was damaged to the extent of $150. The origin of the fire was incendiary.

"My daughter, when recovering from an attack of fever, was a great sufferer from pains in the back and hips," writes Louden Grover, of Sardis, Ky. "After using quite a number of remedies without any benefit she tried one bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and it has given entire relief." Chamberlain's Pain Balm is also a certain cure for rheumatism. Sold by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Paige & Mason, Three Rivers; G. L. Keeney, Monson; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; W. Kennedy, Ware.

The progressive ladies of Westfield, Ind, issued a "Woman's Edition" of the Westfield News bearing date of April 3, 1896. The paper is filled with matter of interest to women, and we notice the following from a correspondent, which the editors printed, realizing that it treats upon a matter of importance to their sex: "The best remedy for croup, colds and bronchitis that I have been able to find is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. For family use it has no equal. I gladly recommend it." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by O. P Allen, Palmer; Paige & Mason, Three Rivers; G. L. Keeney, Monson; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; W. Kennedy, Ware.

Physicians universally recommend Ayer's Hygienic Coffee. Grocers sell it.

AS OTHERS VIEW IT.

What They Are Saying and Doing in Chicopee Falls Will Stand Repeating in Palmer.

The Ames Manufacturing Co. of Chicopee have more than a local reputation, and it goes without requiring proof that their head foreman must have ability, tact and judgment. If any of the machinery turned out of the works were under adverse criticism we would expect the said foreman, Mr. S. Lucas, to get behind his own handicraft with argument, reasoning and proof, and when he comes out flat-footed and endorses the claims made for an article in which he has neither reputation at stake or any monetary interest, we are safe in saying that he has solid and substantial reasons for his convictions. Mr. Lucas endorses Doan's Kidney Pills in this way. "I have had weak kidneys for a year or more, my back was so lame it pained me very much to move about or do anything. The pain was gnawing, and to change from one position to another was always accompanied with sharp twinges I could not rest at night, and it dragged me down until I was about good for nothing. Accompaning all this there was a weakness in the action of the kidney secretions—they being far too frequent. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and got a box, and began taking them. I had not taken many before I found my back getting better and my uninary trouble leaving me. Well, they cured me of the whole lot of pains and aches, and you can use my testimonial to that effect."

Just such evidence as this can be had right here in Palmer. Call at the drug store of LeGro & Lynde, who always keep Doan's Kidney Pills in stock, ask them what their customers report to them.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents, or mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute.

Persons who are troubled with indigestion will be interested in the experience of Wm H. Penn, chief clerk in the railway mail service at Des Moines, Iowa, who writes: "It gives me pleasure to testify to the merits of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For two years I have suffered from indigestion, and am subject to frequent severe attacks of pain in the stomach and bowels. One or two doses of this remedy never fails to give perfect relief. Price 25 and 50 cents; sold by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Paige & Mason, Three Rivers; G. L. Keeney, Monson; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; W. Kennedy, Ware.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rivers Junction she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption, and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monsen; F. A. Spencer, Ware Drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

Try Grain-O! Try Grain-O!

Ask your grocer to-day to show you a package of GRAIN-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it like it. GRAIN-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha or Java, but it is made from pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. ¼ the price of coffee. 15 and 25 cents per package. Sold by all grocers.

There is a Class of People

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cts. and 25 cts. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

Those Furs Again!

Women's new stylish fur garments are going at half prices. And as long as they last we are not likely to have any news to print that will cause more gossip in shopping circles—

$18 Capes at $9.90
$20 Capes at $10
$23.50 Capes at $11.50
$27.50 Capes at $13.50
$30 Capes at $16.50
$50 Capes at $27.50
$65 Capes at $35

And Jackets At Half.

The Jacket story is akin to that of the furs. Women's new stylish Jackets, direct from the maker's hands at half prices—

$3.90
$4.90
$6.90
$9.90.

They are Jackets that have brought $7.50 to $25. Not a poor or ill-looking jacket in the lot; some of them are as handsome as jacket-handsomeness can be. And every day sees the last of some fine things that cannot be duplicated for anything like the price paid.

Fur Muffs at 95c each.

Half-sheared dark brown coney fur muffs at 95c. New furs, new muffs. We shall sell a couple thousand of such muffs at 95c before the winter is ended.

And they will wear their old overcoat until it is threadbare, when for a minimum of Money they might get a maximum of value in one of our many styles of warm winter garments.

Our Ulsters are something to be proud of—so much value for so little money. You'll be surprised to see how good a coat we can give you. The prices run at $7, $10, $12, $15, higher if you want to, but there's no use in it—our $20 Ulster is good enough for a prince to wear.

Overcoats run from $5 to $22; the $10, $12, $15 kinds are the ones we sell most of, and when you consider what we are giving for the money its a wonder that any other dealer is selling any—don't see who can be buying them, judging from the number we get rid of. If you'll look at them you'll be among our list of patrons, we feel sure. There are no such overcoats offered anywhere else in this region.

Do You Use It?

It's the best thing for the hair under all circumstances. Just as no man by taking thought can add an inch to his stature, so no preparation can make hair. The utmost that can be done is to promote conditions favorable to growth. This is done by Ayer's Hair Vigor. It removes dandruff, cleanses the scalp, nourishes the soil in which the hair grows, and, just as a desert will blossom under rain, so bald heads grow hair, when the roots are nourished. But the roots must be there. If you wish your hair to retain its normal color, or if you wish to restore the lost tint of gray or faded hair use

"Out of Alexandr' Bay."

A FISH STORY TOLD IN JANUARY, WHEN ALL FISH BITE THE BEST.

Poke the fire a little, younkers, till the log begins to blaze,
For the January blizzards hev a lot of chilly ways;
Bring the apples an' the doughnuts, an'—the cider, understan',
An' be mighty sure to place 'em some'at handy to the han';
An' I'll string you up a story illustrative of the way
That I used to go a-fishin' out of Alexandr' bay.

First, I asked the wind an' current for to furnish me a lift,
Then I sailed away a distance in my double-p'inted skift;
An' I tuk it when desirous of a half a day alone,
Fur the biggest of the fishes doesn't like a human tone.
An' I recollect I anchored on one morning bright an' clear,
Where the basses used to gather in that season of the year.

When I found 'em, they were huddled near a little islan'-beach,
An' they measured—O, my gracious, twice as much as I ken reach;
(An' I don't believe there's any hev their arms in a posish Fur to stretch 'em more than I ken, in describin' of a fish;)
An' the mornin' was so gentle, an' the water was so clear,
I cud see 'em smell my minny jus' as if they all was here.

But a lot o' rich New Yorkers hed their summer housen nigh,
An' my gracious, them 'er fishes was a-eatin' cake an' pie!
Cooks hed throwed it in the river when it cluttered up a dish,
An' I s'pose it tasted better to the fishes than a fish;
An' I whispered to my conscience, "You are very near a fool,
Ef you waste your time a-danglin' overneath a boardin'-school!"

Then my conscience answered, "Stiddy; keep a-givin' 'em the bait!
There is al'ays blessin's comin' to a fellow that can wait."
An' I kep' a peekin' down'ard so's to see how matters stood,
An' I held a lively minny jus' as near 'em as I could;
An' I meant it as a premium for the scholars; but alas!
Not a single one would offer fur to jine my cookin' class!

There they sort o' laid an' rested in the water still an' deep,
An' they dropped their noses down'ard, an' appeared to go to sleep;
An' they nestled near an' nearer to the river's sandy floor,
An' I listened till I reckoned I could hear the fellows snore!
An' I says, "Lie still and slumber; I'm a-watchin' o'er your bed;
If you'll only wake up hungry, here is blessin's on your head!"

Bye an' bye the leader started, scratched his for'ead with a fin,
An' he stretched an' yawned a little, an' my minny wiggled in;
("Twas a knowin' breed o' minnys we was rearin' at the Bay)
An' the bass he shut his mouth up, an' the hook got in the way;
An' before he hed the priv'lege fur to yell a single note
He had left his loved companions, an' had started for the boat.

Then I winked unto the minny, an' I thought I see him grin,
An' I 'magine he enjoyed it, so I sent him down ag'in;
An' he run among 'em lively—like a wiggler in a cup;
An' kept knocking at their doorways, till he woke another up;
An' the fish embraced his caller, more in passion than in love;
An' immediately started for the happy land above.

One by one the others wakened; an' the word was passed aroun'
There was somethin' there fur nothin' that hed jest come into town;
An' they soon was crazy fur it—an' the smartest of 'em led,
(Fur a fish is partly human, as I think I al'ays said);
An' may Ananias' spirit come an' visit me to-night,
Ef them everlastin' fishes didn't stan' in line to bite!

An' my boat was overloaded till it sort o' sagged an' stuck,
An' I sold 'em in masses to some fellers scant of luck;
An' some fifty reputations as a fisherman, on doubt,
Was established on the fishes I'm a-tellin' ye about;
Anyhow, the rich New Yorkers, they was buying all the way
From the islan' of the bassses into Alexandr' bay.

FORTUNES IN THE SEA.

One of the most extraordinary instances of a fortune found in the sea concerned the wreck of the Spanish treasurer ship Alfonzo XII, Grand Canary. A single diver recovered Spanish coin of the estimated value of $100,000. The depths from which this specie was recovered was twenty-six and two-thirds fathoms, or 160 feet.

One of the most difficult operations ever performed by a diver was the recovering of the treasure sunk in Malabar off Galle. On this occasion the large iron plates, half an inch thick, had to be cut away from the nail-room, and then the diver had to work through nine feet of sand. The whole of the specie on board this vessel—upwards of $1,500,000—was saved, as much as $80,000 having been got out in one day.

It is an interesting fact that from time to time expeditions have been fitted out and companies formed with the sole intention of searching for buried treasure beneath the sea. Again and again have expeditions left New York and San Francisco in the certainty of recovering tons of bullion, sunk off the Brazilian coast or lying undisturbed in the mud of the Rio de la Plata.

At the end of 1885 the large steamer Indus, belonging to the P and O. company, sank off Trincomalee, having on board a very valuable East Indian cargo, together with a large amount of specie. This was another case of fortune found in the sea, for a very large amount of treasure was recovered.

GUESS SHE WASN'T MUCH AMERICAN.—An "American Woman" in the London Chronicle describes the average Englishman as "a superior being, of active brain, much travel, experience with women and a certain desire to please. American men are an eccentric growth, a hodge podge flung together in a galloping money grabbing civilization, not fully known to themselves." She adds, "In America we all like our fathers and brothers, but we haven't any great admiration for our husbands, although we may be fond of them in a patronizing way."

OUR TABLE BOARDERS.

Mrs. Gould wanted a new fur shoulder cape very much, so when Mr. Gould suggested going to his folks for Thanksgiving she agreed pleasantly, though she told Mrs Whipple and Mrs. Jhones that she had much rather be shot at with a Gatling gun than go. Mr. Gould seemed a trifle disappointed when she accepted so readily, for as Mrs. Gould said, it left him sort of hors de combat, as it were, whereas if she had insisted on his going to her folks he could have had a grievance on tap all day on which he could have drawn at pleasure. Mrs. Gould endeavored to gird herself with all sorts of mental devices. She tried to feel how much better off she was than the Armenians still left in Turkey, but somehow she couldn't feel so, and then the weather by its uncertainty added greatly to her discomfort, for she felt that the damp fog would shut the family all in together, and she shouldn't have even nature to help her. Mr. Gould also felt somewhat gloomy, apparently, and confounded the weather as heartily as if he were a wheelman, which he wasn't, having taken one header too many in learning, and never afterwards recovering the enthusiasm necessary to keep going.

What you going to wear that dress for?" he asked Mrs. Gould, as she got herself into one of her last year's dresses. "They'll all think I'm doing poorly in business or else that I scrimp you on your clothes."

"Well, George," said Mrs. Gould, sweetly, "you know it is impossible in this world to suit every one, so the rational decision one comes at is to suit the ones you get the most out of, and as I have heard you intimate that your Uncle Crowncheese would probably do well by you in the future, and whereas your uncle, being peculiar, would observe if I wore a very elaborate dress, and conclude me to be the kind who would squander any inheritance left me, I concluded to wear this dress, which I know he noticed last year, for he asked me how much a yard I gave for it, and as I carelessly told him two dollars a yard, and then caught up and said one could wear a two-dollar stuff twice as long as one-dollar stuff, I have dug the dress out to-day that I may prove my words true, instead of eating them, as it were, with the dinner."

Mr. Gould, for many reasons, made no reply to this, and they soon started out with many good-byes to Mrs Jhones and Mrs. Whipple, who were to have dinner all alone.

"It seems as if we ought to stay at home with them," said Mr. Gould, pensively, as they went down the street.

"Oh, well, we couldn't disappoint your folks, George. You know it means something to a woman to get ready for ten or fifteen and only six or eight coms." And Mr. Gould was again crushed by his own family.

I am so glad you came," said their hostess, as the front door shut them in remorsely with all the other relatives, "because if there are any vacant places Cousin Mary would insist on going out to one of the mission places and bringing some people in, and she wouldn't pay the doctor's bills, you know, if we should catch Asiatic cholera or bugs, or anything, and she wouldn't replace any silver that might disappear, so I'm awfully glad you came."

"Thank you!" said Mrs. Gould, sweetly. "We never thought for an instant of neglecting your kind invitation."

"I am so glad to see you," said Cousin Mary, later on. "I want you to do some visiting on the Associated Charities. Oh, come! you have lots of time, boarding, as you do, and it isn't likely you spend it all shopping and theater going, and you can just as well take a district as not. I've given your name in, and to-morrow you'll get a lot of slips with the entire history from their births of seven families, and you must study them carefully, because you want to be discreet in the management of each case and not cater to failings already discovered by the board."

"I suppose you make all your own clothes, don't you, boarding as you do?" said Aunt Persimmons, examining the biases on Mrs. Gould's gown. "Dear me, I shouldn't know what to do with myself with so much time on my hands. Don't you find it very lonely?"

"Well, not when George can come home to lunch," said Mrs. Gould sweetly, walking over to the window and kicking the mopboards slightly to relieve her feelings The relatives all seemed somewhat mollified at her remark, and gave one her a recipe for prune jelly and another a good gargle for sore throats, but a third one drew her aside as they were going down-stairs and said: "You must guard against taking too much of George's time, you know, my dear. I know when one is young one is inclined to do so, but it encroaches on a man's business, you know, and I am sure you wouldn't want to do that. George is so easy to be led, you know, and gives in so easily."

"Yes, indeed," replied Mrs. Gould, gently, taking a stick pin and surreptitiously scratching the banisters with it.

When the Goulds went home at night it was not with the buoyant steps they usually had, but a slow, meek, hesitating tread.

"Darn Uncle Moses!" said Mr. Gould, with a hunted look around him, "I guess I can run my business without his allfired advice, and if I choose to dress like a gentleman I don't propose to be picked to pieces as is I were an orphan on two sides."

"I suppose they'll object to my having a new cape," said Mrs. Gould pensively.

"By Gosh! I'd like to see 'em!"—Miss Meander, in Boston Gazette.

DIGESTION AND COMPLEXION.—"The secret of a bad complexion," says a physician, "is a bad digestion, and we generally trace that to a bad liver. One of the best remedies for a sluggish liver is cheap and pleasant. Dieting is the secret of the cure. The best liver regulator of persons of sedentary habits—and those are the ones whose complexions are muddy—is to be found in apples, eaten baked if they are not well digested when eaten raw. I attended the pupils at a well-known boarding-school, and among them was a country girl whose complexion was the envy of all her associates. I found that she was a very light eater at her meals, but she had a peculiar custom of taking a plate of apples to her room at night and eating them slowly as she studied her lessons. This was her regular practice."

Just a saunter in the twilight,
Just a whisper in the hall,
Just a sail on sea or river,
Just a dance at rout or ball,
Just a glance that hearts enthrall—
This is all—and this is all.

Just a few harsh words of doubting,
Just a silence proud and cold,
Just a spiteful breath of slander,
Just a wrong that is not told,
Just a word beyond recall—
This is all—and this is all.

Just a life robbed of its brightness,
Just a heart by sorrow filled,
Just a faith that trusts no longer,
Just a love by doubting chilled,
Just a few hot tears that fall—
This is all—ah! this is all.

BOILED DOWN.

A 489-page novel arranged for busy people.

CHAPTER I.

When they met a subtle something seemed to thrill them through and through. Without thought or hesitation their two souls together flew. Ah, too sweet that happy meeting on that bleak and windy moor! She was promised to the villain, and the man she loved was poor.

Yes, between him and the title, as the law of entail runs, stood a hale and hearty uncle and two very healthy sons.

CHAPTER II TO XXX.

Every day upon the moorland, met these lovers fond and true, and they acted in the manner lunatics are said to do. She was pale and worn with weeping, he wrote rhymes and tore his hair, and the villain formed a background for the antics of the pair.

Just about this time the hero is enlivened with the joy of meeting the adventuress he'd married when a boy. At the heroine's reproaches he bows his manly head, while his lips were heard to mutter—"Alas! I thought her dead." When the villain and adventuress meet, in a day or so, they find that they were great old chums once in the long ago.

So the heroine grows pensive, and the hero he grows lean, and a week before her wedding brings no change upon the scene.

Then the uncle of the hero takes a sailing on his yacht, and his sons and all the other folks who figure in the plot, and a sudden squall upsets them on the ocean's wavy breast; but you needn't think the lovers end by drowning like the rest, for a floating log sustains them (how it comes there goodness knows), and he holds his sweetheart in his arms and hangs on by his toes.

CHAPTER XXXI "AND LAST."

After being duly rescued they are haunted by the dread that perhaps the others have escaped and therefore are not dead. But next day as they are walking on the seashore, do you know, they find these six dead bodies laid neatly in a row.

So the hero gets the title and the heroine is free, and they marry and live happy ever after, don't you see?

AN OLD STORY NEWLY TOLD.

From distant South Africa comes the following. It is not quite new, if it did come so far, but we print it, partly because it always stimulates, and partly to oblige the sender, J. G. Taute, who is a young stamp collector of that distant place where we have so many other Round Table members—Somerset East, Cape Colony, South Africa Here is the story:—

A Chinaman died, leaving his property by will to his three sons as follows: "To Fuenhuen, the eldest, one-half thereof; to Nupin, his second one, one-third thereof; and to Ding-bat, his youngest, one-ninth thereof."

When the property was inventoried, it was found to consist of nothing more nor less than 17 elephants, and it puzzled these three heirs how to divide the property according to the terms of the will without chopping up 17 elephants, and thereby seriously impairing their value. Finally they applied to a wise neighbor, Suenpunk, for advice. Suen-punk had an elephant of his own. He drove it into the yard with the 17, and said:—

"Now we will suppose that your father left these 18 elephants: Fuenhuen, take your half and depart." So Fuenhuen took nine elephants and went his way.

"Now, Nupin," said the wise man, "take your third and go." So Nupin took six elephants and traveled.

"Now, Ding-bat," said the wise man, "take your ninth and begone." So Ding-bat took two elephants and vamosed. Then Suen-punk took his own elephant and drove him home again.

Query: Was the property divided according to the terms of the will?—Harper's Round Table.

A NEW MAICH.

Within the last few weeks frequenters of Chicago saloons and cigar stores, says the Chronicle, have noticed that the matches set out by the waiters with the cigars were colored red about an inch from the end which does not light. Some people wondered a little about it and deciding it was a trade mark or something of that kind, used the match and tossed away the blazing end. Many others asked the waiters about the innovation, and the waiters always said: "Light it and see." And the man who lit the match and allowed it to burn out observed that when the flame reached the red mark on the match it died away and went out, leaving the seeker after light an inch of red wood in his fingers. Then he understood it all. The matches are intended as a blessing for the people who light a match and continue to talk about the parity of metals and the balance of trade until they burn their fingers. Then they swear, drop the burned match and try it again. Tired men who have been out several hours in rapid succession cannot always estimate with the naked eye how much of a match remains to be burned before the fingers are reached, and therefore some mighty genius invented the preparation which refuses to burn. When the fire reaches the danger line it goes out. And that is why the new matches are called "The Drunkard's Friend."

"Mr. Smith, will you be so kind as to carve the fowl?"

GRANT'S GAME OF MUMBLE-THE-PEG.

An old citizen of Georgetown, O., relates the following incident: "A favorite game with the boys of John D. White's subscription school, at Georgetown, was mumble-the-peg. Grant couldn't play the game very skilfully, and the peg always got a few clandestine licks every time he was to pull it. On one occasion it was driven in so deep that the boys thought Lys could never get it out. He set to work with his forehead down in the dirt, the sun beating hot upon him, and the crowd of boys and girls shutting out every breath of fresh air. The peg would not move. The red-faced, stock-headed, thickset boy, with his face now all over mud, had forgotten his comrades and saw only one thing in the word, that was this stubborn peg. The bell rang, but the boy did not hear it. A minute later, after a final effort, he staggered to his feet with the peg in his mouth. The old schoolmaster was in the door of the schoolhouse, with his long beech switch—the only person to be seen. There was glee inside at this development—here was fun the boys had not counted on. Imagine their surprise when, as the boy came closer and the stern old schoolmaster saw his face, he set down the switch inside the door and came outside. One boy slipped to the window, and reported to the rest. The old man was pouring water on Lys Grant's hands and having him wash his face. He gave him his red bandana to wipe it dry. What the school saw a minute later was the schoolmaster coming in patting the very red and embarrassed boy on the head."—Hamlin Garland, in McClure's Magazine.

THE NEW TEST OF GREATNESS.—"Say, Mamie," said Maud, "was Julius Caesar what you would call a really great man?"

"Of course. How can you ask such a question?"

"Well, I never heard him called the Napoleon of anything."—Washington Star.
